The leather is so soft it does not scratch. It is particularly good for repousse or embossed silver, as it gets into the cracks.

In any house lighted by electricity such a motor could be added for about $5. The cost of running it is slight and would be more than equaled by the time saved for the maids.

The Younger Set.

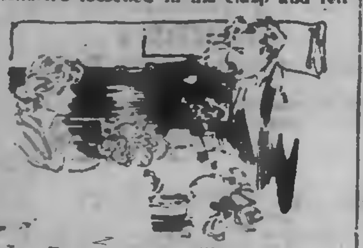
By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.
Author of "The Fighting Chance," Etc.

Copyright, 1907, by Robert W. Chambers.

Selwyn had already caught sight of the table destined for him. A deeper color crept across his bronzed face as he stepped forward, and his firm hand closed over the slim hand offered.

For a moment neither spoke. She could not. He dared not.

Then Drina caught his hands, and Eileen's loosened in his clasp and fell away as the child said distinctly: "I'll kiss you after dinner. It can't be done here, can it, Eileen?"



For a moment neither spoke.

Selwyn, beside Eileen, had ventured on the formalities, his voice unsteady and not yet his own.

Her loveliness had been a memory. He had supposed he realized it to himself, but the superb fresh beauty of the girl dazed him. There was a strange new radiancy, a living brightness, to her that seemed almost unreal. Exquisitely unreal her voice, too, and the slightly bent head, crowned with the splendor of her hair, and the slowly raised eyes, two deep blue miracles tinged with the hues of paradise.

"Are you remaining to smoke?" asked Eileen as Selwyn took her to the doorway after dinner. "Because if you are not I'll wait for you."

"On the lawn out there—farther out, in the starlight," he whispered, his voice broke, "my darling"—

She bent her head, passing slowly before him, turned, looked back, her answer in her eyes, her lips, in every limb, every line and contour of her, as she stood a moment looking back.

Austin and Boots were talking volubly when he returned to the tables now veiled in a fine haze of aromatic smoke. Gerald stuck close to him, happy, excited, shy by turns. Others came up on every side—young, frank, confident fellows, nice in bearing, of good speech and manner.

And outside waited their pretty partners of the younger set, gossiping in hall, on stairs and veranda in garrulous bevies, all filmy silks and laces and bright eyed expectancy.

The long windows were open to the veranda. Selwyn, with his arm through Gerald's, walked to the railing and looked out across the fragrant starlit waste. And very far away they heard the sea intoning the hymn of the four winds.

Then the elder man withdrew his arm and stood apart for awhile. A little later he descended to the lawn, crossed it and walked straight out into the waste.

The song of the sea was rising now. In the strange little forest below, deep among the trees, elfin lights broke out across the unseen Briar Water, then vanished. He halted to listen. He looked long and steadily into the darkness around him. Suddenly he saw her—a pale blur in the dusk.

He halted to listen.

"Eileen?"

"Is it you, Philip?"

She stood waiting as he came up through the purple gloom of the moorland, the stars' brilliancy silvering her —waiting—yielding in pallid silence to his arms, cradled in them, looking into his eyes, dumb, wordless.

Then slowly the pale sacrament changed as the wild rose tint crept into her face. Her arms clung to his shoulders, higher, tightened around his neck. And from her lips she gave into his keeping soul and body, guiltless as God gave it, to have and to hold beyond such incidents as death and the eternity that no man clings to save in the arms of such as she.

AT $2 PER DAY.

And the Hired Man's Wages Have Not Yet Been Paid.

By CLAUDE ARNOLD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

"Now, mother, the man must go."

"We might give him one more chance."

"He has been intoxicated four times in two weeks, and we can't put up with him any longer."

"But help is scarce, daughter, and where will we find another man?"

"I'll drive to the village and find one. The garden must be attended to and the lawns mowed. I'll offer as high as $2 per day until we can find a steady man by the month."

The Widow Deering and her daughter Jessie occupied the manor house on what was known as Deering hill, and the son, Fred, always took a run out on Saturdays and remained until Monday. There was an acre of ground around the house, and a man of all work was necessary.

Fred had been sent west on business, and in his absence the man was taking things easy. Miss Jessie had never been called upon to take the reins of management into her own hands.

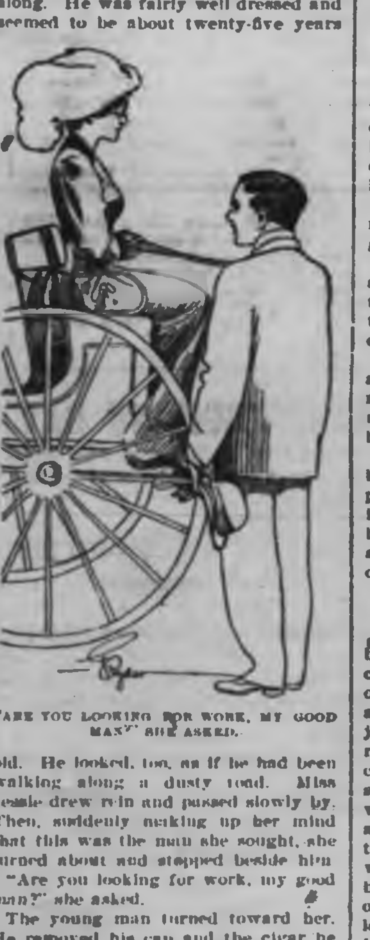
After the talk with her mother she went out and made ready the pony cart.

She had never hired a man in her life, but she had no doubt whatever as to her ability to make a good choice.

On her way to the village she stopped at the home of a friend to ask her if she knew of any competent man. Her friend, as luck would have it, had, not half an hour before, sent a man along the road because she had no work for him.

"If you hurry you might overtake him, dear," she said to Miss Jessie. "He was pretty well dressed and not more than twenty-five or thirty years old. You're sure to see him in the village."

Miss Jessie hurried on, and when she reached Main street her eye fell upon a young man sauntering aimlessly along. He was fairly well dressed and seemed to be about twenty-five years old. He looked, too, as if he had been walking along a dusty road. Miss Jessie drew rein and passed slowly by. Then, suddenly making up her mind that this was the man she sought, she turned about and stopped beside him.



"ARE YOU LOOKING FOR WORK, MY GOOD MAN?" SHE ASKED.

"Are you looking for work, my good man?" she asked.

The young man turned toward her. He removed his cap and the cigar he was smoking before replying. "If it is anything I can do, madam," he said.

"You can hoe and weed the garden?"

"I think so."

"And run a lawn mower?"

"Yes."

"And there may be other little odd jobs about the place. I have just discharged our man for intoxication and laziness. I want some one to take his place until my brother Fred gets home. What wages do you ask?"

"You may name the figure," he replied.

"Will $2 per day be enough?"

"I will do my best to earn that amount."

"Are you ready to go now?"

The man could not drive back with her, but would follow within a couple of hours. Oh, yes, she could depend upon him. He had been out of work a long time and was pleased to get a job. Miss Jessie was satisfied. She had caught a queer twinkle in his eyes two or three times, but in her gratification at having hired a man with so little delay she forgot the twinkles.

"I told you I could, and I have," she announced as she rushed into the house on her return.

"You mean you have hired a man?" queried the mother.

"Of course. He'd be here within two hours. I must now go out and tell White to go."

"Be gentle with him."

White was sober enough to understand that he must go.

Meanwhile the newly hired man had been making ready to follow his employer. He had made a number of inquiries of the village innkeeper, overhauled his trunk and made up a bundle of clothing, but he had not shaved. He arrived at the manor just in time to face an emergency. The discharged man was at the kitchen door demanding a month's extra pay and telling what he would do if it was not forthcoming.

Bailey had the remedy at his finger tips. He placed his bundle on a bench and advanced upon Mr. White, picked him up and carried him to the roadside fence and threw him over. As he returned to his bundle Miss Jessie smiled at him.

The newly hired man was given a room over the kitchen. He and the admiring cook ate dinner at the kitchen table. She wanted to know all about him. Bailey didn't say he had tramped it, but she inferred as much; he didn't say he had resolved to reform, but she decided that he had, and she encouragingly said to him as she cut him a big piece of apple pie for a windup:

"Never mind how low down you have been; there's a chance for you. If you are sober and steady, who knows but you may come up to marry a cook who has got $200 saved up and is the owner of a loving heart?"

Bailey weeded out the cucumbers and lettuce and tomatoes and carried in coal for the cook. As he had been hired by the day he looked for the "boss" to replace him after four or five days, but she was only too anxious to have him stay on.

Ten days had passed, and not a word had been said on either side, when Fred Deering suddenly made his appearance. It was midafternoon, and Bailey was hoeing the young sweet corn. No one saw him go, but as soon as he caught sight of young Deering he vanished and was hunted for in vain.

"He's stolen the family silver and absquandered, and that's just what I always thought he'd do!" announced the cook. But the family plate and all other things were found to be safe.

"Um, um," replied Fred when his sister had told him how she came to hire the man and gave a description of his looks. "He's no joker, but knowing me and having seen you once—Um, um. Yes; he said he was coming over on the marshes duck shooting"—

"Fred Deering, what on earth are you talking about?" demanded Miss Jessie, but he only laughed and then drove to the village in the cart. His mission was a success, and he laughed louder than before.

"Say," he said to a guest of the inn who had just been shaved and fitted into a fashionable suit of clothes, "my sister thinks she's just the sharpest girl in the state, and this will take her down three or four pegs. Bailey, eh! And they made you eat in the kitchen with the cook! And you weeded and hoed and mowed and never cracked a smile? Say, it was great!"

And when the cart reached home and the two gentlemen walked up on the veranda where the ladies were sitting Fred uttered a giggle and introduced his friend Clive Bennet.

It didn't take Miss Jessie more than a minute to discover "Bailey" in "Bennet's" clothes. She was hurt and humiliated and indignant, just as her brother said she would be.

"Sis, you really deserve credit," her brother said three months later. "You picked out the best hired man we ever had, and now you've picked out the best brother-in-law I could have asked for. By the way, don't you owe him his pay yet at $2 per day?"

Nervous Collectors.

"Have you ever noticed," asked the botanist, "how extremely nervous a collector becomes? I mean a man or a woman who makes a collection of anything—from birds' eggs to copper jars or from crustacea to ichthyosauria. So soon as a collector has accumulated two specimens along the same line he begins to fear something will happen to them, and his nerves are torn by a desire, on the one hand, to show his collection to everybody who can be induced to look at it, and by an agony of apprehension, on the other hand, lest some one should carelessly touch one of the precious objects.

"The other day I laughed at one of my friends who has a collection of rare and beautiful butterflies. They are, of course, mounted under glass and then are placed in glass cabinets, yet when he is showing the collection he fairly dances around the inspector, lest some accident should cause a finger or an elbow or a parasol to crash through the two protecting crystals and ruin a delicate specimen. He laughed, too, and admitted all I said. 'I can't even bear,' he told me, 'to have anybody point at a specimen, and if I find a man the least bit careless with his hands I never show him my collection more than once.'"—New York Press.

Too Many Rivals.

As an instance of the abundance of claimants to the Spanish throne Senor Emilio Castejar once told that at one of the splendid balls which Marshal de MacMahon gave during the exhibition of 1878 Queen Isabella of Bourbon met King Amadeo of Savoy, who had replaced her on the throne of Spain. She invited the monarch to see her in her little palace, near the Arc de Triomphe. Amadeo, flattered at this exhibition of affability, made haste to visit her. On entering the palace he met the Duc de Montpensier, another claimant to the Spanish crown. Hardly had Amadeo saluted the royal hostess when she introduced to him her "cousin Don Carlos." The king's astonishment reached a culminating point when an usher, in loud tones proclaimed the entrance of his excellency the Marquis de Molins, ambassador of his majesty Alfonso XII., king of Spain. This was too much for the Italian prince, who found himself face to face with so many rivals or their representatives, and, taking his leave, he retired as soon as possible.—Exchange.

The fact that the brick thrown at Premier Asquith at Glasgow missed him by about thirty feet casts dark suspicion on the suffragettes.

Making Money On the Farm

XIII.—Poultry Parasites and Diseases

By C. V. GREGORY,
Author of "Home Course In Modern Agriculture"

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

THE most discouraging thing about the poultry business is the great number of parasites and ailments which affect the flock. Unless special precautions are taken the fowls are continually dying from one cause or another, and the profits shrink correspondingly. Most of these troubles are easily preventable if a little care is taken. One of the most important considerations is cleanliness. The house should be cleaned out frequently and sprinkled with quicklime or some disinfectant. Lime scattered about the yards also helps. The coops and smaller buildings should be moved from place to place frequently. Whitewash should be used liberally everywhere. One of the best kinds of whitewash is made according to what is known as the government formula, as follows:

Slack half a bushel of lime in boiling water. Strain and add a peck of salt that has been dissolved in warm water; three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste, one-half pound powdered Spanish whiting, one pound of glue dissolved in warm water. Mix these well and then let the mixture stand for several days. Heat before using and apply hot.

Importance of Pure Water.

One important means of keeping fowls healthy and one that is often neglected is giving them a constant supply of pure water. Because fowls do not require water in as large quantities as other animals it is often thought that they can get along without any except what they get in puddles in the barnyard. They will drink such water if they can get no other, but it is just as bad for their health as it would be for yours. This is a matter which is too often overlooked, and poultry raising for profit becomes impossible on that account.

Water put out in open troughs soon becomes warm and dirty, and if there should happen to be a contagious disease in the flock it will be rapidly spread through the water. A common hog waterer attached to a barrel on the shady side of the poultry house is one of the best ways of supplying water. If filled once a week or so no further attention is needed. A jug or large bottle of water inverted over a shallow pan in such a manner that the opening is just covered by the water in the pan makes a good drinking fountain. The water will run down into the pan as fast as it is used. There are several types of metal fountains on the market which work on this same principle. Most of them are cheap and satisfactory.

A considerable factor in causing disease among fowls is improper feeding. Overfeeding and feeding too much soft food are the causes of a large percentage of the deaths among young chicks. In older fowls the corn ration that is so often the sole food is frequently the cause of digestive and other troubles. A variety of foods judiciously fed will do much to keep the fowls healthy.

Another cause of disease in unhealthy surroundings. Low, damp poultry yards, where the water stands in puddles for days after each rain, are prolific sources of poultry troubles. Have the poultry house high and dry. If a dry yard cannot be obtained in any other way grade it up a little and cover it with gravel.

Strong Vitality Necessary.

Many of the diseases to which poultry is subject are due to inherited weakness. Experiments have proved that vitality and vigor are readily transmitted from parent to offspring. In an experiment at the Cornell station two pens of fowls were selected. One had especially strong vitality, and the other was only medium in this respect. The progeny of each of these pens was given the same kind of feed and care, and in the fall the results were tabulated. It was found that the chickens from the strong vitality pens matured from three to four weeks earlier and were worth 25 cents apiece more at maturity. It is this lack of selection for vitality that causes so many of the fancy varieties to run out. Vitality is the most important single point to be looked to in poultry raising, especially in selecting fowls for the breeding pen. If such selection is made, the health and vigor of the flock will be greatly improved and the losses correspondingly decreased.

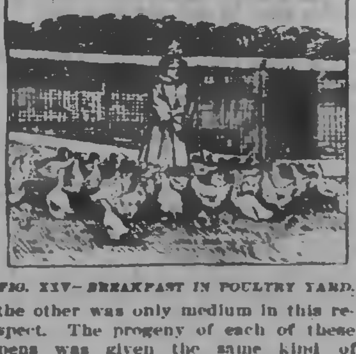

FIG. XXV—BREAKFAST IN POULTRY YARD.

Contagious Diseases.

Poultry is subject to a few contagious diseases, which often wipe out almost the entire flock. These diseases, like contagious diseases of man, are caused by bacteria or germs. These are tiny cells which gain entrance to the body and grow there. Death is not caused by the germs themselves, but by certain poisons which they give off. After germs gain entrance to the body they are difficult to combat, since anything that will kill the germ will usually kill the fowl also. Germs cannot gain a foothold in a perfectly healthy bird; hence one of the best means of combating contagious diseases is by keeping the flock so healthy that they cannot get a start. Another important measure is the liberal use of disinfectants about the poultry houses and yards. Plenty of sunshine in the poultry house will help to keep it clean. Selling off the old stock before it becomes feeble and useless is a great help, since it is these old birds that are the first to succumb to unfavorable conditions.

One of the most serious of these contagious diseases is cholera. The common symptoms are great thirst, listlessness and yellowish or greenish droppings. Heroic measures are needed to stamp out this disease. All sick fowls should be killed and burned. The yards and houses should be thoroughly sprinkled with some disinfectant solution. A coal tar dip mixture is good, or carbolic acid may be used at the rate of one gallon to twenty gallons of water. The drinking water should be disinfected by adding one part of corrosive sublimate to every 2,000 parts of water. There is no way to cure the fowls after they once get the disease. All that can be hoped for is to save the well ones.

Probably the most common poultry disease is roup. This is really a germ disease, but the germs cannot well get a foothold except under special conditions. These are found when the bird catches cold. The germs work mostly in the nasal passages, causing a cheesy secretion that has a very disagreeable odor. The head swells, the eyes often being swollen entirely shut. An affected bird may live for a long time and sometimes even get well, but it is seldom worth anything. The treatment consists in killing the affected birds and removing the cause. Exposure to cold and dampness is among the chief causes. A dry, warm house, especially one with a curtain front to provide for plenty of ventilation without drafts, is one of the best preventive measures. The curtained roosting apartment also helps to keep the fowls from catching cold in severe weather.

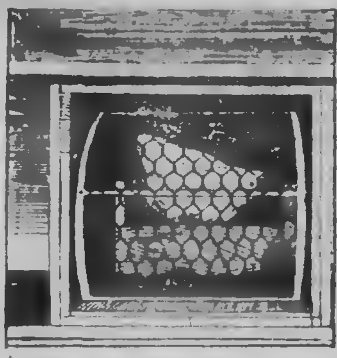

FIG. XXVI—TRAP NEST IN OPERATION.

Lice and Mites.

The most troublesome parasites of poultry are lice and mites. These pests are very different in their habits. The lice remain on the bird all the time, eating the feathers and skin. They are not usually present in large enough numbers to do any considerable damage, except to sitting hens and small chicks. One of the most effective means of combating lice is the dust bath. This is simply a convenient sized box filled with fine dust in which the hens can roll. Lice and other insects breathe through tiny holes along the sides of their bodies. The dust fills these holes and they die of suffocation. A little turpentine added to the dust bath makes it more effective.

The dust treatment is usually all that is required to keep the lice in check. Where they get unusually bad pyrethrum or tobacco dust blown in among the feathers is effective. This plan takes too long to be used extensively, however. Lice frequently make their way from the hen to the chicks at hatching time and often cause the death of many of them. The best way to prevent this, of course, is to see that the hens are free from lice before the chickens hatch. One of the best remedies is to dust the chicks with insect powder or paint them around the neck and under the wings with a sulphur and lard mixture.

Mites are much worse pests than lice. They live in the crevices in the walls and roosts, attacking the fowls at night. They do not eat the skin, but bore through it and suck the blood. Mites are so small that they can hardly be seen with the naked eye, but the damage they do is not measured by their size. Half the so called diseases to which poultry are subject are caused by mites. When fowls sicken and die without any apparent cause it is time to look for mites. Painting the roosts and adjacent walls thoroughly with crude petroleum or kerosene will destroy many of them. The same treatment should also be applied to coops and nest boxes. The litter under the roosts is often a breeding place for mites. It should be cleaned out frequently and hauled away. After cleaning out, the floor should be thoroughly soaked with a strong solution of some coal tar dip. If the poultry house is fairly tight burning sulphur in it will effectively destroy all mites within reach of the fumes. Keeping vermin and disease in check requires considerable work and constant vigilance, but it is work that will be well repaid in the improved health of the flock.

Dr. Cook is a Democrat, so he is not apt to have the North Pole postmastership thrust upon him as an administration reward of merit.

As if the prospect of settlement were not already remote enough, it is hinted that Messrs. Peary and Cook may carry their dispute to the courts.

MODERATE DRINKING WAS CONDEMNED BY DR. CRAFTS

Temperance Workers Inspired by Meeting at Opera House—Speaker Dwelt With Liquor Question Largely From Economic Standpoint—A Strong Defence of No License Legislation.

A thousand people heard Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph.D., of Washington, D.C., speak at the Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon. It was inspiring to those interested in the temperance cause, and the able address given evoked much enthusiasm. Dr. Crafts dealt with the subject from a practical viewpoint, dealing very little with what is often referred to as "the sentimental side" of the liquor question. He discussed it from the economic standpoint in a clear, logical manner. The evils of moderate drinking were emphasized by the speaker, who also pointed out the advantages of "no license legislation."

The chair was occupied by Rev. J. G. Potter, of St. Andrew's church, and Rev. H. J. Keith, of Knox church, led in prayer. The singing was one of the features of the meeting. In this connection Messrs. Mulligan, Downey and Miller did good work as leaders. A solo, "Soldiers of the Cross, Arise" by Mr. Mulligan, was splendidly rendered and was much appreciated.

Dr. Crafts read the following passages from the Bible at the opening of his address:

Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law?—Ps. 94:20.

Woe unto them that decree unrighteous decrees, and that write grievousness which they have prescribed;

To turn aside the needy from judgment, and to take away the right from the poor of My people, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless!—Isa. 10:1,2.

Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also.—Heb. 2:15.

The speaker referred to the fact that while the consumption of liquor per capita in Canada was only one-quarter of that in the United States, the fact remained that the United States was much more successful in the enactment of no license legislation than her northern neighbour. Continuing Dr. Crafts spoke in part as follows—

This is not a discussion of drunkenness, nor of moderate drinking as the road to drunkenness. No temperate writer or speaker will give the impression that he thinks all, or even a majority of moderate drinkers will become drunkards, although all drunkards undoubtedly were once moderate drinkers, and expected to remain such to the end. For that very reason it is nearly useless to tell even a weak and wreckless youth to beware of the drunkenness by which many of the strongest statesmen, warriors and poets have been unexpectedly overcome. He sees that a majority who use intoxicants do not become drunkards, and he is willing to take this risk, as well as others, for the sake of pleasure and popularity. All up-to-date temperance specialists, in the light of recent scientific experiments, have adopted as the central word of the discussion, in place of drunkenness, 'alcoholism,' which the doctors define as the chronic poisoning that results from the habitual use of alcohol, whether in the form of beer, wine or spirits, even in such quantities as would not produce visible intoxication.

How will we be turned aside more than a moment by the secondary issue of adulteration? Dr. E. G. Janeway, of New York city, and no higher medical authority could be quoted from the United States, said to me with intensity, when I made a casual reference in his presence to adulteration of liquors, "the worst thing ever put in the drinks is the alcohol." This was strikingly confirmed by the report of a royal commission in Great Britain, appointed to settle the question to which the President of the United States has given attention, on appeal from the attorney-general, "What is whisky?" The problem was whether that name should be confined to the products of "distilleries," strictly so-called, or might include the products of the "rectifiers," also, who add "secondary products" to give it a more agreeable flavor. The commission says.—

"There are all sorts of theories about the secondary products which give the flavor, but the Royal Commission does not find that any of them rests upon a scientific basis. They are merely expressions of personal preference or of loose generalizations from practical observations. The quantity of secondary products in any whisky on the market is excessively small at most, and even if they were deleterious, the difference in amount between one whisky and another would not have any perceptible effect. If anybody finds himself the worse for whisky drinking, he had better face the plain truth that he is imbibing too much ethylic alcohol, and not try to excuse his excess by throwing the blame upon the secondary products. Some daring persons have even drunk the separated secondary products, and declared them to be no more deleterious than an equal quantity of alcohol. We do not recommend the experiment, but it serves to show that a good deal of nonsense is talked about mysterious ingredients, when it is just alcohol, no more, no less, that is doing the mischief. The only thing pretty generally allowed is that liquor which suits a man's taste is by that very fact better for him than liquor that he does not like. Gustatory pleasure helps digestion; but the question always remains whether the accompanying alcohol does not do more harm than the gustatory pleasure does good. Every man must settle that for himself."

That ought to silence for a century those who have thought it is only the adulterations, not the alcohol, that should be avoided—every man believing, in childlike simplicity, that he is drinking only the pure article.

There is one more of the four cardinal principles of those who claim to be for 'temperance,' though not abstainers, that we rule out of this discussion, namely, drinking at public bars. Probably a majority of those in the United States and Canada and Australasia and Scandanavia who have voted "No license for the city," or state, have not yet followed it, as President C. W. Elliott, of Harvard University, has recently done, with the personal verdict, "No liquors for me." They attribute the evil influence of the bars and saloons to the atmosphere of the place rather than to the alcohol. To them it is not the poison but the persons who sell it and who gather where it is sold and loaf and treat and plot against property and politics, that work the mischief, or at least the major part of it. That is the solution of the world puzzle of reformers, that in the United States the reduction of bars by thousands a year has not decreased the per capita consumption of beer except in times of financial depression, though there are signs that a real reduction is now occurring. Prohibition of murder also has failed to decrease murder in the same nation. Of course this does not prove that prohibition has been inefficient in either case or should in either case be repealed, but only that it is not sufficient, and needs to be followed up by such arguments as we are here attempting, that will make those who are prohibitionists from public policy, abstainers also by personal conviction.

SOME EXPERIMENTS.

It is profoundly significant that it is in Germany, at such a time as this, that the first laboratory experiments have been made in a printing office as to the effect of moderate use of wine and beer on industrial efficiency, experiments abundantly confirmed by others less directly industrial which show that the ultimate effect of alcohol is not to strengthen or even to stimulate mind or body—that is but the deceptive initial effect—but to reduce the work of both in quantity and quality. In the new standard work on "Alcohol and the Human Body," by Sir Victor Horsley and Dr. Mary D. Sturge (pp. 92—98) these experiments are fully described—those on printers on p.p. 92-5, and also in "Alcohol" by Dr. Henry Smith Williams, and in my own "World Book of Temperance," (pp 187, 227.) The experiments on printers were made by Dr. Aschaffenburg, than whom no medical and physiological specialist in experimentation was heard with profounder respect by the specialists on alcohol who gathered in London at the 12th International Congress on Alcoholism in July, 1909.

The experiments in question, which were undertaken to show the effect of alcohol on individual workers engaged in "skilled volitional work," where a clear brain and rapid hand are both needed, were made upon four German typesetters, three of them accustomed to moderate (dietetic) use of beer and wine, while the fourth occasionally drank to excess. Eight tests were made to see how many letters (measured in printers "ems") would be set up by these men when under the otherwise imperceptible influence of such a portion of mild wine or beer as the most moderate often take at a single meal—namely 80 grams of alcohol, no more than is contained in one or two liters of beer or in a half bottle to a bottle of ordinary wine. The result of these thorough experiments Dr. Henry Smith Williams puts into this headline;

"A LOSS OF 10 PER CENT. IN WORKING EFFICIENCY."

A comparison of the results on normal and alcoholic days showed in the case of one of the workers no difference, but the remaining three showed greater or less retardation of work when they had taken even so small a portion previous to the working hours, amounting in the most pronounced case to fourteen per cent—ten per cent being counted a fair average. As the work is paid by measure, the workers would get ten per cent less on alcoholic days. In other cases where work is paid for by the day this loss of efficiency falls on the employer and the public.

FRENCH OFFICIAL WARNING AGAINST ALCOHOLISM.

One French argument against moderate drinking also has not only personal, but national and international bearings. It was the military rivalry of France and Germany that made the census records of France, in the early years of the 20th century, showing more deaths than births, an alarm bell that roused earnest investigation by patriotic medical associations, the result of which was a scientific report attributing the national decay chiefly to "alcoholism," defined as we have said, as the chronic poisoning which results from the habitual use of alcohol, even when the latter would not produce drunkenness. Warnings against alcoholism, thus defined, were therefore put up on city halls and on the walls of hospitals, in the name of the French Republic, under the mottoes "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity" by order of city councils, over the signature of the Mayor and Health Officers.

It should be posted in every city, that even those who will not hear temperance lectures or read temperance literature may be compelled to see upon the very billboards the warnings of moderate science, which, in this instance, show that even the moderate use of beer and wine produce disease and death, not only in the drinker, but in his children's children. Lest self-love and parental love shall not be strong enough to induce some them to keep the channels of heredity free from alcoholic poison, the poster adds the patriotic argument, "for the future of the nation," which is pertinent still in France, through this warning has been so far heeded that there were in 1908 more cradles than coffins; and it is very pertinent in every land, for as alcohol is degenerating, not alone physically, but morally, to "the body politic" everywhere.

Here it is pertinent to note that "Liberty," often appealed to, in defence on enslaving drinks, finds its rightful place as one of the watchwords of the French posters.

Some will not sign a pledge lest they "sign away their liberty." But in reality, as the Declaration of Independence was a pledge 'of lives and fortunes' and 'sacred honour'" in defence of freedom, so that the temperance pledge is a declaration of independence against an antiquated and foolish custom.

"Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," all these will be promoted in every land by the elimination of intoxicating drinks, which enslave and degrade and embitter.

ALCOHOLISM AND PHYSICAL DEGENERACY.

The following is from the proceedings of the French Supervising Council of Public Aid, 1902, as presented by Prof. Debove, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine;

Alcoholism is the chronic poisoning which results from the habitual use of alcohol, even when the latter would not produce drunkenness.

It is an error to say that alcohol is necessary to workmen who engage in fatiguing labor; that it gives heart to work, or that it repairs strength. The artificial excitation which it produced gives place very quickly to nervous depression and feebleness.

The habit of drinking entails disaffection from the family, forgetfulness of all duties to society, distaste for work, misery, theft and crime. It leads at last to the hospital, for alcohol engenders the most varied maladies; paralysis, lunacy, diseases of the stomach and liver, dropsy. It is one of the most frequent causes of tuberculosis. Finally, it complicates and aggravates all acute maladies. Typhoid fever, pneumonia, erysipelas, which would be mild in the case of a sober man, quickly carry off the alcoholic drinker. The hygenic faults of parents fall upon their children. If the latter survive the first months they are threatened with idiocy or epilepsy, or, still worse, they are carried off a little later by tuberculosis, meningitis or phthisis.

For the health of the individual, for the existence of the family, for the future of the nation, alcohol is one of the most terrible scourges.

Paragraphs above are from posters put up by the French city governments to check national decay. What follows is from British Parliamentary Report on Physical Deterioration, prompted by failure of a majority of candidates for enlistment in British army to pass physical examination. In consequence, British city governments post these extracts as a warning, not only to Great Britain as a cure, but also in athletic Australia, as a preventive. For one or other of these reasons such a warning should be posted in every city and town of the world and read in schools.

The continued use of alcohol, whether in form of beer, wine or spirits, even though not to the extent of drunkenness, often leads to chronic poisoning.

Of 61,215 people the average deaths per year by insurance tables will be 1,000. Of 61,215 "liquor sellers, the death average is 1,642. Of 61,215 rechabites (abstainers) the death average is 560.

Sir Frederick Treves, Physician to King Edward, declares that alcohol is an insidious poison, and should be subject to the same strict limitations as opium, morphia or strychnine and that its supposed stimulating effects are delusive.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

ATHLETE RESCUES YOUNG WOMAN FROM DROWNING

William Burk Leaps From Cliff Into River and Swims Out With Miss Leta Dalton—Girl's Father Gives Him a Fine Watch.

Delhi, Oct. 19.—William Buck, aged 19, the heavy hitting left fielder of the champion Delhi baseball team, has eclipsed his baseball glory by saving a young lady from drowning. Young Buck rescued from the waters of the Rhone River on Sunday Miss Leta Dalton, the pretty talented daughter of Dent Dalton, one of the wealthiest men of Southern Ontario. Buck has been presented by Dalton with the finest gold watch that money can buy, inscribed with the record of the deed of valor, and an effort will be made to secure the life-saving medal of the Humane Society.

Sunday was an ideal for boating, and Miss Dalton, accompanied by Miss Julia Wilson and her small brother, Arthur Wilson, were enjoying the water near Quance Mills. When their boat reached a point in the shadow of a perpendicular bank near the Buck home the boat overturned and the three young people were left struggling in the deep, ice-cold water.

Arthur Wilson, a brave little fellow accustomed to swimming, after a desperate effort, managed to tow his sister to safety; for which act he deserves great praise. The little fellow was so exhausted from his great effort that he was unable to go to the assistance of Miss Dalton, but he called loudly for help.

The cry was heard by Will Buck in his home near the top of the river bank. From the top of a sheer precipice he took in the situation at a glance.

"Here goes, but I don't know whether I'll come back?" he called out to his father, and he dived. A white hand appeared for a moment above the dark water and then disappeared. Young Buck swam for the spot, and managed with great effort to seize an apparently inanimate form as it sank.

Another moment and it would have been too late.

THE GOVERNMENT WILL INVESTIGATE THE WRECKS

Owen Sound, Oct. 19.—Capt. L. N. Demers, Dominion Wreck Commissioner, will be here this week to investigate the accident to the Athabasca, coming from Quebec, where he is inquiring into the accident in the gulf to the steamship Empress of Ireland.

Members of the crew of the Athabasca claim that, though a blizzard was raging, the light in the Flower Pot Island lighthouse was not lit, nor was the foghorn blowing. When the danger was realized Capt. Brown ordered the wheelsman to steer to starboard. The wheelsman in the excitement turned to port instead. The mate observed the mistake and sprang to the wheel. At the same time the captain signalled the engines reversed, but it was too late.

Danl. Smith, lighthouse-keeper for nearly fifty years, says the light was lit, that he had been able to see the Athabasca's lights for some time, and that the snow flurries were intermittent only, and there was no necessity for the foghorn.

The damage to the steamer is placed at $40,000.

SCOTTISH RITE MASONS ARE IN SESSION AT WASHINGTON

Washington, Oct. 19.—Attended by the three masons of the highest standing in all America, the biennial meeting of the supreme council of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, southern jurisdiction of the United States, assembled here yesterday. Sovereign Grand Commander James D. Richardson of the southern jurisdiction called the meeting to order, there being present, among others, Dr. J. M. Gibson, sovereign grand commander of the supreme council of Canada, and Gen. Samuel Crocker Lawrence, sovereign grand commander of the northern jurisdiction.

The allocution of Grand Commander Richardson announced an increase of about 33 per cent. in the total membership of the order for the southern jurisdiction, the number of members who received the 32nd degree being 35,005, compared with 27,105 two years ago. It was announced that the next international conference would be held in this city, probably in 1912. About 40 candidates were given the Royal Order of Scotland degree last night. This degree is conferred only upon 32 and 33rd degree Masons.

MOULDERS IN A PITCHED BATTLE

Hamilton, Oct. 19.—There was a pitched battle last evening about six o'clock at the corner of King William and John streets, between union and non-union moulders. One of the non-union men was carried off with a big gash in his head, caused by a brick, and several others were injured. Warrants have been sworn out for a number of those implicated, but no arrests have been made yet.

The trouble started early in the year when the union men refused to submit to a cut in their wages. After a lot of negotiations the men were locked out, and all the stove founders started to open shops, importing some non-union men. They have been able to keep their plants going, and it looks as if the union had been beaten in the fight. Some of them have joined forces and have started a foundry of their own.

If you only knew what comfort "CATSPAW" Rubber Heels will bring, you would put them on at once. Ask shoe dealers or repairers.

HER FORTUNE FOR THE CAUSE

New York, Oct. 19.—Lady Francis Cook, who arrived here yesterday on the Celtic, says that she is ready, if need be, to spend $1,000,000, all her fortune, to win votes for women. She will place the money, she says, with New York bankers.

"I am going right to President Taft," Lady Cook continued, "to see if I cannot get him to do what Lincoln did, but by peaceable measures. I shall call the President's attention to the 14th amendment of the constitution. The constitution says that only idiots, the insane and convicts may not vote, and I want to know if that bars women.

DROPPED DEAD AT SIGHT OF BODY

Mineral Point, Wis., Oct. 19.—F. E. Hanscom, cashier of the wrecked First National Bank of Mineral Point, shot and killed himself Sunday night. Hanscom's body was removed to the house of his mother-in-law, Mrs. John Gray, who dropped dead. Hanscom had been working night and day and was despondent.

Dogs Ate the Church.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—Rev. E. J. Peck, Anglican missionary from Baffin Land, is in Ottawa. Amongst the interesting things he tells is that some years ago the Christian Eskimos of Black Lead Island built a neat little church of sealskins, but ravenous dogs devoured it. Mr. Peck has spent thirty years in the far north.

CHANGE OF VENUE HAS BEEN REFUSED

Toronto, Oct. 19.—Notwithstanding the arguments of T. C. Robinette, K.C., to the effect that the minds of the people of the province of Ontario have been prejudiced against Walter Blythe, charged with the murder of his wife, it was the opinion of Justice Magee, who opened the Criminal Assizes Court yesterday afternoon, that twelve men could be found who would give the prisoner a fair trial.

His lordship could not see that he should attach such importance to the meeting of the citizens of Agincourt as to warrant the granting of the application for a change of venue, or a postponement of the trial.

WITNESS RESENTS STATEMENT BY COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENCE

And Asks Protection of the Court---Fred and Harry Jopling Arraigned This Morning on Manslaughter Charge--Four Witnesses Testified.

Fred and Harry Jopling, of Bridgenorth, were arraigned this morning at the sitting of the fall assizes of the High Court before Chief Justice Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, on the charge of manslaughter, which arose out of the death of Arthur Bodard, of Toronto, at Chemong Park last August. They were, it is held by the crown, responsible for his death, as it is alleged to have resulted from injuries sustained in an engagement in which Bodard and the two Joplings are said to have taken part on the evening of August 23rd.

Mr. Shirley Denison, of Toronto, is conducting the case for the crown, and Mr. D. O'Connell is defending the accused.

The jury was empanelled as follows—James Trotter, M. Breckenridge, John Cooms, Peter Flood, John Beckle, W. Mader, Edward Fitzgerald, John Johnston, H. A. Fife, Isaac Puffer, J. E. Middleton and E. J. Allen.

Crown Prosecutor Denison briefly outlined the crown's case to the jury.

The first witness called for the crown was Harry Marks, of Toronto, who testified at the inquest. He told what he knew of what presumably led up to the trouble at the park between Bodard and the Joplings on the night of August 23rd. Harry Jopling started it and Fred took a hand in it. Bodard hollered "let go" three times and "dirty" twice. His evidence was practically a rehearsal of what had been told at the inquest. The witness was cross-examined by Mr. O'Connell at some length.

Miss Ada Minns, who was living at Chemong Park last summer with her uncle, Mr. Hopwood, said she had known Bodard. She told of the altercation on the night of August 23rd, and heard the conversation between Bodard and Harry Jopling previous to the altercation or wrestle. She only saw the actual affair from a distance and couldn't tell whether it was a fight or wrestling bout. She told of Bodard's weak condition afterwards. The witness corroborated Mr. Marks' statement about Bodard crying "let go" three times and "dirty" twice.

QUESTION WAS RESENTED.

Mr. O'Connell asked Miss Minns if she had characterized Fred Jopling's evidence as a "damn lie."

Miss Minns was apparently very much offended by Mr. O'Connell asking her such a question, and his Lordship said he wouldn't see the young lady insulted in such a manner.

"I'm here as a crown witness," said Miss Minns, "and ask the protection of the court."

"And you'll get it too," said his Lordship.

His Lordship estimated that counsel should have pretty good grounds to substantiate his information before asking a question like he did.

Mr. O'Connell consulted with Fred Jopling and then with his brother—not the prisoner—and informed the court that the brother had been told by a Mr. Brown that Miss Minns had used the expression mentioned.

"You may have been acting on your instructions," said his Lordship, "but she has denied it anyway."

Gordon Long, an eye-witness to the fight, and one of those who assisted Bodard to the cottage after the bout in which the latter took part with Fred Jopling, told what he knew of the occurrence.

Charles Forsythe, who also saw the fracas, gave his impression of it. He didn't regard it at the time as a particularly serious affair, but supposed the contestants were angry.

Bernard McManus was called just at 12 o'clock, but his evidence was not taken, as adjournment was made until 1.15 this afternoon.

BIG CONTRACTS ARE AWARDED

Sydney, N.S., Oct. 19.—The Dominion Steel Co. has given the contract to the Canada Foundry Co., Toronto, for the extension of the Bessemer plant blast furnace and two open hearth furnaces, for half a million dollars. The extension is for the new process of making open hearth steel.

H. McArel, Glace Bay; Mayor Mitchell, Dominion, and C. V. Wetmore, of this city, have left for Halifax and Toronto, to complete a few minor details in connection with establishment of the National Rolling Mills of Canada project in this city. This is a million-dollar proposition, and among prominent Canadians interested are E. R. Woods, Senator Cox and associates.

10,000 IN BIBLE CLASS PARADE

Pittsburg, Oct. 19.—With a parade of about 10,000 members of the Men's Bible classes of the denomination throughout the country, followed by three big meetings in the convention halls, "Bible School Day" of the international centennial celebration of the Disciples of Christ, closed last night.

A resolution was passed that the Sunday schools should pay the expenses of superintendents while the latter were attending conventions.

Found Head Mile Away.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Oct. 19.—The headless body of Thomas Guildfoil, a railroad man employed on the Newburg, Dutchess & Connecticut Railway, was found near Hopewell Junction yesterday. The body was not identified by the man's fellow workers until one of them found the severed head three-quarters of a mile away.

BRANTFORD RAILROADER ON TRIAL

Judge is Easy on McGuire—Would Not Send Him to Jail With Rogues.

Brantford, Oct. 19.—Justice Latchford, addressing the fall Assizes' jury that heard the case of Joseph McGuire, a former Grand Trunk fireman, charged with criminal negligence and neglect of duty, said that he would never send a man who was not a criminal to associate with criminals unless the offence was of an extraordinary nature.

The jury after five hours' deliberation, returned a verdict of guilty with a strong recommendation to mercy. The charge arose out of a wreck on the Mount Vernon grade, seven miles from this city, on Oct. 6, 1908, in which Engineer Fralick, Fireman Burchell of London, and C. Ribbles lost their lives. McGuire was in charge of a shunting engine, which he sent out behind a freight, and failed to protect its return to the city. A work train followed and a head-on collision resulted. McGuire, afterwards left the country, but came back for trial.

The coroner's jury brought in a verdict recommending indicting the Grand Trunk directors, and at the spring Assizes the jury disagreed. The prisoner has since been out on his own bail, which was renewed last night. He will appear to-day for sentence. N. L. Davidson was crown prosecutor.

Yesterday afternoon two grand jurors, Squire Hazelton and J. W. Murray, who failed to appear, were fined $25 each by Justice Latchford and 10 petty jurors were fined $20 each. No explanation had been received from the jurors in question by the sheriff, and the judge remarked that in future they would find it cheaper to attend.

DUC DE CHAULNES AND HIS NURSE

New York, Oct. 18.—For the first time since her marriage in February, 1907, the Duchess de Chaulnes, daughter of Theodore P. Shonts, returned to this country on the George Washington, of the North German Lloyd Line, together with her mother, her sister, Miss Marguerite, and the infant Duke, now ten months and eighteen days old. The Duchess is still in deep mourning for her husband, who died on April 24 of last year.

Mr. Shonts went down the bay in a revenue cutter to meet his family. He had to "see the baby" at once, and it was a sleepy little duke that was brought out by the sober-faced French nurse. But he soon was laughing and cooing, just as does the American baby who does not boast the long title of Emmanuel Theodore Bernard D'Albert de Luynes, Duc de Chaulnes.

NO HOPE FOR CHEAP MEAT

Chicago, Oct. 19.—No hope of permanently lower prices for meat was held out by delegates to the fourth annual convention of the American Packers' Association, at its first session yesterday.

Michael Ryan, president of the association, said prices might drop slightly for a short time, as there had been some increase in the number of cattle raised recently, but this boon to housewives would be short-lived.

"Unless many, many more cattle are grown," said Mr. Ryan, "there can be no hope of lower prices, and America may find itself an importer of meats."

FIGHTING GOING ON IN HAYTI

Cape Haytien, Oct. 19.—News reaching here gives brief details of a sanguinary engagement between the insurgents and the Government troops at Canongo, near Dajabon. The insurgents were in ambuscade behind a hillock and made a surprise attack upon the advancing troops. There were considerable losses on both sides.

The Haytien postal courier, who was taken prisoner, said that the whole frontier is in the power of the insurgents.

ESKIMOS FEAR THE COMMANDER

New York, Oct. 19.—A special cable to The Sun says that the Greenland administration steamer Godthaab, on which Dr. Cook traveled from Upernavik to Egeaminde, has returned to Copenhagen. Her master, Capt. Schoubye, says that Knud Rasmussen, met at North Star Bay some Eskimos who had conversed with Dr. Cook's Eskimos. Their statements agreed with Dr. Cook's. Capt. Schoubye adds that when the Eskimos at North Star Bay saw his ship they were terrified, believing that Peary was no board. They hurried to hide their provisions and other property. They fear Peary like the devil.

RUSSELL FIGHTS EXTRADITION

Cleveland, Oct. 19.—The hearing of W. L. Russell, the extradition case of the Lima, Ohio, oil man, who is wanted in Toronto, Ont., on a charge of fraud, began before U. S. Commissioner Walther yesterday. Russell proposes to fight extradition proceedings, and has a number of friends here attending the sessions. Yesterday was devoted entirely to the reading of depositions bearing on the case. Commissioner Walther said the hearing would take up several days.

MAJOR-GENERAL FRENCH IN CANADA

Toronto, Oct. 19.—Major-General Sir George French, whose distinguished military career has included service as commissioner of the R.N.W.M.P. from 1870 to 1873, is back in Toronto after five weeks spent in revisiting the West. Sir George carries his 68 years lightly, while his manner is marked geniality. He expressed great surprise at the rapid manner in which the western country is being populated.

An Earthquake Somewhere.

Cleveland, Oct. 19.—A slight earthshock was recorded on the seismograph at St. Ignatius College here yesterday. The disturbance as shown by the instrument began at 3.39 a.m. and lasted until 3.55, reaching its height at 3.44 a.m. It is thought to have occurred in India.

FREIGHT SHEDS ROBBED AT QUEBEC DURING THE FIRE

Harbor Commissioners Are Taking Steps to Build Fireproof Sheds—Loss Proves to be Nearly Two Millions—Fire is Still Burning.

Quebec, Oct. 19.—The destruction of property by the big fire that occurred in this city on Saturday night last is much more serious than at first supposed. The losses, it is said, will reach the two-million-dollar mark, and the total insurance is five hundred thousand dollars. The Board of Harbor Commissioners held a meeting yesterday and decided to rebuild their freight sheds at once on fireproof lines.

During the fire small boats from certain sections of the city landed men at Point a'Carcy wharf, who broke into the cold-storage warehouses and simply filled their boats with provisions and liquors, which they carried away.

The debris is still burning and ten streams of water are playing on the ruins, together with the aid of the Davies wrecking steamer Strathcona, which is moored to the Point a'Carcy wharf and throwing water from her powerful pumps upon the burning ruins to save the wooden wharves. The amount of provisions awaiting shipment in the cold-storage was very large. Mr. R. F. Cream, a local commission merchant, had twenty thousand dollars' worth of pork destroyed, which was all for shipment, and yesterday he telegraphed to every market centre to obtain pork to fill his orders, but failed.

Fire Apparatus.

Quebec, Oct. 19.—At the coroner's inquest held yesterday morning on the remains of Fireman Jeremie Fortin, killed at the burning of the custom house Saturday night, a verdict was rendered that death was caused by a fracture of the base of the skull, due to a fall from a ladder.

The jury added that they were of the strong opinion that the fall was due to the fact that the extension ladder was badly mounted, and that the organization for the handling of these ladders was defective.

AUSTRIA TO DERIVE MONEY FROM THE SALE OF RADIUM

Vienna, Oct. 19.—A certain amount of the 154 grains of radium chloride (equivalent to fifteen and one-half grains of pure radium), which represents the output of eighteen months from the works at St. Joachimsthal, in Bohemia, is to be put on the market by the Austrian Government. The Viennese hospitals and scientific institutions will first be supplied free of cost and the rest will be offered for sale at the price of $750,000 a gramme (15.4 grains).

The precious store, the largest quantity of radium that exists in one mass in the world, is at present in a burglar-proof safe at St. Joachimsthal, guarded day and night by armed watchmen. For conveyance to Vienna the radium will be placked in a lead capsule, and a number of responsible officials will have charge of the tiny parcel.

Dr. Jungman, the Viennese specialist for skin diseases, says that many marvelous cures have been effected in the hospitals here by means of radium. At the lupus hospital certain forms of cancer have, it is declared, been cured. The most disfiguring marks on the skin are removed, leaving not the slightest trace.

YOUNG WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 19.—A bottle of poison and an unsealed letter of appeal for money to "dear mother" summed up for the police last night the story of the effort of Edith Thomas, 19 years of age, of Sherbrooke, Canada, to make a name for herself on the stage. The girl was found unconscious in her boarding-house where she has been sick for ten days since she came to New York from Danbury, Conn., where she parted from the small company with which she left her home. At the hospital it was said that she stood an even chance for recovery. The letter was directed to Mrs. Frank Thomas, Lower Water street, Sherbrooke, and read in part:

"I have been sick and have just $3.76. I have to pay my room rent here, $2 and then shall have but $1.76 to keep me until I hear from you. If you are able to let me have $20 I will take the train as soon as I get it. I have had enough and am in need of a mother's love. I will pay you back, mother, in more ways than one. I am sick and long for home. New York is a bad place for a girl who has no money. A girl dare not make friends with anybody. You can never tell who you are meeting, and sometimes when you think they are good and you go out they want to take you to some house, and the first thing you know you can't get out. This is New York, mother. I met a girl here who was treated in this way and I dare not go out.

"Hoping you will forgive me and with love,

"Your loving daughter, Edith."

WAS NOT ON WRECKED BOAT

Windsor, Oct. 19.—Joseph Boyer of Kingston, an oiler on the steamer "Stone," wrecked off Pelee Point last week, and whose name appeared in the list of dead, is all right. He had missed the trip by going to his lodging for his clothes, and returning too late.

In answer to U. S. complaints that the Pelee Point life-saving crew were not at hand to go to the "Stone's" assistance, the Department of Marine replies that the crew is a volunteer one, though receiving a small Government bounty each year.

Mr. Ray announces that in connection with his Newfoundland paper enterprises, Lord Northcliffe proposes to establish a line of steamers between the colony and England.

The information was first laid against John Reynolds of Reynolds & Co., Manitowaning, Manitoulin Island, who had red clover seed, a sample of which showed 12 noxious weeds to the thousand, while the limit is five. Reynolds pleaded that the seed had been furnished by the Stephens' firm.

Sales Doubling Every Six Months

Wonderful Demand for a Wonderful Remedy.

During the past few years, the sales of "Fruit-a-tives" have doubled every six months. For the six months from January to July of this year, the sales of this popular medicine were more than twice greater than for any similar period since "Fruit-a-tives" was introduced to the public.

The National Drug & Chemical Company of Canada Limited, the largest wholesale drug house in the world—Lymans Limited of Montreal — and Lymans Brothers of Toronto — are buying "Fruit-a-tives" in 100 gross lots. 100 gross mean 14,400 boxes, which retail for $7,200.00. This gives some idea of the steady demand for these wonderful fruit liver tablets.

It is safe to say that "Fruit-a-tives" is on sale in every drug store and in departmental stores and general stores carrying medicines throughout the Dominion. Nor is the sale of "Fruit-a-tives" confined to Canada. In many parts of the United States, "Fruit-a-tives" is the standard family medicine and hardly a day passes that the Fruit-a-tives Company does not receive prepaid orders from our neighbors over the line.

The many testimonials, which have been published in the leading papers, are the most convincing evidence of the great value of "Fruit-a-tives".

WE HAVE TIME IN CANADA

The new "national scandal" of the United States, as a southern journal calls it, is not without its parallel in Canada. There are men of both parties in Canada, and in the Canadian Parliament, who are playing into each other's hands to the detriment of their parties, and of the country generally. Canadians will one day wake up to the fact that they are being played for "suckers," to use a rude but well-known term. Politics in Canada, outside of the nominal leaders and a large number of sincere men in Parliament, have become the medium by which representatives of both parties play into each other's hands to their own mutual advantage. The growth of independence amongst the electors is indisputably due to this general knowledge and belief.

The revelations of the alleged compact between certain Republicans and Tammany in Congress show how things are going in the United States. Suspicion of it has existed for a long time, but the recent alliance in Congress to withstand various election reform bills speaks louder than a volume of denials, and plainly shows what is taking place in the governing bodies to the south of us. That the same "business" exists in Canada on a necessarily smaller scale is well known. Canadians are being used to promote, at the polls, the interests of a few who pool their "political opinions" when the need and occasion arise. The safety of Canada lies in its Press. If it were not for the high-minded fidelity of the great majority of Canadian journals to the public interest, the process of milking the electorate would be easier and on a larger scale. The dairy-products of Canada do not all come from the bovine members of the commonwealth.

To the Grand Work Dodd's Kidney Pills are Doing

Fishermen Regard Them as a Boon to Mankind—Mr. Frank Banfield Tells How They Cured His Backache

Garnish, Fortune Bay, Nfld., Oct. 18. Special.—Among the fishermen here, who through exposure to wet and cold are subject to those pains and aches which come from diseased Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills are looked upon as a positive boon to mankind. They are very tired of telling how their Backaches and their Rheumatism vanish before the great Kidney remedy.

Among many others Mr. Frank Banfield, after years of suffering, has found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills, and here is what he is telling his friends:

"I find Dodd's Kidney Pills the best medicine for Backache I have ever used. I only used two boxes and they cured me of Backache I had had for five years. It started through a strain. My father's back also bothered him, and he got some relief from pill I gave him. They were too precious to give him more. All persons suffering from Backache should use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Why do Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Backache? Simply because Backache is Kidney ache, and Dodd's Kidney Pills positively cure all Kidney aches and ills. This has been proved in thousands of cases in Canada. If you haven't used them yourself ask your neighbors.

WAWA HOTEL NO BE ENLARGED

The great success and popularity which the "WaWa," the fine summer hotel situated on the Lake of Bays, "Highlands of Ontario," has attained has warranted the proprietors to materially increase the capacity of this resort, and it has been decided that a extension containing forty more rooms be added this year and ready for occupancy at the opening of the season next year. This addition into the hotel will be finished in the same plain but handsome style as the rest of the present structure and rooms will be connected with bath between every two rooms.

The season this year has proved up to expectations and the house has been well patronized; in fact hundreds of people had to be denied accommodation owing to its entire capacity being taken up—in fact an auxiliary of fifteen tents was added to take care of as much as possible of the overflow.

If there were more hotels like this in the "Highlands of Ontario," thousands of more people would be attracted to the favorite resorts.

UNITED MEETING OF THE THREE ANGLICAN CHURCHES

The first annual meeting of the united Anglican congregations of the city in connection with the observance of "Children's Sunday" on Sunday was held in St. John's Sunday school last night. Mr. D. Spence, of St. Luke's, presided over a good attendance of clergy, teachers and parents. The special service for the day was led by the Rev. Canon Davidson, who afterwards cordially welcomed the sister congregations. After the hymn, "Forward Be Our Watchword," had been sung, the Rev. Dr. Langfeldt gave a thoughtful address on the special subject, "The Personal Responsibility of the Individual of the Congregation to the Sunday School." He proved that from every point of view it was advantageous to send our children to Sunday school and deplored the fact of so many young people being on the streets on Sunday afternoon instead of assembling in the Sunday school. He urged every churchman and churchwoman to do their duty to help the clergy and teachers in their work in the nursery of the church, and condemned the sectarian differences which banished the Bible from our daily schools. A model lesson on the church catechism, first four questions was given to a class of boys by Mr. R. J. Devey. The lesson was taught from the Rev. D. J. Caswell's chart forms which teaches from symbols and letters in a most attractive way, and the class shewed by their intelligent answering a welcome familiarity with the catechism, for which the chart system of teaching in which the chart system of teaching in use for over a year in St. John's school is largely responsible. The Rev. H. R. Trumpour presented next Sunday's Scripture lesson most effectively. Those seated near the platform were provided with Bibles and formed a class, following the teacher closely as from Bible and map he skilfully drew lessons from the stirring account of St. Paul's trials in that memorable journey. It is hoped that these lessons may be of frequent occurrence as the meeting last night were quick to show their appreciation of the work of both the teachers.

Delightful music was sung by Mrs. R. J. Devey, Miss Ruth Dawson and Miss Ruby Quartermain, all of whom are Sunday school teachers.

Mr. Common moved and Mr. Edgar seconded a motion according the hearty thanks of the meeting to all those who had provided the various items of a most interesting and profitable programme, which the chairman declared carried unanimously remarking that he earnestly hoped much good would result from the meeting to Sunday school work and to the workers. The St. John's teachers then entertained the company to light refreshments and the meeting was closed shortly after ten o'clock by the Rev. Canon Davidson with the concluding prayers of the Evening Office.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—London cables for cattle are easy, at 12c to 13¾c per lb. for Canadian steers, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 11⅛c to 11½c per pound.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 84 carloads, consisting of 1640 cattle, 22 hogs, 789 sheep and lambs, and 23 calves.

Butchers.

There was a good demand for the best class of butchers, such as are taken for export on many occasions, but common and medium butchers were, if anything, easier, butchers having had a surfeit of this class during the past two or three weeks. Prime lots and loads sold from $5.25 to $5.45, Whaley and Coughlin having sold two loads at these prices; loads of good, $4.90 to $5.15; medium, $4.50 to $4.80, common, $3.75 to $4.25; cows, $2.50 to $4.15.

Feeders.

There was a good trade for feeders for the farm, as well as the distilleries, there being many buyers on the market. Steers, 850 to 1050 lbs. each, sold from $3.50 up to $4.50. Feeding bulls, 1100 to 1400 lbs. each, sold at $3 to $3.50.

Milkers and Springers.

A limited number sold at $40 to $55 each.

Veal Calves.

Deliveries of veal calves were light and sold at $3 to $6.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs amounted to 789, all of which were sold, the bulk of them, 750, being bought by Wesley Dunn at fair prices. Export ewes sold at $3.50 to $3.90; rams, $2.50 to $3 per cwt.; lambs, at $5.25 to $5.75 per cwt.

Hogs.

Dealers report prices unchanged at $7 75 for selects, fed and watered, and $7 50, f o.b., cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 16 were 2000 cattle, 3300 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 850 calves, while the supply for local consumption this morning amounted to 1275 cattle, 2700 sheep and lambs, 1175 hogs and 450 calves. There were no new developments in the market for cattle, except that a somewhat better feeling prevailed on account of the fact that supplies were over 300 head smaller than a week ago. The weather was cool and favorable for keeping stock, and the demand was good from both local and outside buyers, in consequence an active trade was done, and prices show no change, as compared with those of last Wednesday. Choice steers sold at 4¾c to 5c; good, at 4¼c to 4½c; fair, at 3¾c to 4c; medium, at 3¼c to 3½c; good bulls, at 3¾c to 4c; canning bulls, at 2¼c to 3c, and cows, at 1½c to 1¾c per lb.

Cable advices from Liverpool this morning stated that the weather was good, and that the trade in cattle was firm for best qualities. There has been no actual change in prices since this day week for American and Choice Canadian steers, but values for cows and heifers are ½c to ¾c per lb. higher. There was some enquiry from exporters here, but owing to the limited supply of suitable stock offered for this branch of the trade little was done. The supply of sheep and lambs was very large, but as butchers generally were well cleaned out of stock, the demand was active and prices in consequence were maintained: Lambs sold at 5½c to 5¾c, and sheep, at 3½c to 3¾c per lb. Calves were scarce and prices rule firm, at $12 each, as to size and quality. The market for hogs was dull and weak, which was attributed to the fact that packers were well supplied for a few days, therefore they were indifferent and showed no disposition to operate. The bulk of the supply that came forward had been contracted for, consequently only a few lots were offered on the market for sale, for which $8 to $8.25 was bid for selected lots, while sellers asked $8.60 per cwt., weighed off the cars. One drover who came in last week with a double deck load for which $8.65 was bid and refused, ordered them to be slaughtered to-day and at the dressed price ruling he will lose considerable money.

Through The Little Blue Door

The Dedication That Marion Wrote For the New Book

By VIRGINIA BLAIR.

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

A high gray wall skirted the house across the way, and entrance was made through a blue door with a brass knocker. We had lived in our own little cottage for three weeks and had seen no one go out or in.

"There must be some other entrance," Julia said.

"But there isn't," I declared positively.

"And they can't be away," said Julia, "because we can see lights in the tower window."

"Yes," I said, "and the rural delivery carrier unlocks the box and takes out the mail every morning, so there must be some one who writes the letters."

"Well, I'll ask him," said Julia promptly.

But the mail man knew nothing. "I just take out the letters," he said, "and put the mail in, but I never see a soul."

"How are the letters addressed? Surely you must know whether a man or a woman is shut up there."

"No'm," the man protested stolidly; "the letters just say 'Marion Fuller'—neither 'Miss' nor 'Madam' nor 'Mr.'"

"Of course it's a woman," I said when the carrier had gone.

"Why?" Julia asked.

"Because a man would have to cook for himself, and all that"—

"And no man who could help it would want that name. Think of a man named Marion."

"I'm thinking of one named Jack," I said regretfully. "If he were only here, Julia."

Then Julia turned on me wrathfully. "That's always the way," she said. "No matter what I try to say you always come back to Jack. You engaged people always harp on one string."

Silence reigned for a moment, and then to break the ice I began, "I'm going to watch the blue door after dark."

"How can you watch anything after dark?"

"It's moonlight," I reminded her, "and I could certainly see the outline of any one who came out."

That night as I sat on the porch I sniffed. "Julia," I said solemnly, "do I smell onions?"

Julia's aristocratic nose was elevated. "Onions it is," she said.

"They are in a delicious combination with something," I said. "It is the nearest thing to a fish chowder that I have known since the days of shore dinners."

"Chowder?" Julia demanded. "Where would they get their fish?"

"Catch 'em," I said briefly. "Any one who would drop a line from that stone wall on the other side could fish in the river."

"Then you think?" Julia questioned.

"I think that if it is the fragrance of fish chowder that is being wafted toward us on the evening air the tenant behind the blue door is a man."

And even as I spoke the blue door opened, and a young man came forth carrying a steaming dish.

"Well, of all things," said Julia under her breath.

The young man came up the steps. "I am your next door neighbor," he announced, "and I thought that this chowder might be my introduction. It is a most exclusive recipe, which I have shared with only one friend, Jack Carson."

I sat up straight. "Jack Carson?" I exclaimed. "Why, he is—he is"—

"The man you are engaged to—exactly," said the young man with the chowder. "This morning I had a letter from him saying that you were somewhere in the neighborhood. I knew from the description that you were the young ladies next door, and I felt that his letter and this chowder would constitute a sufficient introduction, and so I have presented myself," and he handed me Jack's letter, with a bow.

And while I read it I heard Julia say, "So you are Marion Fuller?"

"Yes."

"I thought it was a girl," Julia murmured, dimpling and sparkling. "The name is so—so feminine."

"But now that you have seen me?" he questioned.

"I shall not think of you—at all," she said.

"Stay me with chowder," he pleaded. "Comfort me with"— He held the dish out toward me. "You'll accept it, won't you?"

"Indeed I will," I said promptly, "and you shall tell me how you came to make a Robinson Crusoe of yourself behind the blue door."

I led the way to our little dining room.

"Our coffee is ready," I said, "and Julia made the rolls with her own fair hands."

The chowder was delicious, and the big man at the head of the table served it with a lavish hand.

That was the beginning of our good fellowship, but it was three weeks before Marion confessed why he had shut himself up behind the blue door, and in those weeks he had fallen hopelessly in love with Julia.

"But why," she insisted one night as we all sat in the moonlight, "did you shut yourself up behind the blue door?"

"I was writing a book, and I wanted to be absolutely alone. The publishers had insisted that I finish it by October."

"And this," said Julia, "is the last of August."

She stood up and leaned against the porch rail. "And a man who can write books spends his time making chowder and frivoling with young ladies."

"But," he excused eagerly, "I couldn't write after you came. I could see you from the tower, and you distracted my thoughts so that I couldn't put down a line. At last, in despair, I moved downstairs and went to work. But I couldn't write there. I—I kept wondering what you were doing. And then I began to plan ways and means of getting acquainted, and then Jack's letter came."

All this he said to Julia.

"It's ridiculous," Julia said, "to fritter away your time this way. Go and write your book."

"But I want to be with you."

"Do you think," said Julia inflexibly, "that I am going to be the cause of the world's losing a masterpiece? I have a perfect contempt for a man who will neglect his work for a woman."

"So that is it!" he said slowly, and as he stood up they measured glances. "Well, I shall lock the blue door, and no matter what happens I won't open it until you ask me."

And when the key had turned in the latch Julia said, somewhat forlornly, "Now we will have peace."

"You'll miss him," I prophesied. "You'll miss him."

One week passed, and two, and not a sound or sight of our neighbor.

But one night there was no light in the tower, and Julia said, "If anything should be the matter!"

"He could telephone," I assured her.

"There isn't a phone," she said.

When four more nights had passed and no light flashed from the tower Julia couldn't stand it.

"I've got to go over there," she said.

"But you can't," I protested.

"I shall climb over the wall," said Julia firmly, "and you've got to help me."

I was getting a little worried, and when it was late enough so that there were no people passing on the road we carried our stepladder over and set it against the wall.

Julia climbed up and looked over. "There is an apple tree on the other side," she said, "and we can step down on the branches."

Silently we crept through the bushes and over the neglected lawn. It was very ghostly in the darkness, and not a light burned in the house.

"I'm going to call," whispered Julia, and her voice rang out clearly, "Marion!"

"Somewhere in the distance an answer came back feebly, "Julia!"

We followed the sound of the voice and found him on a couch in the kitchen.

"I've had some kind of fever," he said, trying to smile, when we had struck a light.

Julia dropped on her knees beside him. "I knew something had happened."

When we had sent to town for the doctor and nurse and he was made comfortable Julia and I crept in.

"And the book?" Julia whispered.

"It is finished, and it is dedicated to you. I should like," he continued, "to write the dedication 'to my wife.'" A twinkle came into his eyes. "May 1, Julia?"

And when Julia, blushing, had promised we went home together through the little blue door.

Intelligence of Insects.

The mental processes of the horse and the dog are those of man in much lower degree, in the view of Professor N. A. Harvey of Michigan, but the intelligence of insects must be of very different kind. The double nerve cord and gangila differ both in structure and position from the brain and spinal cord of man. Insects' eyes are immovable and compound and perceive motion and color, but not form. Ants, bees, wasps and other insects have not hearing. Taste and smell cannot be identical with those senses in man, and feeling is a perception through touch hairs instead of the skin. But insects have very acute senses that we do not possess. A cecropia moth can perceive a female a mile or more away, although a man could not detect it under the same conditions at a distance of more than six inches, and ants, bees and wasps seem to have other senses located, like this, in the antennae. Differing from man in general structure, with shorter lives and different living, the insects have intelligence that, though of a high order, is not easy for us to understand.—New York World.

Scotch Breakfasts.

Dr. Redgill, in Susan Ferrier's "Destiny," dwells on Scotch breakfasts with gusto. After proclaiming that Scotland in general is "a perfect mass of rubbish" and the cookery not fit for dogs, he adds: "But the breakfasts! That's what redeems the land, and every county has its own peculiar excellence. In Argyllshire you have the Lochfine herring—fat, luscious and delicious, just out of the water, falling to pieces with its own richness, melting away like butter in your mouth. In Aberdeenshire you have the finnan haddock, with a flavor all its own, vastly relishing, just salt enough to be piquant without parching you up with thirst. In Perthshire there is the Tay salmon, kippered, crisp and juicy—a very magnificent morsel. In other places you have the exquisite mutton of the country made into hams of a most delicious flavor.

Ships In Collision.

Bordeaux, Oct. 18.—The British steamer Sunbeam for Santander collided Saturday at the mouth of the Gironde with the Spanish steamer Zetiembre from an English port. The Sunbeam which was a steamer of 1,150 tons sank, but the crew were saved. The Zetiembre was beached, badly damaged.

CONCERNING THE SILO

The cement block silo shown in the illustration was built by an Ohio dairyman, who says of it:

"It is thirty-one feet high and fifteen feet in diameter in the clear. The blocks are made of the best portland cement and washed stone and have a rock face of one-half inch, made in proportion of one part cement to two parts stone, which makes them perfectly air tight. They are made 8 by 8 by 16 inches. It took 1,600 of these blocks to build this silo.

"The particular part is to get a solid foundation. I bound the wall with a No. 9 wire between each tier of blocks. Of course the cost of a block silo depends upon the kind of material you use and distance to haul it. This silo cost me complete $225 with about fifteen days' labor, including myself and team.

"There are quite a number of them in this section, and they are giving the best results. I would not build anything else. I gave this silo a thorough coat of coal tar inside, which prevents the acid of the ensilage getting into the blocks."

Size of the Silo.

Questions are so frequently asked concerning the size of the silo needed that the following table will be of interest to those who contemplate building one or more silos this year. The average quantity of silage fed daily is placed at forty pounds. This is more nearly a maximum than an average, but it is safe to figure liberally, for it is always better to have silage left over than to run short. The average feeding season of six months is also taken into consideration in forming this table:

A CEMENT BLOCK SILO.

No. of cows.	Estimated to consume about tons.	Size of silo needed.	Average acres corn needed.
6	20	9x30 10x16	1 to 2
9	30	10x22 11x20	2 to 3
13	45	10x28 11x24 12x22	3 to 4

An Essential of Construction.

The fundamental principle in the preservation of green forage when placed in a silo is the exclusion of air. It is the purpose of any silo regardless of its construction to exclude air as far as possible from the silage and in this way prevent decay. To prevent the air from reaching the silage all silos must have air tight walls. These must be rigid enough not to be sprung out of shape by the pressure of the silage, permitting air to enter next to the wall.

Not only the walls, but the doors also, must be perfectly air tight. To accomplish this they should be well fitted and the joints made more perfect by felt pads or gaskets. It is best when the silo door sets against a shoulder to place clay worked into the consistency of putty in the joint. The clay is placed on the bearing surface and the door placed over it, and when the pressure of the silage comes against the door an air tight joint is obtained.

The paper is successfully used by some silo owners either in strips to cover the cracks around the doors or in widths sufficient to cover the entire door and lap a few inches on the silo walls.

Treating Cowpox.

When sores on cows' teats turn to postules and crusts the presence of cowpox or bovine variola is indicated. It is especially prevalent on newly calved heifers. Give a mild epsom salts laxative, and it will be well to thoroughly fumigate the stables with sulphur fumes and to disinfect with formaldehyde. Sometimes it may be necessary to use tubes in milking affected cows.

Island In the Indian Ocean Where Dethroned Monarchs Live.

A thousand miles from the nearest mainland, far out in the Indian Ocean, lies a group of islands called the Seychelles Archipelago. They formerly belonged to France, but were taken by England during the Napoleonic wars, something like a hundred years ago. The largest of these islands is Mahe. Notwithstanding the fact that it lies almost under the equator, Mahe is one of the most favored spots on the earth. "Chinese Gordon" resided there for several months and was convinced that he had discovered the Garden of Eden. Hurricanes, drouths, fevers, poisonous reptiles or refractory natives are unknown. Poverty and want have no place in Mahe. There is plenty of work for all, either on the vanilla estates or at the busy little port from which numerous schooners carry a continual trade with the neighboring islands. The sea abounds in fish, and the land produces almost all the necessaries to supply the simple wants of the inhabitants, who are for the most part liberated slaves from East Africa and their descendants.

To this remote island Great Britain sends the African monarchs whom she finds it necessary to retire from business. Thither was sent in 1896 the historic Prempeh, King of Ashanti, together with his family and a large following of his chiefs, executors and slaves. Prempeh was a bloodthirsty demon and established in his kingdom a reign of terror without parallel in the history of Africa. The exiled chiefs of Ashanti live in a village some distance from Prempeh's house, and apparently have given up "murder as a fine art," for they live peaceably together.

Another of these chiefs in exile is Asibi, ex-King of Kokofu, which is one of the minor kingdoms of Ashanti. Five years after Prempeh was retired, Asibi attempted a coup which he expected would place him upon the Golden Stool as paramount King of Ashanti, but the English commandant at Kumasi obtained information of his treachery and arrested him, and almost before his own people realized what was doing Asibi was on his way to Mahe to join Prempeh. Another monarch reitred from business is Kabbaregga, King of Unyoro, and along with him may be mentioned Mwanga, King of Uganda. The realms of these formers kings are situated on the northern shore of Lake Victoria Nyanza.

Stanley Bryant, of Kingsville, was killed on the steamer Ward Ames by being caught between a cable and a drum.

A Sixth Sense.

In order to test the question as to whether or not insects have a sense that enables them to find places, even when they are transported to a great distance, Fabre, the French naturalist, caught a dozen wasps, painted the abdomen of each with white paint, thrust each insect separately in a little paper cylinder and then placed all the cylinders into a tightly closed box which he carried two and a quarter miles away from the nest of the wasps.

There he liberated the marked insects. They flew off in various directions, and he returned to the nest in about five hours afterward and watched the wasps that were going in and out. He soon found four wasps with white breasts in it, and before long the rest arrived.

Now, of course, they could not possibly have found their nest either by the sense of smell or sight. So Fabre maintains that they must have a sixth sense, which naturalists call the sense of location or orientation.

Fabre tried another still more interesting experiment. He caught nine wasps, painted them white and took them in the middle of a city four miles away from their nest. They flew up towards the roofs at once and immediately turned southward toward their nests. Next day Fabre visited the nest and found five of the marked wasps there.

YOUTHFUL PASSENGERS CAME ACROSS OCEAN ALONE

Travelled From Liverpool on Board Empress of Ireland Which Met With an Accident—Mother Met Them at Quebec—Are Now in the City.

To travel across the Atlantic practically alone, and to be aboard a steamship which struck a submerged wreck causing serious damage and great alarm, was the experience of two small English children, who arrived in this city this week, from Quebec, where the passengers of the boat were landed. The mother of the children, Mrs. Dale, recently came to this city from England, and for the past three months has been engaged at Mrs. (Hon.) Hamilton's, in Auburn. She sent for her children, who were being cared for by her sister, and they left Liverpool aboard the steamship Empress of Ireland with only the stewards of the big liner to look after them. It was when between Cape Chatte and Matane, that the accident occurred which caused a big hole to be punched in the bow of the steamship, but did not, however, cause anything worse than a little alarm to the passengers, who were afterwards landed at Quebec. It was at this point that the meeting between Mrs. Dale and her children took place, after which they came to Peterborough. The little girl is eight years of age and the boy seven, and both are decidedly bright looking children. With their mother they have been staying at Noble's Temperance House, but Mrs. Dale has secured a home on Simcoe street, where she will reside from now on.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST YOUNG MAN DISMISSED

Case in Which Wm. Wigg Was Charged With Grave Offence Did Not Even go the Jury — His Lordship Acquitted the Prisoner.

After three-quarters of an hours deliberation a true bill was brought in by the grand jury in the case of the King vs. Wigg, at yesterday afternoon's session of the High Court.

Before returning to consider the Joping case the court explained that an accessory to a crime might be equally responsible with the principal. There might be a difference in the punishment, of course, but in the theory of the law one was equally guilty with the other.

William Wigg was arraigned on the charge of committing a serious offence in the township of Chandos, County of Peterborough, on August 14, 1909, Kate Busted being the complainant in the case. The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The petit jury to hear the case was then empanelled as follows: Robert Heideman, John Gibbs, William A. Dundas, Samuel H. Long, George Davis, Russel Pearce, Frank Pitcher, Ernest Baptie, Robert Knox, Milson Hewett.

Crown Prosecutor Denison addressed the jury on the seriousness of the offence with which Wigg was charged.

The complainant and prisoner testified on their own behalf and the case was enlarged until 9 o'clock this morning, the prisoner being granted his liberty on $1,000 bail on his own recognizance.

The judge took the case out of the jury's hands this morning and acquitted the prisoner.

HAVE BEEN MAN AND WIFE FOR HALF A CENTURY

Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, of This City, Celebrated Their Golden Wedding—Gifts From Children and Grandchildren—A Happy Event.

On October 17th, 1859, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Taylor were united in marriage at Wolverhampton, England. The fiftieth anniversary of the happy event was celebrated at Mr. and Mrs. Taylor's home, corner George and Charlotte street, last evening, when sons and daughters with their wives and husbands, and children gathered to join with the aged couple in celebrating their golden wedding. It was a happy event, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor being showered with congratulations and good wishes.

About twenty-five were in attendance, the children being as follows;—Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor and family, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Mitchell, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Buyers, Peterborough, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Stocker, Peterborough. Others present were: Mr. and Mrs. Green, Auburn; Mrs. Walkington, and Mrs. G. W. Henderson.

An excellent supper was partaken of, the catering being done by Hooper. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were presented with a generous sum of money and an address. The address was read by Mr. George Taylor, the oldest son, and the presentation was made by Mrs. Walter Stocker. The address was as follows;—

Peterborough, Oct. 18th, 1909.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Taylor,
Peterborough, Ont.:

Dear Parents,—Our hearts are filled with joy and gladness, that a benevolent and loving providence has marked you for special honor and distinction in this celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of your wedding.

Memories of the past flood in upon us and shed halos of fervent gratitude for the blessings and guidance that have been our portion.

Our lives have been materially benefitted by your example, your sterling integrity, your high ideal and your loving counsel.

We feel that words are usless to express to you the emotions of our hearts, but we are proud to see you so physically and mentally preserved in the enjoyment of life, which we pray may hold for you many future years of usefulness, pleasure and blessing. In asking your gracious acceptance of the accompanying purses of gold, we do so, not from the standpoint of value, but from the love that prompts the giving. We extend our loving congratulations, and our prayers are, that when earthly congratulations have passed away we may all meet to celebrate around the great white throne.

Signed on behalf of children and grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were deeply touched by the gifts and the address. Mr. Taylor made a happy reply, thanking their children and grandchildren for their kindness.

Halpany's orchestra was present, and the evening was pleasantly spent.

GLOOMY DAYS FOR TURKEYS

Thanksgiving Day Will Bring Them the Guillotine Touch

Thanksgiving day on Monday; and no turkeys in sight!

To look at the stores around town now would think that the above statement was true, but the Review was informed to-day that the statement is overdrawn. Very few turkeys have been offered for sale in the city as yet this season, but it is confidently expected that they will come in freely this week. Thanksgiving Turkeys will bring in a good price and there will no doubt be a good supply of them on the market on Saturday. The majority of the grocers have contracted with parties in the country for a supply of birds for their Thanksgiving trade.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

FILTRATION PLANT WAS INSPECTED

Peterborough Water Commissioners Visited Lindsay—Process May be Introduced Here

Peterborough may follow Lindsay's suit with reference to the purification of the public water supply. A deputation from Peterborough Water Board visited the Lindsay plant on Saturday and were duly impressed with the superior advantages of ozone filtration. The deputation was composed of T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Peterborough Water Commissioners; W. Henderson, superintendent of the Waterworks Department; W. H. Moore and W. H. Hill Water Commissioners.

Peterborough has no filtration plant at present. The system is a direct pressure one, the water being pumped directly from the river into the mains. However, a filtration plant is contemplated. The commissioners will consider the matter, they stated, and there is a strong possibility that the examined purification process of water may be introduced. However, this is not definite, and the decision may not be reached for some months yet. A big dam is under construction in Peterborough, and this will have to be completed or well on the way to completion before the system to be adopted is decided upon.—Lindsay Warder.

PHOTOGRAPHER "WENT SOME"

Mr. Fred Roy's Rapid Work in Getting Pictures of Rugby Match

Some work done by Mr. Fred Roy, of the Roy Studio, on Saturday, should pretty nearly establish a record in rapid-fire photography. He was commissioned by the local correspondent of the Sunday World to take some pictures of the Peterborough-Parkdale Rugby match at Riverside Park. It was a rush order, and Mr. Roy was equal to the occasion. He got the pictures in the first quarter, and in less than an hour's time had them ready to send to Toronto. They were good ones too. The pictures were sent to the World with one of the players of the Parkdale team, who returned to Toronto on the 4.38 C.P.R. train on Saturday.

SECOND GROWTH OF RASPBERRIES

Second crop raspberries have been picked frequently this fall and there has been a good deal of comment on their unusual abundance. Mr. W. T. Macoun, horticulturist at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, was recently asked the cause of this second growth.

It is found, Mr. Macoun explained, quite frequently in wild raspberries and occasionally in the cultivated berries. The dry weather this year has caused an early ripening of the fruit and hence the canes of the plant become dormant for the winter at a correspondingly early date. Then when a fine, moist autumn such as we have had this year, sets in, it has the effect of spring on the plants, and causes them to form fruit just as in the earlier part of the year. The reason that the fruit does not often appear in a second growth upon cultivated plants, is that high cultivation keeps the plant producing fruit much later into the season than do the wild plants, and, moreover, the cultivated berries do not ripen as soon as the wild ones.

The freak of nature is sometimes found in the case of the apple tree, was Mr. Macoun's statement, and the tree may bloom, and put forth blossoms, but will not produce fruit a second time.

DOESN'T THINK CHAMPIONSHIP BALL GAMES WERE FAKED

Robert Edgren, the well-known sporting editor of the New York World, doesn't believe the world's championship ball games between Detroit and Pittsburg were a frame-up. He says:—

There has been such a curious seesaw in the Detroit-Pittsburg series for the world's baseball championship that some people are saying unkind things. Even Pittsburg sporting scribes are yelling "Fake!" Other papers all over the country picked the cry up two days ago. Unfortunately yesterday's game only added to the appearance of collusion.

The arrangements, as nearly every one knows, is that the championship goes to the first team winning four games. The players share in the receipts of the first four games only, and this provision was made especially for the purpose of preventing any charges of "framing." If the players get no money out of games played after the first four, why should they "frame" it? The rest of the money goes to the clubs. An answer usually given to this is that the clubs may feel grateful to the extent of presenting to each player a neat bonus at the close of hostilities, even though the presentation may not be accompanied by a blare of trumpets.

As a rule, people engaged in promoting professional sports stop at nothing to get the coin. And these last three games of the long-drawn-out series will net over $100,000—a great fortune even among baseball magnates. It would be nice and generous and considerate of the ball teams to frame along a little just to hand this desirable sum over to their owners. And with so much money in the pot, what magnate would hesitate to take chances!

The stop to all of this sort of speculation lies in one thing: It would be suicidal for any ball club to be caught faking. It would cost the club its financial life, for the offending team would be booted out of the game forever. Grass would grow over the diamond where such a robbery was perpetrated. The grandstands would have to be torn down for want of patronage and the ball part would be worth just its value as building property. The whole league would suffer public condemnation and the loss of millions of dollars in public support.

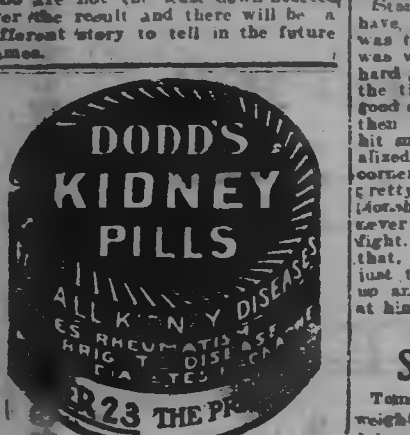
I don't think it is possible that any club would sanction a "frame-up," even if the reward was a share of the enormous gates drawn in a post-season series. I don't base that belief in any confidence I might have in the moral standing of the promoters, although so far as I know they are all fair and square and responsible men I'm using instead a logical argument. Every baseball promoter is a gambler. He gambles on the success of his team, for the unsuccessful team is a frost at the box office. He gambles on the weather. A rainy holiday costs him thousands. The whole game is a gamble.

Now, every gambler must have his favoring percentage. Suppose, as a reasonable proposition, that the chance of pulling off a frame-up series, without having the facts leak out later on, is two to one, or even ten to one. Is the profit from the extra three games a half or even a tenth of the profit on a whole season's play? It isn't. The gambler framing a series would be playing the game with an overwhelming percentage against him. And that's a thing that no gambler ever does.

RUGBY

The Hamilton Spectator says:—The Parkdale Canoe Club has made the two other O.R.F.U. senior teams look like junior aggregations, although the Parkdale team is not far removed from good junior class itself, being a good intermediate team. The showing made by Peterborough on the home grounds, even after the coaching of the great Macpherson, must prove galling to a town that has had good rugby teams in the past. It will just about put the game on the rough in the Otonabee town for this year.

The Spectator is in wrong with regard to the latter part of his musings, while we would rather have won the first game, the defeat served a purpose. The defects in the team's work will be remedied by the boys who are not the least down-hearted over the result and there will be a different story to tell in the future games.



DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

THE RING

Jack Johnson—Ketchel is a good, tough boy, but I had things all my own way. The time he knocked me down was because I was coming in too fast. His punch hit me back of the ear, but that was what sent me to the floor. Of course, it hurt me. Why shouldn't I admit it? But let some of the other fellows fight him now if they want to. I don't think there's any occasion of any trying him again. I will stay in San Francisco several days, but will probably go to Los Angeles to fight the winner of the Jim Flynn-Jack Burns fight. And Jeffries can have his chance any time. I guess I showed the fans that I had a good punch.

Stanley Ketchel—'All I want is to have another fight with Johnson. I was too careless. From the start I was waiting for a chance to land a hard punch. I had been trying all the time, and I hit him with a good stiff left when he dropped. But then I lost my head. How did he hit me? I don't know. I only realized when I came to, back in my corner, that I was beaten. I came pretty close to winning that championship. I weighed 177 bounds and never felt in better condition for a fight. He is a good boxer and all that, but he was afraid of my punch just the same. Just let me rest up and then give me another crack at him.

SPORTING TALK

Tommy Burns, the Canadian heavyweight, who was defeated by Jack Johnson in a fight for the world's heavyweight championship in Australia, Dec. 26th last, announces in Sydney that if the American promoters were unable to arrange a match between Jeffries and Johnson, he was willing to again meet Johnson, the winner to take all of the purse.

A telegram from Papke received at San Francisco, offering to fight Ketchel on a winner-take-all basis and an unlimited side bet, is an aftermath of the Johnson-Ketchel fight of Saturday.

Babe Adams' share of the receipts of the world's series and a purse given him amounts to $3,000.

Despite his defeat at the hands of Jack Johnson, the middle-weight championship is retained by Stanley Ketchel.

St. Yves won the Marathon Derby at Seattle in 2.32.39, breaking the world's record. John D. Marsh was second and Hayes third.

OWNER OF COLE BROS. CIRCUS DEAD

Martin J. Down Passes Away in Toronto Hospital--Was Kicked by a Horse

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Oct. 19.—Martin J. Downs, one of the best known showmen in America, and the sole owner of Cole Bros. circus, died in the General Hospital this morning after suffering for five months from the kick of a vicious horse.

The accident happened at Grove City, Pa. After several unsuccessful operations had been performed, Mr. Downs' leg was amputated above the knee a couple of weeks ago. Mr. Downs gradually sunk, however, until death came. He was 44 years old, a native of Toronto and had been a travelling showman for 20 years. A widow and one son survive here.

Carelessness Somewhere

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In passing the Central Park at noon to-day my attention was attracted to a large number of young children on their way home from school, and on coming closer I found they were looking at a dead dog, which I was told had been lying there for nearly 24 hours. This dog is right alongside the main path in the above park, and must be passed by the pupils attending the Collegiate Institute, as well as the hundreds of people who walk through the park every day. Should a dead dog be allowed to lie on one of our main streets for so long? If not, who is to blame for not removing this one sooner?

REMOVE THE DOG.

FRIENDS COULD NOT AWAKEN HIM

Sudden Death of Mr. Andrew Tully of Smith--Was Well Known in County

Last evening death removed one of the oldest and best-known residents of the county in the person of Andrew Tully, at the residence of his sister-in-law, Mrs. David Tully, lot 2, in the 3rd concession of Smith. The deceased, who was 71 years of age, had been in ill health for some time, which, however, did not prevent him from leaving the house and visiting neighbors in the vicinity. Yesterday morning he went to visit a friend, and on his arrival back layed down on the floor beside the fire, as was his custom, and went to sleep. Several neighbors were with his sister-in-law in the house, and when the time came for retiring an effort was made to awaken him, but it was found that he was dead. The late Mr. Tully was a violinist of considerable reputation, and his services at young people's gatherings were always in demand.

The funeral will take place from the residence of his sister-in-law on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock, to Little Lake cemetery.

NTERESTING REPORTS OF DELEGATES

A very interesting meeting was held in St. Andrew's Lecture Room last night under the auspices of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor.

Misses May Lees and Roma Langford, who had been delegates to the Whitby Conference during the summer gave excellent reports of their sojourn in the conference town.

Miss Lees gave a detailed outline of a day's occupation. Rising at 6 a.m., with breakfast at 7.30, the morning hours till 12.45 were taken up with devotional and intellectual exercises which proved exceedingly inspiring and helpful. The afternoons were free from meetings and given up to croquet and tennis tournaments. Excursions were also occasionally arranged.

After supper an hour was spent in what were called "Life Talks," led by some missionary. The eight o'clock hour each night was given to the discussion of the various religious systems, Buddhism, Brahmanism, Taoism, Confucianism, etc.

The most pleasant thing about the whole conference was the personal acquaintances with the missionaries. This was a great treat. There is one great respect in which all missionaries are alike and that is they like their work and always are anxious to get back again. Whenever you went throughout the grounds of the Conference College you meet gladness and pleasant faces. Everybody seemed delighted and there is no doubt that everyone in charge did all that could be done to make the visitors happy. There were about one hundred and thirty students in attendance and while all were happy the great purpose of the gathering was always kept before ourselves—to get more intelligence and interest in the great missionary problems of the church and to seek to get others interested.

Miss Langford gave a concise statement of the important points, in addresses of prominent speakers. The Rev. Mr. Priest, Baptist missionary from India was the teacher in the Mission Study Classes, and the subject of study was "The Why and How of Foreign Missions." From the study there would come inspiration, spiritual uplift, strength of character greater intelligence of God's work and a stronger devotion to the needs of others.

Mr. Ray of South America, in his missionary talk has shown how the Gospel was capable of saving and blessing so richly these Latin races and Canon Tucker, speaking on the great Commission, Matt. 28. 18-20, had shown the progress and efficacy of the Gospel of Christ. This was everywhere evident throughout the Acts of the Apostles, notably in the case of Philip and the Ethiopian Eunuch, and in a wonderful way in the influence of Paul's life, and in the direction to begin to great a work in Macedonia.

At the conclusion of the reports the president, Mr. Edson Wegg complimented the young ladies on the excellence of their reports and the great help they had been to the society.

The officers for the ensuing year were then elected as follows;—

President—Mr. Edson Wegg.
Vice-President—J. Grant Potter.

SHOULD GENIUSES WED

SIDNEY LOW SAYS GREAT LITERATI SHOULD NOT.

In the Case of Writers of Immortal Works Wedded Bliss Is a Rare Thing—Shakespeare Leads the List Which Includes Most of the Great Ones—Many Have Avoided Trouble by Remaining Single.

"Matrimony and the Man of Letters" is the title of an article in The Nineteenth Century Magazine by Sidney Low, which is the explanation of nature's method of guarding against a world of geniuses.

Mr. Low shows that, with most great men of letters, poets, essayists, and writers of immortal works happiness in married life was a rare thing; and not only with authors, but with other great men who have left their mark on history.

A Napoleon leaves only a weakling to bear his name, an Oliver Cromwell transmits his to an ineffectual Richard, a Frederick II., an Alexander the Great, dies childless, the victor of Agincourt is succeeded by the feeble martyr of the Tower.

Here is Mr. Low's analysis, which sets a dangerous example to literary men marrying:

Shakespeare—Married at 18, with hasty irregularity, a woman of humble origin eight years older than himself. The union seems to have been unsympathetic, and the terms of the poet's will point to an estrangement between husband and wife.

Milton—Married three times. The poet's first wife left him after a few weeks. He wrote tracts on divorce, and paid his addresses "to a very handsome and witty gentlewoman" until the wife returned.

Dryden—Married—unhappily.

Pepys—Married. Unfaithful to his wife, and frequently quarrelled with her.

Swift—Secretly married to a woman with whom he never lived and whom he hardly ever saw except in the presence of a third person.

Samuel Johnson—Married a vulgar and affected widow twenty years his senior.

Sterne—Got on badly with his wife, and had various love affairs and sentimental philanderings.

Scott—Married; not quite sympathetically.

Southey—Married twice. First wife became insane. Married his second wife at age of 66, just before complete failure of his own mental faculties.

Coleridge—Married unsatisfactorily. Husband and wife became almost completely alienated, and lived apart.

Shelley—Made an imprudent marriage early in life. Separated from his wife, who committed suicide.

Keats—Unmarried. Tormented by an unhappy love affair.

Byron—Separated from his wife after a great scandal, and entered into various irregular unions.

Hazlitt—Married twice. First wife divorced him; second refused to live with him.

Leigh Hunt—Married; not quite happily.

Edward Bulwer Lytton—Separated from his wife.

Carlyle—Married; bickered a good deal with his wife.

Ruskin—Marriage annulled.

Landor—Quarrelled with his wife, and lived many years apart from her.

Dickens—Separated from his wife.

There are exceptions of course. These great men, for instance, were all married satisfactorily:

Bunyan (twice), Wordsworth, Thos. Moore, Darwin, Froude, Matthew Arnold, Kingsley, Tennyson, Sheridan.

De Quincey—So far as the husband's habits permitted.

Steele—Twice; happily, in spite of irregularities of conduct.

Fielding—Twice. Devotedly attached to his first wife; after her death married her maid.

Mr. Low takes a list of sixty-eight names, all those of men of high, in some cases of the highest, literary talent, and finds that there are only twenty marriages which can be called satisfactory even if one includes some, like those of Fielding and Southey, which can hardly be so described, and others like that of Defoe, of which next to nothing is known.

Twenty-three of the marriages were unfortunate, and several disastrous, and twenty-five of the persons mentioned were unmarried. Thus among these sixty-eight gifted writers less than a third were married and lived in ordinary content and comfort with their wives.

"The result would be similar," he says, "if we included women in our list. We might mention the cases of Aphra Behn, Maria Edgeworth, Hannah More, Fanny Burney, the Bronte sisters, Mrs. Hemans, Jane Austen, George Eliot, Christina Rossetti, to indicate that the woman writer rather frequently avoids matrimony or is unfortunate in her experience of it.

Mr. Low sums up the reason in the word juxtaposition. "The man of letters," he says, "may or may not be 'domesticated,' but he usually gets an overdose of domesticity owing to the nature of his employment and the conditions under which it is carried on.

"Most men, from stonemasons to Cabinet Ministers, transact their main activities outside their own home and aside from the presence of their wives and children.

"The literary man, pure and simple, does his work at home. He sits in his study with his wife, so to speak, outside the door.

"Not all wives would resist interrupting the composition of an epic by deferring till the late evening the announcement that the cook was drunk or that the kitchen boiler had burst; not all authors would accept the interruption in the right spirit.

"There is no occasion for the husband to embrace his spouse on the suburban doorstep after breakfast before he starts to catch the 9.15 train to town. He can caress her all day if he likes. Privileges so easily obtained are not always valued."

AN ALL PURPOSE TYPEWRITER

Every business requires a typewriter that writes all the office detail, letters, card records, special monthly or yearly reports, invoices and statements, this and that—everything.

There is but one machine that will do such work—one with a wide carriage.

But no typewriter with a long carriage that shifts up and down for capital letters is fitted for such duties, There is too much strain, two much wasted energy.

The MONARCH VISIBLE, with its new and common sense way of printing capitals, with its light, rigid, swiftly running carriage, is the ideal machine.

It's the best and most economical long carriage typewriter made.

If we had your address we would send you convincing literature.

MIGHTY MOUNT ROBSON

The information which has just come out of the wilderness west of Edmonton, that a distinguished party of British Alpine climbers have attempted to scale the icy summit of Mount Robson, and have failed. Two points stand out distinctly in the story of this attempt and this failure. The first is that while they failed they felt more than repaid for the long journey just to have seen and to have stood in the presence of this "King of the Rockies." The party were twenty-four days reaching the foot of the mountain from Edmonton. At John Swift's homestead, on the Upper Athabasca, August 24th, they met Rev. G. R. B. Kinney, who had "Cook'd" them. Kinney warned them that they were too late, but they pushed on. On September 7th, they began the ascent. When they had gone within twelve hundred feet of the summit of this mighty monarch of the hills, whose icy crown sits 13,700 feet above the [illegible] Swiss guide Moritz Inderbinen turned to the men following him and whispered hoarsely "Foehn," which is the name of the warm wind of Switzerland, which corresponds with our "Chinook." And so! there blew, down across the glacier, the wind which softens the snow and makes the going bad. In the Alps the "Foehn" brings not only a thaw, but often an avalanche, and sometimes showers of ice. Most of the climbers knew, and better still they knew Moritz knew, and they halted. Even as they talked the storm broke over the crags and the night fell before they could escape the glacier over which they were traveling. It was with great difficulty that they made their way back to the timber belt.

The second point referred to above is the interesting fact that these British climbers did not doubt for a moment that Mr. Kinney had reached the summit. On the contrary, they accepted his statement and congratulated him heartily. Prof. Coleman, of Toronto, has already called Mount Robson "One of the show places of the world," and Mr. Hastings' description of the big hill seems to corroborate Prof. Coleman's opinion.

Speaking of the grandeur of Mount Robson, Mr. Hastings said it was a magnificent peak, the northerly face of which was a tremendous precipice. There was a great glacier on the mountain, which he understood was to be called "Kinney glacier" in honor of Mr. Kinney. The river, which rose on the glacier, said Mr. Hastings, divided into two streams, one of which flowed into the south fork of the Fraser River, and so into the Pacific Ocean, while the other stream flowed into the Smoky River, thence into the Peace River and so into the Arctic Ocean. On the north side of the mountain there were two glacial lakes formed by the melting of the glacier. It was a scene of great beauty. Great blocks of ice were constantly breaking off the glacier's tongue, the crash being audible many miles away. The great glacier on Mount Robson was fed by smaller glaciers from the south, west and east.

History and Biography.

The whole value of history, of biography, is to increase my self trust by demonstrating what man can be and do. This is the moral of the Plutarchs, the Cudworths, the Tennemanns, who give us the story of men or of opinions. Any history of philosophy fortifies my faith by showing me that what high dogmas I had supposed were the rare and late fruit of a cumulative culture and only now possible to some recent Kant or Fichte were the prompt improvisations of the earliest inquirers—of Parmenides, Heraclitus and Xenophanes.

In view of these students the soul seems to whisper: "There is a better way than this indolent learning of another. Leave me alone. Do not teach me out of Leibnitz or Schelling, and I shall find it all out myself."

Still more do we owe to biography the fortification of our hope. If you would know the power of character see how much you would impoverish the world if you could make clean out of history the lives of Milton, Shakespeare and Plato, these three, and cause them not to be. See you not how much less the power of man would be?—Emerson.

Why Dinah Wept.

Not long ago a lieutenant in the navy was ordered away on a three years' cruise. The order had been dreaded for weeks, and when it came the young wife, who was to be left in a Brooklyn flat with a baby and a colored servant, was in despair.

She controlled her sorrow very well, however, until the actual moment of parting came, and then she wept as though her heart would break. The cruiser was to leave the navy yard early next morning, and the lieutenant had gone to report for duty.

In the midst of her lamentations the young wife heard a sniffing and sobbing in the dining room, and upon glancing through the door she saw Dinah the colored maid, rocking her body to and fro in a chair and weeping violently.

"Why, D-D-Dinah, what's the m-matter?" cried the mistress. "You seem to t-t-take Mr. Blank's departure as much to heart as I d-do."

"'Deed I doesn't, Mis' Blank; 'deed I doesn't," sobbed Dinah. "What am bodarin' dis chile am de fac' dat a cullud gemman friend o' mine am gwine sail hisse'f on dat same ole cruisah!"—New York Herald.

THE CULPRIT.

He Pointed Out the Real Guilty Ones and Pronounced Sentence.

By J. L. SHERARD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

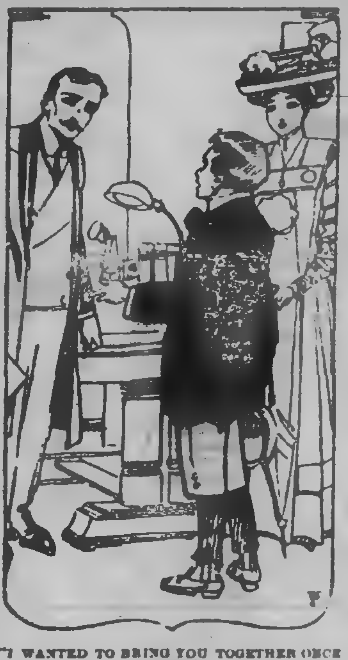
For the fourth time within a few minutes after his tardy arrival some one rapped insistently on his office door, and Mayor Ford, turning a little impatiently from a perusal of his morning mail at this fresh interruption of his work, called mechanically.

"Come in."

The door opened gently, and the chief of police pushed his charge before him. The suggestion of a frown which had gathered on the young mayor's brow instantly vanished when he recognized who his unwilling caller was. He looked inquiringly into the face of the chief.

The officer briefly detailed the facts of the boy's trouble leading to his arrest and detention at police headquarters.

"Why, you—Jim—boy—I can't believe it. W-what's the matter, anyhow?" Ford mumbled in astonishment.



"I WANTED TO BRING YOU TOGETHER ONCE MORE."

"I never done it. No, sir. I'm not guilty," answered Jim promptly. "But I don't wanter be tried this mornin'," he added, with some display of anxiety. "Not anyways until I get my witness. I've got a witness who c'n clear me all right."

"All right, then. We'll wait. It's half an hour till court time. Don't docket the case until you hear from me," Ford called to the chief, who was leaving the room.

"Well, Jim, I won't believe that you are guilty until you've been tried and convicted." He caught himself about to add, "Add I won't believe it then."

"Who's your witness, boy?" Ford asked.

"Oh, wait and see," Jim replied laconically.

"You refuse to tell me?"

"Yes, sir."

"Come, now. You must not talk that way. Perhaps you don't realize that you are in the hands of the officers of the law and charged with an ugly offense. Do you? Speak out, boy."

Jim remained speechless.

"You refuse to answer my question?" Ford spoke with an unmistakable show of irritation.

"I do," Jim replied doggedly. "Anyways till my witness comes."

Ford turned to the unfinished work at his desk, but his thoughts refused to dwell there. In spite of himself his mind reverted to events of the past two years, with all of which Jim was so intimately associated. He recalled the pathetic circumstances that brought the ragged, poverty cursed boy into his life and into that of another. The death of Jim's parents, his legacy of abject poverty, the unselfish determination of Miss Talbot, the teacher of the little west end school, to care for him instead of sending him away to an orphanage; the alternate care Jim involved and the amusement he afforded, the friendship and the more than friendship Ford entertained for the lovable teacher, her final consent to let him share the burden of the boy's support, the happy days that followed, the fond dreams of the future—and then the abrupt ending of it all. All these things flashed through his mind and smote him with a pang of regret.

A wave of pity for the boy swept over him. Could Jim, [illegible] faithful boy that he had been—could he do such a thing as that? And then that trace of cynicism that had of late crept into Ford's mind began to assert itself.

"Heredity and crime are closely bound together," he thought to himself. "This boy's father may have been a criminal. Nobody knew anything about him. He wandered here, shiftless, without energy, died, and in all probability left to the boy no heritage save that of an inborn criminal instinct."

His reflections were interrupted by a sixth knock on the door, gentle and hesitating this time.

"Come in," came the invitation gently.

Ford arose awkwardly to meet the caller. "Miss Talbot, y-you here?" he stammered in surprise, not knowing what to say. "Won't you sit down?" [illegible] the proffered chair and remained standing.

"Jim sent for me," she said simply. "I heard he was in trouble."

"Yes; at least he is charged with st—larceny, I mean," explained Ford, catching at the legal term that sounded better. "He said that he had a witness who could clear him of the charge. But you—what are you—what can I do for you, Miss Talbot?" he faltered.

Then, recovering his composure, he told her what the charge was, stating substantially what he had been informed by the chief.

Suddenly Jim pushed forward, excitedly interrupting. "You mustn't mind my buttin' in," he begged. "I'm goin' to tell you all jes' how it all wuz. Let me have my say," he protested. "I'm not guilty. I didn't take the boy's watch. You know I couldn' 'a' done such a thing. It was this way." He came a little nearer. "I took the watch in fun, an' John knowed it. I told him what I meant to do. He understands. Me an' John's the best of friends. I couldn't 'a' taken his watch or anybody else's. I'm no thief. Me an' him fixed things all up. He promises to do what I told him. He had me arrested on purpose, and jest at the last minute he will come in and clear me before the case comes up before—the mayor. It must not go on the book.

"That was all fun; all made up," he hurried on more boldly to explain. "What I mean [illegible]: You've both been so good to me. An' then you—you parted an'—an' wouldn't have nothin' to do with each other. It nearly killed me. I didn't know what [illegible] the matter with you all. I wanted to bring you together once more, an' so I lay 'wake at night thinkin', thinkin', thinkin'. An' then it all come to me like a flash, as clear as day. It was the only way I could [illegible] It was the only chance. I knowed it'd look bad for me for [illegible], but I knowed it'd be all right when it was all over an' you understood.

"I'm not guilty. You two is the guilty ones," he pointed his trembling finger at them in accusation. "You've stole from each other what you've got to give back. It ain't right for you all to act this way. I can't stand it any more, and you must love—each—other—again—and—always."

Jim could say no more. Whether it was his heart, his words or mere exhaustion mattered not.

John, the "prosecutor," had entered, but the presence of this arch conspirator was not noticed. Ford was the first to take advantage of the situation. He advanced smilingly, holding out both his hands to Miss Talbot.

"We are the guilty ones sure enough. Let's take his advice," he pleaded.

She did not resist. She let him take her hands. "Yes, we are the guilty ones," she replied laughingly, with an effort to conceal her real feelings. "We need to be punished."

"What is your sentence, your honor?" Ford gayly called to Jim.

Jim in the exultation of the moment rose proudly to the occasion.

"Life sentence," he pronounced grandly.

A BOON TO MOTHERS

When Children are Injured

Children are always sustaining cuts, bruises, burns, etc., and not infrequently contract ringworm, scalp diseases, and similar skin troubles at school. Mothers will find Zam-Buk without equal for all these accidents and diseases.

Mrs. Thomas Allen, 156 Water st., St. Mary's, Ont., says;—"My daughter Mildred, 4 years old, was severely burned by falling on a hot flat iron. She was burned on the heel, instep, and on the thigh very badly. I at once applied some Zam-Buk, which eased the pain and in the course of a few days the wounds were thoroughly healed."

Mrs. George Aldridge, 12, Louise street, Stratford, says; — "While playing barefooted about the yard, my son Bertram, 6 years old, stepped on a broken glass bottle, which cut very deeply into his big toe. The cut was so deep that I sent for a doctor and had the foot properly dressed, the doctor leaving a lotion to be applied daily. Under this treatment, however, the wound seemed to get no better, but on the contrary inflammation set in. A kindly neighbor then recommended Zam-Buk. We obtained a supply, and after a few applications the child seemed to rest better, and the pain was very much reduced. In a few days, under the Zam-Buk treatment, the wound assumed a better appearance, and from that time healing was very rapid. Inflammation and soreness were finally completely banished, and in ten days from the first application of Zam-Buk, we took the bandages from the foot. I feel sure that but for Zam-Buk the child would have had a very bad time, and might have had to sacrifice the toe."

Not only for cuts, burns, bruises, etc, is Zam-Buk effective, but also for serious skin diseases [illegible] ringworm, ulcers, etc. It also cures poisoned sores, chronic wounds, bad leg ulcers, festering sores, chapped hands, cold sores, frost-bite, and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and stores everywhere sell at 50c a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 3 boxes $1.25. You are warned against harmful imitations sometimes represented to be "just as good."

"BOOKS AND READING" DEALT WITH BY REV. FATHER McCOLL

The ladies of St. Peter's T.A.S. held their first literary of the season last Friday evening, at which an appreciative audience enjoyed a programme which included a number of bright musical selections by the Misses Doris and McCabe. A number on the programme that was much enjoyed was a vocal solo, "Remember to Forget," rendered in charming style by Miss Nora Fitzgerald.

The principal event of the evening was a lecture on "Books and Reading" by Rev. Father McColl. Father McColl's choice of a subject was a very happy one for the opening evening. The following synopsis of his very interesting discourse will give the reader an idea of the large amount of useful information and advice which the speaker conveyed to his listeners:—

The word "book" comes from the Saxon word "boc" (beech), because the Saxons usually wrote on beechen boards, just as the Latin word "liber" denoted originally the inner bark of a tree which was employed for a similar purpose. It has, however, received an application anterior to its origin, and is also used with reference to written tablets of stone or metal. In its widest sense it dates from the most remote antiquity. The Ten Commandments were written on tablets of stone; the Babylonians and Egyptians traced inscriptions on rocks and and bricks. Sheets of wood and ivory and of various metals were used and subsequently a great variety of pliable substances, animal and vegetable, crude and prepared. In the library of the University of Gottingen is a Bible containing 5,373 leaves of birchbark. Among the Greeks and Romans tablets of wood were in common use for writing purposes. They also used ivory as well as bronze for the more important purposes. Papyrus was also used in olden times. Parchment also formed a valuable substitute for paper. Santander possessed a beautiful Hebrew Pentateuch written on fifty-seven skins of leather sewed together with threads of the same material. It formed a roll one hundred and thirteen French feet in length or one hundred and twenty English feet. The shape of wooden and metal books was square but with papyrus and parchment the cylindrical form was adopted.

In the early ages books were very expensive. Plato paid $1,600 for three books, and Aristotle paid $3,000 for only a few books. In the middle ages material for writing became very scarce. Parchment was almost the only material available and the demand exceeded the supply. In the process of preparation, however, books received the most careful attention. The monks transcribed, illuminated and bound them. These books were often richly ornamented with gold and silver and some, for particular uses, often had the covers encrusted with gems. Books were, of course very scarce and dear, and teachers in those days taught without the aid of any text-book.

Printing made no immediate change in this condition of things but finally printing presses were perfected and books became more numerous. But even two centuries ago very few books were printed during the course of a year. No such thing as a public libraries than existed. The coffee-houses were the nearest equivalents and these indeed were the chief centres of information and general knowledge of all kinds. In those days the newspapers consisted of a single sheet printed once or twice a week, and the news was very scanty and uncertain. As late as the latter end of the 17th century a man was considered well off if he possessed as many books as a boy will now carry home from school in a satchel.

Wonderful progress has been made in the manufacture of books during the last hundred years. The number of books current is inconceivably great. Books upon books on all subjects are showered down upon us in alarming profusion. Not only books upon solid subjects, but novels, romances and tales for the million, treatises on dressing and letter-writing and love-making and heaven knows what else. Where there are so many millions of books there must necessarily be millions of readers. If books are printed they are bound to be sold. We have many readers but have we many students. Have we many men who care to do more than merely read, men who strive to master any study. Most readers prefer to skim over many subjects than to master one; knowledge therefore is shallow, superficial and frothy, multiplicity breeds confusion and depth is hardly compatible with a very wide range of subjects. Therefore the very extent of our reading leads to dissipation of mind. However, that would signify very much less than it does if authors of the day were always worthy of their calling. The amount of harm that is done in the world to-day by means of bad books is horrifying and heart-sickening. Books against faith and religion, books full of infidelity, lax morals, etc., are most common and appear in greater numbers, probably than those of an opposite nature. While, therefore we cannot but rejoice at the many advantages which we enjoy in the present age we shall do well not to lose sight of the many dangers and pitfalls that accompany them. Great care must be exercised in the choice of reading matter. The book that merely excites the imagination is harmful morally, physically and intellectually. There are many good books from which to choose, many charmingly written biographical sketches for instance, many good novels which tend to elevate and inspire the mind, there are the poets and prominent authors of both the old and new schools. Our own library contains a very choice selection of reading matter: books which have been thoughtfully chosen and which if they were not up to a certain standard would not be allowed a place on our shelves. If you must read, and of course you must, then read only that which will produce on your mind, heart and spirit naught but an uplifting influence.

The claim has been amended by adding Messrs. THE HIGHER STANDARDS

The following article is from the pen of Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, an old Peterborough boy, who is at present connected with the Board of Trade in Boston:—

The rise in prices is due more to the general social uplift than to the operation of the law of supply and demand. If one is searching for the causes of the increased cost of living he must not confine his attention to dusty bookshelves, or even to the latest studies in economics. He must use his eyes and ears in the shop and on the street. He will see everywhere the illuminated text, "Live and let live."

The old days of the cut-throat competition among tradesmen are gone, because they were profitable chiefly to the "shark," who didn't care who was hurt as long as he prospered. Now, generally speaking, the tradesman who cuts under the accepted standard of the price, is quickly found out, despised by his fellows and snubbed or boycotted by the producer. Of course, fraud and rascality exist, and so do injustice and monopoly; but these figure small in the aggregate. There never was a time in the history of the world when honesty and good faith in trade counted for more than they do in 1909.

The differentiation of grades and the better appreciation of quality are the result of higher standards of merchandising than formerly existed. This, together with an enlarged pocket book and a discriminating intelligence on the part of the shopper, has done more than all the trusts to raise the cost of living. No merchant can permanently succeed nowadays who deceives the public in his advertisements, or over the counter.

In merchandising and in advertising the thing that wins is—the truth. Famous merchants like Marshall Field, began their great careers by "playing square" with the buyer, by teaching the value of quality, by trying to sell good merchandise. Starting with dry goods, they ended by selling everything. They were expert tradesmen, but their success was due primarily to winning public confidence. Great purchasing power, great salesmanship, great organization—these, backed by good faith, have revolutionized the old-fashioned ways.

This new method of merchandising has powerfully stimulated expenditure on the part of the people, for it has educated them in the enjoyment of great comforts in their homes and lives. And while it has promoted sales, it has also taught the value of quality as an economy.

Meanwhile wages have risen, and now even the common laborer is lifted above the slavery and the penury that were once his lot. To be a good mechanic is better than to be a good clerk. It pays more and offers better prospects. The enjoyment of comforts, and even of luxuries, is now part of the everyday life of the so-called working classes. More and more money is going into education, into better attire, into good homes and into savings banks. Any worthy man can get a good job. The day is quickly coming when resistance to the increased cost of living will be replaced by respect for the motto, "Live and let live."

Nobody ought to complain of the increased cost of living, so long as he is better off than before, and as long as he can lay more aside for a rainy day. Here in Boston, at all events, we want to make life worth living—for the other fellow.

HAVELOCK HAS HOPES OF BEING THE JUNCTION POINT

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Oct. 19.—The great question which is at the present time occupying the attention of a large number of the residents of Havelock is that oft asked one in the past two years: "Will the Georgian Bay grain route make the junction to the main line at Peterborough or Havelock?"

Mr. W. J. Leonard, in a letter to the Council of Peterborough, said it was a question of Peterborough or Havelock. He submitted for the entrance of the railway in Peterborough, and asking for surveying concessions in regard to closing six streets and control of the whole waterfront.

The concessions asked for are such that cannot very well be granted by any council, and if just a good junction cannot be procured west of Peterborough it is very likely it will come to Havelock.

Another thing to be taken into considerations is the fact that the distance from Victoria Harbor by way of Havelock is one mile and a half shorter than by Peterborough, and that a very much better grade exists via way of Havelock, enabling the engineers to pull heavier loads, which is just what the C.P.R. is after.

The cost of construction by direct route to Havelock will be about $500,000 cheaper than if the junction were made at Peterborough.

Another thing is there is plenty of unoccupied land around Havelock, where yards can be constructed, while in Peterborough in the narrow dimensions in which they would be enclosed it would be absolutely impossible to make an extension if required in the future.

The line is already built from Victoria Harbor to Coldwater Junction, and has reached a stage where a decision must be made as to whether it will join the main line at Peterborough is the most important place, but by Havelock is cheaper.

No matter which place is made the junction, it is important that over two million dollars will be spent in construction.

A siding is at present being constructed at the west end of the yards here across Concession street, from the main line, which will be a lead to the other sidings in the west end yard.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

IS IN FAVOR OF HAVING SMOKING ROOM IN GAOL

Governor Chambers of Toronto is in Favor of One—Dr. Charteris, of Chatham, at Conference of Charities and Corrections Urges Better Facilities For Attending Feeble-minded.

Toronto, Oct. 20.—A smoking-room will be added to the jail if the suggestion put forward by Governor Chambers at the afternoon session of the annual Canadian conference of Charities and Correction at the Normal School yesterday, is adopted.

Governor Chambers did not advance the point jocularly, but from an earnest belief that the lives of his charges should be made no more burdensome than necessary during the period of their detention. He said that during his connection with the jail he found that ninety per cent. of the men prisoners found the greatest hardship in the deprivation of tobacco, and this he felt was an unnecessary hardship, and one which was not in the spirit of correction, but rather led the criminal to regard his punishment in the light of retaliation.

"If every country had as many insane persons in their jail as we have," declared Dr. C. R. Charteris of Chatham, "it is high time that the present asylums be enlarged, or new ones built. Ontario needs them more than the Parliament Buildings need a new library. Insanity is, like the great white plague, on the increase among us and, like it, it is capable of being cured to a large extent.

"No good can be done insane persons by placing them in jails. These people have their lucid intervals, when they recognize their surroundings. Thus an additional trouble is added to their already unhappy mental condition."

The suggested transfer of so-called harmless insane to country houses of refuge was not favorably looked on by the country authorities. No lunatics were harmless. They had to be watched with the utmost care. Moreover, the old people in these homes have a great horror of having insane persons coming among them.

He offered a resolution urging on the Government the necessity of one or more asylums in each county for so-called harmless insane persons, the cost of maintenance to be borne by the counties. It was sent to the committee on resolutions.

Dr. Helen MacMurchy complained that the native-born insane were being crowded out of the asylums by foreigners, who should never have been allowed to land.

Dr. English of the Hamilton Asylum suggested detention of mild cases in hospitals.

Major H. J. Snelgrove of Cobourg declared that criminal proceedings ought to be made to harmonize with the humanitarian-utilitarian spirit of the times.

The four theories as to the treatment of crime, punishment, protection, example and reformation all had their good points, but the state should concentrate its energies on reformation of its delinquent subjects taking care, of course, that its sovereignty was adequately maintained.

He favored the indeterminate sentence and compulsory labor for prisoners. By these means they should rid the community of the professional tramp, the drunken sot, and the habitual criminal, the "army of rebellious defectives." The educational and reformatory influences of the jail garden or farm was worthy of the highest consideration.

Lieut.-Col. Pugmire of the Salvation Army said that the machinery of the law existed, not to hold a man for a certain time and then let him out again to prey on society, but to teach him the lesson of life. What the released prisoners asked was not charity, but opportunity. They should recognize the tiny spiritual fibre vibrating in the worst of men.

Sheriff Middleton of Hamilton denied that it was the foreigner who was filling our jails. He favored longer sentences for the more determined criminal and shorter terms for ordinary offenders, than those given at present. He was doubtful about the value of the indeterminate sentence.

At the evening session W. L. Scott of Ottawa spoke on present needs of child rescue work. Nothing was being done in many parts of the province. There were defects in the Children's Protective Act, calling for amendment. Insufficient provision was made for local financial support. Too much was left to voluntary initiative. The Legislature should appoint a paid officer in every county and district in the province. Provision should be made for up-to-date juvenile courts, which were a farce without the essential element of probation. More facilities were needed for dealing with the feeble-minded.

Dr. J. T. Gilmour, warden of the Central Prison, cited some illuminative cases bearing on the making of criminals and the disabilities under which prison officials labored.

PROSECUTION ENDED CASE AGAINST JOPLING BROTHERS

The Submission of Case Against Them Concluded Yesterday Afternoon---Evidence for Defence Heard This Morning--Crotch Hold Explained.

The greater part of yesterday afternoon's session of the Jopling trial was taken up in the examination and cross-examination of the doctors called by the Crown to give expert medical testimony. The physicians who gave evidence in this respect were Drs. Scott, Greer and Archibald, the latter of Toronto. The examination of Dr. Scott was the longest one, and this also applies to his cross-examination, Mr. O'Connell, counsel for the defence, putting him through a cross-examination that was searching and minute in detail. Dr. Scott stated that it was his impression that Bollard came to his death as the result of injuries sustained in the struggle he had on the night of August 14th, at Chemong Park and Mr. O'Connell cross-questioned the witness with the view of establishing the fact that it was quite possible that Bollard might have died from causes not apparent to the doctor.

Bernard McManus, who lives in Smith township, was the first witness examined. He said he saw Fred Jopling and Bollard wrestling, apparently in friendly fashion. He heard no outcry.

BROTHER-IN-LAW TESTIFIES.

Mr. Wm. McPherson, of Toronto, Bollard's brother-in-law, was next called. He was asked by Crown Prosecutor Dennison to describe Bollard physically, and said he was a young man of about five feet nine inches in height, with exceptionally broad shoulders. He was 19 years of age, and to Mr. McPherson's knowledge, had not had any illness for the past six years. Bollard, he said, was particularly well developed from the waist up.

On the night of the alleged row, Mr. McPherson did not go to the dance at the pavilion. Between 11 and 11.30 that night and on going to Bollard's room saw him lying, partially undressed, across the bed. Two companions were undressing him. The witness stripped him. Bollard was very much exhausted. The only wounds Mr. McPherson noticed he had were some abrasions on the forehead. The next morning at breakfast Bollard looked a little pale, but otherwise seemed all right, and afterwards went sailing.

DR. SCOTT.

Dr. Scott told of attending Bollard and said he was one of the physicians who performed the autopsy. He gave the result of the post-mortem. To His Lordship the doctor said the symptoms displayed by Bollard might have resulted from violent injury to vital parts.

Upon cross-examination Dr. Scott admitted to Mr. O'Connell that he didn't examine the inside of the deceased's heart, and that it was possible that the heart may have been affected with endo-carditis. This condition might have existed before without the doctor's knowledge. There might have been trouble in the bowels, of which there was no external evidence. There were parts of the bowels not examined. Over-exertion might have been a contributing cause of death. This over-exertion might have taken place on the night of the struggle.

To Mr. Dennison, the doctor stated that he believed that injuries Bollard might have received during the course of the struggle were more likely, in his opinion, to cause death than any over-exertion at the time of the bout.

DR. GREER'S OPINION.

Dr. T. N. Greer also attended Bollard and acted with Dr. Scott in the performing of the post-mortem examination.

Eliminating from his mind altogether the fact that there had been a struggle in which Bollard took part, the doctor said he did not think Bollard's condition could have resulted from over-exertion from an ordinary or even violent struggle.

Dr. Archibold, of Toronto, the last witness to be examined before adjournment, from what evidence he had heard he supported the other doctors in their conclusions as to the cause of death. If Bollard had received injuries to the vital parts after the manner alleged, his vitality would have been very much lowered.

At six o'clock the court adjourned till 9 o'clock this morning. Dr. Archibald was the last witness to testify for the Crown.

THIS MORNING'S SESSION

When the court resumed this morning at nine o'clock the hearing of the evidence for the defence was commenced.

Robert Merrill, of this city, a son of Mr. W. S. Merrill, was driving with Harry Jopling in the month of August last. He told of the meeting of Harry Jopling and Bollard when the former was driving the delivery wagon. Young Merrill was with Jopling in the rig. He told of the incident of Harry Jopling calling Bollard's attention to his stained trousers. According to the witness Jopling never called Bollard any foul name. He didn't hear of the fight until the next morning. The witness was not a spectator at the row between the Joplings and Bol-

COAL COMPANY AGENTS ARE ON TRIAL AT HALIFAX

Cumberland and Dominion Men Answer to Charges of Conspiracy to Keep up Price of Fuel in Restraint of Trade—Price of Reserve Coal.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 20.—Many of the officers and general managers of the various coal companies throughout the province attended the preliminary examination in the Police Court yesterday before Magistrate Fielding, of J. R. Cowans, general manager of the Cumberland Railway & Coal Co., and Alex. Dick, general sales agent of the Dominion Coal Co. They are charged with conspiracy to restrict the output of coal and to put up the cost. The information was laid by J. B. McLaughlin, secretary of the U.M.W. of A., as an outcome of the Glace Bay and Springhill strikes. A number of U.M.W. officers were in court.

J. J. Ritchie, K.C., and E. M. MacDonald, K.C., were present on behalf of Dick, and Hector McInness, K.C., for Cowans. W. B. A. Ritchie acted for the prosecution.

At the commencement J. J. Ritchie contended that conspiracy, or concerted action should first be proved. The increase in the price of coal in Halifax couldn't affect the case so long as the increase wasn't made as the result of a pre-arranged agreement. Coal company officials had been subpoenaed and were in court. He couldn't see why Wm. Roche, ex-M.P., a Halifax coal merchant, should be called first.

However, Roche was called. He said he had been in the business for 13 years. In a general way, he would say that a large proportion of the coal mined in Nova Scotia was mined by the Dominion Coal Co., which had started operations in 1893.

Mr. Roche was asked by W. B. A. Ritchie how the price of reserve coal now compared with that in 1899. J. J. Ritchie objected to questions of this nature, and the magistrate ruled the question out of order, as it might lead to a question of whether fair wages were paid.

Mr. Roche to W. B. A. Ritchie said that the Reserve mine had been taken over by the Coal company, and the name Reserve was applied now to all the household coal supplied by the Dominion Coal Co. He believed the company tried to supply Reserve coal in Halifax.

The magistrate wanted to know if it was a crime to call a coal by any name it was desired to call it by. Mr. Ritchie said he wanted to find out just what the Reserve coal, sold in Halifax, was.

"As known in the trade in Halifax, Reserve coal is coal shipped by the Dominion Coal Co. and supposed to be from Reserve mine," said Mr Roche.

He had heard that representatives of the coal companies met in the city, but had never met with them. He did not know what they did at the meetings. There was no arrangement in regard to bunker coal. Witness was not allowed to name the price of coal to-day. He said he sold a great deal of bunker coal. It is supplied by the Dominion Coal Co. for the most part—more than they ought to, in some cases. They supplied people who should be supplied through the dealers. The Dominion had got the bulk of the trade on account of being able to mine properly and on account of transportation facilities. It had the coal trade along the coast almost exclusively. There was great difficulty sometimes in getting coal at all.

Bunker coal was supplied in Halifax to ships for less than was charged the Halifax dealers, he had heard. There was no price arranged for bunker coal. The price at Halifax was higher than at New York, and about the same as at Cardiff, Wales.

Mr. Ritchie said that the retail price of coal in Boston would be the same or a little higher than in Halifax, but an objection was lodged, and the magistrate ruled that conspiracy must first be shown.

Mr. Morrow was sworn. He said he was appointed agent for the Dominion Coal Co. at Halifax shortly after the Dominion Coal Co. was formed. Asked if he could produce letters from Mr. Dicks, and other documents relating to the summons, Morrow said he had not brought them with him.

"By whose direction do you decline to produce the letters in reference to such matters?" he was asked.

"By the direction of the directors of the Dominion Coal Co.," was the reply.

He knew of no arrangements between companies in regard to different collieries supplying different concerns, nor of any "working agreement."

"Are there any concern to which you will not quote your best prices, on account of any understanding that some other collieries is to supply them?"

"Possibly."

"Have there been times when you have quoted higher prices to some concerns than you would charge ordinarily?"

"Yes, when the season's contracts have not had the coal to spare."

In 1902 the standard price in Cape Breton was $3 for screened, and $2.75 for run of mine. If a man bought a single cargo now, he would have to pay $1 a ton more than in 1893. The nominal increase was $1 a ton; the actual increase about 40 or 50 cents to large dealers.

CANADIAN DEFENCE COMMITTEE

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—An inter-departmental committee between the Departments of Militia and Marine is an interesting recent development. It is a mild imitation of Australia's council of defence, and is to ensure harmony between the two departments in such matters as may be of interest to each. Its purpose is purely consultative. The committee consists on the marine side of Admiral Kingsmill, and on the militia side of Inspector-General Sir Percy Lake and the chief of the general staff, Gen. Otter; while Col. Gwatkin, director of operations and staff duties, is secretary.

The body was horribly mutilated, and the scalp had been torn from the severed head. There is no doubt that he was the victim of Terrorist vengeance.

ABOUT THE NEW WELLAND CANAL

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—Hon. G. P. Graham, asked yesterday as to the Government's intentions re the construction of the Welland Canal, said that no definite decision to proceed with the work had been arrived at.

According to a St. Catharines' despatch, the route has been selected and the new canal will commence at Port Colborne, the same as the present canal; it will go straight from there to the Fifteen Mile Creek, just to the west of St. Catharines, touching at points near Port Robinson and Fonthill. Being in a straight line, three or four miles will be saved over the present canal. Present plans provide that it will not touch Port Dalhousie. There will be only seven locks on the newer canal, in place of the twenty-five on the present canal.

THE COMMONS STOOD ALOOF

London, Oct. 20.—The Socialist members of the House of Commons tried to adjourn the session of the House yesterday afternoon in order to discuss the execution at Barcelona last week of Prof. Ferrer, but only fourteen Labor and four Radical members could be found to support the motion.

Albert Victor Grayson, the Socialist member for the Colnevalley Division of Yorkshire, and William J. Thorne, Labor member for Southwest Ham, then created a disturbance by anathematising their colleagues as "shameful cowards."

Thorne shouted out it was his pious hope that "those who signed Ferrer's death warrant will be sent to heaven by the chemical parcels post."

The Foreign Secretary said that the Government at no time was in possession of special information regarding the Ferrer case, and that the proper policy of non-interference with the internal affairs of a foreign country had been followed.

MRS. TURNER PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO THE CHARGE

Eight Witnesses for the Prosecution in Case of Woman Charged With Killing the Authers' Infant—Murdered Child's Mother Tells Her Story.

Toronto, Oct. 20.—For nearly seven hours yesterday Mrs. Mabel Turner sat in the prisoners' pen in the Criminal Assizes, and listened, with pale, intent face, to the chain of evidence with which the Crown authorities are trying to fasten upon her the crime of murder of strangling, with a twisted cord and her hands, the five-days-old daughter of Mrs. Annie Authers, whom she had been paid $100 to adopt. At 6 o'clock last evening the trial was adjourned, to be continued this morning. Mrs. Turner, when led to the pen, showed in her drawn, colorless face and sunken eyes the effects of the weeks of confinement she has undergone since her arrest, but apart from a spell of faintness as she stood up to plead not guilty to the charge of murder, the prisoner bore the long ordeal without showing distress.

Mr. George Tate Blackstock, K.C., who is conducting the case for the Crown, called eight witnesses yesterday: Mrs. Authers, mother of the murdered infant; Mrs. Maddeaux, with whom Mrs. Authers boarded; a doctor and three nurses from the General Hospital, and Mrs. Andrew Goldie, in whose house the police are trying to prove the murder was committed. With the exception of Mrs. Authers' evidence, the points have appeared before. Mrs. Goldie, after telling the jury about hearing in Mrs. Turner's room, on September 14th, strange noises which she thought sounded like a baby strangling, became hysterical, moaning and crying in a distressing way.

The first witness called was Mrs. Annie Authers, whose baby Mrs. Turner is charged with murdering. Mrs. Authers said she had made the acquaintance of Mrs. Turner through an advertisement that appeared in an evening paper in July last, in which the lady desired to adopt a baby.

Mrs. Authers stated that Mrs. Turner called at her home and explained that she was alone and lonesome, and was exceeding anxious to have a child to raise. On this occasion nothing definite was accomplished.

"When she called the second time," said Mrs. Authers, "she informed me that she would take the child within twenty-four hours. She did not take the baby on this occasion, however, but stated that she would like to have a deposit of $20 on the account of the $100 which I had agreed to give her. She said she wanted the money to buy clothes for the child.

This concluded Mr. Blackstock's examination, and Mr. Henderson, the counsel for the defence, proceeded to cross-examine the witness.

When asked by Mr. Henderson why she was anxious to have the baby adopted so soon after its birth, Mrs. Authers, who broke into tears, replied: "I was afraid if I kept it I would become attached to it."

Maximum U.S. Tariff Possible.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 20.—In the belief of Capt. Grubb, keeper of the Point Pelee lighthouse, the body of Capt. Howell of the steamer George Stone, is buried in the sand of Lake Erie and will never be recovered. Howell was encumbered with a life preserver, boots and a big sou'wester, when he tried to make the shore after the upsetting of the lifeboat. His feet had touched bottom when he succumbed.

He was wearing two diamond rings and in his pocket was a purse containing $300. Only three bodies have been recovered, leaving three unaccounted for.

THE MILK WAS ADULTERATED

Cayuga, Ont., Oct. 20.—Three weeks ago George Raulston, a reputable and wealthy farmer of the Township of Walpole, was fined by Magistrate Cline for sending adulterated milk to the Hagersville cheese factory. From this decision he appealed to County Judge Douglas. Many witnesses were heard. The appellant argued that the tests made with the lactometer and the Babcock machine were neither reliable nor conclusive. Local experts tried to establish that contention by their own experience and by specific tests. The respondent relied largely upon the tests made by local Dairy Instructor Robert Green.

Judge Douglas has dismissed the appeal with costs.

THE NEW HIGH COURT REGISTRAR

Mr. George C. Sherry, so the Review's Toronto despatch says, has received the appointment for Peterborough of Local Registrar of the High Court of Justice and of Clerk of the County Court, formerly held by the late Mr. John Moloney. Mr. Sherry is a resident of Norwood, but will now, of course, in future reside in Peterborough. Some years ago he was a member of the well known firm of lawyers of Belleville, Messrs. Flint and Sherry, but afterwards removed to Norwood where he has been in practice for some years. His residence overlooks the village from the eastern side and is presided over by his daughter, who has assisted on many occasions in the welcome of Conservatives and their leaders on their pre-election wanderings. The east riding was thought entitled to an office and Mr. Sherry being well qualified has received the appointment. We welcome Mr. Sherry and Miss Sherry to the city.

INSINUATIONS

The Examiner loves to sneer at Mr. Burnham, the late Conservative candidate, as "self-righteous" in his efforts to make it plain that he and his supporters ran a clean election. Why hasn't Mr. B. as much right to insist on that fact as others have to go into the witness box and swear to it? Our contemporary occasionally varies its adjectival style of abuse with insinuations that do very well to hide behind and no doubt will, in the minds of some people, raise the desired modicum of suspicion. The last effort in that respect is below. Before giving an absolute and unequivocal denial to the following and other insinuations let us point out that the following paragraph carries its own refutation since Mr. Thoburn is a Conservative M.P., and to charge another Conservative with trying to arrange for the withdrawal of the (Liberal) protest against him in consideration of a payment by him looks like a man's trying to pull himself up by his own bootstraps:—

"Would it surprise the public to know that there is strong evidence that since the election-trial failure Mr. Burnham has not been ignorant of an attempt to purchase the abandonment of the North Lanark election petition? Will it be denied that since the election trial an influence not far from the office of Mr. Burnham's counsel that made proposals to Mr. Thoburn, that in consideration of Mr. Thoburn making a substantial contribution towards wiping out a big part of the petitioner's share of the West Peterborough protest costs, influence would be exerted for the withdrawal of the North Lanark petition?"—The Examiner.

Is it reasonable to believe that Mr. Burnham is ignorant of the course taken? He denies that he organized the Gates evidence-hunt on the advice of Mr. DuVernet. Is it at all likely that a mean, sordid, if not shady proposal, to procure the withdrawal of an election petition for a money consideration, in which Mr. Burnham would be the chief beneficiary, would be undertaken without his knowledge and consent?

This is Greek to Mr. Burnham, who gives it or any other reference to a shady proposal or to any proposal, shady or otherwise, an absolute and unqualified denial. The Examiner will keep on until silence is no longer the duty of one who considers himself bound by it, when there may be such an explosion in Liberal political circles here as would make Casablanca look like an "also ran." In the meantime let it be said that Mr. Burnham denies the insinuations of the Examiner absolutely, with regard to the North Lanark petition and in every other way.

FIRE AND FIRE-WATER

One of our exchanges says that the Wholesale and Retail Liquor Journal admits that one saloon is one too many. Does this not give the case for the bar away? What is the difference between a saloon bar and a hotel bar? The ordinary hotel bar is really a saloon in connection with a hotel. However, what we started out to remark is that the Catholics and Protestants of Montreal have united to fight firewater in Montreal, but they can't, it would seem, unite to fight fire. Why is this? Is one less an evil than the other? or is it that red tape hampers both?

To our minds the attendance of Protestants and Protestant clergy at St. James's to hear Archbishop Bruchesi on temperance was significant. But why should the Devil have a monopoly when it comes to matters of hell-fire? Rev. Dr. Young, formerly of Peterborough, listened to the archbishop. He might come up and tell us [illegible] in Peterborough about it. The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life. This is the age, or will be, of the spirit. We hope that the day is at hand when men will cease to fight about non-essentials.

"The presence in the Cathedral of those who profess other creeds than ours," said Father O'Hara, "is a public testimony of the fitness of what we are fighting for, which should be a matter of public rejoicing."—Montreal Star.

A NEW SCHOOL QUESTION

From the Toronto News.

It is announced that the Governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have united to demand control of the Provincial school lands now administered by the Federal authorities. It is noteworthy that two of these provinces are under Liberal and one under Conservative government. For a long time this reasonable demand has been advanced by Manitoba, but Ottawa has remained obdurate. It will be interesting to see if the Federal authorities will offer the same resistance to the Liberal Governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta. It is certain that in the end the Western demand must be conceded, and it would seem to be the part of wisdom to surrender before an angry temper develops in the Western Provinces.

Eventually not only the school lands, but all the public lands, of the West must be surrendered by the Federal Government. We are treating the West exactly as Downing street treated Canada seventy years ago. We have set up an inferior and a superior order of Provinces. The older Provinces control their natural resources, and from these derive the bulk of their revenues. No subsidy that Ottawa could grant would compensate Ontario and Quebec for Federal ownership of their lands, timber and minerals. We believe that these resources can be more wisely and more economically handled by the Local Governments than by the remote Federal authority. And all experience proves the soundness of this conclusion.

Both under Conservative and Liberal Governments at Ottawa the management of Western lands and timber has been marked by waste and scandal. The natural resources of the West have been treated as the private property of governing politicians and their creatures. The public heritage has been parcelled out amongst the favorites of Ministers exactly as in the days when Downing street maintained the arrogant control over the British North American communities. British interference eventually bred disaffection and confusion, and in the end no other result can come from Federal interference in the Western Provinces.

Who believes that the people of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are not as competent to manage their own affairs as the politicians of older Canada? They are bound sooner or later to resent the presence of the hords of Federal officials, who, in most cases, are simply political agents of the governing party supported out of the public taxes. It is no secret that these officials set aside every consideration of political decency, and exercise something like a rule of terrorism over the new settlers who have necessary dealings with the Ottawa Government. They are the hired cajolers, informers and taskmasters of a set of governing partisans. When they cannot persuade they coerce and bully. Knowing that they must go bag and baggage when there is a change of Government, they hesitate at nothing to maintain the rule and authority of their Ottawa masters.

We have no doubt that Mr. Borden and the Opposition will support the petition of the Western Provinces to secure control over their school lands. It is particularly undesirable that the Federal authorities should have even an indirect control over education or the revenues which support the Provincial school systems. Such a situation would not be tolerated in Ontario and Quebec, and it is inconceivable that the Western settlers should continue to be treated as a subject population. Quebec is particular, and quite properly, insists upon every right and privilege guaranteed to the Province under the constitution, and it is to be expected that that Province, as the special guardian and champion of the Federal principle, will recognize the justice of the petition which is now presented by Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Ontario, likewise, should give its vigorous support to the claim of the new communities. For Liberals everywhere there would seem to be only one position. Professing, as they have already done, a special concern for Provincial Rights, they cannot be content to give only a limited autonomy to the new Provinces, or to have the old policy of Downing street applied to Western Canada. In the end the policy is doomed to certain failure. It would be wiser to surrender now with good grace than to surrender later under compulsion.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Senator Belcourt has broken with his Chief, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, over the tremendous increase in military and naval expenditure.

We are glad to hear that Capt. Bernier has at last got a free hand. Surely our north needs some attention, and who is better qualified than the Captain?

Education teaches self-control. So said the sage. But does it. The mob law in vogue at McGill and Toronto would look as if education bred blackguards.

"They say," that Quebec is downhearted over its recent fire loss, the Quebec bridge disaster, &c. Tut! tut! Canada can't do without Quebec, but at the same time those long shore strikes are no great help to it.

It's all very well for Mr. Haultain to criticise the new Public School readers, but who would want a reader such as he would write? He is a golfing transcendentalist, not a practical man.

Does the Examiner realise what a service the local Conservatives did the Liberal member in filing and pressing out a protest? They enabled him and his friends to show conclusively to a wondering and admiring public that not one dollar or any part thereof was corruptly spent by the Liberal member or his supporters in the late election. They swore to it solemnly and of course the people believe them. Isn't Peterborough the proud riding to have such a member and such a noble band of supporters? The clergy and their congregations look wan and paltry beside them. "There never was the like of it before!" exclaimed an old elector, but to what "it" he chiefly referred our reporter was unable to ascertain definitely up to the time of going to press. In the meantime a new standard of success has been set up for our boys and it will no doubt have a mighty influence. "It was so at Athens," said Plato. Let not these "good" men and their party organ sneer at those who would follow the far-flung standard, even if weakly and ineffectually.

TRADE FIGURES OF IMPORTANCE

Public Opinion (Eng.)

The Tariff Commission has issued these figures, showing the trade of three countries. Their annual average increases of exports of manufacturers between 1883-87 and 1903-07 have been as follows—

United Kingdom £80,000,000, or 41 p.c.
Germany ... ...£98,000,000, or 102 p.c.
United States ...£94,000,000, or 294 p.c.

Taking the test of excess of exports of manufactures over imports in the same period, the increases have been—

United Kingdom £20,000,000, or 15 p.c.
Germany ... ...£69,000,000, or 130 p.c.

In the case of the United States an import excess of £31,000,000 has become an export excess of £24,000,000.

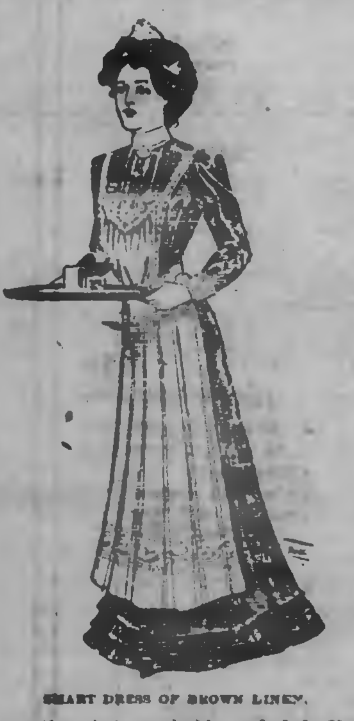
THE MAID'S COSTUME

Her Gown Must Now Harmonize With Mistress' Drawing Room.

A SMART FROCK FOR MAID.

An Unusually Stunning Apron, Whose Beauty Lies in the Simple and Appropriate Way In Which It Is Ornamented—A Dutch Bonnet.

The careful hostess who will spend hours considering the scheme for the decoration of her drawing room often loses sight of the decorative possibilities of her parlor maid's uniform. The familiar black dress and white muslin apron have surely had their day now that every little boarding house slavy may be seen dressed in bedraggled imitation of the smart maid. There is no question that a suitably and daintily gowned servant is a decorative asset in the artistic home and gives an impression of harmony that redounds to the credit of the mistress, who, it will be seen, is not too busily occupied in contemplating her own toilet to spare a few moments to consider the appearance of her maid. The conventional black dress has nothing to recommend it but its traditional respectability and its doubtful utility, for surely no color sooner looks shiny and worn. The muslin apron after one wearing is no longer a thing of beauty, but is either shapeless and unbecoming with too much starch or hangs limply and looks soiled before it has been worn a half hour.



SMART DRESS OF BROWN LINEN.

Contrast the average maid with the smart damsel seen in the illustration. She is consciously proud of her neat dress and holds herself well in consequence. There is nothing that adds more to our self respect than nice clothes, and this truism applies as well to the maid as to the mistress. The dingy black is replaced by an alpaca gown of warm brown, which is quite simply made with two tucks near the hem. In other respects it is exactly like the ordinary servant's print dress. Alpaca is in every way an excellent material for this purpose, as it wears well and has a smart, businesslike appearance not possessed by more clinging fabrics. The apron is of brown holland linen embroidered in brown silks in simple stitches. In shape it is quite plain and has no objectionable and unnecessary frills. Its beauty lies in its suitability and simplicity and the appropriate ornamentation with which it is adorned. The cap of the same material is especially becoming and is made much in the same way as a child's Dutch bonnet or a nurse's cap. It is provided with a drawstring, so that it can be laid quite flat for ironing. The collar is also of the same linen and is shaped to the neck and fastens behind. No maid could fail to be pleased with such a costume, which might be carried out in other colors to harmonize with the decoration of the drawing room. Many variations will doubtless occur to the woman of taste, and of course different costumes would be appropriate in different houses.

Gluten Sandwiches.

These excellent and appetizing morsels are made of gluten bread, lettuce and mayonnaise. They are digestible, easily made and most suitable for young persons. Cut the bread in thin slices and lay on each slice one or two delicate lettuce leaves. Cover this bed with mayonnaise which has been made with a fork and is seasoned only with olive oil, red pepper and lemon. Another slice of the bread covers this, and the sandwiches are most ornamental when cut in V shaped pieces. Mayonnaise rubbed with a fork is more tender than made with the usual machine or egg beater.

Puss In Splints.

While escaping from a fire in the borough district of London a few days ago, a cat broke its leg and as a result limped about painfully for a day or two. The porters in the borough market noted the animal's sufferings and decided to try and ease its sufferings. They made some splints out of two pieces of wood carefully filed, and then a little crowd assembled round the cat while the splints were put on with the aid of a piece of one of the men's handkerchiefs. The amateur surgeons worked with the utmost care and gentleness, and the crowd looked on breathlessly. When the splints were on the cat seemed to get much relief, and purred and licked its thanks and cosily nestled itself down for a sleep on a sack after a drop of milk.

Owners of World's Gold.

It is a somewhat curious fact that the English-speaking nations own nearly all the world's productive gold mines.

Thus England, with its Canadian, Australian and South African mines, is credited with 61 per cent. and the United States with 22, making an aggregate of 83 per cent., while all the rest of the world gets the remaining 17 per cent.

According to the statistics for 1907, the amount of gold mined in the whole world was 19,764,078 ounces, valued at nearly $420,000,000, of which $348,000,000 worth was produced on soil held by two English-speaking nations. This is an enormous source of power.

Modern Novels.

Our novels are usually much ado about nothing. The ado is well done, on the whole, but still it's about nothing. The people in them aren't so atrociously bad, only they do make themselves seem rather unreal by the seriousness with which they take the tangled web we weave when we practice to write a seller. When nature is too much for us we hold the mirror up to a species of supernature, conceiving demigods of lath and plaster and making material of their queer loves and hates and hopes and fears. That is tolerably safe ground, because nobody understands the psychology of demigods, and one man's guess is as good as another's.—Puck.

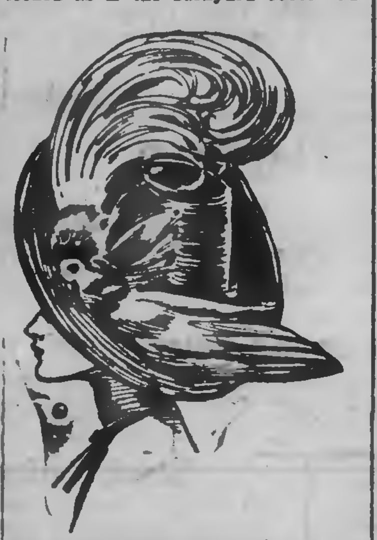
THE BARNYARD HAT.

Sights to Be Seen In Advanced Fall Millinery.

THE "TOQUE RUSSE" A WINNER

Wisdom at $5 Per—If You'd Be In the Social Swim, Join the Parlor Suffragists—For a Change Give a Silhouette Party.

My Dear Elsa—Isn't it lovely to go browsing among the early fall millinery in a detached, impersonal sort of fashion—that is, with one's mind entirely free from her own chapeau ego? You know what I mean—just to be "looking around" (how the trades people loathe women who indulge in this pleasure!) without the faintest idea of treating oneself to a lid, as my slangy brother puts it. When the serious business of buying a hat begins, then farewell to fun, for at that time things are earnest, things are real, and trying on hats is not the joke it seems. That's why I am having such a blissful time going through the smart millinery shops with my mind fancy free. And, really, do you know, dear, there are moments during these wanderings when I feel that I have strayed by mistake into a poultry show where the roosters have come under the influence of the anti-noise league, for in several of the smartest shops the hats looked as if the barnyard roost had been robbed for their adornment. We have been educated up to so many absurdities in the way of feathers and flowers that nothing much matters, but I must plead guilty to getting a decided "jolt" when I saw an almost life sized cock perched comfortably at one side of a piece of headgear. Madam quieted my perturbed sensibilities by remarking: "It's the chanticleer hat that all Paris is raving about. Everything new," she continued, "at the French capital since June has been titled from Rostand's play of that name, which has never been produced, the death of the great Coquelin, who was to have played the title role, having put an end for the time being to its appearance. But that does not interfere with the name 'chanticleer' being attached to everything the least bit queer."



CHANTICLEER HAT FROM PARIS.

And queer it surely was—a big black velvet hat with the brim slightly rolled at one side, where reposed against the tall crown an immense white rooster with black head and scarlet comb. Madam informed me that this expression of the chanticleer was not half so loud as many seen in Paris. The heads of the fowls are often altogether out of all proportion and are to be seen in all dyes, but the best are white and coral. Nothing, however, makes any difference so long as the effect is startling, and the coq is startling if nothing else.

Absurd as this millinery monstrosity undoubtedly is, the winter headgear will be largely influenced by the coq. And don't you think that such trimming is good style when not carried to excess and that a prettily colored rooster resting on a moderately large felt hat is sure to be stunning and durable?

The next shock I received was when shown a Russian turban, or, to be technical, the "toque russe," a creation eighteen inches high—I forget how many miles in circumference. But I am sure that it weighed seven pounds and cost $1,700. Yes, those were the figures nonchalantly named by a famous Fifth avenue firm. Shades of the peach basket chapeau, return before paterfamilias goes into bankruptcy! How on earth did it cost so much? I'll a tale unfold. The turban has a bunched up crown of real sable skins, and you know that eighteen inches of sable skins, leaving out of the question a band of fur for the brim, make a serious hole in the weekly savings. Then there's the huge bunch of goura feathers—blue and green, by the way—that have to be taken into consideration and a very Frenchy arrangement across the front of iridescent beads. It's a wonderful confection, this toque russe, and one that the unsophisticated maiden will do well to let alone, for, worn coquettishly on one side of the head and surrounding the whole face, as it does, halo fashion, the eyes that peep out from beneath its furry brim must be knowing ones—the eyes, as the song goes, that mesmerize, hypnotize, etc.

There are, though, lots of other turbans that are perfectly stunning without being so—well, what one might call psychological in their makeup—good everyday creations that are bizarre enough in all conscience, but with a limit.

To keep right on with this millinery talk, which I hope is not boring you, a love of a turban, styled commercially Henri IX., is rather large and round and tall—yes, decidedly tall, but not eighteen inches—with a brim that rolls at one side somewhat after the manner of an English walking hat. The crown of the turban is of coal dust velvet—a new shade, on the London smoke order—and arranged in go-as-you-please sort of folds that rise a little higher as they reach the back of the shape. About this crown is a narrow band of fur and at the side a huge bunch of all kinds of feathered things that are long and curly and spiky. From the advanced showing of hats I would say that shapes will be smaller and that feathers will not be the stiff affairs they have been during the past season. All kinds of wings will curl more or less. No color has as yet been declared, but certainly dark dyes will lead, and the all black winter hat will be as successful as was the all black summer hat. I have read this paragraph over, and it really sounds quite like a fashion letter, and I humbly apologize for the infliction. Now for a gossip.

Mary S. ran in upon me the other day on her way to Bar Harbor from Newport, and the moment she got her hat off she commenced to talk suffrage. Now, I know that she is not a bit interested in votes for women, and I have my doubts whether she is just clear in her mind about the meaning of the word franchise, but she'd been to that reception of Mrs. Belmont at Marble House, where several hundred of the faithful assembled recently, and there was no stopping the flow of gush. Poor thing! She had paid $5 to hear the Rev. Anna Shaw and Professor Zueblin talk on suffrage, and the way she absorbed the learned lecturers' opinions the money was evidently not wasted.

"It's stylish," she told me, "to be a suffragist," which let in a flood of light upon her mental attitude on the subject. "Yes," she prattled on, "it's almost as smart as delsarte used to be or Browning or parlor French lessons when you take the dose at ballroom conferences." That settles it. Woman's suffrage has arrived. The faithful could have written tracts on women's rights until the heavens fell and men would have gone serenely on casting votes till the morning after that thrilling event, but now that it is the fashion for women to want to vote they might just as well be getting the ballots ready. Now I feel better and I trust you're no worse for the outbreak.

As an antidote to the suffragist poison I will tell you about a silhouette party I went to the other evening. The guests were taken into a room across the wall of which was a sheet with a light so arranged that a clear cut shadow of a person's head could be thrown on a piece of wrapping paper about a foot and a half each way. The paper was pinned upon the sheet and the sitter placed where the outline of the face showed up well; then with a soft crayon the profile was drawn. After the silhouette of each guest was drawn they were all carefully cut out and pasted upon black paper. The name of the person was written on the back of the silhouette, and the portraits were posted about the rooms and numbered. The search then began to place the right name after each number. There was, of course, a prize, a charming silhouette mounted on an oval silver mat and framed in ebony. My silhouette was anything but classic, for, you know, I wasn't blessed with a Greek profile. When you come from Maine I'll let you see how I am as others have to see me. But to you I am always yours lovingly,

MABEL.

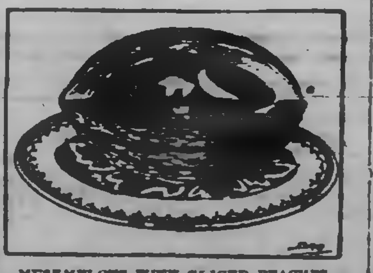
Muskmelons With Sliced Peaches.

Cut chilled muskmelons of small size into basket shape, fill with slices of pared peaches, sprinkle the peaches with powdered sugar and serve at once.



MUSKMELONS WITH SLICED PEACHES.

Home Canned French Peas.

It is quite as satisfactory, if care is used, to can them at home.

It is also more economical.

Only the tiny French peas will be used.

Buy them in quantity, shell them and sift them through a colander with large holes.

Use only the small peas that will go through for canning.

The rest may be cooked for immediate use.

Fill pint jars with the peas and cook in a steamer for forty minutes.

Fill up each jar with freshly boiled water into which have been put salt and sugar in proportion of a half teaspoonful of each to each jar.

Steam again for twenty minutes and seal.

To Clean Wall Paper.

Light colored wall paper may be cleaned by a careful rubbing with a very clean rubber of the kind which artists use. If the spot cleaned seems lighter than the surrounding color it may be toned down by a general rubbing with a clean chamois skin.

An engine ran into a switch at Foxwarren, Man., and killed fireman Evans.

It Leaves the Skin Tingling With Health

There is a wonderful difference in soaps. Have you ever noticed how one kind leaves the skin soft and white while another may leave it red and rough?

Both soaps looked alike, perhaps. But the difference was in the material. Let us tell you what we put into Infants' Delight, then decide if you can continue with common soap.

Ceylon is an island in the Indian Ocean, and from there we bring pure cocoanut oil 12,000 miles to our factory. Then we go to France for vegetable oil, and often pay double what we might pay. But our oil is pure enough for your table.

These oils are doubly boiled and then milled by our own special process, after which they fall like flakes of snow into enormous bins.

Then they are crushed under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture. Next they pass through granite rollers and come out in miles of silky ribbons. Finally they are dried eight times and then stamped into cakes.

Could you imagine a more delightful soap than this? It lathers into a rich, creamy foam. It wears as thin as a wafer. It leaves the skin as soft as velvet and as smooth as satin. It is the very utmost in perfect soap.

The perfume is the delicate scent of the roses. We pay $100 a pound for pure Otto of Roses, but it requires 3,000 pounds of rose leaves to make a single ounce. The fragrance is simply exquisite—it brings the breath of a million flowers. Use a single cake and learn how delightful it really is—it costs no more than the common, so why not have the best?

How to Massage

Shave some Infants' Delight into a tub of hot water and let it dissolve. Then immerse your body and remain in the water several minutes. Lather the body thoroughly with Infants' Delight rub it right into the skin, for it is so pure it will only nourish and soothe. Massage well with the finger tips and the palms of the hands and you will find a most pleasant sensation after the bath is finished.

WAWA HOTEL TO BE ENLARGED

The great success and popularity which the "WaWa," the fine summer hotel situated on the Lake of Bays, "Highlands of Ontario," has attained has warranted the proprietors to materially increase the capacity of this resort, and it has been decided that a nextension containing forty more rooms be added this year and ready for occupancy at the opening of the season next year. This addition into the hotel will be finished in the same plain but handsome style as the rest of the present structure and rooms will be connected with bath between every two rooms

The season this year has proved up to expectation and the house has been well patronized; in fact hundreds of people had to be denied accommodation owing to its entire capacity being taken up—in fact an auxiliary of fifteen tents was added to take care of as much as possible of the overflow.

If there were more hotels like this in the "Highlands of Ontario," thousands of more people would be attracted to the favorite resorts.

FATHER PAID FOR SON'S OFFENCE

Walter Mahaffey's Misconduct Has Cost His Parent $36.50

Walter Mahaffey has cause to be thankful that he had a father to stand by him at the Police Court this morning. The young man was arrested some time ago on a charge of stealing a bicycle and it appears that this is the third offence. The evidence in connection with the case was heard last week, when the number of the wheel was ascertained and by this Mr. F. R. J. Macpherson discovered that the wheel was his property. Mahaffey's father made a settlement of $15 to Mr. Macpherson and this morning the Magistrate ordered that the costs of the case, amounting to $21.50, be also paid. The father paid this sum into court and after his Worship had lectured the youth on his past conduct and gave him to understand that he would be severely punished if he appeared in court again on a similar charge, allowed him to go on suspended sentence.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

THE GARDENS NO LONGER BLOOM

And People Look to Greenhouses for Flowers---What Jordan Bros. Have to Offer

The heavy frosts have now about settled the bloom in the gardens and the greenhouses have to be looked to for a supply. The Jordan Bros.' establishment is now ready for a big fall and winter trade, giving special attention to cut flower-growing. They will handle only the highest class stock of cut and pot flowers and plants, and are better equipped than ever before for supplying particular people, having doubled their capacity. They have three houses full of carnations coming into bloom, one of ferns, one of chrysanthemums, and one for general pot plants. Another convenience just installed is a night 'phone, No. 1179, and calls for flowers, bouquets, designs, etc., can be promptly attended to.

MR. GEO. H. MANNING RETURNS FROM THE PACIFIC COAST

Will Return to Vancouver in 3 Weeks—The Wonderful Vitality and Development in the Far West

Mr. George H. Manning and wife left here in July for the west. They travelled extensively, visiting Winnipeg, with which he was disappointed, Brandon, which like many of the towns of the middle west, have reached their limit, and Vancouver, he considers the most wonderful place for rapid growth he has yet seen. Calgary is a lively place. Regina is not too much, Edmonton is a bit overdone, but Vancouver and the whole coast is receiving the energy and money of a multitude of people from the east and south. Living in the west is about 1-3 higher than here. In Chicago, except for rent, it is cheaper. Clothes, food, &c., are very cheap there, while pay for work is very good, and plenty of it.

Mr. Manning saw Mr. J. J. McBain and Son, and J. T. O'Connell and Mr. Lutton in Vancouver. The latter is going out at once for good. Mr. Manning will sell his Sherbrooke street house and leave for the coast again in three weeks. Mr. Manning has a most intimate and detailed acquaintance with the west, and saw a great number of acquaintances, none of whom would come back east.

DEMAND FOR A PLEBISCITE

The new Canadian navy scheme has produced such a ferment in the country on account of the burden of expense involved and the radical departure in policy that calls are being issued for public meetings, and a demand is being made that Parliament dissolve again and go to the people on the question. Canada has not been so agitated over a question since Confederation. A crisis is imminent.

BASEBALL

Pittsburg, Oct. 18.—Charles (Babe) Adams, who pitched three of the seven games of the world's series for the Pirates, and won them them all to-day escaped being Hobsonized only by the quickest kind of work. Employing his good pair of legs, he made a flying getaway from his home on Mawhinney street, and deliberately hid from his admirers in a private hotel.

By actual count there were 436 young women who wanted to kiss him. The crowd gathered shortly after ten o'clock. Babe did not appear. Instead, he lurked in the fastness of his home until he could stand the strain no longer. Then he slipped out a back way and made a break for safety.

Special legislation will be required before either can become law.

A Delicious Dessert.

For hot summer days there is a dainty dessert which the clever housewife may readily prepare.

The foundation is angel food cake cut in slices, which are in turn cut round with a cake cutter. Between two layers of the cake put shredded pineapple and sirup. Heap the top with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream, garnish with candied cherries and serve.

To make in shortcake fashion split the cake through, put the pineapple between top and bottom layers and cover with whipped cream over which has been sprinkled chopped nut meats.

PROSECUTION ENDED CASE

sand, but Harry had told him of it the next day. Harry said that Bollard had vomited. He had not heard the matter discussed at very great length by Harry.

Blake Cullen, of Bridgenorth, was in Chemong Park on the evening of Monday, August 23rd, the Monday preceding Bollard's death, and the night of the fight. He overheard Bollard say on that evening that the latter was going to give Harry Jopling a thrashing. This would be between 9 and 9.30. The witness was an eye-witness to the struggle, and gave his description of it. He said after the affair Harry Jopling and Bollard made up and shook hands. Bollard had said he didn't get a fair shake, or something to that effect. Witness didn't hear in what way Bollard didn't get a fair shake.

His Lordship—Did you hear Bollard cry "let go" or "dirty"?

Witness—No, I did not.

The court called the witness attention to the fact that other witnesses present had heard the expressions mentioned, but he said, while he wouldn't contradict the other witnesses, but he didn't hear these expressions, and only heard Bollard cry out once before he (witness) approached the scene of the fight.

William Hartshorn, who has been a summer resident at Chemong Park for the past fourteen years, told of acting as a sort of arbitrator in the struggle, and got Harry Jopling to apologize to Bollard for the alleged name he had called Bollard. Mr. Hartshorn spoke well of Bollard, and had always considered the Joplings decent, peaceable boys.

Mrs. W. S. Merritt was a resident at the park on the night of the fight, and saw the dance at Chemong Park that night. Her evidence did not appear to have any special bearing on the case.

Miss Helen Hay, of Peterborough, a trained nurse, was called in professional attendance on Bollard the morning he died. He was partially delirious when she called, and she remained with him until his death. She agreed with Dr. Scott in the physician's opinion in connection with the case. There was nothing of importance that she noticed about the patient's hands to attract her attendance. If there had been she thought she would have heard of it. She was with Bollard till he died.

She knew Mr. Bollard. She had danced with him Wednesday night following the fight for ten or fifteen minutes. Bollard didn't appear to be fatigued as a result of the dance.

Mr. Harry McLaughlin and another witness were called upon to describe the crotch-hold. It was not dangerous under ordinary circumstances.

Mr. Walter Peters, official observer for Peterborough city, told of August 23rd being a very warm day.

Harry Jopling, one of the accused, told of the passage between himself and Bollard when he was driving on the morning of August 23rd. He was at Chemong Park that night and saw Bollard there. His brother was at the dance. He met some young ladies there and it was his intention to accompany them home. He saw Fred at the Park. He then described the altercation in which he and his brother Fred and Bollard took part. Mr. Hartshorn came down and asked what the row was about, and both Mr. Hartshorn and Fred Jopling advised an apology to Bollard on the part of Harry. The latter said he never called Bollard the name he was accused of calling him, but shook hands to adjust the misunderstanding between himself and Bollard. He said he followed Bollard on the night of the row just to get an explanation from him. The witness was pretty thoroughly cross-examined by Mr. Dennison. He heard Bollard yell out, but didn't hear him say, 'Let go,' or 'dirty.'

Fred Jopling said he was 27 years of age. His brother was 19. Cullen told Fred on the evening of August 23rd that there were two boys laying for his little brother down at the park. He had no intention of assaulting Bollard when he went down to the park. He said at the commencement of the fight Bollard made for Harry and brought him to the ground immediately. Bollard said to Fred when Fred had pulled him off Harry on Harry's behalf. "I can trim you or anything you got down there." The engagement then commenced between Bollard and Fred; they went down on to the ground. He got a crotch hold on Bollard and the latter hollered as he was lifting him up. Bollard said the hold Fred Jopling had on him wasn't fair, and the latter persisted that it was, and made an explanation of the hold to Bollard. After the friendly wrestle Jopling shook hands with Bollard and said, "It is too bad, old chap, we had all this trouble over nothing." Witness said the crotch hold was often used among the boys wrestling at the park, and he had never heard of anyone being injured by the crotch hold. He said if Bollard had been injured by it as the result of the bout, it was purely accidental.

Robert Scott, reeve of Smith, had known the boys since childhood and had always found them very good boys. He had never heard of them being quarrelsome.

Rev. Simon Cruickshanks pastor of the Bridgenorth Methodist church, was the next witness. Both prisoners were members of his church. Fred was a member of the choir. Both boys had good reputations as far as he knew.

Rev. Father Fitzpatrick said Fred was held in high esteem and bore a good reputation. He was honest, straightforward and truthful. He had known Fred for 12 years. Harry he couldn't say very much about as he only knew him. The reputations of both boys, as far as he knew, were splendid.

Dr. Morgan remembered the death of Arthur Bollard. He attended the Bollard post-mortem, which Drs. Scott and Greer performed, and took notes on it. He said the base of the brain was not thoroughly examined and there might have been trouble there. The spinal cord was not taken out and examined.

The court adjourned till 1.15 this afternoon.

DAD'S TYRANNY.

Result of the Test That Was Imposed Upon the Lovers.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Mrs. Marsden was away, the cook gone without notice, and Helen for the first time in her pampered life was obliged to get supper. And Ned was coming that very evening to have a talk with her father about something.

In due time the meal was ready, all but the tea. She packed the filled platter and dishes away into the warming oven, put about a cupful of tea into the teapot—father liked strong tea—and, though the water hadn't reached the boiling point yet, she really couldn't afford to wait, so she poured it on, turned the flame of the gas stove low and hurried up to her room to arrange her toilet suitably for Ned's reception.

It was a flushed and perturbed Helen who faced father, Ned and the boys at the supper table. Father didn't say much and didn't seem to have any appetite. Neither did the boys. Ned just looked at her and—well, people in love are not expected to care much about what they eat.

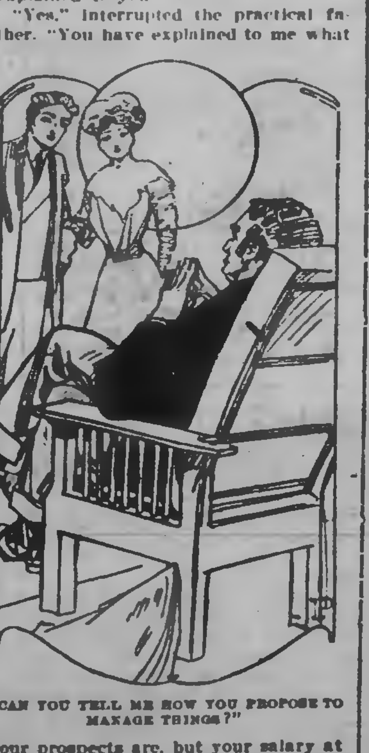
And then came the solemn moment when father called her into the library, where he and Ned had been closeted for the last half hour.

Father drew her into his arms, looked tenderly at her and planted a prickly kiss on her mouth. The symptoms were all favorable, and in great relief Helen threw her arms around her father's neck. Thus they stood for a minute or two in silent, loving embrace. It was a trying moment for Ned, looking on with hungry eyes.

Finally father spoke. "Now, little girl," he said, "you young people seem to have arranged things to your entire satisfaction, and I think it's about time for me to put in a word—several, in fact—to atone for your mother's absence. How do you propose to live?"

Helen's eyes flew over to Ned, who reddened as he said, "I have already explained to you"—

"Yes," interrupted the practical father. "You have explained to me what your prospects are, but your salary at present is $25 a week—am I right?"



"CAN YOU TELL ME HOW YOU PROPOSE TO MANAGE THINGS?"

Helen raised her head proudly. "I know all about that, dad."

Her father looked at her quizzically, toying with his watch chain in a most tantalizingly cool manner. "You expect to keep house, don't you?"

"Ye-e-s."

"How?"

"Why, I—I—haven't thought; I—I—suppose we'll have a servant," she concluded lamely.

"Have you any idea how much rent you can afford to pay?"

Ned got up and walked to the mantel, against which he leaned in picturesque attitude, head proudly erect.

"Really, sir, you may surely leave these personal matters to me."

Mr. Marsden chuckled as if he were highly amused. Then he drew a pencil and notebook from his pocket and, regardless of high tragedy tones and looks on the part of the young people, proceeded to make certain memoranda, pausing now and then for information or confirmation from his auditors.

The result was as follows:

Rent	$30
Servant	15
Provisions	40
Clothes	20
Fares and incidentals	5
Total	$110

"You see, we've overstepped the $100 limit already, with the barest necessities at the lowest estimate," he said.

"Now," he leaned back in his chair and brought the tips of his fingers together, eying the young folks seriously, "can you tell me how you propose to manage things?"

They had no reply ready for him, and so after a pause he went on: "It looks hopeless, doesn't it? But I think I can help you out."

Two pairs of anxious eyes were instantly turned upon him.

"Helen must learn how to keep house."

This solution of the problem seemed to stagger the young people. Helen considered a moment and then laughed joyously.

"Why, father, of course! That's just the thing. It won't take me long to learn, and Ned won't mind if—if—just at first"—

"I should say not!" broke in Ned rapturously and somewhat ambiguously.

"Not so fast, my little chickadees."

It was absurd, thought Helen, that father should treat them like a pair of irresponsible young children. Ned, too, seemed to feel annoyed as he waited politely for his aspired to father-in-law to proceed.

And what he said fell upon their astonished ears like the knell of doom.

"Helen shall not marry you until she can cook and brew and bake and stew and make her own hats and dresses and"—

"Father!"

"Mr. Marsden!"

The exclamations came simultaneously, and both young people rose to their feet. Mr. Marsden regarded them with pretended surprise.

"I thought, Helen, that I understood you to say it wouldn't take long to learn."

"But—but"— she stammered, at a loss for words.

"Helen can cook," Ned broke in. "Didn't she cook the supper tonight?"

"And would you be willing to sit down to such a meal every night?"

"I would, with Helen," replied that rash young man promptly and was instantly rewarded by a luminous optical message from his adored one.

Again father chuckled. She had never known him to be quite so provoking, thought Helen, and wished devoutly that her indulgent mother were at home.

"Well, we will not argue the matter any further," said Mr. Marsden.

And with that they had to be content.

* * * * * * *

Two whole years passed—years filled with fretful but hopeful waiting for Ned and Helen. "I shall think your love is not very deep if it cannot stand such a little test," her father had remarked obdurately. Nor would he allow a cooking school course. "Bosh and nonsense," said he. "Your mother can beat them all. I want you to be a practical housekeeper."

At last the proud day of Helen's "graduation" came along. A goodly company assembled around the table to partake of the hearty and well cooked meal Helen had planned and prepared alone.

"Just two years ago," remarked her father, "I sat down to the first meal concocted by Helen." He pulled a wry face at the recollection.

There was a loud laugh all around. "I remember that night and a few others," chimed in Brother Jack. "I was 'busted' that week buying my meals at restaurants."

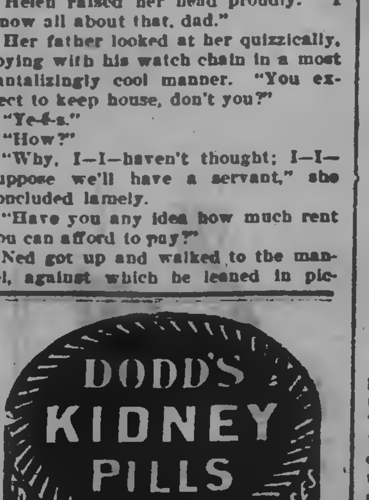
There was more good natured chaffing and laughter, all of which Helen took in smiling good humor. She felt solid ground under her feet now, and all her one time impatience and resentment against her father had melted into gratitude. She, too, had learned to observe and think. She was her father's daughter.

As for Ned, he had stood the "test" and incidentally now had a snug little bank account. His admiration for Helen's cookery, Helen's gowns and Helen's hats was unbounded.

"Yes, as soon as you please now," said her father when consulted about the wedding day date. "I'm sorry I had to pose as a tyrant, but really"—

"You're a dear, good, sensible, wise old daddy," said his daughter as she administered a hug and kiss.

And Mrs. Marsden secretly resolved that when her youngest daughter returned from boarding school she would not wait for "something to happen" before she initiated her into the art of keeping house.



The Chinese Stage.

The Chinese present their plays on a bare platform, without scenery, says a writer in Everybody's Magazine. So probably did the lord chamberlain's servants of the Globe theater, they "who created" Shakespeare's parts. In the old Chinese theaters of San Francisco tourists and Chinese dignitaries used to sit on the side edges of the stage, so close to the actors that I have seen a tragedian in one of his most solemn passages step over the legs of a spectator. Just so, we are informed, sat the dignitaries and notabilities who attended the Globe in Shakespeare's time. No woman treads the boards of China. We know that the parts of Ophelia, Portia, Rosalind—all Shakespeare's galaxy of immortal women—were "created" by boys. The Chinese actors are a low caste, so low that even the lowest of the spectators despise them. In the days of Shakespeare the English actor was a brother to thieves and tinkers, being unworthy of Christian burial. The actors of the Globe company lived together in the basement of the theater. Just so live the actors of the Doyers street company, in New York, and so lived the Jackson and Washington street companies in the old days of Chinatown, San Francisco.

THE MESCAL BUTTON.

Its Widespread Use as a Narcotic Among the Indians.

Mescal as a narcotic is used to an extent that is becoming alarming among the American Indians.

Mescal is the product of a cactus which has long been used among the Mexicans as an intoxicant under the name of pellote. The Indians use the mescal button—a kind of bean, very bitter, which is sometimes chewed and sometimes brewed in a kind of tea. It produces hallucinations of such a character as to place this plant in the same rank with hasheesh, opium and other drugs which have produced for men the joys of an artificial paradise.

The Kiowa Indians are said to have used the mescal button from time immemorial in religious ceremonies. Gradually the practice has spread northward. The Poncas and some of their neighbors in Indian Territory and Oklahoma took it up. Thence it extended to the Omahas and Winnebagoes, and now the practice is acquiring a foothold among the Sioux.

The tribes which have longest used it have sent missionaries to introduce their wonderful new medicine among other tribes, and wherever it becomes known its allurements prove irresistible. Clubs are formed for social indulgence in this narcotic. In some cases the students returned from eastern and other boarding schools have become members and promoters of these clubs.

The meetings are usually held in the afternoon. After the mysterious ceremonies in acknowledgment of the secret power of the strange divinity have taken place the buttons are passed around for chewing, four or five to each member, and the tea is brewed and drunk. Only the novice experiences any unpleasant sensation, and this soon passes off. There ensues only a blissful feeling of lassitude, accompanied by a delicious sense of happiness and peace.

One other effect of this remarkable drug may be noted in this brief summary. The mescal takes away all desire for alcoholic drink.—Hampton Institute Southern Workman.

King Menelik and the Cannon.

Some years ago Baron Mylius visited King Menelik, taking with him among other presents two small mountain cannon.

The negus was delighted. How many enemies would they kill? Pointing to a tree, the potentate said, "Fire by the side of the tree." The baron used his glass and pointed out that a whole family seemed to be taking the shade at the spot. "Yes," replied Menelik, "that is the tree I was thinking about," and it was only with the greatest difficulty that his majesty was prevailed upon to choose another target. However, all's well that ends well. The negus was delighted with his present, and so was the baron, for he came away the owner of a fine coffee plantation.

DIDN'T ENJOY THE SINGING

One of two young men standing in front of the Convent last night was doing some Caruso-ing to the unappreciative ears of P.C. McGinty, who happened to be on Rubidge street about a hundred yards away. The officer stole over and asked who was singing, promising the disturber of the peace accommodation in the police station if he did not desist.

HER AWAKENING.

It Brought Her Closer Still to the Man Who Loved Her.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

The road zigzagged white and dusty down the hillside into the cool shade of the village, where it changed to a mellow brown under the wide spreading elms and maples.

Olive Vincent leaned over the gate of her father's house and looked wistfully up the long street. Robert Wade would come riding down that crooked white road from the village beyond the hill, and when the setting sun flashed on the satiny coat of his cream horse she would fly back to the porch and sit demurely there until he had driven under the shed and made his way around the path to join her.

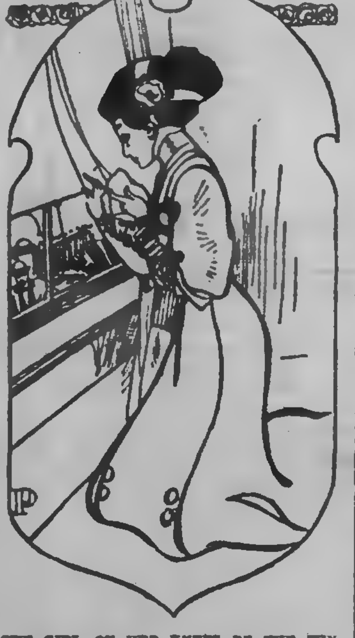
Then Olive and Robert had been engaged only one short week, and there were thousands of delicious confidences to exchange.

The church bells had called worshipers to prayer meeting, and from the distant village green, where three white churches formed a triangle, came the sound of music and singing voices.

The sun set and long shadows crept over the street, sleepy birds twittered restlessly in the trees, and still Robert did not come.

Olive paced the graveled path. That Robert should be late tonight conflicted with her own state of mind; he could not so long for her presence or he would not have permitted anything to have delayed his reaching her as soon as his little office was closed.

There was a soft thud of hoofs on the road, and a dark shape loomed out of the dusk and stopped before the gate.



THE GIRL, ON HER KNEES BY THE WINDOW, SOBBED SOFTLY.

Olive's heart leaped and then sank, for the man's voice was not Robert's.

"That you, Olive?" It was Frank Winton's deep bass.

"Yes," she said rather tremulously.

"Father home?"

"No; he and mother have gone to meeting."

"Tell your father if he's still of the same mind about his twenty acres of woodland he'd better stop in and see me in the morning. I've found a purchaser for it."

"Very well," said Olive, "I will tell him."

"Waiting for Rob?" his voice came jocosely out of the darkness.

Olive hesitated. "No!" she said curtly.

"That's all right, then," remarked Mr. Winton cheerfully, "because I met Rob on the mountain road driving toward the Heights; had Mattie Ryder with him, and Snowbird was just skimming over the ground! Pretty good horse that. Night, Olive. Don't forget to tell your father."

"Good night!" said Olive mechanically.

When the hoof beats had died away she went up the steps and sat down in a big chair on the porch. All at once she felt queer and strange and very choky about the throat, and suddenly great warm drops splashed on her clasped hands.

She was crying because Robert Winton, her betrothed lover, had failed to keep his appointment with her, but was riding over the mountain roads with Mattie Ryder, the most hateful girl in Leighton village—the homeliest and most hateful!

Olive wiped the tears from her eyes and stared resentfully into the shadowy garden. White lilies swayed in ghostly fashion on their long stems, and waves of fragrance swept toward her with every breeze.

Of course this would be the end of everything, for she would never marry Robert now. A man who would engage himself to one girl and within a week pay noticeable attention to another—and some one whom Olive detested—was not worthy of any woman's love!

Through the stillness came the sharp clatter of hoofs on the hill road, and Olive ran hastily into the house and extinguished the parlor lamp. Then she ran up to her room and locked the door and knelt by the window.

The carriage stopped in front of the house, and some one tied a horse at the hitching post. Then Robert's firm tread sounded on the path, and she heard his voice calling.

"Olive!" he said in a low tone.

There was no reply.

"Olive!" he called again. "Where are you, sweetheart?"

The girl on her knees by the window sobbed softly to herself in the darkness.

Love was calling to her in thrilling tenderness below her window, yet she dared not go. Going down now meant the sacrifice of her maidenly pride. She loved Robert Winton as she never could love again, but share him with another she would not. No matter what his excuse for riding with Mattie Ryder she would not condone the offense. Would not Mattie boast of it to all the other girls when Olive's engagement was announced? She blushed angrily.

"Olive!" The voice was more insistent now.

There was a ring of sincerity in it that drowned the jealous doubts clamoring within her. Before her mental vision arose the picture of Robert's face as he had bidden her farewell for the last time.

In an instant she was flying down the stairs and fumbling at the door-latch, and in another instant she was in Robert's arms, her head upon his broad breast, her fears and doubts forgotten.

"I want to tell you why I am so late," said Robert after awhile. "I was coming down the mountain when I met"—

"You needn't tell me, if you don't want to," said Olive bravely. "I would rather not know."

"Nonsense!" laughed her lover, pressing her closer to him. "I met Frank Winton and Mattie Ryder; he was driving her over to the Height's station to meet a chap from Albany—she's engaged to him and he was coming to visit her folks. Frank's horse went lame as they were climbing the mountain, and he asked me to drive her over and bring them both back here. I couldn't very well refuse—it was a case of 'true lovers,' you know, darling, so Mattie got in with me, and I had to turn around and drive over that dismal road to the Heights, and you know what a one horse place that station is! There wasn't a carriage to be had for love or money, and so Mattie and her Albany chap crowded into the buggy with me, and Snowbird flew all the way here. I guess he knew I was longing for you!" He bent and kissed her soft hair.

"They got off at the corner below here and walked down to Ryder's house. They told me they were going to be married in the fall. Frank said he would stop and explain to you. Did he come?" asked Robert after another pause.

"Yes," said Olive quietly, "he came—and he told me."

"There are tears on your cheek, sweetheart—what is the matter?" cried Robert solicitously.

"Nothing, dear," murmured Olive happily. "I fell asleep waiting for you—and I had a bad dream about you. But when your voice called me—I woke up."

THE BEST REMEDY

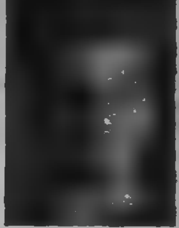
For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleville, Ont.—"I was so weak and worn out from a female weakness that I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took several bottles of it, and I gained strength so rapidly that it seemed to make a new woman of me. I can do as good a day's work as I ever did. I sincerely bless the day that I made up my mind to take your medicine for female weakness and I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind letters, as I certainly profited by them. I give you permission to publish this any time you wish."—Mrs. ALBERT WICKETT, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will cure female weakness and so successfully carry women through the Change of Life as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.



The Monkeys' Revenge.

A lady in India residing during the hot season among the lower hills of the Himalayas had a little terrier, says a writer in London Answers. Fury, as he was called, disliked the whole monkey race, and as there were hundreds of them in the trees surrounding the house he had many opportunities for exhibiting his antipathy.

The monkeys make no distinction between the house of an English lady and the cottage of a Hindoo. They insisted upon sitting upon the balconies, and Fury resented their intrusion by barking and frightening them away.

The monkeys resented Fury's officiousness in due time in a way which illustrates their revengeful cunning.

One day little Fury was walking in front of his mistress. As they were passing through a dark thicket of rhododendrons she saw a skinny arm dart out from amid the blossoms, seize the terrier and both disappear.

She rushed to his rescue, but the monkey bore off the dog, yelping and howling, to the top of a high tree. The mistress stood helpless while her pet was passed from monkey to monkey that each might pinch the hated dog and pull out his hair. When they had tired of this sort of avenging themselves one monkey took the dog out to the extreme end of a branch and dropped him over a precipitous cliff.

The Unconscious Action of Memory.

Often suggestions out of all keeping with the surroundings come, and it may be asked, "What made you think of that?" Frequently we are positive that no conscious train of thought has brought up the idea. These memories, out of all rhyme and reason with our atmosphere and conscious occupation, pop into the mind and surprise us with their incongruity. Are these spontaneously originated, as they seem to be, or have we merely forgotten the connecting train of ideas, as is often contended? The author but recently, while looking at some pickles, had flash upon his mind the image of a southern California beach and an incident associated with the scene. The memory came so suddenly and the connecting link was sought for so immediately that a dropping out of a segment of consciousness is altogether improbable, yet he felt that there was a connection somewhere, if it could but be found. And it was found after a little thought. Where the brine on the pickles had dried there were left fine white salt crystals just such as he had seen on kelp and sea mosses that he had gathered on that beach. The memory in the stream of consciousness was spontaneous, and yet we see how it may come under our law at least in its physiological version.—From "Mental Man."

Clever Scheme For Packing Jelly.

Those who find the putting up of lunches a part of the daily routine may take comfort in the suggestion of one resourceful woman. When using eggs she sees to it that only a small piece of the shell is broken off from the end of one egg. The eggshell from which the piece has been taken is then washed and kept as a receptacle for jelly or jam for the noon lunch basket, the open end being protected by a piece of paper dipped in paraffin.

SEASON'S WORK OUTLINED AT Y.M.C.A. MEMBERS' BANQUET

Howden-Eastwood Trophies and Other Prizes Presented to Winners—Necessity of Individual Work by Members

If the work of the Young Men's Christian Association is to meet with success this coming season it is necessary that each member, by individual and co-operative work, take advantage of the opportunities before him. This was the general feeling of the speakers at the members' banquet last night, at which the Howden-Eastwood trophies were presented to the winners in the recent field day, and also the other prizes won.

The affair was held in the lecture room, and after those present had partaken of an enjoyable spread, prepared by Coleman Bros. Mr. Vincent Eastwood, who acted as chairman, explained the object of the gathering and called upon Mr. James Connal for a short address, and to present the trophies and prizes. Mr. O'Connell said he was pleased to be present on the occasion to present the trophies, which had been generously donated by Messrs. Eastwood and Howden. The competion was held for the purpose of interesting the members in outdoor sports, and those in charge this year had made the competition a big success. The presentation of the trophies and other prizes then followed.

Howden Trophy—H. Wood.

2nd prize—Stanley Canniff.

3rd prize—Messrs. Evans and Corkery were tied for this prize, which was a gold watch fob, so it was decided to give each a pin.

Eastwood Trophy—E. Kelly.

2nd prize—Walter Perks.

3rd prize—Rollie Howden.

It was explained that last year's winner, Harold Munro, keeps the cup in his possession until January.

SENIOR OPEN EVENT.

1st prize—Charles Tharpe.

2nd prize—Mr. Brown.

BOYS' OPEN EVENT.

1st prize—Rollie Howden.

2nd prize—Harold Hill.

The chairman next called upon Messrs. C. Simson and McLaughlin for the presentation of the programme for the physical department for the coming season. Mr. Simson referred to the benefit to be received from this branch of the association's work, and concluded by introducing the new physical director to the gathering.

Mr. McLaughlin gave an interesting outline of the work of the physical department for the coming season. In this the older men could take part, especially in the classes in the gymnasium, and they should take advantage of the opportunity before them. It was the intention, said the speaker, to form basket ball leagues, composed of teams of the Y.M.C.A., the schools, factories, and, if possible, a league composed of teams representing the different churches of the city. From these leagues the best team of each would form another league, for which a cup would be secured for competition. This would eventually result in one good team to represent the Y.M.C.A. A country circus was another part of the programme. This would be held in the gym. during the winter, and all the members would be allowed to take part. Acrobatic work and different novelties could be introduced, and if the members did their part the affair would meet with the same success as it had in Washington, where the Association with which he was identified, cleared $35.00 on one occasion. The game of volley Ball would also be introduced and the skating rink taken charge of again. Mr. McLaughlin spoke of other sports to be indulged in, but emphasized the fact that it was necessary that the members do their best and co-operate with him in the work.

Messrs. J. S. Thornton and Frank Dawson dealt with the religious work. Mr. Thornton spoke on the Bible classes which would be organized. These classes were for the purpose of benefitting the young men and special care was being taken to get the best teachers. He hoped the young men would join together for the study of the Bible.

Mr. Dawson referred to the foreign work of this department, giving a statement of what had been done during the past year, and what was expected. Mr. Hassard also spoke briefly on this subject. It was the intention, he said, to hold meetings in the factories of the city. This was at the request of the employees and was the outcome of the visit of Mr. C. R. Drum some time ago.

The educational work was explained by the General Secretary. He pointed out the opportunities before the members in connection with the the night classes. He touched on each of these, giving the particulars and the benefits to be derived. An especially interesting class was that for instruction in "First Aid to the Injured," with Dr. McPherson in charge. In concluding he asked that the members do their part and this would result in the season's work being successful as well as beneficial.

The banquet was brought to a close by devotional exercises.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

MRS. TURNER'S STAR WITNESS WILL NOT GIVE EVIDENCE

T. C. Robinette Announces That the Woman to Whom Prisoner Says She Gave the Anthers' Infant Cannot be Found.

Toronto, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Wagner, the mysterious woman to whom Mrs. Maud Turner says she gave the Authers' infant, with whose murder she is charged, will not be produced when Mrs. Turner's defence is presented at the Criminal Assizes in the City Hall to-day. The production of this woman would be the strongest card that the defence could possibly play short of producing the living child, but T. C. Robinette, K.C., of counsel for Mrs. Turner, says that though efforts have been made to locate her she cannot be found.

This restricts the defence to two, and possibly three, witnesses. Mrs. Turner is determined to take the stand in her own behalf when she will tell the story of giving the child to this Mrs. Wagner an hour after she got it from the mother at the hospital on the day of its birth, Saturday, September 11. Dr. Dunlop, who lived with her as her husband at the Wood street house where it is alleged that the murder was committed, will be called to swear that he saw no infant in their room other than the one found by the police when the arrest was made, and which is now in the Orphans' Home. Another witness may also be called who was in the house between the time the child was taken from the hospital and Tuesday night when it is alleged the murder was committed. This will close the defence, according to Mr. Henderson, who is conducting the case for Mrs. Turner.

The case will likely be finished today. All evidence will be put in during the morning session of the court, leaving the afternoon for address of counsel and Judge Magee's charge to the jury.

The stop-order was put on general entry to the court-room yesterday as soon as the seats were filled and a considerable crowd hovered about the outer doors all day.

At the resumption of the trial yesterday Andrew Goldie was the first witness called. It was at his home that the prisoner boarded for some time, and his account of the noises that had been heard while he and his wife were in Mrs. Turner's room on the evening of Sept. 14, was very similar to that of his wife. Someone had said the noise sounded like cats, but he had said: "That's no cats."

Mrs. Annie Walker, stewardess on the Chippewa, and her daughter, Miss Mary Walker, testified to meeting Mrs. Turner the day she went across the lake, and they described the box which she was carrying at the time, and in which she said she had her lunch.

That Mrs. Turner was on his train on the morning of Sept. 16, was sworn to by Edwin O. Parish, conductor on the New York Central Railway. He was positive in his identification of the prisoner when cross-examined by Mr. Henderson.

Frank J. Fleming, a trackman, testified to seeing a box flying through the air as the train was passing a certain spot, and to afterwards finding it.

He said he was curious to see what was in the box and on opening it saw a baby's head.

Mrs. Swazie, Dr. Scott and Dr. J. A. Bishop of Niagara Falls also testified.

Southampton Girl's Unhappy Plight in Cincinnati — Fainted Before Judge

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 21.—Weakened, as she claimed, from exposure and the fact that she had not eaten any food in three days, Elsie Bowman, aged 16, a runaway girl, said to have well-to-do parents at Southampton, Canada, fainted while being questioned by Juvenile Judge Stephens in his court-room in Covington, a Kentucky suburb, yesterday. Officer Clinger found her lying near a lumber pile in the rear of the Madison avenue car barn, yesterday. At the time she did not complain, but when taken into the office of Chief of Police Schuler she said she had not eaten anything since she came from Huntington, W. Va., three days ago. To Chief Schuler she admitted that she ran away from her home in Canada four years ago, since which time she has been wandering about the country. She was rather shabbily clothed, but appeared to be very well educated. Chief Schuler and Prosecutor Phillips took her before Judge Stephens. She had just given her name, age and address, when she rose from her chair, starting wildly, took several steps towards the judge, and screaming, fell at his feet. Those present could not revive her, and she was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital and subsequently to the county infirmary, where she will be given medical treatment, as her condition is serious.

A WONDFRFUL NEW EXPLOSIVE

Washington, Oct. 21.—A new explosive, a British invention, which may revolutionize the blasting work in connection with the construction of the Panama Canal, has been satisfactorily tested.

It is absolutely impossible to explode it by ordinary means. It was hammered with a sledge, shot into by a rifle, burned, and ordinary dynamite detonators were exploded in it, but it can only be set off by heating a small platinum wire just inside the open end of an electric spark or fuse. It will not explode by concussion.

It is claimed that the new explosive is 50 per cent. stronger than dynamite, and that the cost of manufacturing is $20 per ton cheaper.

BEDFORT NOT RIGHT NAME

London, Oct. 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The correct name of Edward William Bedfort, the man who confesses to murdering Ethel Kinrade in Hamilton, is John Corry. He was born in London. His brother-in-law called at Brixton Prison yesterday. Bedfort was well-dressed when he arrived in this country, and had considerable money. He did not look like a man who had worked his passage over. His brother-in-law did not believe that Bedfort committed the crime that he confesses to. There is no insanity in the family. Bedfort would not tell his brother-in-law's name or that of the steamer he came over on. Bedfort was four years in Canada, but when writing relations in this country, he always gave the same postoffice as his address.

SAYS WOMEN COULD FARM

London, Oct. 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Miss Binnie Clark, who is agitating for an extension of the Canadian free lands grants to spinsters, and has worked a 320-acre farm for three years, told the National Union of Women Workers at Portsmouth that at the end of her fourth season, she had made cent per cent profit. She spoke of other Englishwomen who had made successful investments in Canadian land, and subsequently advocated domestic service in Canadian households as good employment for Englishwomen. She described, amid laughter, a Canadian dinner party, where the English "help," attired in evening gown, waited at the table, assisted by an English youth, son of a clergyman, also in orthodox evening dress.

TYPHOON IN THE ORIENT

Manila, Oct. 21.—A typhoon of unusual severity swept across western and southern Luzon on Sunday night.

The famous Benguet road, exceeding fifty miles from Dagupan to Baguio, where the Government has established a summer capital and health resort, has been so damaged that probably $250,000 will be required for its repair.

Hong Kong, Oct. 21.—Many casualties attended a typhoon that played havoc with the native shipping and damaged other vessels at various points on the coast during the night.

FRANK OLIVER ROASTS CALGARY NEWSPAPERS

Calgary, Oct. 21.—Hon. Frank Oliver is expected in Calgary again towards the end of the week, after looking into conditions in Southern Alberta. When he was here, he censured the Calgary newspapers for featuring the prairie fires in Alberta, intimating that, in his opinion, as a newspaper man, it was pretty yellow journalism, and gave the country a black eye.

GOVERNMENT TO OPERATE WIRELESS

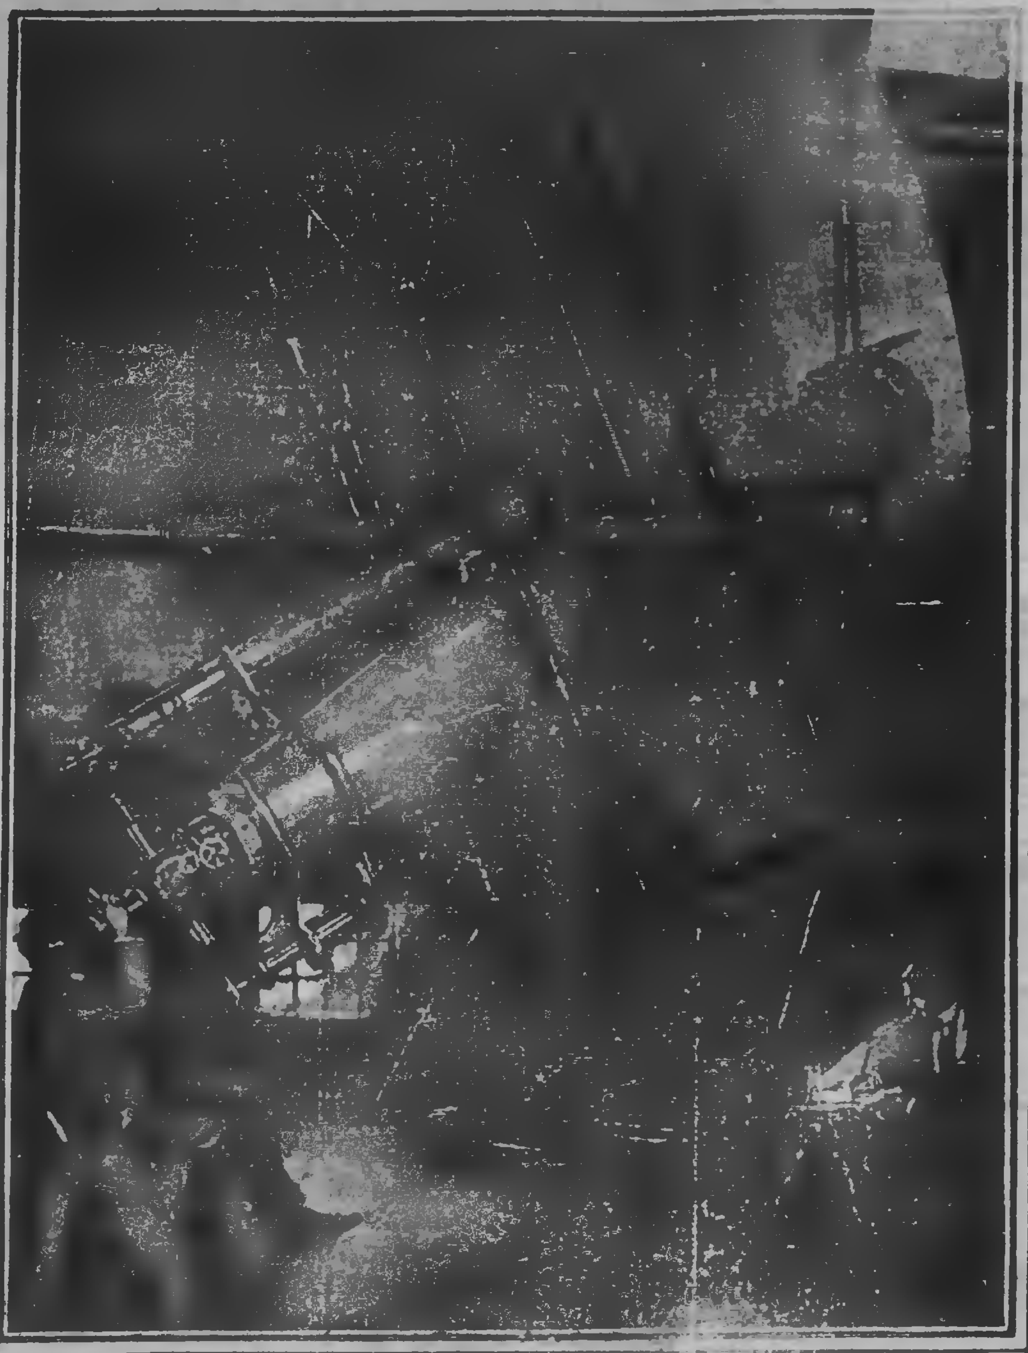
Port Arthur, Ont., Oct. 21.—Word has been received from Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Marine, that the Government will not give a license to the United Wireless Telegraph Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, to build a station at Port Arthur, for which arrangements had been made between the council and the company.

The Government's intention is to retain control of all wireless communication, and Mr. Brodeur states that it is likely three stations, enough to protect shipping, will be built about the great lakes in the next couple of years.

IMPORTED CLERKS FROM SCOTLAND

Montreal, Oct. 21.—The announcement that the Union Bank of Canada had brought out some thirty young Scotch bank clerks and the Royal Bank of Canada twenty more, has brought the information that the Canadian banking business is developing so rapidly that the banks can't keep up the supply. Generally speaking, the Scotch bank clerks are well trained and their chances for promotion are better in Canada.

ASTRONOMERS WATCH MARS AT CLOSE RANGE



WATCHING MARS AT GREENWICH
FROM THE SPHERE

The planet Mars, says the Sphere, being now in unusual proximity to the earth, is a prominent object in the heavens the greater part of the night. Mars is due south (on the Meridian) about midnight and is two million miles nearer than when Mr. Percival Lowell observed it in 1907 from his great observatory in Arizona. This brilliant amateur astronomer claims to have seen canals in Mars, and thus to have established the fact that there are beings on the planet; if so, these enormous canals would show greater engineering capacity than we on the earth possess. Few astronomers, however, accept his theory. Our artist when he was in the observatory (Greenwich) was struck by the solemn stillness of the place while the astronomers are at work on their delicate observations. The room, of course, is quite in the dark except for the light which creeps in from the night sky and the little electric lamp which enables one of the observers to make notes in his observation book. "NOT GUILTY" THE VERDICT RETURNED IN JOPLING CASE THIS AFTERNOON

Both Fred and Harry Jopling, of Bridgenorth, Acquitted on Manslaughter Charge—Jury Was Out Only an Hour—The Conclusion of a Case That Has Caused Widespread Interest and Excited Much Comment Throughout the Province---Defence's Strong Medical Testimony.

After an hour's deliberation the jury in the case against Fred and Harry Jopling, on the charge of manslaughter, in connection with Arthur Bollard's death, brought in a verdict of "not guilty" at two o'clock this afternoon. Dr. J. E. [illegible] was foreman.

There was a deep silence in the courtroom, and the face of every spectator was a study in its expression of eager anticipation. The prisoners, while naturally showing the greatest concern and attention, maintained that reserve which has marked them as cool and unagitated during the entire proceedings.

JUDGE'S REMARKS.

When the verdict had been delivered his Lordship Chief Justice Falconbridge said to the young men at the bar:—

"I have no means of ascertaining on what grounds the jury reached their verdict, but I agree with them. The evidence as to the cause of death was not conclusive enough to draw a conclusion. Frederick Jopling, you alone know whether or not you made that foul attack on that young man. I trust you did not. As for you, Harry Jopling, I trust you have profited enough by the course of events to mind your own business and keep a civil tongue."

The case against Fred and Harry Jopling was thus concluded, after a long inquest, the usual preliminary hearing and a trial, which occupied Tuesday, Wednesday and half of to-day. The case has aroused great interest, not only in Peterborough and vicinity, but throughout the province, and in Toronto particularly, where the late Arthur Bollard was widely known and highly respected and esteemed. It has had sad features, both in relation to the untimely death of Bollard, of anything to do with which both the Joplings are exonerated by the jury's verdict, and also on account of two young men of such respectable family being placed on trial on such a serious charge, and one in which the methods that were alleged to have been employed by Fred Jopling were spoken so strongly against, in terms of utmost disapproval and indignation. However, that was before the case had come up for trial, and all circumstances in connection with it, reviewed under the powerful searchlight of a Crown prosecution.

At the opening of the morning's session of the Jopling trial, Mr. D. O'Connell commenced his address to the jury, and dealt very fully and ably with the features of the case in favor of the prisoners, and contended that it was impossible for the jurors, on the evidence submitted, to be able to ascertain as to what was the cause of Bollard's death. Mr. O'Connell dwelt on the testimony offered by the medical men for both the prosecution and defence, and said that the post-mortem had not been thoroughly enough performed to allow an explanation of the cause of death by the doctors performing it to be a convincing one. He showed that against the evidence of Drs. Scott and Greer, who performed the autopsy, there was that of four other doctors who were of the opinion that death might have been due to cholera morbus, as indicated by the symptoms. Mr. O'Connell said that the crotch-hold, which Jopling had used in throwing Bollard, was proven by witnesses in a position to know, to be a perfectly legitimate and frequently-employed hold. The defence was not called upon to prove the cause of Bollard's death. It was the duty of the crown to bring home the charge against the accused, which Mr. O'Connell in his address contended, quite appropriately, had not been done. Counsel spoke of the good character borne by both the prisoners in the community, and argued that Bollard had not been maliciously injured by Fred Jopling, and that his condition after the friendly wrestle had nothing to do with his death.

Mr. Shirley Denison, the crown prosecutor, in a capable and well-defined address, tried to establish the fact that the prosecution had been successful in establishing a case against the prisoners. Speaking of the alleged injury to the vital parts by Fred Jopling in the course of the first struggle of the fight, Mr. Denison asked the jury: "Would you expect that Bollard's death was not occasioned by what was described? Bollard could not have absolutely recovered if he was in the condition spoken of on the day following the struggle. It was likely that a young fellow of Bollard's pluck would try to keep up his spirits in spite of his illness and suffering." Mr. Denison held that—the

TOO LITTLE PROVISION FOR PAUPER CONSUMPTIVES

Charities and Correction Conference at Toronto Discusses Care of Tubercular Patients—Government is Criticized—Guelph is Chosen.

Toronto, Oct. 21.—Milk supply for the hospitals and the care of tuberculosis patients formed the chief subjects of discussion at yesterday's session of the Charities and Correction Conference in the Normal School theatre.

Dr. Lockhart of Hespeler caused a mild sensation by his outspoken criticism of the attitude of the Ontario Government toward tuberculosis. "On one of the exhibits in the corridor, sent here by the Ontario Government itself," he said, "I read a placard '80 per cent. of tuberculosis cases are unnecessary.' When we waited on the Government some time ago, and I myself asked the Premier to do something, he practically said, 'You fellows are getting up a great scare, there are no more cases in Ontario than forty years ago.'

"Now, what can you do in the face of that? This is not a political question. God forbid that it should ever become that. But the duty of the Government is to conserve the health of the people. I hold that our Government are not doing it.

"I am pleading for the indigent consumptive who has no place to go. Premier Whitney was good enough to say that any hospital refusing a consumptive would not receive the Government grant. I have nothing to say against Sir James Whitney or his Government, but I do say that there is a lack in this country of proper interest in this affair. Ontario is behind every province except Prince Edward Island on the subject of tuberculosis.

"There is a false impression abroad that the Gravenhurst sanitarium accepts indigent cases. He will be accepted in the incipient stage; but who ever sees the indigent consumptive in the incipient stage?"

Dr. Holbrook of Hamilton spoke of the "insane desire for pleasure" among the poor, robbing them of necessary sleep, as one of the most fruitful causes of tuberculosis.

He was convinced that good clean milk could be produced on any ordinary farm in Ontario by the use of soap and water and intelligence. He suggested an educational campaign for farmers. A model dairy at the leading exhibitions of the province would be good object lesson. Nor was he in favor of a standard percentage of butter fat. Thin milk might be pure milk.

The following officers were elected: Hon. president, Hon. W. J. Hanna; president, J. P. Downey, M.P.P., Guelph; vice-presidents, J. Ross Robertson, Toronto; A. Studholme, M.P.P., Hamilton; Dr. Helen McMurchy, J. J. Kelso, Sheriff Middleton, Hamilton; Dr. Roseburgh, C. H. Corbett, Kingston; Major Snelgrove, Cobourg; secretary-treasurer, F. M. Nicholson; executive: The foregoing and one—Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith, chairman; Sheriff Cameron, London; Sister Clementine, Brockville; Sister Gabrielle, Kingston; Mrs. Margaret A. Griffin, Fergus; S. M. Thomson, Brantford; Mr. Rae, Hamilton; T. R. Parker, George Martin, Berlin; W. L. Scott, Ottawa; J. E. Farewell, K.C., Whitby; Dr. Lockhart, Hespeler; J. B. McNeillie, Lindsay; Sheriff A. S. Allen, Guelph.

Guelph was selected as the next place of meeting, the date being left to the executive.

In the evening a reception was held at the Nurses' Residence of the Sick Children's Hospital. The guests were received by J. Ross Robertson, Miss Grent, lady superintendent, and J. R. McNeillie, president of the conference.

WHAT CANADA LOST IN FIRES

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—The census and statistics monthly shows that there were 836 forest fires in Canada in 1898, by which 56,280,000 feet of timber, board measure, were damaged or destroyed, and the value of the timber and improvements destroyed amounted to $25,533,560. Twenty-two lives were lost.

The main causes of the forest fires were sparks from railway locomotives, bush burning by settlers, and carelessness by travelers and sportsmen.

HUGE CUSTOMS FRAUDS FOUND

New York, Oct. 21.—Eight years of systematic and exceedingly profitable cheating of the U. S. Government was described yesterday by George E. Lirg, a customs weigher, who was called as a witness of the trial of Antonio and Philip Musica, cheese importers.

After telling how he had underweighed a large importation of cheese for the Musica's, and received $196 as his share of the profits, he said that he had had similar dealings with hundreds of other firms of importers. There was a regular system of cheating in which a number of customs' employes were involved.

A MOVING SPECTACLE

A spectacle of Catholics and Protestants dropping their religious differences for the day, in order to listen to the splendid oration of a great Roman Catholic ecclesiastic, is one that should leave an impression upon even the most casual onlooker. So terribly in earnest have people become in their efforts for the betterment of humanity that they have resolved to suffer nothing to stand in their way. The suppression of the saloon has been determined upon. The toll he pays for the maintenance of tens of thousands of centres of absolute and unredeemable waste. The income of the saloon in Great Britain would pay the national debt itself in a short time. How can it be desirable that this enormous soul-and-body-destroying waste should continue? It may be a fair question of debate as to what the natural condition of the individual should be in relation to the privilege of drinking or not drinking, but there can be no two opinions as to the necessity of curtailing anything, no matter what, when it has reached the momentous proportions of a scourge. Whatever the basis or theory of human liberty may be, the fact remains that the amount of money and treasure expended in liquor is sapping the financial strength and the physical and moral vitality of the people. Americans are not more moral than other people, yet they have seen the need of calling a halt. Three-fourths of the United States has at least nominal restraint. If it were not that so many drink to excess and involve their families and themselves in ruin, it is doubtful if a hand would be raised against the imbibing of wine, but circumstances demand a change, either to the extent of voluntary moderation or general self-control. No one denies the necessity of this control, and that is what the temperance people are aiming at.

We have seen what it is to have a long black-list, the yearly toll of ruined human beings paid to the god of excess. The modern demand for "efficiency" has eliminated all such from the workways of life. They are the irretrievable waste. The power of the saloon has reached the force and dimensions of a devastating flood. Fire itself, against which men take every possible measure of precaution, does not do one-tenth the damage. Is it any wonder, therefore, that Catholics and Protestants pause in the debate of their differences to protect the nation from the danger that threatens it with destruction! Too many young and admirable lives are being ruined to-day in Peterborough for the citizens of Peterborough to ignore the issue, and on this point to fail to unite, as we have seen on the great occasion at Montreal.

WHAT PROTECTION PROTECTS

The following open letter addressed to the President of the U.S. by the Newspaper Publishers' Association, shows as plainly as words and facts can show why Protection is defensible and what the groundwork of the whole theory is. The only excuse for its existence is that it protects the wage-earner from the open market. Without Protection the wage-earners of every country would have to take what the wage-earners of the most-poorly-paid wage-earning country received. Hence no nation, however progressive could hope to advance as the U.S. has done in the comfort, happiness and well-being of its workers. The standard of its wage-earning life would be that of the coolie or the negro.

(Globe Despatch).

Chicago, Oct. 19.—President Taft apparently was led into a serious blunder in the closing sessions of the print paper schedule, according to an open letter recently addressed to the Chief Executive by Herman Ridder, President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

Mr. Ridder's letter was made public to-day, following its endorsement by the Inland Daily Press Association. The letter follows:—

"To the President: The full text of your address at Winona, Minn., on the tariff bill has just come to hand. With the utmost respect we submit that your statement respecting the paper schedule shows that you could not have correctly read or understood what the print paper paragraph contained as it passed the House of Representatives.

"You were apparently misled by designing men into a serious blunder when in the closing days of the tariff conference, they induced you to reverse your previous attitude on print paper and changed your notions of what the Mann committee recommended and of what the House of Representatives had approved. The Mann committee after a ten months' investigation, marked by unusual thoroughness, reported that a rate of two dollars would cover the difference in cost of production at home and abroad. The draft proposed absolutely safeguarded American paper mills against the serious Canadian tangle which your advice to the tariff conferees has alone precipitated.

"The fixing of the rate on print paper at $3.75 per ton, which you advise, has decided the Province of Quebec to prohibit the exportation of its pulpwood, and many American paper mills must close or move to Canada to obtain their supplies of raw material. The country is now in a fair way for a trade war with Canada because of your apparent failure to read correctly the Mann committee's recommendation. We are threatened with an industrial disturbance which will involve business interchanges with Canada amounting to $285,000,000 per annum.

"We sincerely trust that you can find some method of rectifying the mistake into which you were led. We fully appreciate the difficulties and responsibilities of your exalted office and we believe you are trying to do the best you can. We know that you must rely upon others for your information. We feel that every citizen is under obligation to help you. Therefore we write this letter to you. Yours respectfully, Herman Ridder, President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

EDITORIAL NOTES

From all accounts Spain will be in a ferment from this out.

Judge Latchford fined ten absent petit jurors $20 each and an absent grand juror $25, recently.

It looks as if a new Britain were about to be born out of the present political chaos there. If with the abandonment privilege there were also an abandonment of what is much worse everywhere the grip of the money power and the enormous and corrupt privilege which it arrogates to itself. What a joy there would be amongst the toilers who have to pay toll to it.

(We are told that we must have a navy to protect our sea-borne commerce. The navy of Argentina, with a sea-borne commerce twenty-five per cent greater than that of Canada consists of a few vessels from thirteen to thirty years old—vessels that the British Inflexible could blow out of the water without sustaining so much as a scratch on the paint of her own upper works. Still Argentina's export trade does not seem to be in serious danger of molestation. Neither is that of Canada.—The Weekly Sun.

The Globe condemns the Dominion Government immigration policy in the following language:—

After so many years of intelligent care for the treaty that keeps the lakes free from war vessels a Washington despatch says that the United States will end it by violation without notice. The average of intelligence in both Canada and the United States being lowered in both Canada and the United States is being lowered by the ca[illegible] absorption of the unenlightened, but it should still be sufficiently high to sustain Governments that will sustain this treaty.

Few will deny that the average of intelligence in Canada is being lowered in the way described.

(The Montreal Star.)

The spectacle of Protestants and Catholics, English-speaking and French-speaking, marching together yesterday in the sacred cause of temperance, and joining in a religious service in St. James' Cathedral—the representative church of the majority—was one which must have filled the hearts of those who labor earnestly for the uplift of the community with hope. In union there is strength; and the opportunity of the evil forces is always found in the division of their opponents.

If the moral forces which are incorporated in the various churches can be got to work steadily and harmoniously together for civic betterment, we ought to be able to make this an infinitely better city in which to live and rear our families. These are questions in which every decent man—no matter in what fashion he may serve his God—is profoundly concerned. A moral miasma is more deadly than a leaking sewer; and boys drink in a far more destructive infection from the seductive drafts which are pressed to their lips than they would find in typhoid-laden water. It is not all of the New Jerusalem to have clean streets and pure water; we must have clean morals and pure lives.

THESE ARE BATTLES IN WHICH EVERY CHRISTIAN CAN FIGHT ON THE SAME SIDE. SUCH SPECTACLES AS THAT OF YESTERDAY MIGHT BETTER BE COMMONPLACE THAN UNIQUE. WE SHOULD SHOW THE MEN WHO PROPOSE TO FATTEN THEMSELVES ON THE WEAKNESS AND DESTRUCTION OF OTHERS THAT THEY HAVE A COMBINED RELIGIOUS COMMUNITY TO OVERCOME BEFORE THEY CAN HOPE TO REAP THEIR BALEFUL HARVEST. DIFFERENCES IN DOCTRINE WE CAN SETTLE, OR AGREE TO LEAVE ALONE, DURING OUR HOURS OF LEISURE IN THIS MIGHTY WARFARE UPON WRONG, INJUSTICE AND INFAMY; BUT WE HAVE NO DIFFERENCES WHEN IT COMES TO CALLING DRUNKENNESS A SIN AND PROCLAIMING THE DIVINE WOE UPON HIM WHO "GIVETH HIS NEIGHBOR DRINK."—The Montreal Star.

An Ingenious Infernal Machine.

Perhaps the most ingenious infernal machine ever devised was that made for the purpose of killing Louis Phillippe. This machine, planned by Fieschi, was calculated to do the work of 25 marksmen armed with muskets. The designer succeeded in killing 19 persons and wounding 24, including himself, but the king escaped.

Fieschi's machine consisted of a heavy oak platform mounted near a window. Upon this platform were fixed 20 gun barrels, side by side, and all depressed to cover the street below. The gun barrels were completely filled with balls and the entire rack fired almost as one by means of a train of powder laid along the back of the platform. This ingenious piece of machinery for the destruction of man, in which may be found the principle of the modern Maxim gun occurred to Fieschi while he was serving in the army. The idea occurred to him again when he became a member of the secret society known as the Rights of Men and Citizens, by whom he was hired to assassinate the king.

How to Fasten Hair Bows.

Little girls often have their hair "bobbed," and the mothers or nurses who must tie on the large bows are often perplexed as to how to fasten these large ribbons to the small wisp of hair. Here is a very good arrangement which overcomes the difficulty and at the same time preserves the ornamental bow without necessitating retying it each day. Make the large bow and sew a strip of stout baby ribbon of the same color underneath. Wind the narrow ribbon around the hair several times, tie in a tight bowknot and it will hold nicely.

An Appeal to Vanity.

A Mussulman general gained a victory over the Greeks and captured their leader. Having summoned the prisoner into his tent, he asked him what treatment he expected from his conqueror. "If you make war like a king," replied the Greek, "release me; if you make it like a trader, sell me; if you make it like a butcher, slaughter me." The Mussulman general set him free.

J. H. Brown, nephew of Hamilton's postmaster, was one of the victims of the recent southern hurricane.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 20.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market, offerings this morning consisted of 1300 cattle, 500 sheep, 700 lambs, 1000 hogs and 400 calves. Supplies were not excessive and a firm feeling prevailed. The demand was good from both local and outside buyers and an active trade was done. The offerings consisted largely of northwest ranch stock, of which the quality was fully up to the average. Choice steers sold at 5c to 5¼c; good, at 4½c to 4¾c; fair at 4c to 4¼c; medium, at 3½c to 3¾c; good cows, at 4c to 4¼c; common, at 3c to 3½c; bulls, at 2¾c to 3¼c, and canners at 1¾c per lb. A firmer feeling developed for lambs on account of smaller supplies and a good local demand for the same, and sales were made at 5¾c per lb. The market for sheep was firm, but prices showed no change, sales being made at 3¾c per lb. Calves were scarce, for which the demand was good and sales of choice stock were made at $12 to $15, and lower grades from that down to $3 each. Owing to the small run of hogs, prices showed an advance of 25c per cwt. An active trade was done. Sales of selected lots were made at $8.75 to $9 per cwt., weighed off the cars. At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, supplies of live stock for local consumption consisted of 350 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 350 hogs and 100 calves. Hogs advanced 25c per cwt., with sales of selected lots at $8.90 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

In other lines a fair trade was done at much the same prices as quoted above.

ADMINISTERING MEDICINE.

How to Make Children Realize That They Must Swallow It.

Giving medicine to children is one of the most difficult problems that young mothers have to cope with, for some little ones have such a horror of a dose that they work themselves into a condition of nervous illness before the medicine gets into their stomachs, and so it frequently nauseates them, thus making successive doses harder to give.

There is no question but that if a child shows a disposition to rebel against swallowing medicine the mental tussle must be gone through with and settle first. That is, there is no use in trying to give the dose while administering admonitions. The little one's stomach must be quiet, and this cannot be if he is in tears or is screaming.

So when the child refuses it is essential to put the medicine aside and to make him understand that the cure must be taken. He must not for an instant be permitted to think that he has gained his point and need not take it. To the contrary, he is given to understand that he is obliged to and that the sooner he is quiet the better. Precisely how this is to be accomplished depends upon individual temperament and the way each parent handles the babe. Sometimes when the argument is prolonged a spanking may be required. One small girl had three doses of this material discipline before she became quiet and swallowed her medicine. There was never any trouble with her afterward, for she had been made to accept the fact that medicine when it was brought her was to be taken and to fuss only made the condition worse. Coaxing works with some little ones; with others punishment is required. Each parent must decide this for herself.

During the time that this matter of will contest is in progress the medicine is not administered. When the child has been conquered he must be given a few minutes to quiet sobs or temper, and then the dose must be given.

If the sick child thinks he cannot swallow medicine, no matter how much he may want to, he must be broken of this idea. He is apt to change his idea rather quickly, too, if he finds that each time he ejects the medicine a fresh dose is given. It takes a clever child only a few moments to realize that he is simply prolonging the agony.

The notion some have that they cannot swallow pills is likely to be imagination, which it is not always well to give in to. If there is a reason for paying heed to it an easy way of obviating it is to give liquid instead, for there are few prescriptions that cannot be administered in this form. The old way of giving pills in jelly does not commend itself to present ideas. The sweet, combined with medicine, is apt to upset the stomach, causing nausea.

To deceive a child about medicine and tell him it is good is a great mistake. This may work once, but he will be suspicious ever after. He should be made to understand that medicine is not a joke, but that it is less disagreeable than to be ill, and that whether he wishes it or not he must take it.

Making Amends.

A poor Turkish slater of Constantinople, being at work upon the roof of a house, lost his footing and fell into the narrow street upon a man. The pedestrian was killed by the concussion, while the slater escaped without material injury. A son of the deceased caused the slater to be arrested. The cadi listened attentively and in the end asked the slater what he had to say in his defense.

"Dispenser of justice," answered the accused, "it is even as this man says, but heaven forbid that there should be evil in my heart. I am a poor man and know not how to make amends."

The son of the man who had been killed thereupon demanded that condign punishment should be inflicted on the accused.

The cadi meditated a few moments and finally said, "It shall be so." Then to the slater he said, "Thou shalt stand in the street where the father of this young man stood when thou didst fall on him."

And to the accuser he added: "Thou shalt, if it please thee, go up on the roof and fall upon the culprit even as he fell upon thy father. Allah be praised!"

Autopsy of a Poem.

"What sort of a thing is a 'poem,' anyway?" asked the old Billville citizen.

"Why, a poem is—is—hard to define."

"You said it then, fer shore. Now, take this one my boy writ, fer instance. Fust thing the editor said wuz it didn't have the right number o' feet;' then it wuz in a strange 'measure,' an' the 'germ' of it wuzn't original; lastly, it wuz too 'simple' an' lacked 'bedtick' or somethin'."

"You mean 'technique?'"

"Lord only knows, but it wuz somethin' like that! Now, the blamed thing didn't walk on 'feet,' thar wuzn't a peck 'measure' of it, an' es fer 'germs,' they wa'n't none at all in it fur es I could see. Leastways they warn't no germs that the naked eye could diskiver, though a doctor might with a microscope! I reckon I'll have to discourage the boy from further foolin' with sich deadly material."—Frank L. Stanton in Uncle Remus' Magazine.

Playing Safe.

"Doctor," said the caller, "I'm a victime of insomnia. Can you cure me?"

"I can," replied the physician. "But before I take the case I want to ask you one question. Are you in business for yourself, or do you work for others?"

"I'm employed as clerk in a grocery," answered the patient.

"Then you'll have to pay in advance," said the doctor. "I'm not doubting your honesty, but after I get through with you the chances are you will sleep so soundly you'll lose your job. Then you can't pay me."—Chicago News.

Letting Them Worry

A Case Where the Old Folks Were Entirely Too Willing

By LOUISE OLNEY

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Perplexed, he gazed at Sallie. Her blue eyes flashed welcome, but her words turned him down. All summer she had been refusing to be seen with him. This time it was the club dance. As they had been friends from babyhood, he asked for reasons.

"Sallie, what's the matter? If you really hate the sight of me I'll keep away if it kills me, but somehow I don't believe you do. What have I done? Or is it Tracy, or don't you care, or what?" In the little summer house he faced her, his dark eyes snapping. She tossed her fair head, but her face was serious.

"Tracy, indeed! You ought to see he's crazy about Mary Trevor! No; you have not done anything, Robbie, only"— She fingered her rose in embarrassment.

"Only what, Sallie? Tell me. I can't stand this much longer."

"Well, I should think you would hate it, too, this being—managed."

"Referring to our precious families' very apparent plot to get us married? That certainly is the limit!" He spoke coolly. She nodded, flushing with anger as he continued: "I don't blame you, Sallie. I hate it too. I"— But she turned on him like a little tiger, leaping to her feet to face him.

"Why don't you go away then? Do you think that I—are you asking me everywhere because you think I"— For answer he swept her suddenly into his arms, holding her face to his—a happy face, for she had always loved Robert Martin.

"Dear, you must know I want you—now, always! But why couldn't our people be decently reluctant? It's all so horribly planned! We both hate being maneuvered into marriage. Mother suffers even if I look at Mary—sweet girl, but not you."

"And dad gets apoplectic at mere sight of Tom—Tom, who is everything dad and I don't want—but when he and mother greet me at breakfast with that repressed haven't-you-got-something-to-tell-us air I could gleefully announce Tom as their future son. That would be real revenge. Not that Tom wants me." The two looked up just in time to see Sallie's mother carefully steering the children away from the summer house. It was maddening. Sallie stamped her foot.

"I simply can't be engaged to you, Bob, with the family smiling benignly and all the old pussies purring over the fitness of the match! I can't!"

"Wait till you're asked," he retorted, grinning. "Sallie, we want each other, but we must let them worry. They simply must worry awhile! Did you know that poor old Tracy hates me because he thinks I want Mary?"

"Stupid boy! Anybody could see where her heart is by the way she hates me when I chasten dad by going out with Tom. Wonder why he asks me."

"To get even because I play Mary's little lamb to bother mother. You see, Mary's family goes no farther back than Adam. I suppose yours and mine antedate old Eden. I say, Sallie"— But he saw Tom Tracy going past with his machine and ran after him with a shout. The two men talked a long time before Robert came back to Sallie.

"Get your veil and things and come for a spin. We'll stop for Mary, have lunch at some little town, have dinner at Baxter, call on my minister uncle John and get home by moonlight."

"And a chaperon?" Though the four had always known each other, Sallie was going at least to mention proprieties. Bob's wise eye twinkled.

"I think I can hunt up a young married woman somewhere," he remarked, but refused explanation till Tracy left the car to persuade Mary. Then Bob did his gallant best to make things clear. He succeeded. Sallie got in front with Tom, leaving Mary to an apparently all too devoted Bob, while they paraded past their respective homes, for be it said that the Trevors and the Tracys had long wished Mary and Tom to like each other.

It was rather too late that night to please Sallie's father when Tom left her reluctantly at her own door. And Bob, mother questioned, said he had been motoring with Mary.

That was the beginning. During August the four were inseparable, and the parents worried. The only apparent comfort was that the couples remained together. How could they know that partners were changed the minute they got from under surveillance? The girls were airy, radiant, innocent, the young men calm, impervious to comment or question. Never passing the bounds of propriety, they still baffled home attempts to regulate their movements.

Tom was always with Sallie, Bob in the wake of Mary. The couples weren't matched to suit the elders; but, from fearing they were engaged, they began to fear they were not. This was because the young people were beginning to excite social comment by reason of several escapades, obviously innocent, apparently accidental. They all came home one day dripping wet from overturning their canoes and swimming out, and another night they walked home ten miles after the motor broke down—by arrangement. It was first one thing, then another. Finally the parents compared notes. They decided that there was only one thing to be done—interview the four together and insist on less public devotion or an announcement of engagements.

The young people knew of this, and the evening the council was to occur at Sallie's home they promptly absented themselves. The meeting began, and after much polite sparring it was decided to make the best of the Tom-and-Sallie and Rob-and-Mary arrangements. The old folks showed a touching resignation. All they would insist on was a knowledge of the facts.

At this juncture Tom and Sallie strolled in, followed by the other two, all showing delightful surprise at the parental presence.

"It looks like a council of war," commented Tom, while his father glowered, and then began the attack, followed by Sallie's father and the interpolations of the others.

"If you are engaged," Mrs. Trevor finished, "we insist on having it properly announced. If you are not—well, you ought to be. I hope you understand our point of view."

A silence followed, broken only by a nervous little giggle—the giggle Mrs. Martin would not like in a daughter-in-law. Finally it was Bob who spoke as the four stood under the chandelier in the usual couples.

"We are sorry—not for ourselves, but for you—that we are not engaged. We fully appreciate your assembled wishes. But we don't see how we can be engaged. It is, in fact, impossible." He looked at Tom to finish, and that young man rose to the occasion. He was even a bit dramatic as he faced the four fathers, the four mothers, sitting in stern conclave, but visibly softened by the well bred, beautiful young quartet before them, young people charming and, after all, old enough to know their own minds. Thomas spoke to his own mother.

"The fact is, we all hate nonsense. We hate planned matches, and being engaged to order with diamond rings to advertise the fact, and the society pussies purring and fashionable weddings preceded by 'showers' of stuff that only a fire or some other special dispensation of Providence can rid you of. And then"—he took a lawyer-like tone befitting the junior partner of the firm of Tracy & Tracy, "we cannot be engaged because"—he paused for effect and got it, for a sudden suspicion sent the parents as one to their feet—"because we are already married," he finished leisurely, "a month ago at he finished leisurely. "A month ago at Baxter, by Robert's uncle John, who also hates fuss and feathers." With a quick movement Tom moved—past Sallie—and took Mary by the hand, leading her to his mother, and Bob had Sallie by both hands, looking at her only, forgetting the others.

And when it finally became evident to the bewildered families that the right children were together, that Sallie had married Robert, that Tom had married Mary, the relief went far on the way to forgiveness for the elopement.

"But why elope?" Sallie's father finally asked. "I think I may say for my friends that these marriages will make us ultimately happy—that they are, in fact, just what we desired. What was the real trouble? We were all quite willing." But a chorus of laughter greeted him—happy young laughter.

"That was just the trouble. You were too willing!" It was Sallie who had spoken from the shelter of her young husband's arm. Then everybody laughed.

Mrs. Jane Walker, aged 100, died at Kingston, where she was born and had spent all her life.

Obeying Orders.

When Luther W. Hopkins joined the Confederate army he was a lad of seventeen, one of the boys who made Thomas Jonathan Jackson "Stonewall Jackson" and who bore a noble part in the conflict. In "From Bull Run to Appomattox" Mr. Hopkins recalls some of the thoughts and acts of his first night on a battlefield.

"We were ordered to 'sleep on our arms' the night whose dawn was to usher in the battle. I had heard a good deal about soldiers obeying orders. I thought of the boy who 'stood on the burning deck,' so when I lay down that night, with old Mother Earth for a bed, I stretched myself out at full length on top of my musket. It was a little rough, but the mere thought of being a soldied and 'sleeping on my arms' on the eve of battle made my bed feel as soft as a bed of roses.

"And then the gun! It was an old flintlock musket minus the flint and no powder or ball. But I was at least a soldier and had a gun and would surely see the battle and write home about it. A soldier seldom thinks he will be among the slain. He may be wounded or taken prisoner, but it is always the other fellow who is going to be killed."

Curious Telegraph Lines.

The most original telegraph line in the world once extended from La Paz, the capital of Bolivia, to the neighboring town of Oruro, a distance of about 156 miles. There are no growing trees in this part of the world, and wood of any kind is so rare that the telegraph poles were made of the same material as the natives' household furniture—dried mud. The pillars were built on stone foundations and measured about five feet square at the base, with a tapering height of fifteen feet. They were placed about 300 feet apart. Another curious telegraph line was constructed in Uganda by a British engineer, who transported growing trees to the roadside and used them as poles because he could not find any "dead" wood that would withstand the ravages of the white ants. In Dutch East India growing trees are also turned to account in this manner, but there a wire is stretched across the road between the trees on either side and the actual telegraph line suspended down the center.

Do You Realise the Danger of a

POISONED FINGER

DEATH OFTEN LURKS IN A CUT.

YOU see this danger illustrated in the case of Mr. W. C. Edwards, a well-known Friendly Society leader, of Peter Street, Toronto. He cut one of his fingers with a piece of glass, and instead of applying Zam-Buk to prevent blood poison and to heal it, he neglected the cut, and blood poison followed. He says:—"The blood-poison from the finger spread up my hand and arm and caused me terrible agony. After two months' treatment the doctor said there was no cure, and amputation would have to take place if I intended to save my arm. I left that doctor and consulted another. After a few weeks' treatment, he also told me that operation would be necessary. He said the bone had become diseased and the finger would have to be opened so that the bone could be scraped. I went away to consider when I would have the operation performed and met a friend who advised me to try Zam-Buk.

"That night I bathed the wound and put on some Zam-Buk. I got a little sleep for the first time for many nights. In the morning the wound began to bleed instead of the foul discharging as in the past. This was a healthy sign so I went on with the Zam-Buk. Well, to cut a long story short, in a few days I put away the sling, and in a few weeks the finger was healed completely. To-day that finger is as sound as a bell and I owe it to Zam-Buk. I spent over $20 in doctors fees and when I think how Zam-Buk at such a trifling cost saved me from amputation I am very grateful for the balm I can tell you."

WHAT ZAM-BUK CURES.

Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, sprains, festering sores, ulcers, scalds, blood-poisoning, eczema, bad leg, diseased ankles, running sores, ringworm, cold-cracks, chapped hands, chilblains, and all other skin diseases and injuries. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, 3 for $1·25 or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse anything offered "just as good."

SUDDEN DEATH OF YOUNG MAN

Death of Mr. Charles J. Cavanagh—Had Only Been Ill 3 Hours

With shocking suddenness death came to Mr. Charles J. Cavanagh, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Cavanagh, Simcoe street, yesterday afternoon, shortly after five o'clock. The late Mr. Cavanagh had been afflicted with heart trouble for some time but no immediate danger was thought of. He appeared to be in his usual good health yesterday up to two o'clock, when he complained of feeling dizzy and took to his bed. Medical aid was called for, but the physician's skill was of no avail, and the young man passed quietly away. The deceased had always been popular amongst a large circle of friends and acquaintances, who will join in extending to the bereaved family their sincere sympathy. He was 33 years of age, and those left to mourn his loss are his parents and two brothers, James and Roy, both of this city.

The funeral will take place from the late residence, Simcoe street, on Friday morning to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

INVITED FOR FOURTH YEAR

Rev. E. A. Pearson Asked to Complete Full Term at George St. Church—Campaign Was Discussed.

At a very largely attended meeting of the Quarterly Official Board of George street Methodist church held last night, a hearty and unanimous invitation was extended to Rev. E. A. Pearson to complete the full pastoral term of four years. Mr. Pearson, who is entering upon his third year at George street, accepted the invitation.

The reports from the various departments of church work shows the work to be in a very healthy condition. The membership shows a very substantial increase over last year, and all funds in a very healthy state.

A union evangelical campaign among the four Methodist churches in the city was discussed and very strongly favored. The campaign will likely be brought on in January.

Rev. Dr. Crothers was unanimously requested to preach the anniversary services at the anniversary of the church in January.

DON'T HANDLE DON'T TOUCH

Other People's Bicycle—It is Stealing in the Eyes of the Law, No Matter What Intentions Are

Any person who takes a bicycle in the absence of the owner and rides it for any distance, great or small, is stealing in the eyes of the law. The intention may not be that of theft, but it is no excuse. Some bicycle owners are greatly inconvenienced by persons especially young ones, who thoughtlessly, perhaps, seeing the machine standing idle, jump on it and go for a short spin. Sometimes the bicycle is returned in good order, but there have been many cases where considerable damage has been done.

A young lad was arraigned before Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged with stealing a bicycle, but his Worship took a lenient view of the affair, and after warning the accused, discharged him.

The wheel which caused the trouble was standing in a laneway. The youth, while waiting for his father, took a notion to have a short ride. He did not go far, but the owner saw him, and laid an information. He stated this morning that he had had one bicycle, which cost him $48, stolen some time ago. The accused admitted taking the wheel, but his intention was not that of stealing—merely to have a ride.

A WORTHY CAUSE IS THIS ONE

Thanksgiving Appeal by Salvation Army—Financial Aid Would be Appreciated

The Salvation Army is in need of funds to complete the necessary extension of its meeting-house. It has reached the limit of its own resources and is appealing to the public. There are no two opinions of the good work the Army is doing. Their religion is not that of controversy, but of love. The care of the unfortunate is its first consideration. Its usefulness is universally admitted. It is no longer a mere experiment. It is an institution which the public cannot afford to do without. Those who wish to help the good work can do so by cutting out the coupon in the advertisement on another page and sending it to the Review.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

MET PETERBOROUGH BOYS IN HIS HOLIDAY TRAVELS

Mr. Wm. Richardson, of the Peterborough Canoe Company, has returned from a three weeks' holiday, in which he visited friends in Halifax, Sherbrooke, Boston, Springfield, Mass., and other points. While in Sherbrooke he met Mr. Walter Maguire, who is an old Peterborough boy, at present physical director in the Y. M. C. A. of that place. In Springfield he met Mr. T. H. Hutchinson, late of the Y.M.C.A. in Vancouver, but who acted as boys' secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. some time ago, and Mr. S. Collage, who left here this summer to enter training at this school. Mr. Richardson spent two days at this place. The school has an attendance of 150, and a large number of the young men are Britishers, there being several from Australia and New Zealand. All three young men asked Mr. Richardson to be remembered to friends in this city.

CATHOLIC AND PROTESTANT UNITE TO HEAR ARCHBISHOP BRUCHESI UPON THE LIQUOR QUESTION

The Union of All Creeds for the Moment—No Division on the Temperance Needs of Montreal—An Epoch-making Incident.

The Montreal Star.

"Christian citizens, league together Spare no pains in order to limit the number of saloons in Montreal."

This appeal contained in a letter from his Grace, Archbishop Bruchesi, now attending the Plenary Council at Quebec, was read from the pulpit of St. James' Cathedral yesterday before a unique gathering of temperance workers belonging to Roman Catholic societies and to the Protestant Dominion Alliance, who had marched together in the cathedral. His Grace made an urgent call for united action in limiting the number of saloons.

"Workingmen, exert your influence over your fellow-workmen," he wrote, "Keep them away from saloons where they ruin their health, squander large sums of money which they could devote to much nobler purposes and where they only learn to contract the most pernicious habits.

"THERE ARE FAR TOO MANY SALOONS IN MONTREAL. THERE IS NO REASON WHY THERE SHOULD BE ANY AT ALL IN MANY LOCALITIES. CHRISTIANS, LEAGUE TOGETHER. YOUR ZEAL WILL SUGGEST THE MEASURES WHICH YOU WILL THINK PROPER TO ADOPT IN ORDER TO MINIMIZE THE OCCASIONS OF EVIL."

A GREAT DEMONSTRATION.

All the temperance societies connected with the Roman Catholic parishes of the city, together with a delegation of the Dominion Alliance formed a great procession through the streets of Montreal. It was an endeavor to demonstrate the strength of temperance among the Catholics of Montreal, and several thousand persons were in the procession. Prominent among the number were:—Messrs. M. P. Dolan, president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union; M. J. O'Donovan, vice-president; Ald. Gallery, president of St. Ann's Temperance Society; Rev. Father Holland, chaplain; Rev. Father P. Heffernan walked with St. Anthony's Society; Ald. Carter, president of the Lord's Day Alliance; J. R. Dougall, honorary president; J. H. Carson, vice-president, and J. Patterson, solicitor.

At the door of the cathedral the processionists were met by Rev. Canon Gauthier, rector. On the conclusion of the service within, Bishop Racicot bestowed the blessing of the Holy Sacrament.

FATHER O'HARE SPEAKS.

Rev. Father O'Hare, who is attached to the Cathedral of Newry, Ireland, preached the English sermon, and the French sermon was delivered by Rev. Father Tranchemontagne.

After graphically depicting the ravages caused by liquor in the house and in society, in the huts of the poor as well as in the mansions of the rich, Father O'Hare thundered out his warning to young girls never to marry men addicted to liquor. "I am a stranger to you all," he said, "we have not met before and shall never meet again, but take this warning home, never, never allow your daughter to marry a young man addicted to liquor. Neither let flattery, subtle promise, visions of wealth and social distinction entice a young lady to marry a drunkard, for his promises are as fickle as the wind, and as unstable as water. A maiden's heart and a maiden's hand will, as sure as the sun rises, find shame, misery and degradation in the home of that young man.

"THE PRESENCE IN THE CATHEDRAL OF THOSE WHO PROFESS OTHER CREEDS THAN OURS," SAID FATHER O'HARE, "IS A PUBLIC TESTIMONY OF THE FITNESS OF WHAT WE ARE FIGHTING FOR, WHICH SHOULD BE A MATTER OF PUBLIC REJOICING."

Under Auspices of King's Daughters—A Large Sum Raised for Charity

The St. John's King's Daughters held their annual meeting last night when the following officers were elected for the coming year:

Treasurer—Miss Margaret English.

During the past year a great deal of charitable work was done by the society and over $350 passed through their hands, being dispensed to the needy. Of this amount nearly all was raised in the tea room, showing that this venture of the young ladies was a most successful one. The tea room has been re-opened in the store formerly occupied by Richard Hall & Son and already a large number have called and tasted of the good things that are offered. The tea room will not be open on Monday.

HAVELOCK TO SPEND $8,000 FOR SIDEWALKS AND $4,000 FOR PERMANENT DRAINAGE

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Oct. 20.—A by-law will be submitted to the ratepayers of Havelock in January next to raise $8,000 for the building of cement walks throughout the town, and $4,000 for a permanent drainage system for the town. This was the decision arrived at at the council meeting in the town hall on Monday evening. The money will be raised by means of debentures covering a period of thirty years, and bearing interest at five per cent.

The need of both cement sidewalks and a permanent drainage system has been felt in Havelock for a long period back, and it is very likely that the by-law will be carried by a large majority when it comes to a vote of the citizens in January next.

Large amounts of money are being expended annually on the building of board walks, which are very short-lived, while once the cement walks are laid, there are no repairs. Already cement walks have been laid on a part of Ottawa, George and Quebec streets by general tax, but the walks in town were being worn out faster than they could be laid by this system, and therefore debentures will have to be issued. If the by-law carries the walks will be laid just as they are needed, thus spreading the expenditures of the money for this purpose over a period of two or three years.

The town has always known that sooner or later plans must be made for a drainage system. Up to the present the drainage has consisted of a ditch running through the town from east to west. It ran through various persons' property, and, being uncovered, it became filled up often at certain points, completely stopping up the water. The present plans for drainage consists of a main drain down Ottawa street from Quebec street to the front of Mr. Thomas Keene's residence.

There will also be side drains on Orange, Oak and Quebec streets, as far north as the old ditch.

The solicitor is at present engaged in drafting the by-law which will receive its first reading at the regular November Council meeting.

At the Council meeting W. Stillman was ordered to be paid $2 for work on the town hall, and G. Rutherford $1.50 for watching fire.

The by-law licensing bowling alley received its three readings, was signed and sealed.

The council decided to allow no rebate on the property of Mr. M. McNichol, burned recently.

OVER THE LINE

The local rugby players, both junior and senior, are working overtime this week to prepare for the games on Saturday and the following Monday, Thanksgiving day.

The seniors go to Toronto Saturday, where they meet the T.A.A.C. team at Diamond Park. Profiting from their mistakes in the last game, they will go into the contest, stronger in every department, and although the Toronto fourteen are recognized as a fast aggregation, the outcome should be in favor of Dr. McPherson's bunch.

The junior team will be composed of the younger players of which there are a large number, with good prospects of becoming stars on the gridiron if given the opportunity to show their ability.

This is what the Executive of the rugby club is doing and the youngsters are making good. The team is not picked yet, but the lineup which will play against Lindsay here on the holiday will be announced the latter part of the week.

A junior city league game will be played at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, the contestants being the T.A.S. and Collegiate.

SHORT CROP OF NUTS WILL MEAN HIGHER PRICES

All sorts of nuts are a short crop, say wholesalers, and when this year's growth is on the market the prices are likely to soar. Already there is an advance of over a cent a pound wholesale on all unshelled nuts, in anticipation of a crop shortage. These, of course, are all last season's stock.

The man who buys shelled almonds retail finds that the price has increased from 28 to 38 cents per pound, a straight ten-cent advance, or over one-third as dear again as they were a short time ago.

About a year ago an advance in the price of Brazil nuts and pearl chocolate was taken to indicate a rise in candy prices. These, however, have remained fairly stationary, but nut candies have been manufactured to a less extent than formerly. It remains to be seen what effect the high price of nuts will have upon the candy market this fall.

"NOT GUILTY" THE VERDICT

medical evidence aside—as much as possible as could be decided from the general facts and circumstances in connection with the fight and what followed it, should be taken into consideration by the jury to the greatest extent in arriving at a verdict. Medical evidence, while the speaker did not wish to minimize it, was liable to be confusing to the layman. The prosecutor spoke of the evidence of Drs. Scott and Greer as being reliable in view of their familiarity with the case, both from a clinical and post-mortem standpoint. It was contended that their evidence should be given the preference over that of the medical witnesses for the defence, who had not had the same personal and actual familiarity with the illness of Bollard and the state of the body after death.

The doctors had been criticized for not performing a sufficiently thorough post-mortem examination. They had, though, a familiarity with the case that justified their conclusions, and in respect for the dead would, naturally, not dissect the remains of the beloved dead to any greater extent than was necessary to arrive at a conclusion. Mr. Denison asked if there could be any other conclusion than the one that Bollard came to his death as a result of the injuries he sustained in the fierce engagement with Fred Jopling. The evidence of witnesses who had no interest in the matter, should have greater weight than that given by interested witnesses, mentioning as these the two prisoners.

JUDGE'S CHARGE.

Chief Justice Falconbridge said in commencing his charge to the jury that the prisoners at the bar were charged with the crime of manslaughter as the result of acts which resulted in the death of Arthur Bollard. Culpable homicide may be murder or manslaughter, the latter when it was not the result of malice aforethought.

His Lordship said that he would not review the evidence at any length as it had been thoroughly presented to the court. The case was not one in which sympathy was not to enter. There was undoubtedly sympathy for the deceased young man's family. Character evidence was only a matter of value in some cases. For example, if there was a case of mistaken identity then it would be of very great value to prove that the accused was or were not a man or men of such character as to be engaged in such an enterprise as the one alleged. However, character had never been entirely disregarded. It should be borne in mind by the jury that the prisoners were presumed to be innocent unless there was shown that beyond reasonable doubt that they were guilty on the evidence presented by the Crown.

It was not for the prisoners to prove themselves innocent, it was for the prosecution to prove its case beyond all reasonable doubt. No man is to be convicted on mere conjecture. It was to be established that some act was committed by the prisoners that had caused or contributed to Bollard's death.

His Lordship reviewed the evidence at length and discussed the quality and weight of it. The physicians who performed the post-mortem and attended the deceased when ill would be in a position to judge better as to the cause of death than those who had simply heard the evidence and based their opinions on this.

It was a fair criticism of the Crown's case in saying that the matter might have been placed at rest by a bacteriological examination of the blood. The post-mortem had been incomplete. It also stated that Bollard's symptoms were similar to those in a case of cholera morbus or cholera nostras. Dr. Osler the eminent authority had written as was shown in court that cholera nostras might be caused by irregularity of diet or a sudden cooling off after one being heated.

The jury retired to consider the case when Mr. O'Connell requested his Lordship that they be recalled that further explanation might be made to them on three points which he named. After the jury had been brought in his Lordship explained that if death was in any way due to the result of an abrasion received in a friendly wrestle or by the vital forces being weakened by a friendly contest that would not be sufficient cause to bring in a conviction against either of the accused young men. Mention was also made of the fact that Bollard had eaten green apples while out sailing with Harry Mark on Tuesday.

The jury retired again and court adjourned till two o'clock this afternoon.

DOCTORS CALLED BY DEFENCE

What appeared to be strong evidence for the defence was introduced at the trial of the Jopling brothers yesterday afternoon by the doctors called as witnesses for the defence to give their opinion as to the probable cause of Bollard's death from the evidence given. Four doctors testified, Drs. Morgan, Young, Boucher and Carmichael. All were of the opinion that Bollard's death could not be attributed to any alleged injuries inflicted by Fred Jopling, and also stated that the post-mortem examination was not sufficiently thorough to reveal the undoubted cause of Bollard's death. It was their opinion that the symptoms were those of cholera morbus or cholera nostras, both terms describing the same disease, which is the same ailment that in the case of infants is known as cholera infantum.

Dr. Morgan, the first witness called, stated that there might have been chronic valvular disease of the heart or active endo-carditis, which could not be disclosed by the post-mortem as the heart was not examined by being cut open. The doctor took notes at the post-mortem, both in the interests of the Joplings and for the purpose of assisting the doctors performing the examination.

The stomach had not been fully enough examined. The intestines were not fully enough examined. Neither was the spleen. The sewing up of the body was done without gloves, which the doctor stated would be dangerous to the physicians if there were any evidences of septicaemia. The symptoms of the case were such as they might be in a case of endo-carditis, due to venereal disease, ptomaine poisoning, a form of bowel or stomach trouble known as cholera nostras.

The facts that Bollard had been sailing the day before he was taken ill, that it was a very hot day, that after dancing on Wednesday evening he had been sitting on the damp grass would be important factors in the development of cholera nostras. If Bollard had been injured in the private parts in the first struggle with Fred Jopling the shock would have been so severe that he would not have been able to continue in another wrestling bout such as the evidence showed he did annual outing.

In addition to that, any such injury would not be contributory in any way to his death so long after. To Mr. Denison the doctor said that he was requested by the Joplings to attend the post mortem in their interests, which he did. The doctors on the post mortem committed that he should do so.

"I don't think there was any shock from the wrestle which had anything to do with this case." The doctor didn't think the man would improve the way he did and attend the dance and improve to such an extent after he was taken ill at the time of the wrestling bout.

Mr. Denison—The doctors on the post mortem, in your opinion, made an honest investigation at the post mortem?

Yes.

And believe they had found the cause?

Yes.

The doctor added, however, that he thought the heart should have been examined.

DR. YOUNG.

Dr. T. W. H. Young said he had been practising in Peterborough for thirteen years. He stated he did not think the post-mortem was by any means a thorough one, and there were no evidences of septicaemia at the post-mortem, as no bacteriological test was made of the blood, although there may have been evidences of septicaemia at the clinical or bedside examination. He didn't think the organs were examined thoroughly enough to make sure of all possible causes of death. He was of the opinion that there was not thorough enough examination for evidences of septicaemia in case it was expected this was the cause of death. Any injuries to the vital parts which would be contributory to Bollard's death, as described, would have had immediate effect on Bollard. The vomiting in case of such injury would follow immediately and the shock would have been so great that he wouldn't have been able to have continued. If Bollard had received a shock from injuries sufficient to be contributory to his death, it would have been continuous. It would not have been possible for Bollard to have received a shock sufficient to be the cause of death or a contributory cause of the death, the doctor did not think it would have been possible for him to recover to any extent to permit him to dance on Wednesday night. If Bollard had recovered from any injury to the vital parts, which he may have sustained on Monday evening, to such a degree that he would have been able to dance on Wednesday, that injury wouldn't possibly have been a contributory cause to death.

To Mr. Denison—From what I've heard I couldn't say what was the exact cause of death. If I were asked what was the most likely cause of death I should say cholera nostras. Vitality is sometimes increased by slight injuries.

DR. BOUCHER.

Dr. R. P. Boucher was of the opinion that if Bollard had received injuries to his vital parts sufficient to be a contributing cause to his death he would not be in a condition to enter a second bout. If vomiting should come from such injuries, it would come immediately afterwards. He considered the post-mortem was most imperfectly performed.

DR. CARMICHAEL.

Dr. Carmichael said the post-mortem was only a superficial one, especially for a case of this importance. In the doctor's opinion it could not be said beyond any reasonable doubt what was the cause of death, in view of the superficial character of the post-mortem. The doctor was of the opinion that if Bollard had received injury to his vital organs sufficient to be a contributing cause to his death he would not have been able to go on with a second struggle. The fact of Bollard dancing and becoming overheated on the night of the dance—Wednesday—and sitting out on the grass and getting cooled off in this manner in such warm weather might produce cholera nostras or cholera morbus. From the evidence, he thought it quite possible that Bollard had cholera morbus, and this might have resulted in his death. In some cases the disease is fatal. Bollard appeared to be recovering from any shock he might have sustained on Wednesday. If the injury he had received on Wednesday had been sufficient to be a contributing cause to death it would have been exactly the opposite, in the doctor's estimation.

A Business Head.

"My boy," says the thoughtful father, "I notice that when you get a penny or a nickel you do not place it in the little savings bank Santa Claus brought for you last Christmas."

"Not always, papa," answers the bonny child.

"Ah! I believe, if I am not mistaken, that you spend your pennies and nickels at the little store around the corner."

"Yes, papa."

"Well, my boy, if you do not save your money now, what do you expect to do when you grow up?"

"I am going to run a little store around the corner, papa. Then I'll get all the pennies and nickels."

Locusts in Panama.

The method of exterminating locusts most generally adopted in Panama has been to dig a trench about fifty feet in length, two feet wide and one foot deep, with perpendicular sides, in which the locusts are driven by men beating the grass and trees with switches. In this way millions are collected and are destroyed with a solution of strong lye compounds. The trench is then refilled with earth so as to allay the odor.

A Will and a Way

The Mysterious Woman Who Could Neither Read Nor Write

By BELLE MANIATES

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

"His ruling passion was strong in death," remarked Jules Lorme whimsically as he learned the contents of his father's will from his father's lawyer. "He knew that I would not comply with the terms of so atrocious a will to marry a woman who could neither read nor write."

"You have a year of grace," reminded Coyle.

A year later Jules appeared at the office of the family lawyer.

"My lease is up, Coyle," he reminded

"And I think I have found a way by which you can fulfill all conditions and still retain your freedom. You can marry a woman who can neither read nor write, and immediately after the ceremony you can go abroad. At the expiration of two years she can quietly secure a divorce. You can spare a generous alimony. I have met a good, conscientious girl who is perfectly willing."

"Is she a domestic?"

"No; I believe she does needlework."

"It's odd in these days of schools and truant officers that she escaped the alphabet at least."

"She says she never has had the opportunity nor the desire to learn. I will arrange all details for you."

After some further discussion Jules acceded to the proposition, and at dusk of the appointed day he rang for admission to Coyle's residence. The lawyer met him in the hall and ushered him into a dimly lighted library where a minister and Henry Phillips, Jules' next friend, were in waiting. They all went into the reading room adjoining. Near the doorway Jules paused and looked into the room, which was in total darkness.

With an odd sinking of the heart Jules took his position beside the shadowy form of a woman. He made the responses in a quick, jerky way, anxious to end the affair. The woman at his side spoke in nearly inaudible tones.

When the sentence of man and wife was pronounced Jules returned to the library and hastily signed some papers Coyle gave him.

"Where is my wife?" he then asked.

"She remained in the reading room."

The young bridegroom hesitated. Then resolutely he turned and went back into the reading room. His eyes, now accustomed to the gloom, discerned her at the end of the room. She was sitting on a couch, her face buried in the cushions. One arm hung listlessly over the edge.

"May I speak with you?" he asked courteously.

She did not lift her head from the pillow.

"I want to thank you," he continued, "for the service you have rendered me."

She murmured a disclaimer of his thanks. He took her hand. It was still cold and trembling. His grasp, firm and sustaining, tightened.

"I am sorry," he said firmly, "that you will not see me, but I want you to promise me that if you ever need help or advice you will come to me."

"I will," she said softly.

"Lorme," called the warning voice of Coyle from the doorway.

"I must go now. Good night."

He went to his lodgings and tried to smoke away the burden of his thoughts. The shadowy outlines of the tall, drooping figure and the low tones in which she had spoken haunted him all night.

"I suppose her motive was as mercenary as my own, so I don't need to reproach myself."

The next day he was leaning against the railing of the steamer, idly watching the scenes upon the wharf, when he saw Phillips making his way toward a young girl who was daintily petite in form and lovely of face and feature. She was accompanied by a middle aged woman.

"You must look after Miss Derrington, Jules," cautioned Phillips as he was taking leave of them all a few moments later. "Her aunt has the stateroom habit, she tells me."

Jules scarcely heard him. He was looking into the wonderful eyes of the young girl. An hour later Mrs. Marshall had fulfilled the prophecy regarding the stateroom and Jules had joined Salome on deck.

"You don't seem a stranger to me," she said. "I have come to know you through your books."

There followed a long and animated discussion of books and authors until dinner time.

"She is a darling." Jules told himself as he lay in his berth listening to the rhythmic measures of the engines that night.

The voyage passed in a succession of days of sparkling sunshine. Mrs. Marshall remained perforce in solitary confinement, and Jules was constantly with Salome, who grew fairly radiant with happiness. He came to have an odd feeling at times, as if in some pre-existence she had belonged to him. Then his new fancy would be succeeded by the mystic charm of the other.

Early in the morning of the last day of their voyage he came out on the afterdeck. Salome was already there As she turned to him he saw a shadow of sadness in her eyes.

"This is our last day," she said in a low tone.

"Yes, and I am sorry," he replied simply.

"I wish you were coming with us—to the north of England."

He did not reply at once.

"It can't be," he argued to his troubled self. "It is only the first fluttering fancy of a young girl—the fancy for an older man and one who writes. I shall not see her after we land. Still, in a young, romantic girl's heart affection sometimes flourishes in absence. I should tell her. I will."

"Salome"—the name slipped out unconsciously—"I should have told you before, but I disliked to talk about my personalities. I am married."

He then briefly related the circumstances of his marriage.

"Before the ceremony," he concluded, "I had considered only my part in the affair. I was narrow enough to think that because she had been denied certain advantages a little money would recompense. It may have been great need for herself and others that forced her to this step. At any rate, I should have talked the matter over with her. I am going to return to New York if she wishes and have the marriage annulled."

He glanced at her for the first time during the recital. His heart leaped to life. In her eyes was an exquisite softness. A slight moisture dimmed her lashes. She held out her hand.

"Thank you for telling me. And now I must tell you something. I, too, am married."

"You! Salome, impossible! You, so young?"

"I was married the night before we sailed in Mr. Coyle's library."

"Salome, the woman I married was tall—very tall."

"I stood on a stool."

"Her name was Mary."

"My first name is Mary. I never use it except to sign."

He gathered her close to his arms as one who claims his own.

"Salome, only the recollection of my wife was between us. Will you be my wife—my real wife?"

There was a revealing answer of joy in the face upraised to his.

"Tell me," he commanded, "how it came about."

"My aunt engaged Mr. Coyle to manage our estate. He learned how interested I was in your books, and he talked much of you and the will. He proposed this marriage and planned the voyage. He said we could find out if we cared"—

"I can't imagine Coyle's being frantic," he laughed.

"It wasn't romance. He would not have proposed it if"—

"If?"

"Oh, Jules, I can neither read nor write! I have been blind since I was four years old until three months ago. Aunt read your books to me."

The judges of Montreal, on Saturday banquetted their retiring brothers, Justices Mathieu and Loranger.

UNSATISFACTORY HEATING SYSTEM AT LOCAL GAOL

Grand Jury Recommends That it be Changed — Strongly Advises City to Provide for Old and Destitute Persons and to Have Accommodation at Gaol for Insane Inmates.

The Grand Jury at the present sitting of the High Court made the following presentment;—

To His Lordship Chief Justice Falconbridge.

The Grand Jury beg to present to Your Lordship the following;—

We have in accordance with your instructions carefully inspected the County Gaol, and find the same kept in a clean, efficient and proper manner.

The mode of heating the gaol and Court House is antiquated and unsatisfactory, and we would suggest that steps be taken by the proper authorities to have the matter remedied and a proper system installed.

We have the same complaints to make as numerous preceding Grand Juries, that there are among the prisoners and necessarily associated with them, a number of old people who are in the gaol for no other reasons than old age and poverty, and we strongly urge that steps should be taken by the city of Peterborough to provide for these people and not allow their latter days to be passed in such surroundings.

There is also in the gaol a person of unsound mind, necessarily associated with the other prisoners. As there is no proper provision in the gaol for such persons, and proper care cannot be taken of any such in there, we think means should be taken to remedy such a state of affairs, and a proper place provided for any such, in the interim, until their removal to some one of the Provincial institutions for that purpose.

We have also taken advantage of this occasion to inspect the House of Refuge provided by this county, for its poor, near Lakefield. We are glad to be able to report a well conducted institution where the inmates are bountifully and comfortably provided for, and where they appear to be contented and satisfied.

This Grand Jury report with great regret since the last sittings of this Court here, the loss by death to this county of its late County Court Judge, His Honour Charles A. Weller, and the Clerk of this County, the late John Moloney, both old and highly esteemed and respected residents of this city and county, and for a great number of years filling their respective positions with credit to themselves and advantage to the community.

Peterborough, 19th. Oct., 1909
ROBERT FAIR,
Foreman

The Judge thanked the Jury for their present, which he characterized as an able one, and said that it was much to be regretted that Peterborough did not have adequate accommodation for its old and homeless poor. He hoped such accommodation would not continue long as a reproach to the city. He spoke of the keen loss sustained by the death of Judge Weller, and expressed his regret at the demise of the respected clerk of the court, Mr. John Moloney.

MADAME MARCHESI CHARMS MONTREAL

Gifted Singer made Wonderful Impression in Montreal—The Arena Crowded to Hear Her

The Montreal Gazette has the following to say after the concert given by Madame Marchesi: Those who do not take advantage of the opportunity to hear this wonderful singer will surely regret it. The prices of tickets has not been increased, and there are still a number of good seats left after the subscription list has been satisfied;—

Once more this wonderful singer, who makes of the human voice a thing almost divine, overcoming every considerable natural limitations by the mystery and marvel of her art, has come to us and sung. It is not too much to say that her second appearance but served to deepen the profound impression created by her first, eight months ago, and that the memory of it is likely to outlast that of several more pretentious musical events. It could not well be otherwise, for Marchesi is such a consummate artist that she compels first wonder and then admiration for what she achieves. When this Queen of singing teachers reveals how, through the medium of her art, she can accomplish with her voice, which is not the exceptional organ Schumann-Heink and other powers, vocal tyrants, he they could not begin to approach, one is compelled to sit up and think.

And she does it, beyond all doubt, she does it. Her repertoire of songs is the largest of any living woman singer, and it is also the most varied. It is true that her voice is of remarkable range for a contralto, but she is a contralto very much as Calve is—capable of a voluntary transposition. That quality apart, her voice is one of ordinary quality and ordinary power; but she has so trained it, so developed its capacity, so refined and etherealised it, so to speak, by the art she has brought to bear upon it, that she has made it capable of achieving what voices of infinitely greater natural beauty cannot do. She knows the possibilities of the human voice. She knows as much as anybody of its mysteries, and more than most people of its powers. And this knowledge she brings to bear in her interpretation of song, until she carries one away by the artistic beauty of her singing, despite the limitations of her voice, simply because it is a true artist, and in many respects a unique artist, who sings.

Mr. Brahm Van den Berg is an accompanist of rare gifts. His brilliant work contributed in no small degree to the complete success of Mme. Marchesi's work. He is a soloist of unequal abilities, but last night he gave a rendering of Moszkowsky's striking "Wave" study, and of Rubenstein's "Barcarolle", characterised by exceptional clarity, sonority, and fine tonal shading. The concert was under the management of Mme. Marchesi's impresario, Mr. Saunders Gordon, of New York, who came down to Montreal for the occasion, and to whom those who heard Mme. Marchesi will readily acknowledge their debt of gratitude.—

CABINET RESIGNS

Spain Has More Trouble—Ferrer Incident the Direct Cause.

Special to the Review.

Madrid, Oct. 21.—The Spanish Cabinet headed by Premier Maura, resigned this afternoon. The Cabinet was Conservative and succeeded in power the fall of no less than five Liberal Ministers in eighteen months. The Ferrer incident was the direct cause the Liberals, Republicans and Socialists uniting against the Cabinet.

Maura, the defeated Premier, was the nominee of the Clerical faction and Canalejas him was placed the blame for the recent stern measures in putting down the anti-war demonstrations in Spain.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

MANSLAUGHTER THE VERDICT IN TURNER CASE AT TORONTO

Woman Who Slew Authers Baby Escapes the Gallows, But Faces Long Imprisonment—Will be Sentenced Later—Nine of Jury Held Out Against Murder Verdict.

Toronto, Oct. 22.—"Guilty of manslaughter."

This verdict was delivered after a little over two hours deliberation in the Criminal Assize Court at 8.40 last night. By it, Mrs. Mabel Turner is removed from the shadow of the gallows, but faces a life sentence for the killing of Mrs. Annie Authers' infant.

Amazement was written plain on the faces of the hundred or so hearers gathered in the court-room. Judge, counsel, and even the prisoner herself seemed scarcely able to credit their ears as the words fell from the lips of the foreman of the jury.

Mrs. Turner was led into the court-room when it was announced that a verdict had been reached. As the men who held her life in their hands filed into the room she seemed to brace herself in the dock and sat with a steady gaze fixed upon the foreman's face as he took his seat.

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon your verdict?" asked the clerk.

"We have," replied the foreman.

"What is that verdict?"

The prisoner's face looked strained and old. Queer age-giving lines appeared which had not been there before and she nervously moistened her lips. Her steady, tired eyes grew misty, but did not falter.

The foreman spoke slowly, and with a marked hesitation after the first word.

"Guilty," he said.

At the word a look of abject terror shot over the woman's face, the mouth was twisted in what appeared a desperate effort to repress a cry and she was white to the lips.

After a pause that was but a hesitation in speech, the foreman went on of manslaughter.

As the two words which called her back from death to life, the change was as striking as had been the despair that spread over her countenance at the first word. Her face became almost radiant in its expression of great joy.

The verdict of the jury was the subject of wide discussion, more especially among those who had watched the case throughout. Members of the legal fraternity present when it was delivered had a deal to say of it. "A verdict against capital punishment," was the way it was classed by one, and his view was very generally endorsed by many. None of the jurors would discuss the matter at all.

After a consultation with T. C. Robinette, K.C., and Mrs. Turner, W. A. Henderson, who has conducted the case for the prisoner, sprang a surprise at the opening of yesterday's afternoon session, when he announced that no evidence would be called for the defence.

It was learned about the corridors last night that up till a very short time before the verdict was returned three men stood out for a straight murder verdict, while the remaining nine, among whom was the foreman, stood for the verdict as returned. The basis of this was a possibility that the infant might have exasperated Mrs. Turner by crying and that she sought to quiet it by tying a rope or handkerchief about its neck, and also by the use of her hands upon it that she might have gone too far and killed it and that her subsequent actions were for the purpose of hiding the crime. To avoid a disagreement the three who had originally stood for murder compromised rather than have the trial end in a disagreement.

MASKED ROBBERS WERE AT WORK

Five Men Get Over $2000 at a Small Quebec Village.

Montreal, Oct. 22.—Early yesterday morning, five unknown men broke into the Banque Nationale, at the Village of St. Aime, St. Hyacinthe County, blew open the safe and carried off $2,200. There was a wad of ten thousand the day before and this was evidently expected by the safe-crackers.

The manager, Alexander Cadorette, heard them, and ran down stairs and began shooting at the robbers, who returned the fire and hiked. They went to the station, and taking a hand car made off in the direction of St. Hyacinthe.

They seemed to be experts at their work and to be absolutely fearless. A large dog which kept guard at the bank was chloroformed, and then the attack on the safe was made. It required five shots to blow it open, but while some of the party worked the others kept guard. The police are trying to effect their capture. The opinion is expressed at detective headquarters that this gang is the same that has operated so actively throughout the province during the year.

CANADIANS IN TROUBLE IN CUBA

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—A colony of Canadians in Cuba is having an unhappy time according to a report Trade Commissioner Kirkpatrick has made to the Department of Trade and Commerce. He reports that a number of Canadians have settled at a point in Cuba called Ocean Beach, which is being advertised by a company which calls itself Canadian. The results of the settlement there, Commissioner Kirkpatrick says, appear to give a profit to the company only. The Canadians who have settled there are being harassed by two municipalities, Mantua and Guane, each of which claims jurisdiction over the Ocean Beach district. One of the municipality is arresting and imprisoning the settlers for not paying taxes to it. The Canadian community is too poor to struggle with the conflicting authority, and is reported to be in great distress.

BLYTHE'S TRIAL IS ON TO-DAY

Toronto, Oct. 22.—Walter Blythe was again put on trial for the murder of his wife at Agincourt, at the opening of the Criminal Assizes, before Mr. Justice Magee, at 10 o'clock this morning.

T. C. Robinette, K.C., who will conduct the defence, said yesterday that the case will be given to the jury before night, and that the defence will occupy a much shorter time than at the previous hearing, as he intends to call no medical evidence as to insanity, and the evidence of Blythe's little boy, who is now in England with his little sister, will also be missing.

Merry Del Val Poisoned.

Rome, Oct. 22.—Papal Secretary Merry Del Val is recovering yesterday, from the effects, it is stated, of an overdose of an obesity cure, which threw him into violent convulsions Wednesday evening, and caused great excitement at the Vatican. SCOTCH TEACHERS FOR THE WEST

Montreal, Oct. 22.—Dr. John Struthers, secretary of the Scotch Education Department, with headquarters in London, who has been visiting different Canadian centres, said yesterday, prior to his departure for home, that he was first impressed with the splendid liberality of Alberta and Saskatchewan towards their schools, and also with the Macdonald College at St. Anne, Que., which he pronounced the wonder of the generation.

He remarked, however, that a young girl out of the elementary schools and with only three months of a normal course would in the west command the splendid salary of $600 per annum. He thought that when trained teachers of Scotland heard of this, there will be a general movement towards western Canada.

TRY A REVIEW WANT AD.

SPANISH PREMIER AND HIS MINISTERS RESIGN POSITIONS

Moret y Prendergast, Leader of the Opposition, at Once Forms a New Cabinet—Maura Tells King Alfonso That Moret's Refusal to Debate Urgent Questions Forced Him to Leave.

Madrid, Oct. 22.—The Spanish Cabinet, which was formed Jan. 25, 1907, under the Premiership of Antonio Maura, resigned yesterday, as the result of the bitter attacks made against the Government by the former Premier Moret y Prendergast, representing a powerful opposition.

At a conference with King Alfonso, Premier Maura, told the King that in the face of Senor Moret's statement that the Opposition would refuse to discuss even the most urgent measures he had no option but to resign. He asked, however, the members of the majority to support the new Ministry.

Upon receipt of the resignation of the Premier and his Ministers, Moret y Prendergast undertook to form a new Ministry, himself assuming the post of Premier and Minister of the Interior. The new Ministers, who took the oath of office last night, are as follows: Premier and Minister of the Interior, Moret y Prendergast; Minister of Foreign Affairs, Perez Caballero; Minister of Finance, Senor Alvarado; Minister of War, Lieut.-Gen. De Luque; Minister of Marine, Rear-Admiral Concas; Minister of Public Works, Senor Casset; Minister of Public Instruction, Senor Barroso, Minister of Justice, Martinez del Camp.

When the President of the Chamber of Deputies made the announcement of the Cabinet's resignation, it was received with such an ear-splitting uproar, that he was forced to adjourn the sitting.

The defunct Cabinet was conservative and succeeded in power the fall of no less than five Liberal Ministeries in the preceding 18 months. The religious issue had been the root of these dissensions, and the return to power of Senor Maura, leader of the Conservatives, and who had before held the Premiership, was regarded as a sweeping victory for the Clericals, and one likely to arouse a revolutionary spirit. This proved to be the case, the Opposition finally uniting in opposition to the Government's conduct and furtherance of the war in Morocco.

The execution of Ferrer brought matters to a crisis.

INTERESTING LEGAL CASE COMMENCED AT BERLIN

Berlin, Ont., Oct. 22.—Absalom Merner, son of the late Senator Samuel Merner, has begun an action against Senator Valentine Ratz, an ex-M.P., and a Liberal, for $1,400 for services alleged to have been rendered under an agreement made in July, 1908, between his father and Ratz, by which Merner was to resign and create a vacancy in the Senate into which Mr. Ratz could step. In consideration Ratz was to pay the plaintiff's father $1,400 on the first of May, 1909, and $1,000 a year thereafter as long as he or his wife, Mrs. Ellen Merner, lived. Hon. Samuel Merner died on August 11, 1908.

In his defence, Ratz denies that he was a party to any such agreement, and states that Merner's resignation was due to his insolvency. If there were any such agreement, it would be in effect for the sale of an office in the gift of the crown, and void as against public policy. It would also be void under the Ontario statutes, as being the sale of an office concerning the administration of justice. A Senator receives $2,500 a year and it is a life job.

A MATTER OF INTEREST

The following extract is from (Catholic) Truth:—

"To say that God does not care what form of Christianity a man professes is equivalent to saying that God does not care whether man profess what is true or what is false. For the different forms of Christianity contradict one another. The Unitarian teaches that Christ is not God, and the others teach that He is God. The Universalist teaches that there is no hell, and the others teach that there is a hell. One church teaches that the bread of the Lord's supper becomes really and indeed the body of Christ, and another denies that it becomes the body of Christ. One church teaches that the priest has power to forgive sins, and another denies that he has such power. The Catholic Church teaches that the Pope is infallible in ex-Cathedra teaching, and the others deny that the Pope is infallible in such teaching. These are contradictory statements on the most fundamental Christian truths. Two statements that contradict each other cannot be true at the same time. If one be true the other is false. To say that God does not care what form of religion a man professes is saying that God does not care for what is true, and is just as much honored by a falsehood as by the truth. But this is blasphemy. If there be a God, He must, by His very nature, hate a falsehood and a false religion with an infinite hatred. To assert that He loves a falsehood and a false religion just as much as He loves the truth and the true religion, to assert that He is just as much honored by a falsehood and a false religion as He is honored by the truth and His own true religion, is a blasphemy pure and simple. With this before him is any Christian prepared to say one religion is as good as another!"

There is no denying the clearness and the cogency of the above statement. But what becomes of the theory of invincible ignorance? If the same test is applied with respect to it as to the items in the article quoted, then, logically, it must be assumed that God is (as well satisfied to be ignored and not, therefore, to be worshipped at all as to be worshipped in the comprehensive manner outlined by Truth. The same reasoning would seem to apply to all forms of faith, Catholic or Protestant. Therefore, it may be assumed that "he worships best who does best." This is the theory now advancing in the minds of men who contend that theological or ecclesiastical truth is one thing and the gentle spirit of a humble and contrite believer in the great Good, is another, and that only what is "good" in each will avail. Not to touch upon these things is to ignore the prevailing discussion of these subjects in the press generally, both here and abroad. It is the point at issue in the great present-day struggle of the human mind to reach some common ground of agreement and certitude. It goes, of course, without saying, that all such discussion should be devoid of personalities or scorn. It is too great and serious a question for that. Besides, abuse estranges men and violates the spirit of true virtue. With others, we hope the day will come when we can sing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" and recognize in that tie the one great fundamental principle, love, and "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Religion is confessedly not a science, and to attempt to reduce faith to the point of scientific "certainty" is to take away from faith its meaning and merit. For the merit of faith lies in believing without being sure. Not to believe when sure is foolishness. There is no possible merit, therefore, in believing when absolutely certain. It is not even a duty. It is plain, simple, common sense, and applies to the whole of life, whether religious or unreligious. The element of faith, therefore, would seem to be the common ground-work of all religion. Love is atop the fulfilment of faith. It is true we may have love without faith, and faith without love, but when combined they form that basis of religion which is now so strongly appealing to mankind. To many "faithfulness" is the charm of life, and the reward of the afterlife—faithfulness to an ideal. This permits of variation of opinion and similarity of aspiration. It is as it were, the mystic something to which the good turn and from which the evil turn away. To fail in this is what Dante describes as "the great betrayal."

GOV. GIBSON AND SPORT

Lieut.-Governor Gibson has said that young men should practise rifle-shooting, not golf. In other words that young men should practise how to kill their fellowmen rather than the game in which men inflict no physical pain upon each other. But apart from the irreligious and capitalistic turn of the Governor's words, for that is all that can be taken out of them, why should young men not be encouraged in the softer side of life? The age of militarism as a profession, is on the wane. The madness of humanity in that respect is becoming realized. The inconsistency of preaching the gospel of peace and at the same time that of war is manifest, except to the wilfully blind. We believe in sport in its amateur and best sense. It makes healthy, clean men. It ensures a spirit of fairplay and a certain admirable generosity of mind and disposition. To ask us to give up a branch of such sport in order to practise how to kill smacks of the prehistoric ignorance of mankind. It is the primal passion. It also smacks of capitalism, for modern capital depends largely on bullets and bayonets for its power to expropriate its predominant, excessive and, frequently, unearned percentage. The current rate of per cent is just now six. That is the rate which at the moment falls to the lot of humanity in Canada. All over that is "cream," or "velvet" or whatever one likes. At any rate capital rarely is satisfied with the rate allowed to the People. It demands all the way from twice to four times that amount. To keep the taxpayers and toilers obedient to their wishes it is necessary to preserve "order." A rebellion on the part of the people would break up the usurious return secured by these "gentlemen." Hence the cultivation of the killing habit means better returns. It means the securing of "order," of peace, the peace of death. Surely it is time either that such talk should cease or else that we should confess that Christianity is a failure, or would be if preached and practised as announced. Otherwise we should substitute bibles for bullets. But as it is the government evidently thinks that bullets are the more effectual. It is a sad commentary on the stupidity of an absurd age. Some of our public men talk like children.

SAW-OFFS

Ottawa Journal.

The protest in West Peterborough having failed, the protest in North Lanark has been dropped. The charges in both places were charges of corruption at the elections. If there was no evidence to support the charges they should not have been made. If there was evidence, the charges in North Lanark should have been pressed. The despatch conveying the information that the North Lanark petition had been dropped is perhaps unconsciously frank in its announcement that the withdrawal was due to a conference of the chief party executive in Ontario. The result is that both parties in Ontario get off scot free, not a feather singed. The saw-off is foreign to public policy and in the apparent absence of conscience in the party executives, who could do away with the practice themselves if they were so minded, the saw-off should be abolished by law.

The dropping of the petition in North Lanark had no reference or relation to the dropping of the West Peterborough protest. From the Journal's remarks such a mistake might be inferred. There is nothing to prevent further action upon the evidence given in the West Peterborough protest and we understand such action is probable. This fact alone would disprove it. However, as the Journal says the fact that M.P's of both parties are always agreeable to saw-offs is plain. It is angering and disgusting to the electorate. The people expect the leaders of different parties either to put an effectual ban upon such work or to stop prating of purity.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr. W. A. Buchanan, late of the Peterborough Review, is now the Hon. W. A. Buchanan of Alberta. It pays to begin well.

The local option vote required to carry the by-law is three-fifths of the vote polled, not three-fifths of the registered vote.

What excuse can a qualified voter have for not voting either for or against a measure? It is impossible for a man to sit on the fence and yet do his duty.

Trent canal traffic shows a decrease for the six months ending Sept. 10th. For the next six months, however, it is not likely that it will show a decrease.

The name of Father Sears, a heroic missionary on the Labrador coast, seldom, if ever, gets into print. This fact is striking by contrast with the notoriety given Dr. Grenfel of the same mission. An account of Father Sear's labors would make interesting reading. Such incidents as being wrecked on some lonely rock and having his craft crushed by ice floes, are common experiences.—The Catholic Register.

In the Shakespeare articles that appeared in the Times on Saturday and on Monday, Dr. Furnivall 23 years ago thought he had established the site of the Globe Theatre, and a commemorative plaque is to be unveiled on the Furnivall site on Friday. But Dr. Wallace, who is Prof. of English at Nebraska University, Lincoln City, U.S.A., has investigated the documents at the Record Office, and has proved that the theatre was on the north side of Park street. The papers published by Dr. Wallace show that Shakespeare, who had a seventh share of the Blackfriars and a fourteenth of the Globe, drew about £300 from each. This income was £600 from the theatre, but this sum in his day meant three or four times what it means in ours. Incidentally, Dr. Wallace shows that the date of the "Duchess of Malfi" must be changed. It was acted in 1614. It has been thought that 1616 was the date. Much Shakespearian criticism is based on internal evidence and no doubt a discovery of the facts will do much to shatter it.—The British Weekly.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c. per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Fire-Grown Flowers.

Waratah, which is the name of the liner missing for so long, is also the name of the national flower of Australia.

Walking or riding through the Australian bush, the traveler will occasionally come suddenly upon a burnt-out ridge, where a scrub-fire has swept away the undergrowth. Among the charred trees, still standing, tongues of flame seem to lick. These are the waratahs, each stem about 6 feet high, and bearing a single burning-red flower, shaped like a heart, and the size of a man's closed hand.

This flower is difficult to rear in a garden, but some have succeeded in growing plants from seed that has been first roasted.

A Seaside "Find."

Dover, Eng., has been chuckling over a hoax, either played by or on a local newspaper, which published the following paragraph:

"A very fine specimen of a water otter was caught on the slope at the root of the Eastern Arm this week by one of the workmen. It is being kept in a tub near the scene of its capture."

Interested students of nature who proceeded to the scene of the alleged curious capture beside the new National Harbor works discovered the "water otter" to be a rather battered specimen of the family kettle.

Lack of Judgment.

"So Cayuse Charley met his fate at the hands of a posse?"

"Yep," answered Three Fingered Sam.

"What was the trouble?"

"His immejit difficulty was a lack of judgment as to speed. He helped himself to a horse, but didn't pick one that was fast enough to keep ahead of the party as went after him."

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby, who bought over 400 stockers and feeders, reports a ready demand for all good quality steers, from 900 to 1050 lbs., but common light steers are slow sale and hard to cash at prices, if anything, a little lower than last week. Whitney addressed the court for an hour in the girl's behalf in vain.

Save 25 Bars of Soap

Ordinarily you use at least one bar of laundry soap every week—more than fifty bars in a year.

That's twice as many as you need, for Taylor's Borax Soap goes twice as far as any other soap.

Please prove this for yourself—we invite the test. Try one bar of this soap with one bar of any other. See which soap lasts the longest—learn which is the cheapest.

We know what the result will be, for we have made this same test many times over—our soap lasts twice as long.

Taylor's Soap

Don't think that all soaps are alike—there is a wonderful difference in Taylor's Borax Soap. Let us show you some of the ways in which this soap differs from others.

First we use only the purest cocoanut oil from the Isle of Ceylon. Then we boil it doubly long and mix in the borax. While boiling we run thousands of gallons of clean water through the soap which carries away all impurities.

We require twenty-one days to make a single cake. The labor of more than 200 people is needed. We crush every bar under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture. We put every bar through an ageing process equal to standing six months in your pantry. So you don't have to age this soap.

When finished the bar is hard and firm, so it wears much longer. The borax softens the water which also reduces the amount of soap by almost half that ordinarily required.

This pure soap is utterly harmless to the skin—it leaves the hands whiter and softer than ever before. If it is so harmless to the skin, then think how harmless it must be to the clothes.

The Ventriloquist

He Eased Mary's Conscience and Made George Happy

By TEMPLE BAILEY

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

It was just a little village street show—a shabby, gray haired ventriloquist sitting between two blank faced dolls that turned their heads and jerked their wide mouths and cracked stale jokes for the edification of the crowd that had gathered.

When the program was finished the old man passed around some thin pamphlets.

"Only a dime!" he cackled. "Just one dime to learn how to make the dolls talk."

"Only one dime!" echoed the woolly haired doll, which lay limply on top of a small trunk.

"Ten cents," murmured Irish Paddy from within the trunk.

But in spite of much spirited dialogue only five books were sold. Then as the crowd drifted away the little man packed his silent dolls into the trunk, swung it by a strap over his shoulder and tramped down the village street.

He turned in at a little store on the very edge of town. It was a remarkably neat little store, and at the back was a table with a clean white cloth. The old man asked for rolls and milk, which he ate at the table. He also bought a can of sardines, some crackers and cheese to take away with him. When he had paid for these there was no more money in his old pocketbook, but he smiled to himself happily as he ate his lunch and listened to the talk of the fresh faced little woman in charge and of the neighbor who had run in for a moment.

"When are you going to marry George?" the neighbor teased.

The fresh faced woman blushed. "I shall never marry again. Henry was such a good husband."

"You can't live on memories of goodness," said the neighbor bluntly.

"No," the little woman agreed, "but Henry would turn in his grave if I should look at anybody else."

"Huh!" the neighbor sniffed. "I guess you've looked all right."

Again the widow blushed. "I can't help it if George will come here," she said.

"You'd better take him or let him go."

"I know. I believe I could like him, but Henry—oh, Mrs. Perkins, Henry would come back and haunt me if I married George Mills."

"Fiddlesticks!" said the incredulous Mrs. Perkins. "As if I'd let a thing like that come between me and happiness!"

"Well, Henry was jealous, and he used to say, 'Mary, if you ever marry anybody else I'll come and haunt you.'"

"Henry ought to get over such things when he's been in heaven as long as this."

"Do you think so?" the widow questioned wistfully. "It seems as if Henry would always be just Henry even in heaven."

The neighbor nodded. "That's so. Henry was certainly set in his ways."

"You see, that's what I'm afraid of," the little widow stated. "I suppose it is silly, but I always did have a fear of spirits, and Henry knew it."

Back in the dim store the ventriloquist chuckled. But they had forgotten him. And when he finally shambled out they were still talking of Henry and his heaven born possibilities.

Once out in the street the old man studied the signs, and "George Mills, Butcher," was the one toward which he made his way.

Within the shop the counters were bare. At the meat block the butcher himself was slicing bacon.

"Hello," he said as the ventriloquist sidled in. "You are the man who was making the dolls talk?"

"Yes."

"I don't see how you do it." George straightened up. "I couldn't even see you move your lips."

"That's nothing," the other stated.

"Well, it's great," said George.

"Yes," the old man admitted, "but it doesn't line my pockets with gold."

"Kind of precarious?"

"Yes." The old man hesitated, then blurted out, "I wonder if you'd like to have me help you—with a lady, a widow."

"Mrs. Bassett?" The young man's tone was eager.

"Well, her husband's name was Henry." And the ventriloquist repeated the conversation he had heard.

"I always knew Henry was a selfish dog," George flared.

"If you thought it was worth $5 I might help you out," the little man ventured.

"How?"

The ventriloquist outlined his plan, and when he had finished George cried eagerly, "I will give you ten if you will make it go!"

"Did he have a deep voice or a thin one?"

"He had a piping voice," George stated savagely, "like this"—

"Well, I want to do it right." And the ventriloquist picked up his trunk and went on his way.

Late that afternoon George Mills stopped in and asked Mrs. Bassett to take a walk to Marvin's grove.

The widow shook her head pensively. "I can't," she said. "The neighbors are beginning to talk."

"Marry me and shut their mouths," said George ardently.

"Oh, no; I can't marry you, George, and I mustn't go with you any more!"

George looked blank. "Oh, but see here," he said, "you've just got to go tonight."

"I don't see why you are so anxious," she yielded.

"Because—oh, look here, Mary, let it be our last walk if you will!"

Marvin's grove was a place of dim, beautiful greenness, and in its depths a great gray bowlder thrust up a rugged shoulder. It was to this bowlder that George guided Mary Bassett, and they sat down with their backs against the stone.

"Mary," he said, "tell me why you won't marry me."

"If I only knew that Henry wouldn't mind," she said, weeping. "You know how good he was to me, George."

"But surely he would want you to be happy," he said.

Mary sighed. "If I only knew. If I could have some sign."

Behind the bowlder was the faint rustle of dry leaves. It might have been the movement of a rabbit or of a tortoise or of a squirrel seeking nuts. But George knew that it was none of these. He gave a significant cough. Then, as if borne by the breeze from nowhere, came a thin, piping voice:

"Mary!"

The widow clutched at her lover's sleeve. "George," she cried gaspingly, "did you hear that?"

"What?" asked George.

"That voice—Henry's voice."

"Nonsense!" But the young butcher's face was white. There was a silence in which they stood, pale faced, listening.

"Mary, Mary—take him—be happy."

As the words died away Mary gasped, "It is Henry!"

"He is telling you to be happy. Will you, Mary?"

She looked at him with startled brown eyes. "I'm so frightened, George."

He drew her within the circle of his arm. "Nothing can hurt you here. Say 'Yes,' Mary." And as she hesitated came the benediction.

"Bless you!"

And at that Mary yielded, with her head against George's shoulder, but listening for any further remarks from Henry.

None came, and at last her lover led her from the wood. But he stopped by the roadway. "Wait until I go and get my hat," he said, and presently he came back with it.

He had left something in its place, however, and when the woods were still, except for the twilight call of the birds, a little old man stole around the edge of the big gray stone and picked up the crisp greenback.

Then he went back to his hiding place and ate a supper of crackers and cheese and sardines in the company of black faced Sambo and Irish Pat.

When He Went Away.

"I take it," he said to the man who got on the depot car with a suit case, "that you are going to the country."

"I am, sir," was the stiff reply.

"You have everything with you you will need?"

"Of course."

"Shirts, socks and toothbrush?"

"Certainly."

"Nightshirt, toilet soap and handkerchief?"

"Do you think me a child, sir?" was asked.

"Of course not, but men are so absentminded, you see. Did you put in an extra pair of cuffs?"

"I did, sir. You and others may be careless, but I want you to know that I'm not. I have been three days packing this suit case."

"Um. You might need a needle and thread."

"I have them."

"And some buttons."

"They are here."

"But there must have been something forgotten," persisted the other.

"Nothing whatever," was the decided answer.

"For instance, your key. You have it, have you?"

The man sprang up and began feeling in his pockets and looking around and after a moment called out:

"Here—somebody stop this old car! I've left the key to my suit case on the mantel at home!"—Washington Herald.

Why Stanfield's Use Nova Scotia Wool

THE chief reason is because the Stanfields have never found any other wool that makes Underwear so peculiarly suited to Canadians.

The salty, ocean breezes and healthful climate, coupled with the rich grazing, give Nova Scotia wool a quality which is not found anywhere else.

Nova Scotia wool is perfectly blended.

It is soft and smooth, yet staunch and strong. It can be spun like silk and wears almost like steel. Garments, knitted of this fine wool, give the desired warmth and are not heavy or bulky.

It is no exaggeration to say that the Stanfields get the pick of the Nova Scotia wool. The founder of these mills did much to develop the sheep-raising industry throughout the Maritime Provinces. The farmers saved their best wool for him, and continue to send their high grade wool to the Stanfield mills.

Then, too, this wool reaches the mills in the best possible condition. There are no long railroad hauls—no lengthy journeys in the holds of tramp steamers. The wool is shipped direct to Truro as soon as sheared. Experts sort, clean and make it ready at once for its trip of transformation into Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear.

Stanfield's Underwear is made by the only process which takes the shrink out of the wool before the garments are knitted.

The value of this discovery—made by the founder of the Stanfield Mills—is shown by the growth of this business, which is now capitalized at $750,000.00 and employs over 300 operatives.

Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear is made in 3 standard weights, Light (Red Label), Medium (Blue Label) and Heavy (Black Label) and in 17 other weights and qualities to suit the requirements of every man and woman.

The best dealers everywhere handle Stanfield's Underwear. Catalogue showing styles, and samples of fabric, sent free for your address. 2

Cash of the Ancients.

The little brass cash, the Chinese coins, are the lineal descendants, in unbroken order, of the bronze ax of remote Celestial ancestors. From the regular hatchet to the modern coin one can trace a distinct if somewhat broken succession, so that it is impossible to say where the one leaves off and the other begins. Here is how this curious pedigree first worked itself out: In early times, before coin was invented, barter was usually conducted between producer and consumer with metal implements, as it still is in central Africa at the present day. At first the Chinese in that unsophisticated age were content to use real hatchets for this commercial purpose, but after a time, with the profound mercantile instinct of their race, it occurred to some of them that when a man wanted half a hatchet's worth of goods he might as well pay for them with half a hatchet. Still, as it would be a pity to spoil a good working implement by cutting it in two, the worthy Ah Sin ingeniously compromised the matter by making thin hatchets of the usual size and shape, but far too slender for practical usage. By so doing he invented coin, and, what is more, he invented it far earlier than the claimants to that proud distinction, the Lydians, whose electrum staters were first struck in the seventh century B. C.—Cornhill Magazine.

MARGUERITE CLARK IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Oct. 19.—Miss Marguerite Clarke, hitherto a musical comedy star, made her first appearance in the legitimate drama at the Princess theatre last night, under the auspices of the Shuberts, using a comedy by Queen Davis entitled "The Wishing Ring." Miss Clarke is well-known here and her presence was the occasion of a capacity audience. Congratulatory telegrams from all parts of the States were showered upon the popular little comedienne.

In the programme Mr. Davis acknowledges the theme of the play from a short story by Dorothea Deakin, an English writer. At any rate, he has written a charming bit of imagery, which bounds with human interest and sufficient action to stamp "The Wishing Ring" as a success. Perhaps a more suitable actress for the part of "Sally" could not have been found than Miss Clarke. The story is that of an English parson and his daughter. Being in poor circumstances, "Sally" devotes most of her time to attending the sick parishoners. She gathers flowers for them out of the rose gardens of Annesley Chase. During one of these incursions a wealthy young nobleman, who is temporarily living on the estate, catches her. She mistakes him for the gardener. He does not undeceive her. Later the real gardener appears and the complications that ensue are far from conventional. Mr. Davis designates his characters as Sally, "The Goddess Girl" who is an American travelling in England; the Parent, the Unfortunate One, the Punch and Judy Man, and so on. The comedy is in four acts, a full of quaint, childish philosophy with a vein of human sort, which raises it out of the realms of phantasy.

One of the delightful things about the play is the thorough company the Shuberts have elected in support of the new dramatic star. It includes Robert Dempster, as the nobleman; Grace Goodhall, as the American; King Baggett, Cecil DeMille, as the patron, Robert Lee Hall, Katherine Manning, Agnes Everett, Geo. E. Brown, George Girard, Louise Dempsey, Frederick Gibbs, Robert Tansey, Pearl Egan, Gladys Egan and Harry Wilson.

"The Wishing Ring" comes to the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, next Thursday evening, October 28th.

FORTY HOURS' DEVOTION CONCLUDED THIS MORNING

At St. Peter's Cathedral—Especially Large Attendances—Rev. Father Gerling a Very Interesting and Magnetic Preacher

The attendance at the Triduum and Forty Hours devotion at St. Peter's Cathedral this week have been unusually large and most gratifying and encouraging to His Lordship Bishop O'Connor and the rector and staff of the Cathedral. Rev. Father Derling, Redemptorist priest, of Toronto, preached powerful and practical sermons of a most helpful and uplifting character, each one being particularly applicable to the solemn and beautiful occasions. The learned Redemptorist Father is a preacher of marked ability and force, and inspired his listeners by his enthusiasm and magnetism as a speaker.

The Triduum, which is a spiritual preparation for the Forty Hours devotion, was opened on Sunday night by Father Derling and continued from Sunday night to Wednesday morning, when the Forty Hours devotion commenced at 5.30 o'clock mass and continued till this morning. The Forty Hours devotion is in solemn remembrance of the Forty Hours of our Blessed Lord on the Cross at Calvary.

During the week three masses have been held, each morning at 5.30, 7 and 8 o'clock, solemn high mass being celebrated at 8, with a sermon and benediction every evening at 7.30. The 5.30 masses, which were especially for the benefit of those who had to be at their work of the day at an early hour, were especially largely attended, the church being taxed to its accommodation at every mass.

The Blessed Sacrament has been exposed every day throughout the week and the church was thronged with worshippers making a visit to the Blessed Sacrament. Practically every member of the congregation has received the sacraments of Penance and Holy Eucharist.

The Forty Hours devotion was brought to a close this morning with solemn high mass, celebrated by Rev. C. S. Bretherton, of Hastings, with Rev. V. O. McFadden as deacon, and Rev. W. Meagher as sub-deacon. Rev. Fr. O'Brien was master of ceremonies.

The increasingly large congregations throughout the week have by their attendance given the strongest testimony of the high appreciation of the earnest zeal of Rev. Father Derling, and a testimonial to the deep interest in his striking and appealing discourses.

Other than the Cathedral staff the outside priests who assisted Father Derling were Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick, Ennismore; Rev. C. J. Phelan, Lakefield, and Rev. C. S. Bretherton, of Hastings.

FIRE DESTROYED BARN ON SMITH FARM LAST NIGHT

The barn on the farm occupied by Mr. Ed. Fessey, of Smith, was burned to the ground last night, as the result of a lantern exploding. The reflection of the fire on the sky was easily noticeable in the city, and it was thought it was near the outskirts of the city. A call was sent in to the fire brigade from box 59. The brigade answered the summons and went to the northern limits of the city, but, finding the fire was out in the country, did not go to attend to it.

While it was not possible to get a full account of the fire, the Review was informed to-day by one of Mr. Fessey's neighbors that the horses were saved, but practically all the rest of the contents were lost with the barn. At the time of the fire Mr. Fessey was upstairs in the barn, and the lantern exploded underneath, where he had left it standing.

There was insurance, but it is not known whether or not it covered the loss.

SEVERAL MATTERS BEFORE MANUFACTURERS' COMMITTEE

A meeting of the Manufacturer's Committee was held last night, when there were present Ald. Gillespie chairman; Mayor Rush and Aldermen Methera, Hicks and Duffus.

Communications were read from a number of manufacturing concerns enquiring as to Peterborough's advantages for location of industries.

WM. HAMILTON CO.'S REQUEST.

The Wm. Hamilton Company wrote asking the committee's support of a three years' fixed assessment of $10,000. Amongst other reasons advanced in the communication why this growing concern is entitled to a fixed assessment was the fact that they are now employing 94 hands, which number of men they confidently expect will be increased shortly. Their present monthly pay roll is $4,000, while they have orders on hand to the amount of $110,000.

Ald. Hicks moved, seconded by Ald. Methera, that the solicitor be instructed to prepare a by-law in accordance with the (Wm. Hamilton Company's request for submission to the council.—Carried.

OTONABEE POWER COMPANY'S FRANCHISE.

A communication was read from the Otonabee Power Company regarding their request for a twenty years street franchise for conveying power for lighting, heating and power purposes. The communication pointed out that to develop additional power at No. five dam and to use No. four dam for power purposes would entail an expenditure to the company of $250,000. Hence their request for a twenty years' franchise. The company would be pleased to meet a committee of the council and discuss their proposition.

Ald. Hicks moved, seconded by Ald. Methera, that a committee of the council and citizens meet the Otonabee Power Company or their representatives at an early date.—Carried.

PETERBOROUGH L. & P. CO.'S BY-LAW.

Mr. J. H. Lermouth wrote the Peterborough Light and Power Company would pay the expense of submitting the by-law regarding a thirty-year contract, providing it be submitted to the ratepayers by itself.

Nothing definite was arrived at on this question.

The committee then adjourned.

On Wednesday afternoon the wedding was solemnized of Ida Bell, daughter of Isaac Newton Bell, of Smith, and Mr. Fred Bell of the same township. Rev. S. Cruickshanks, of the Bridgenorth Methodist church, was the officiating clergyman. There were no guests other than the families of the bridal couple.

Miss Isabel Westlake was bridesmaid, and Mr. Braden Bell, brother of the bride, was groomsman. Mr. and Mrs. Bell have taken up their residence in Smith.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

TURKEYS TO BE SCARCE AND PRICES MAY BE HIGH

Gobblers Not Likely to be Grabbed Up Very Quickly at To-morrow's Market—Thanksgiving Day Too Early to Suit Farmers.

It will likely be a case of "Don't cut such thick slices of turkey, John" as the family sits down to dinner on Thanksgiving Day. "Remember," the wife will continue, "this one cost a lot of money, and I can't afford to pay such an exorbitant price unless we go easy and make the turkey last for three or four meals. I think the farmers have a lot of nerve asking such prices, and I had a good notion to give the man I bought this one from a piece of my mind. He spoke as if he was doing me a favor in selling the fowl."

Still the farmer is not altogether to blame for the high prices which will be asked for turkeys to-morrow.

Thanksgiving comes so early this year that the visible supply of real fat turkeys now on the market here is very small. The thrifty farmer of course keeps one eye on his turkeys and the other on the holiday date on the calendar, but there is a certain process through which turkeys must go to be fattened, and they haven't had time this year to go through with it.

The prices to-morrow will be determined by the amount of birds on sale. Probably if the price asked is high, other kinds of fowl will be given the preference by the house wife, and this fact may have the desired effect of lowering the price of turkeys. Last year from $17c. to 20c. per pound was asked, and if there should be any decrease in the price to-morrow the buyers may consider themselves very fortunate.

THE LAW RELATING TO CRUELTY TO CRIMINALS

There seems to be a large amount of ignorance as to what the law, regarding cruelty to horses and other animals is, and this letter is sent out in the hope that a better understanding of that law may result and court proceedings prevented. We believe that every man who handles horses, using them for his purpose, knows when he is treating them properly, or in any wrong manner, no matter whether he has seen or has not seen, the law on the subject. Here is the law:—

Criminal Code, Section 512—Everyone is guilty of an offence and liable, on summary conviction before two justices of the peace, to a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars, or to three months' imprisonment with or without hard labor, or both, who (a) wantonly, cruelly or unnecessarily beats, binds, illtreats, abuses, overdrives or tortures any cattle, poultry, dogs, domestic animal or bird, or wild animal or bird in a state of captivity; or (b) while driving any cattle or other animal is, by negligence or ill-usage in the driving thereof, the means whereby any mischief, damage or injury is done by any such cattle or other animal; or (c) in any manner encourages, aids or assists at the fighting or baiting of any bull, bear, badger, cock or other kind of animal, whether of domestic or wild nature. —R.S.C., chapter 172, Sec. 2.

It is passing strange that many a man, good in many ways, is often exceedingly cruel when the care of his animals is concerned. Not long ago I visited a man who was reported to be very cruel to horses, working them when they had bad sores on their shoulders. He said to me: "What am I to do when the usual comes on?". If that man had such sores on his shoulders, or on any portion of his body, what would he do? Lay off, of course. Such a man must know, and if he does not know he must be taught, that when he works an animal in such condition he is breaking the law of the land, and the higher moral obligations which govern even man's relation to the dumb part of creation.

It must be understood that, while the Toronto Humane Society works, first of all, for the well-being of dumb animals within the city of Toronto, no report of any cruelty received from any portion of the province will be allowed to be uninvestigated, if it is at all possible to make that investigation. We desire to be friends with all men, but the man who is cruel, who cannot be reached by advice or warning, will find that there is the power of the law for the protection of these animals.

The Toronto Humane Society is doing a large amount of educational work throughout the province, and any donations to its funds will be thankfully received. All communications should be sent to the undersigned, who will acknowledge the same.

Managing Director.

PETERBOROUGH CURLING CLUB ELECTED OFFICERS

Mr. W. G. Ferguson is the New President—Prospects for Another Successful Season Appear Bright.

There were no empty chairs at the meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club last evening held in the Dominion Bank Chamber. The most important business transacted was the election of the officers for the coming season, Mr. W. G. Ferguson, an old and valued member of the club, was elected president and one of the younger members, Mr. Jas. H. Connal, is the new vice-president, while the offices of secretary-treasurer and assistant, will be in the able hands of last year's officers, Messrs. J. H. Ferguson and H. F. Foote. To Mr. C. N. Brown is assigned the office of Hon. President. The first item of business was the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by the secretary-treasurer. These were adopted as was also the financial statement, which showed a big saving as a result of the new lighting system. Mr. R. M. Waddell gave a short account of the meeting of the Ontario Curling Association, held in Toronto; the particulars of which, as regards the Peterborough association, were given in Wednesday's issue of the Review. One new rule made and one which will be endorsed by all curlers is that in all tankard games there must be two degrees of frost in the rink where the competition is being played. The best way in which to act in regard to the membership was discussed by the meeting was brought to a close by those present signing for a membership for the coming season.

The officers elected were as follows;

Hon. President—Mr. C. N. Brown.
President—Mr. W. G. Ferguson.
Vice-President—Mr. Jas. H. Connal.
Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. J. H. Ferguson.
Assistant Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. H. F. Foote.
Executive Committee—Messrs. J. Fitzgerald, chairman; T. Brightman, Dr. Eastwood, W. M. Laing, T. B. Yeates.
Representatives to Curling Association—Messrs. W. G. Morrow and R. M. Waddell.

WAS THERE A FRAME-UP? IS PUGILISM TRUE SPORT?

Stanley Ketchel has bought a new $6,000 automobile and this has set the fight fans of Frisco wondering as to whether the recent fight was a frame-up or not. The amount Ketchel received as his share of the receipts, it is said, would barely pay his training expenses, and this with the fact that he lost his side bet has started an ugly rumor. The followers of the fighting game cannot see where he got the money to purchase the machine, and their solution of the matter is that the fight was not on the square. This state of affairs may be possible, but not probable. Both men had considerable at stake. To the negro it meant a lot of money and a step nearer to a match with Jeffries while to Ketchel a win over his opponent would have given him the undisputed heavyweight championship, as it is not likely that Jeffries would bother entering the ring again to take the title from him. There is always more or less talk after any big battle, but in this case it would appear that there was nothing to be gained by a frame-up and it would be probably fairer to give them the benefit of the doubt.

Lovers of the fighting game will tell you that it is not brutal sport, but rather a test as to which of the two men is the more scientific in the use of his hands, and the rest of his body, including his brains. They will also tell you that in the pugilistic encounters the injuries received, are not to be compared in seriousness, to those inflicted in other games, particularly football. The question is open to debate and always will be as long as the principals in a ring battle are of the same class as in the recent meeting between Ketchel and Johnson. There is no sport who believes in a square deal will stand by and see a larger and stronger boy thrash a weaker and smaller opponent. Why should this not apply to the ring. The big negro had every necessary advantage over Ketchel, and still thousands paid large sums to see the fight, and it is the same sports who now declare that somebody laid down. Jeffries, himself, and other lesser lights, are reported to have said that Ketchel should not have been matched against Johnson—so there you are.

SPORTING WRITER COMPARES WORK IN WORLD SERIES

Joe Jackson, sporting editor of the Detroit Free Press, a reasonable and rational writer, takes a philosophical view of the situation. He says;

Now that it's all over the impartial observer will be forced to admit that there isn't enough difference between the strength of the two clubs to be worth mentioning, and that it was a toss of the coin which would win the series. Adams was Pittsburg's salvation. Mullin stood between Detroit and two worse defeats. The Tigers hit well, ran the bases intelligently and fielded satisfactorily in the closing game, after a bad start.

After it's all over it's easy to point out where mistakes were made. Had Willett been started in one of the games that Summers pitched, Detroit probably would have won the series. Summers did not bother the Pirates, while they could not hit Willett. The latter, however, was sent into one game after it was lost, and did not get into the other until its ninth inning. Mullin pitched two fine games and Donovan one. Adams was the only Pittsburg pitcher who looked good. Detroit made six runs off Camnitz on Monday, but lost the game, and its chance for the series through Summer's bad start. It scored four runs off Adams at Pittsburg, in Summers second game, and again was beaten.

In this finale the Pirates outplayed the home boys. There was no marked difference in the fielding, though Detroit had two errors against none for the National Leaguers. As a matter of fact, most of Pittsburg's fielding chances were easy, while Detroit, in two innings, second and third, pulled off some pretty stuff that ended prospective scoring chances. But at the bat the pirates put things across on Detroit. They got but two hits more than the home talent, but they got their bingles bunched. Early in the game hitting was not at all necessary, bases on balls doing the business. During the course of the contest ten Pirates were passed and another was hit. That sort of thing is almost enough to decide any game of ball.

They made a game fight, and lost out. That is about all that can be said of the Tiger's work in the series. They were always in it, their work this time being in marked contrast with that of the past two falls. Defeat is a distinct disappointment necessarily, but the team and its supporters have the satisfaction of the knowledge that the series was forced to its limit.

INDOOR BASEBALL LEAGUE TO BE ORGANIZED SHORTLY

Indoor baseball will be started at the Armouries in the very near future. Capt. McWilliams and Lieut. Higgins are in charge of the arrangements and a regimental league will be organized as soon as the rugby football season is over. It is expected that each company will have a team and the bugle band will also have a "seven." The game is played with seven men aside. There are two shortstops, but no outfielders. It is expected that the game will become very popular here this winter.

The shooting gallery at the armouries is now being used steadily and the bowling alleys will soon be completed. Men are working on them at the present time. Indoor tennis will also be introduced among the members of the regiment. Capt. Claxton is in charge of this branch of athletics.

The sports at the armouries will be confined to the military men-

STRONG TEAM TO PLAY IN TORONTO

Local Rugby Team Should Win From T.A.A.C. To-morrow

The team to represent Peterborough in the game with T.A.A.C. at Diamond Park, Toronto, to-morrow, has been picked and the players and officers of the club are optimistic as to the results. The boys will leave on the 7.55 C.P.R. train to-morrow morning and judging from the favorable reports as to the work of the players at practice during the past week the locals should secure the big end of the score.

The team is as follows;

Fullback, Craig; centre, Richardson, right, Corkery; left, Cahill; quarter, Campbell; scrimmage, Clarke, Ecclestone and Thornton; inside wings, Dickson and Turner; middle wings, O'Connor and Lundy; outside wings, Hall and Staunton.

Spares, Hickey and Gibson.

KETCHEL BUYS AN AUTOMOBILE

The Fight Fans are Wondering Where He Got the Coin—Was it a Frame up?

San Francisco, Oct. 20.—The appearance on the streets last night of Stanley Ketchel in a big, brand new $6,000 automobile has given rise to much gossip not complimentary to Ketchel and his manager.

Fight fans who did not like the theatrical finish of the Ketchel-Johnson fight, and who believe that both fighters posed to moving pictures, are now using Ketchel's purchase of a high-priced automobile as proof that there was something crooked about the fight.

It was well known that deducting the five thousand dollar side bet which he lost, Ketchel only received $1,600 from the fight, which would scarcely pay his training expenses. It was also given out he had lost all his ready money on his last ring contest and had lost that. Now, three days after this fight, in which he received so little money, he buys a $6,000 automobile.

Britt will have to do much explaining to remove bad impressions made the Ketchel purchase.

RUGBY

Mail and Empire.—The T.A.A.C. will present a greatly strengthened team for their game with Peterborough at Diamond Park on Saturday. Many of the old stars have turned out again, and Mara, Crooks, Sheriff, McGruchy and McCrimmon will be in line. The Crimson declare that Parkdale have a long way to go yet to win the championship, and, judging from this week's practices, they have a royal chance of turning the tables on the Paddlers when they meet again. Peterborough claim that Parkdale should never have won so easily, and that they, too have yet to be considered. Dr. McPherson is working hard with the easterners, and he claims they will give a good account of themselves. No officials have been agreed upon as yet.

Ross Cobbin is playing centre scrimmage for the School of Science team at Toronto.

The local club is putting in some pretty stiff practice, so as to be in the pink of condition for the game in Peterborough on Thanksgiving Day. Those who think there is nothing doing in rugby locally, should watch the boys at practice. Parnell McHugh, Murdie, F. Carew, etc., are digging in like veterans. Rev. Father Keeley, who learned the fine points of the game at Ottawa University, is coaching the locals, who are expected to pull out a victory in the Electric City.—Lindsay Post.

Each in His Own Tongue

A fire mist and a planet,
  A crystal and a cell,
A jelly-fish and a saurian,
  And a cave, where cave-men dwell,
Then a sense of law and beauty,
  A face turned from the clod—
Some call it evolution,
  And others call it God.

A haze on the fair horizon,
  The infinite, tender sky,
The ripe, rich tint of the corn-fields,
  And the wild geese sailing high;
And all over upland and lowland,
  The sign of the golden-rod—
Some of us call it Autumn,
  And others call it God.

Like tides on a crescent sea-beach,
  When the moon is new and thin,
Into our hearts high yearnings
  Come welling and surging in,—
Come from the mystic ocean,
  Whose rim no foot has trod—
Some of us call it longing,
  And others call it God.

A picket frozen on duty,
  A mother starved for her brood,
Socrates drinking the hemlock,
  And Jesus on the rood;
And millions who, humble and nameless,
  The straight, hard pathway trod—
Some call it consecration,
  And others call it God.

THE SQUARE-JAWED MAN.

He's That Way Because He Was Made to "Chew His Food."

Do you wish your little Freddie or Willie to grow up with a handsome square jaw and an equally square character? Well, then it's up to you to teach him to use his teeth on tough, solid food and to avoid "slops" for Dr. Cole Newton of London holds that the proper development of the lower part of the face depends very largely upon the condition of one's teeth. Of course everyone knows that the strong reliable business man is supposed to be the proud possessor of a jaw which a prize-fighter might envy but up to lately folks had rather imagined that the strong man, or rather, the man of strong chin, was born that way. Apply the scientist's theory, however, and you see that square jaws and determined minds in men are no capricious gifts of nature, but simply the result of proper feeding and a consequently healthy set of teeth.

It need scarcely be added that what is meant by "proper feeding" in this connection is the constant use of hard, solid food that develops the teeth by the steady mastication needed to consume it and thus permits the teeth to develop the jaw. When you have the jaw the rest follows.

It must be understood, however, that the teeth must be looked to in more or less early youth if they are to bring about anything in the nature of a square jaw and all the strength of mind that it implies. A change can hardly be expected once the "teens" are through.

In support of Dr. Newton's theory it may be remarked that ill-fed boys who are taken off the London streets and sent to a training ship emerge with a well-developed jaw—not the least remarkable of the improvements that the curriculum has wrought in their physique; a change that may very well have been brought about by the diet of hard beef that constitutes the chief item.

To those of us who may ourselves be past the age of salvation in this matter the thought that, but for the inconsiderate actions of our parents, we might have been Buelows, or Alexanders the Great, or Napoleons, instead of the quiet fellows we are, may be a little exasperating. We must continue to take heart of grace in the thought that, so far, at least, as appearances and strength of mind and form are concerned, our sons and daughters may be anything that we like to make them.

THE CONTADINO IN ITALY.

His Most Eventful Hours Are Spent at the Market Place.

The typical mountain peasant of Italy, the contadino, goes to market once a week, usually on Monday, during the late spring, summer and fall months. In the winter he is snowbound for weeks at a time. At the market place are spent the most eventful hours of his life. In the open space reserved for this purpose those having fruits, vegetables, poultry, butter, cheese and eggs for sale gather with their baskets in hand. Early in the morning they arrive sometimes on foot and sometimes on horse or burros. Very often one of the women of the family will come, hatless, but with a yellow or green scarf thrown over her shoulders and bearing, in addition to the ordinary produce, a basket of wild strawberries or raspberries for sale.

In Italy there is not a settlement, no matter how small, that does not contain a principal piazza, or open square. On market days this piazza is filled with rough tables covered with cloth. Dry goods, shoes, hats, cooking utensils, trinkets and in fact almost every imaginable necessity or luxury of the contadino are sold at these tables. Here the contadino does his bargaining. To a peasant there would be no pleasure in buying an article at a fixed price. He would not be happy if he could not boast to his friends of the sharp bargains he had made. Even in cities like Florence, many of the shopkeepers have two establishments, one with fixed prices for the foreign custom and that of Italians of the better classes, and another where the contadino may go and argue for half an hour over 3 cents

At times, a large number of cattle are brought to be sold on market days. The cows or oxen are made to show their paces like race horses and are examined minutely by the prospective purchasers. If sellers and buyers, after much talk, finally agree upon a price, they make a contract by shaking hands, all four at the same time. Sometimes three parties to a bargain may be agreed and one not; he therefore refuses to shake hands. The landlord always enters into these business matters to see that they are arranged equally. The contadino is the employe of the owner of the land surrounding his cottage, and pays no rent. He receives half of the proceeds from the grain he raises for the landlord, for the grapes, sheep and goats, and for the butter and cheese he makes.

A Traveling Hotel.

Blenheim Palace, like Strathfieldsaye House, the Duke of Wellington's seat, is held directly from the crown, and every year feudal rent, in the form of a miniature flag, has to be sent to the King. The successive flags are to be seen at Windsor Castle.

The first Duke of Marlborough was the victor of Blenheim, Ramillies, Oudenard, and Malplaquet, and one of the finest soldiers that England has ever had.

In 1895 the present duke married Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, the daughter of the American millionaire. He owns about 19,685 acres, but the $1,500,000 mansion in Mayfair was part of Mr. Vanderbilt's wedding present to his daughter.

About eight years ago the duke and duchess had a large political party from different parts of the country at Blenheim, and for two hundred guests from Yorkshire and the Midlands a special train of nine corridor dining-cars was provided. It measured 170 yards long, and weighed 270 tons. It was quite a traveling hotel.

Presentiment Verified.

A remarkable story of a presentiment and its verification comes from Farnham, England. Mr. H. Harland, of Aldershot, whilst out driving in the adjoining district of Farnborough, was seized with the feeling that something serious had happened to one of his children, who was staying with its grandfather at Farnham. He immediately telephoned to the grandfather, and was informed that nothing had occurred. Mr. Harland, however, was unable to get rid of the impression, and he telephoned to his wife, who cycled off at once to Farnham. On the way she overtook a party who were taking her child to the grandfather's house from Moor Park, where it had fallen into a deep stream and had a narrow escape.

When Men Powdered Their Faces.

The use of powders for the hair and face, which began in the sixteenth century, infected the men. Henry III. had the habit of parading the streets of Paris, his face covered with white and red paste, like a faded coquette, and his hair filled with violet powder and scented with musk. Powders were made of all colors, and the infatuation was such that servant girls were afraid to be seen in public with their hair of the natural color and, not being able to buy that used by their employers, employed sawdust as a substitute.

Drip Coffee For the Nervous.

Cold drip coffee agrees best with nervous, dyspeptic people. It contains little caffeine to cause wakefulness, nervousness and insomnia and has little tannin to stop digestion and cause dyspepsia. Besides, it has all the aroma and flavor of best coffee. It is made by a slow dripping of cold distilled water through a dripper full of the finest powdered coffee. It is made highly concentrated and keeps well in a cold place. A few spoonfuls are put into a cup and boiling water added to suit the taste.—Exchange.

Siamese Beliefs.

One of the strangest beliefs of the Siamese is that they must under no circumstances take life, and the Buddhist priest goes so far as to strain insects out of his water not because he thinks them nasty, but because it would be wrong to kill them. Another is not to bathe after dark lest he should crush insects while drying himself. Yet he does not mind eating meat which others have killed, and he has no objection to taking fish out of the sea and leaving them to die.

C.P.R. MAKING ANOTHER SURVEY THROUGH LINDSAY REGARDING GRAIN ROUTE

Lindsay, Oct. 21.—The route over which the new Canadian Pacific grain route from Midland to the main line through Lindsay, will follow in passing through the town has not been definitely decided upon as yet, by any means. It is stated that several surveys may be made, but two offer the greatest advantages so far.

THE FIRST SURVEY.

The first of these surveys is well known and its probable course through the east ward, crossing the river near Carew's box factory has been published in this paper before. This was one of the first surveys.

A NEW SURVEY.

An alternative course is being surveyed at present and apparently it involves more than the previously mentioned survey. Briefly it course is along the west shore of the Scugog through Carew's mill yard, and also through Horn's property, under the Wellington street bridge, through Beal's larrigan factory, past the town wharf and under the Lindsay street bridge and then through Cullen's old foundry and beside Flavelle's mill; thence through Pumpkin Hollow and crossing the river at the foot of Russell street.

Such a course will necessitate the raising of two bridges so that the tracks may be laid underneath them. This in itself is something of an undertaking. Then the town wharf will be practically done away with and the railway may be called upon to build another wharf elsewhere. A bridge spanning the river at the foot of Russell street will make the fourth bridge across the Scugog inside the town limits.

The benefit to the town is considerable, and to the railway it also means a lot if this route is followed. Excellent switching facilities will be afforded the industries which the railway will come into close contact with, and this means added freight for the road. The additional advantages to the town of having another line in such a position are obvious.

It has also been whispered that the C.P.R. depot may be changed to the foot of Russell street, but there is nothing definite about this. As a matter of fact the probability that the line of route will be as indicated above will be followed is only a possibility.

ANOTHER STATION.

If this course is adopted it will mean that Cullen's foundry will be torn down. It was rumored that a depot might be erected in Shier's block, but this is hardly a possibility. If the location of the depot is to be changed at all it will probably be built close to the junction of the proposed route and the line running from Burketon to Bobcaygeon, viz., near the proposed Russell street bridge.

FIFTY-TWO YEARS AGO FIRST ENGINE PUFFED ITS WAY OUT OF LINDSAY

Lindsay, Oct. 21.—Fifty-two years ago to-day the first railway engine pulled its way out of Lindsay. That was on the old Midland railway, now assimilated with the Grand Trunk, and the first train went to Port Hope. The connecting of this town, even though by one line, with the webs of steel which spanned the country, was an event of some importance to the little town, and the people then did not under-estimate the significance of the occasion.

Mr. Samuel Walker, grocer, on Sussex street, south, was a resident of the town at that time. In fact he was an employee of the railroad, assisting in building the road through Manvers, and he participated in the free excursion given to the railway employees by the company to Port Hope on that day.

A MEMORABLE RIDE

It was a memorable ride, Mr. Walker told a reporter the other day. The engines were small and puny in comparison to the modern monsters of iron and steel. It took a whole day to go to Port Hope with two of these engines pulling the train.

"Why, you could almost have time to pick berries growing beside the track," said Mr. Walker, referring to the lack of speed.

A GRAND RECEPTION

Port Hope received the trainload of Lindsayites royally, a civic reception and grand dinner being held for the benefit of the visitors. A glorious time was spent.

TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES

A retrospective glance along the ensuing years since the first train left Lindsay, since the people of this town first heard the whistle of a locomotive, shows remarkable progress along the lines of railway transportation. Two lines of railway now run into the town, the C.P.R. and the G.T.R., and a glance at a map reveals the town the centre of a perfect net-work of railway lines. Two additional branches will pass through Lindsay in the very near future.

EXCITING RUNAWAY ON GEORGE ST. DID DAMAGE

A bad runaway accident occurred this afternoon shortly after three o'clock, in which the principals received more or less damage. Mr. Walter Preston, of Smith, was driving south on George street with a spirited team of horses, and when near Carey's boot and shoe store a street car coming north frightened the horses. The driver tried to cross the track, thinking he had plenty of time, but the street car hit the waggon and the horses became unmanageable. Two barrels of apples were thrown out on the street and the animals galloped up George street again and around McDonnel street, but when near the Collegiate Institute they were caught. The fender of the street car was broken off and the waggon badly damaged. One of the horses was bruised considerably.

JEWELRY MAKING.

Knowledge of the Arts and Crafts a Modish Accomplishment.

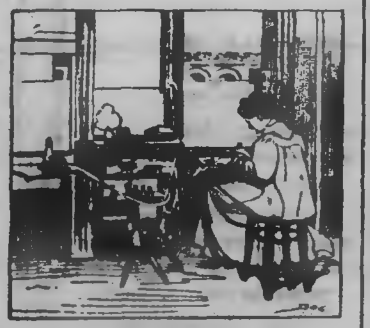
While it is scarcely fair to call the craze for anything so essentially an art as jewelry making a fad, yet as such it appeals to up to date girls most surprisingly. Girls who have never done anything more laborious with their hands than embroider table centers and lingerie underwear are now using the blowpipe and bellows, the hammer and file, with dexterity and skill, and some of the jewelry they turn out shows not only exquisite workmanship, but great originality of design as well.

A branch of the work which is attracting special attention just now is the reconstruction of old jewelry into artistic pendants, brooches, combs and buckles. This has started girls rummaging for old heirlooms, and as a result of the ransacking many quaint and curious pieces set with carbuncles, cameos, carnelians, brilliants and coral have been brought to light and turned over to the girl who is learning the goldsmith's art, to be wrought into decorative ornaments for personal wear.

Handsome jewelry is by far the most popular present for fall brides this year. A favorite gift is a pair of slipper buckles, not only for the bride herself, but for her bridesmaids. Always pretty and effective, when done by hand they are perfectly stunning. One of these sets is composed of dull silver set with Montana sapphires; another, a copper pair, is set with topaz to wear with bronze slippers, and a third is in oxidized silver with white topaz, to go with a black empire gown, a trousseau robe.

Baby pins, veil pins and rings are among the popular smaller articles made by hand, and filets of metal set with topaz, sapphires, turquoise matrix and the like are liked by those who adopt the Grecian style of hair dressing. Watch fobs are a favorite gift for the girl's men friends, and those of copper set with variscites, a pretty green stone, and mounted on tan suede of a heavy quality are very smart.

"Just now the craze," said a woman who makes a business of hand wrought jewelry, "is to have lucky stones made up into talismans, and some curious relics are brought to me for the purpose. Frequently a woman wants to preserve a bit of jewelry as a matter of sentiment, as did one who brought me three wedding rings to be wrought into one that she could keep 'for memory's sake.' Undoubtedly a jeweler would have melted them all up together, for they were all of different carats, but by using three different kinds of solder I combined them without fusing them. I finished the ring with a big oval seal, and it was stunning.



INTERIOR OF CRAFTSWOMAN'S WORKROOM.

"It is a fashion, too, to have belt buckles made out of watch cases. I have made many of them that way and belt buckles from old picture frames, not to mention charming girdles from old fashioned chased and fretwork napkin rings. The ring is cut into perpendicular strips, the strips being fastened together with silver chains in ornamental design.

"Old coins are often joined together for dog collars, and quaint buttons are set in metal bands for filets. I am just now making a pendant of a carnelian, an heirloom in the owner's family, to be set in copper. The rich red of the carnelian and the peculiar tone of the metal will make a most unusual and pleasing combination."

The Knowing Girl.

There is no one so trying to live with as the girl who knows it all. She is as persistent as the mosquito and more hopeless to extinguish.

The knowing girl can give pointers to an expert. She counts herself competent to run the world. Her conceit is as colossal as her obtuseness to snubs.

If she would be content with her knowledge without wishing to enforce it she might not be so unbearable, but the girl who knows it all is never so happy as when thrusting her views on those who do not want them.

The knowing girl is always right, and such is her self esteem that even those who know her to be wrong cannot muster up courage to convince her.

The knowing girl could stir a Quaker to contumacy and set a Trappist to arguing. Even when you know how to be right she goads you to taking opposite sides.

Being incurable, the knowing girl must be endured as circumstances control. If she be one of your family, better treat her to silence in the interest of peace. She will have the last word, however stiff a fight you put up. If an outsider, escape her. Life is too short to spend hours in arguing.

Spare missionary efforts in her behalf and waste not pity on her unpopularity. As a monument of self satisfaction and self appreciation the girl who knows it all is as impregnable to others' opinions as a pyramid to storms.

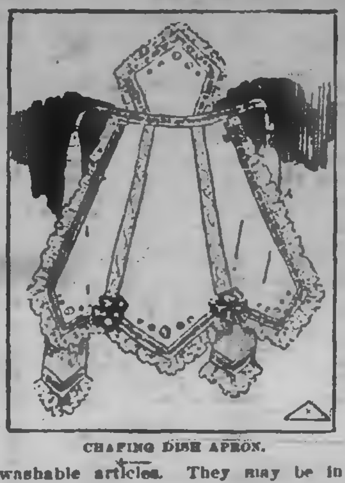
Despondency caused Mrs. Adelard Labbe, of Ottawa, east, aged 87, to drown herself yesterday in the Rideau Canal.

WHEN MAKING A RAREBIT.

The Up to Date Girl Dons Apron All Lace and Frills.

Chafing dish aprons are delightful bits of finery, all lace, sheer muslins and dainty ribbons. A pretty model is illustrated. Fine white batiste gores are joined by strips of valenciennes lace. The apron is edged with lace and beading, through which pink wash ribbon is run. The dots are done in pink silk.

Another dainty affair is of white mull embroidered in a solid and eyelet design, with medallions and edge of cluny lace and light blue ribbon ties. Any number of attractive aprons may be made, using medallions of any kind of lace which is suited to washable articles. They may be in combination with crossbar or dotted muslin and dots and flowers in colored or white embroidery. Usually the embroidery is done with mercerized cotton, though silk is very attractive. Many little fancy aprons are made of wash silk, and, though they are pretty, they lack the crisp daintiness of the lingerie creations.



CHAFING DISH APRON.

Handmade laces enter effectively into the makeup of fancy aprons, and one with princess lace is sketched. Edge and butterfly motifs form the decoration, while openwork dots enhance the delicate effect.

NEEDS GOOD BREAKFAST.

Healthy Persons Require a Substantial First Meal.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, iconoclast in ordinary to the medical profession, as usual, upsets our previous ideas of bodily health in an article in the Woman's Home Companion. Dr. Hutchinson has a faculty for restoring to us our self respect and assuring us that, left alone, we are not such idiots after all. In this particular article, for instance, he points out that the idea of eating little in the summer time is a fallacy. Of breakfast, for instance, he says:

"It is customary to make the first meal of the day lately the lightest and distinctly the plainest and simplest of the three. If there be any deficiency of the appetite, breakfast is the meal at which this is most likely to show itself. But this lack of appetite is in nine cases out of ten clearly traceable to sleeping in an unventilated room or to late hours in foul air the night before or to insufficient exercise the preceding day and is no indication that the body really requires less food at this time. Perfectly healthy men who sleep with their windows open and go to bed at a reasonable hour will tell you that they enjoy their breakfast as well as any other meal of the day, and many even call it their best meal.

"Another popular delusion in regard to the lightness and unimportance of the breakfast is that widespread subterfuge, the 'continental breakfast,' consisting of a cup of coffee and some fruit or a single roll. This is a very pretty breakfast as far as it goes, but it doesn't go far, and the sole basis of its adoption on the continent is that it is only intended as a temporary tide-over until the real breakfast of meat, eggs, fish, with beer or wine, which is taken at about 10 or 11 o'clock, like a very early luncheon. If you haven't got a good appetite for breakfast, make it your business to go and get one, instead of allowing yourself to be blinded by this morbid state of affairs and deciding that all you really need is a cup of coffee and a roll or an orange or a puff of breakfast bran."

To a Speck of Dust.

Avaunt there! Get thee gone! Knowest not there is not room for thee in this my house?

Begone, I say, and come not here again, for thou'rt not wanted here nor any place.

Who mad'st thee, evil looking as thou art, and what's thy purpose to exist at all?

Is it to harry woman's soul and bring her body to the dust? What, art thou e'en the same as me? Canst be? And so the good book says! Yet feel I no affinity. I'll e'en remove thee gently, place thee here, and, means of fire, I'll thee resolve into things elemental and cast thee to the four wild winds of heaven, where thou'lt be at least invisible to me.

Cleaning Ostrich Feathers.

An authority on cleaning gives this information: To bleach white ostrich feathers use peroxide of hydrogen, one-half pint to ten pints of water, to which add three teaspoonfuls of ammonia. The feather should be entirely covered with this solution and allowed to remain in it overnight.

Take out in the morning, and if not thoroughly cleaned the process should be repeated.

Rinse in clear water, and if a bluish tint is desired the feather should be again rinsed in slightly blued water. Hang up in the air to dry and then curl with the blunt edge of a knife.

Fire gutted the Hull Electric Company's power house, and the street cars will be run for a time on Ottawa power.

SANTAL-MIDY Standard remedy for Gleet Gonorrhoea and Runnings IN 48 HOURS. Cures Kidney and Bladder Troubles. MIDY

Match-Making Barber.

The ship's barber of the Orient liner Orsova is a man with a curious record. "I have," he said recently, "made sixty-seven round trips to Australia, and I can hardly recall a voyage upon which some young man, who has met his 'fate' in the ship, has not come to me to buy the ring with which to plight his troth. I do not keep wedding rings in stock, but I often get them made for passengers. A boilerfitter will make a plain gold ring out of an ordinary sovereign as fine as any ring can be bought at a jeweller's shop, and at a cost of only two shillings. Many couples who get engaged on the voyage like to have these rings as a memento and a novelty. I often tell the couples who come to me that I can provide them with everything except a parson. I should say I have helped in at least one hundred engagements."

Gave Napoleon Advice.

Napoleon Bonaparte had no more devoted and disinterested friend than Gaspard Monge, the illustrious academician and founder of L'Ecole Polytechnique. On one occasion he demonstrated his regard by giving the great general some unwelcome advice.

Napoleon announced his intention of reading a paper to the French institute. Monge frankly expressed his disapproval of the plan.

"You have not time to write a good paper, and you cannot afford to write a poor one. The eyes of the world are upon you. Whatever you write will be severely criticized."

Napoleon was astonished and indignant at this plain speaking, but be never wrote the paper.

The Beauty Spot Patch.

The custom of wearing black patches to make the skin seem fairer came from the habit of applying in the sixteenth century pieces of black velvet or other dark stuff to the temples for the headache. A fashionable coquette discovered that these were becoming and brought them into use in France, whence the custom spread into Europe. They were worn not only by women, but by exquisites, though their use was not general among men. They were called mouches and were made round, square, oval and in the shape of stars, hearts, crescents and animals of all sorts, so that a lady's face sometimes had the appearance of a menagerie.

Pickled Tea as Relish.

Pickled tea, "letpetso," is a rare delicacy in Burma and Siam. The leaves are thrown into boiling water and there remain until they become soft, when they are rolled by hand on mats and allowed to cool. They are then rammed down tight into the internode of a bamboo, a stopper is made of guava leaves, and the bamboo is suspended two days, with stopper down, to drain off the water, and then buried in the ground till the letpet has matured, when it is ready for sale and use. If not buried the letput becomes black and spoiled instead of yellowish, as it should be. The letpet is rarely made into a drink, but is eaten, generally with oil and garlic.

Hissing.

The hiss does not always mean disgust and reprobation. In Japan it means delight. A Japanese in greeting one hisses. In West Africa the hiss denotes astonishment. In the New Hebrides they hiss before anything beautiful. The Basutos hiss in sign of cordial agreement. Among the Kabyles of northern Africa the hiss denotes satisfaction. In mills and factories, where the machinery makes so much noise that spoken words cannot be heard, workmen hiss to one another to attract attention.

REV. DR. AKED PLEADS FOR THE STAGE; THE CHURCH AND THEATRES

"The Church is the mother of the Stage. The mystery and morality plays produced under the auspices of the Church in the Middle Ages were the forerunners of the drama of to-day. An actor in the police court means no more than a clergyman in a divorce court. We have both these things in our civilization, I regret to say, but it is unfair to judge a whole class, whether of actors or clergymen, by one sorry specimen."

Who is this talking? you ask. Another person denouncing the Rev. Charles F. Aked, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, who was quoted in a report of a recent sermon as taking a patronizing, pharisaical and altogether unpleasant view of the theatrical profession? Not at all! It's the Rev. Charles F. Aked himself, saying that he didn't say it and setting forth his real views on two interesting professions which are growing closer to each other every year.

Just as a sidelight I will say that walking through West Forty-sixth street last summer I saw this sign on the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church: "Closed for the Season. Will Reopen" (followed by a date), and going down a block and west a block read exactly the same words on a theatre. But whatever the increasingly friendly relations between the church and stage may be, Dr. Aked realizes that the report of his sermon, which he asserts was altogether erroneous, will not conduce to greater cordiality.

PERSONAL FRIENDS OF STAGE.

"Some of the kindest, the best, the most generous people I have ever known are in the theatrical profession. Beerbohm Tree, Ellen Terry, Lewis Waller. I am proud to number among my personal friends," he continued.

"I have met few American actors, but I must say I do not wonder that representative members of the profession showed some anger when they were interviewed on the pharisaical remarks I was supposed to have made."

"For twenty years I have been preaching in a broad, inclusive and catholic gospel. In fact, I have been a storm centre for half a lifetime, and always because I have preached a gospel too broad, too liberal, too catholic for many of my colleagues, or, it may be, many of my critics. I take all that as part of the day's work. And the more narrow-minded, strait-laced, conceited pharisaic people abuse me the more certain I am that I have said something which needed to be said.

"But now I find myself classed with the narrow-minded, the strait-laced, the ignorant and the pharisaical. I am supposed to have become their mouth-piece, and I am condemned by large souled, tolerant people for this narrowness of view and uncharitable speech. I suppose I know myself better than anyone else knows me—at least I know more about my weaknesses and offences than I hope other people do—and I know that I am absolutely incapable of such narrow and insolent pharisaism. I should have to be taken to pieces and made over again before I could be guilty of these insults levelled at a whole profession."

WHAT HE DID SAY.

Here, mindful of the fact that what a man does not think is not an interview—unless he's a politician—I urged Dr. Aked to say what he does think about the church and stage.

"But I did say it in my sermon, which was incorrectly reported," was his reply. "I spoke from an incident in the life of our Lord which records that He treated a member of a despised class as though he were a man of honor, and this person, touched by such treatment from our Lord, rose to the heights of his manhood and became what he was expected to be. This, you see, is the whole drift of 'The Passing of the Third Floor Back,' which had inspired the sermon and I went through the story of the play, showing how men and women, treated as though they were little less than saints and heroes, abandoned their meanness, pettiness and wickedness and tried to live up to that which was expected from them.

"Then I proceeded to denounce the narrow and insolent pharisaism which I am myself now supposed to be exhibiting. I discussed the anti-semitic feeling, taking my illustrations largely from Europe and declaring that if the Jew in the slums of European cities had become what he is popularly supposed to be, the so-called Christian was historically responsible for it.

WAS PLEA FOR LIBERALITY.

"And then, because I had been talking about a play, I instanced the old-time treatment by church-going people of the theatrical profession, and the supercilious airs with which people imagining themselves to be religious had looked down upon actors and actresses, and my words were: 'If Christian people attempt to place a social or moral ban upon actors and actresses they have only themselves to thank if some of that profession live down to the reputation gratuitously accorded them.'

"And the whole drift of that part of the sermon was a plea that men and women should be large enough and liberal enough to get beneath any label of any kind hung round the neck of any human being and find the real man or woman there."

"But don't you know," I asked "that there may be no difference between the life of a pillar of the church and an actor, except that the actor is more honest, more frank and open in what he does?"

"I do not feel competent to pronounce an opinion as to the relative morality of the man of the world and the actor," Dr. Aked replied. "But I loathe with all my soul the pharisaic attitude which would place a social or moral ban on actors and actresses. If professedly Christian people do assume this self-righteous air toward the theatrical profession as though it were without moral sense, they have only themselves to thank if people so despised live down to the reputation which has been ascribed to them. In my sermon I borrowed Macaulay's illustration of red-haired men. If every red-haired man was treated as an outcast, as a thing and as impure, the result would be that some red-haired men would be driven to such lives, but the people who fastened the stigma upon them would be responsible."

STAGE AND ENGLISH LAW.

Here Dr. Aked paused for breath and I made some inane remarks about the general inadvisability of denying anything—even that you murdered your grandmother. But another error went down with his next speech.

"Some one, in criticising the remarks attributed to me," he began, "asked what else could be expected of an Englishman when, according to English law, actors are still classed as 'rogues and vagabonds.' That seems to be a very popular error in this country. These are the facts of the matter. In the days of Elizabeth and prior to that time actors and actresses were required to be licensed. This was to prevent any representations derogatory to the church or State. In a permanent company there was just one license for them all, but strolling players had to have individual licenses. In Elizabeth's time a law was passed—Sec. 30, Elizabeth, Chapter IV.—making players caught without a license subject to the same penalty as rogues and vagabonds. That is, to have their ears bored and to be branded and whipped.

"But in 1744 a new vagrant act was passed removing these severe penalties, and in 1821 still another in which actors were not included, and the absurd classification ceased to exist."

Girls Make Smart Alecks

Brockville Times.

A delegate from Port Hope states that a commercial traveller of Montreal, who represents a first-class grocery firm, was sentenced to a month in jail by the Port Hope magistrate for asking permission to walk home with a lady whom he met coming out of the Postoffice, and who he swore smiled and bowed to him. The magistrate said that the prisoner was evidently unaware of the seriousness of his offence, and declared that mothers and sisters must be protected from this sort of annoyance. The magistrate was right in viewing the situation from that point of view. But there is also this to be said: There are a number of young girls parading the streets of the average town in Ontario at night who give strangers every encouragement to step up to them and enter into conversation with them. They think it smart to "flirt" with total strangers, and if they are escorted by transient strangers they have only themselves to blame for the results. It is just this sort of boldness and forwardness which induces the folly of which the man in Port Hope was found guilty.

George Sopha Was Found Dead in Cobalt--Rumours of Foul Play Unfounded

Havelock, Oct. 21.—On Tuesday morning the body of Mr. George Sopha, formerly of Vansickle's Settlement, Methuen, was found in the north end of Cobalt. He was evidently dead for several hours. Sopha has five or six brothers and one sister, Mrs. Robert Cole, living in Cobalt. Rumors of foul play were apparently unfounded, as no marks or blood appear on the remains. Sopha was aged about 45, and leaves a young widow and two children. Apparently death was due to exposure, following upon an attack of heart trouble.

TRAVELLER MUST SERVE SENTENCE

Port Hope Guide:—The commercial traveller committed from here to the county jail for thirty days, will have to serve his sentence, the petition to the Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, not having the desired effect.

The prisoner has served about ten days and he states that this seems like a year. He feels satisfied that had he secured counsel he would have been given a much lighter penalty, but he was so overcome after being placed in a cell that he forgot. He is very grateful to those who signed the petition, and will thank them personally on his next visit to Port Hope.

Just arrived, fresh Cranberries and Sweet Potatoes Full line of Vegetables, Finnan Haddie, Ciscoe Herring and Oysters fresh on Saturday. S. A. Oke. 3t

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

B. C. PREMIER'S CAMPAIGN WILL GO ON DESPITE RESIGNATIONS

Hon. J. W. Bowser Takes Over the Portfolios of Ministers Tatlow and Fulton Until After Elections—Have no Disagreement Except C.N.R.

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 23.—Premier McBride is expected to make a complete statement about the time he starts on a tour of the province regarding the resignation of his Finance and Land Ministers, Tatlow and Fulton, from the Cabinet. It is not generally believed that the retiring Ministers will take any active part against McBride in the campaign. Tatlow, it has been known for some time, has become somewhat weary of public life.

The fact that Fulton has been solicitor for the C.P.R. at Kamloops, has led to a rumor that the C.P.R. is behind the resignations, but no authority is given for it.

McBride will see the C.N.R. scheme through in its entirety, he says, in spite of the resignations. Hon. J. W. Bowser was sworn in as Minister of Finance and Agriculture and will hold that portfolio in conjunction with that of the Attorney-Generalship until after the elections.

Capt. Tatlow, announcing that he will not be a candidate at the coming elections, yesterday said: "I am in perfect accord with McBride with a single exception, the railway policy. I think the Canadian Northern has been granted too much, and especially should not have been given exemption from taxation. I will probably go to England to reside."

Mr. Fulton said: "The Canadian Northern was coming anyway. They had to build to the coast and aid, even in the Government guarantee of loans, was unnecessary. I have absolutely no other quarrel with the Government."

In Vancouver, the resignations were received by Conservatives with mixed feelings. There is no doubt Bowser and H. H. Watson will be on the Conservative ticket in Vancouver, and Watson will undoubtedly be given a Cabinet position.

SUTHERLAND AND CALVERT GET GOOD APPOINTMENTS

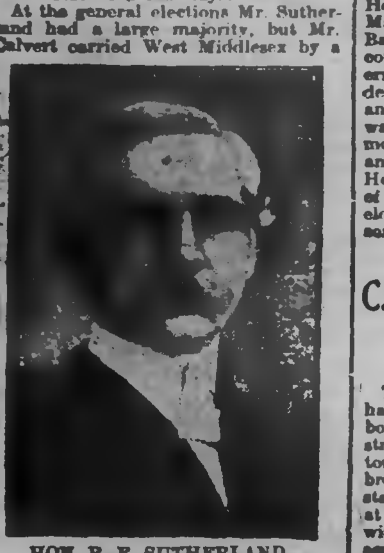
Hon. R. F. Sutherland, ex-Speaker of the Commons, Becomes Justice of Exchequer Division for Ontario, and W. S. Calvert Gets Vacancy on the Transcontinental.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Announcement was made yesterday of the appointment of Hon. R. F. Sutherland, ex-Speaker of the House of Commons, to be justice of the Exchequer Division of th Ontario High Court in succession to Justice Anglin of the Supreme Court.

W. S. Calvert, member for West Middlesex, and chief Liberal whip, has been appointed to the vacancy on the National Transcontinental Railway Commission, caused by the death of Robert Reid.

The writs for the bye-elections, which will be rendered necessary by the appointments, will be issued in the course of a few days.

At the general elections Mr. Sutherland had a large majority, but Mr. Calvert carried West Middlesex by a majority of only twelve, so that the contest in that constituency is liable to be close.



HON. R. F. SUTHERLAND.

There will, it is said here, be a warm contest by three candidates for N. Essex, these being W. J. McKee, James Anderson, formerly of Ayr, and barrister A. F. Healy, formerly of Strathroy.

Hon. Robert Franklin Sutherland, ex-Speaker of the House of Commons, was born at Newmarket, Ont., on April 5, 1859, the son of Donald Sutherland, Scotch, and Jane Boddy, his wife, Irish. He was educated at the public and high schools at Newmarket, the high school at Windsor, and at Toronto and Western Universities. He was married on Sept. 4, 1888, to Matty Bartlet, and was called to the Bar in 1886, and appointed King's counsel in 1898. He has been an alderman of the City of Windsor, president of Windsor St. Andrew's Society, and of the Windsor library board. He was first elected to the House of Commons at the general election of 1900, and was re-elected in 1904 and 1908. He was elected Speaker of the House of Commons Jan. 11, 1905. He is an elder of St. Andrew's Church, Windsor.

C.N.R. IS BUSY AROUND TRENTON

Trenton, Oct. 23.—A sub-contract has been let by the C.N.R. to Dibona and Orlando Bros. for the construction of the section between Trenton and Brighton, and they have brought their plant from Quebec to start work at once. They will begin at the Trenton end. A steel bridge with a swing span will be erected across the Trent river.

MANSLAUGHTER IS NOW OBJECT OF THE BLYTHE DEFENCE

Toronto, Oct. 23.—"If he had that intention to commit murder, it seems very unlikely that he would have chosen that part of her body upon which to deliver his blows."

With such answers as this, drawn from Dr. Gideon Silverthorn and other medical witnesses of the crown, T. C. Robinette, K.C., counsel for Walter Blythe, is building up a mass of evidence that in killing his wife in their little home at Agincourt, committed manslaughter and not murder.

The direction of the evidence as heard at the Assizes yesterday before Judge Magee, has taken a totally different turn than that followed at the previous trial and it is the defence which in cross-examination of the crown's witnesses is directing the trend of the testimony.

At the first trial the whole evidence and comment hinged upon the question of the prisoner's sanity. Yesterday it had to do with the intention, motive and degree of sobriety which will be argued, draws the line between murder and the lesser crime of manslaughter, which Blythe is now willing to admit.

From the medical witnesses the defence has drawn its most pointed advantage. Together with the answer given above, Dr. Silverthorn, who performed the autopsy upon the body of Mrs. Blythe, Mr. Robinette secured in answer to his question the further statement: "It does not seem to me that if a man wanted to kill anyone he would have chosen that part of the body."

The doctor gave it as his opinion that it was these blows which caused the woman's death by shock. There was no other apparent cause.

BUDGET REVISION IS BROUGHT IN

London, Oct. 23.—David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, presented in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the budget estimate as revised by him.

The new figures show a falling off from the original estimates aggregating $10,500,000, of which sum $4,000,000 may be accounted for by the decreased revenue on spirits since the new and higher taxes were levied against them.

To offset these decreases there are estimated increases of $9,250,000 included in which are unexpected windfalls in the shape of death duties totaling $8,500,000 more than was originally expected, and thus saving the Chancellor from the necessity of facing a serious deficit.

To meet a shortage of $1,250,000, Mr. Lloyd-George proposes to take $2,500,000 more out of the sinking fund.

DAMS ON THE OTTAWA RIVER

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Crown Lands of Ontario, and Hon. Jules Allard, Minister of Public Works, Quebec, were in Ottawa yesterday to confer with Hon. Wm. Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, in respect to the plans for the conservation of the waters of the Ottawa river by the building of a series of dams. Where dams are built for the conservation of the water supply, provincial crown lands are liable to be flooded. The Provincial Governments are all equally interested in the scheme, which will mean much for the navigation and power interests along the waterway, and it is not at all likely that the Federal Government will be disposed to grant compensation for crown lands which may be flooded, more particularly as the Dominion Government is bearing the entire cost. It is understood that the conference was satisfactory.

LIBERALS WILL MEET IN JUNE

Toronto, Oct. 23.—At a meeting of a committee of the General Reform Association of Ontario, held yesterday, the arrangements for holding a convention of the Liberal party next June with reference to provincial issues were discussed. It is expected that 3,000 delegates will be present, each of the 106 ridings into which Ontario is divided being entitled to thirty. These delegates are to be selected at meetings held in the ridings called by the local associations.

F. G. Inwood, secretary of the general association, will have charge of the arrangements, and he has been instructed to send circulars to the local associations asking them to hold meetings to discuss important provincial subjects. Peterborough's Thanksgiving

Monday is Canada's Thanksgiving Day. All over the Dominion—from busy city, from town, village and countryside prayers of gratitude will ascend to Divine Providence for the bountifulness of a year that has passed into the past. Canadians have been singularly blessed during the months that have gone their way since last Thanksgiving Day. A fair harvest has been garnered, factory and mill have been busy and much has been added to the nation's material wealth. From every part of the Dominion come reports of prosperity and progress and one cannot help being impressed with the fact that this young country has been favored with "the choicest gifts in store." Canadians will return thanks on Monday with a sense of gratitude in their hearts and permeated with the knowledge that a loving Father is watching over them.

In common with the rest of the country the citizens of Peterborough have much to be thankful for. Prosperity and contentment reign within the borders of this fair city and throughout the county in which it is located. In no other place have the gifts of Providence been more generously bestowed.

WANT SUBSIDY FOR FREIGHT SERVICE

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Richard Cartwright, Hon. William Fielding, and Hon. Wm. Paterson were yesterday morning waited upon by a deputation which urged the Government to grant a subsidy of a quarter of a million dollars for three years in aid of a proposed line of freight steamers to ply to New Zealand and Australian ports from Montreal, Quebec, St. John and Halifax. The company proposes that its vessels will make six trips a year. The Imperial Export Co. of Toronto is behind the project.

It was pointed out that the bulk of Canadian exports to New Zealand and Australia at the present time go via New York. These exports, total four million per annum, and the shipping ring threatens to put up the rates. The company is ready to guarantee a minimum of five thousand tons of freight for each sailing vessel, and in the event of falling below these figures, would not claim the subsidy.

The delegation included R. H. Dana, Toronto; W. McMaster, Montreal, Mr. McNaughton, Sydney, N.S.; C. A. McCool, ex-M.P.; J. Near, Guelph; H. B. Smith, Owen Sound; and N. G. Guthrie, Ottawa.

FORGERIES AT HEAD OF LAKES

Port Arthur, Oct. 23.—Several Port Arthur and Port William business men have been made victims of crude check forgeries this week, cashing checks for various amounts from $15 to $30 drawn on Imperial Bank forms in the name of the Vigars Shear Lumber Co. It is believed that at least a dozen were passed in the two cities. A special rubber stamp to use with signature was manufactured, but it was only a rough imitation of the proper one, and was incorrectly spelled. The forger is described as a young, tall, dark man.

PENSION RESOLUTION REPORTED ILLEGAL

London, Oct. 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is argued here that the G.T.R. differentiation among its shareholders in sending out proxies for Thursday's meeting invalidated the pension resolution, and that steps should be taken to restrain the directors from putting it into effect. The Financial News says that to justify such procedure on the score of economy in the case of a great corporation like the G.T.R., as the vice-president endeavored to do, is little short of absurd.

RUSSELL LOST HIS TEMPER AT THE TRIAL

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 23.—W. Lockhart Russell of Lima, Ohio, mining promoter, and Judge Frances J. Wing, of this city, counsel for the Province of Ontario, nearly came to blows in Commissioner Walther's court yesterday.

Questions as to two reports of the Mining Engineer Magee were fired at Russell in such perplexing number by Wing that the witness was several times at a loss for an answer.

A climax came when Russell, following a question as to why he made a pencil draft of a report, changing the original one sent in by Magee, rose and asked in a loud tone: "What are you trying to do, judge, mix me up? You can't do that, you know."

Wing replied by ordering the witness into his seat, at the same time approaching him. Russell's face flamed, and he continued to talk in a high voice. Attorney Tolles interposed and restored quiet.

The point Wing tried to bring out by cross-examination was that Russell himself had not only written a garbled report on the properties, but that he had sent it to newspapers in Canada and the United States, knowing it to be false.

He is about 30 years of age, tall and fair. His friends here cannot account for his disappearance, as he had no bad habits.

CONVICTS IN NEW YORK WERE FOILED IN PLAN TO ESCAPE

Six Prisoners at Clinton Prison in Dannemora, Armed With One Revolver and Two Sticks of Dynamite, Plan to Shoot the Guards.

Albany, N.Y., Oct. 23.—Armed with a loaded revolver and two sticks of dynamite, half a dozen convicts in Clinton prison at Dannemora, planned to escape from that institution last night by overpowering or killing the prison guards and blowing out a portion of the prison wall with dynamite.

Information concerning the plot reached Warden Cole yesterday through a convict, and the conspirators locked up.

According to the story told Warden Cole, who subsequently reported it to Supt. Collins of the state prison department, one of the gang of plotters, which numbered some of the most desperate characters in the prison, was to saw his way out of his cell last night and, armed with the revolver, compel the guard to unlock the cell doors in which the conspirators were confined. In the event of resistance on the part of the guard, he was to be overpowered, and if necessary, killed, to secure possession of the keys.

Once outside their cells, the convicts were to rush to the prison bathroom, which opens off the prison building proper, and extends beyond the back wall. A key to the bathroom had been made so as to furnish easy access. Gaining entrance to this room, the conspirators were to dynamite the walls and rush out under cover of darkness.

The revolver and dynamite sticks which figured in the plot, were found secreted in the clothing of Marquis Curtis, a Brooklyn convict serving a ten-year sentence for carrying burglars' tools. Curtis had been in the hospital for some time. Those suspected of being implicated include Edward Kelly, a Monroe County murderer, serving a life sentence; John Murphy, known as "Canada Blackie," doing a life term for murder in Schoharie County, and Harry Miller, a safe blower from New York.

The revolver, which was found on Curtis, belonged to W. D. Willets, a prison guard, and had been missing since last November, when it mysteriously disappeared.

Two months ago a gang of convicts were engaged in making a road near the prison. Dynamite was used for blasting, and the two sticks which Curtis was carrying were probably secured at that time.

THE GIRL DIED AFTER OPERATION

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 23.—The inquest into the death of Susan Clark, the Napanee girl who died in the hospital here was resumed last night. The jury found that deceased came to her death from the effects of a criminal operation, performed by some person in Niagara Falls, N.Y., and recommended that, owing to the prevalence of crime of this nature, and the international aspect of this case, that the authorities of both countries adopt, in conjunction, more stringent methods to bring the guilty parties to justice.

No evidence was offered last night. Several Toronto witnesses were notified to be present, but they failed to appear. The absence of an ante-mortem statement by the girl precluded the possibility of any evidence that would convict any person under the laws of the State of New York, where the offence undoubtedly took place.

A MAINSTAY FOR ALL MEN

All Breadwinners Who Find Health Declining Should Take Dr. William's Pink Pills

Thousands of men throughout Canada are suffering to-day from a deplorable failure of strength without knowing that they are the victims of nervous exhaustion. The signs are plain. The sufferer cannot keep his mind on work, passes restless nights, turns against food and cannot digest it, feels exhausted after exertion, while headaches and fits of dizziness often add to his misery. These symptoms denote that the nervous system is weakened and insufficiently nourished. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will promptly cure because they enrich the impure weak blood and thus give new strength and tone to the exhausted nerves. No other medicine can do this so promptly and so surely.

Mr. W. H. Hipson, East Pubnico, N. S., says:—"For a number of years I was troubled with violent headaches. When these spells came on the pain was so severe that I feared I would lose my senses. At the outset these headaches would come on about once a week. I doctored for the trouble and did everything possible to get relief without avail, and as time went on the attacks grew both in frequency and severity. The pain was terrible and with each attack seemed to grow worse. The only relief I could get was from a hot mustard foot bath, and the application of hot water and ammonia to my head; I would then have to be led to bed where I had to remain until the attack passed away. At this time Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were brought to my notice, and while I scarcely hoped they would cure me, I decided to try them. After taking a few boxes I found that the attacks were not so severe, and I joyfully continued taking the Pills until I had used ten boxes when every symptom of the trouble had passed away and I was in better health than I had ever enjoyed before. It is several years since my cure was effected, and as I have not had a headache since I feel that the cure is permanent. This is a plain statement of my case, but no words can tell what my sufferings really were and I believe that but for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I would have been in my grave for I could not have stood the pain much longer and doctors did not do me any good."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Miss Agnes Sproule will speak at the Grand Opera House to-morrow afternoon at 4.15 o'clock on her work in the lumber camps. Miss Edna Pringle will sing. Silver collection.

DAMAGING EVIDENCE

Counsel for Defence Inadvertently Elicited it in the Blythe Case To-day.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—Just before the evidence in the Blythe case was all in at one o'clock this afternoon, counsel for defence inadvertently drew from Constable Hobbs damaging evidence as to Blythe's conduct the day before on which his wife was killed. Mrs. Blythe, he swore, told him on December 11, when he was taking her home after she had run to a neighbor's, that she had marks on her body where he had beaten her before, and that this day he had choked her and got her out of the house. This is the case where the woman's hips were beaten to a jelly by a poker in the husbands hands.

Mrs. Turner will come up for sentence this afternoon.

TAKE OFF THE FAT WHERE IT SHOWS

Most women suffer much humiliation because of great quantities of fat, so located that, no matter how they dress, everybody sees that they are abnormal. This is the day of the slender figure, and fat women are simply not tolerated either in business or social affairs. Women may not know it, but men when they see a fat woman pass them on the street or in public places make all manner of sympathetic remarks about her. They do not mean to be unkind or to seem unmanly, but it is natural for a man to dislike fat on a woman. Where fat shows the most there is where it must be removed, and as quickly as possible. This season's dresses seem to be made for the fat woman's misery and the slender woman's delight. They expose all the charms of woman and her ugliness as well. Exercise and diet will not remove fat. This has been proved. The famous Marmola prescription which has met with such phenomenal success and has so many of our society women as its sponsors, is now being sold in tablet form to meet the demand of the public for this style of treatment. These little tablets go into your system just like food. They stop the stomach and digestive apparatus from producing fat and reduce the fat upon the body at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day. They are harmless and can be carried in your purse and taken even after you have indulged in a hearty meal away from home. They are sold at all drug stores at 75 cents a case, or if you prefer you may write the Marmola Company, Dept. 1193, Detroit, Mich.

SIX TURKS TO WRESTLE GOTCH

Geo. Kennedy's Big Importation of Foreign Wrestlers All Big Men

George Kennedy, the well-known Sohmer Park, Montreal, wrestling promoter, is bringing six Turks to America to see if among the sextette of foreign huskies one of them can defeat the hitherto invincible champion, Frank Gotch. Kennedy's string consists of all big men. Every man of the number is over six feet and all weigh over 220 pounds. They are from the mountains of Albania and Montenegro.

It is not stated whether Gotch is expected to meet them one at a time or take on the whole six at once.

SPORTING TALK

Accompanying the senior Rugby team to Toronto for their game with T.A.A.C. to-day are three students of the Collegiate Institute. Two have been given a place on the line-up while the other will be used in case of accident or any other misfortune with which every sporting organization has to contend with. It is not necessary to mention their names, as everyone interested in the promotion of clean sport in this city know who they are. They are all young —in fact probably the youngest of the team. It is a great honor to both these athletes and also to the educational institution wherein they are being instructed for the battle of life. Those who are sufficiently interested in the welfare of the young to read the reports given monthly by the principal of the school cannot fail to be impressed with the splendid showing the students have made in the past and are still doing. But it is not alone by study that the pupils are making a name for themselves and their school, as on the athletic field they are equally proficient. In all branches of sport their performances are remarkable, and it is to be hoped that the citizens of Peterborough appreciate their efforts.

Up in the hall, butter, eggs and fowl were on sale in large quantities. Butter brought 29c. and eggs 30c. The supply of turkeys was small but the price high, although everything into consideration the demands of the farmers were fair. Turkeys brought from $1.35 to $3; the latter price being asked for 20 lb. gobblers. The quality of the birds was not of the best, but it was a case of take what you can get or go without. Many found the prices of ducks and chickens more in accordance with the contents of their purse and chose these for the Thanksgiving dinner.

CARTERS ASK TO BE ALLOWED TO MAKE INCREASE IN PRICES

Request Laid Over by Police Commissioners—Merchants' Association Makes Application to Have Night Policeman and Night Watchman Supplied With Watchman's Clocks and Dark Lanterns.

The Board of Police Commissioners met yesterday afternoon when there were present his Honor Judge Huycke, his Worship Police Magistrate Dumble and his Worship Mayor Rush.

His Honor Judge Huycke, was elected chairman of the Board.

A letter was read from the Merchants' Association, asking that the night policemen and night watchman employed by the merchants, be supplied with watchman's clocks and dark lanterns. R. G. Kingan president of the association was spokesman for a deputation that appeared in support of the request. Chief Roszel and Fire Chief Howard were also heard.

No action was taken in connection with the request, but it will be carefully considered.

A request from J. P. Francis and other carters asking that the prices they may charge be increased, was laid over. The carters ask to be allowed to charge 50c per hour for singles and 75c per hour for doubles and proportionately for half hours. They state that there is no money in the business under the present tariff.

It was decided to increase the salary of P. C. Newhall from $650 to $700, commencing January 1st, and that of P. C. Mebarry from $600 to $650.

YOUNG MEN'S CLASS WAS ORGANIZED AT MARK ST.

A number of young men gathered at the Mark street Methodist Parsonage last evening and spent a social evening together. The object of the meeting was to organize a young men's Bible class, which would be able to do a greater work in the church and Sunday school. At present the class has for its teacher the pastor, Rev. C. H. Coon, and with such an efficient guiding hand, the young men have decided to become more progressive in the future. Dr. J. E. Middleton was present, and gave those present some valuable pointers with which to work on, and there is every indication that the new class will become a flourishing organisation.

During the evening a number of phonograph selections were given by Mr. J. C. Callander. The officers elected follow:—

President—W. T. Record
Vice-President—Mr. Ward Gamble
Secretary—Mr. Walter Hamblin.
Treasurer—Mr. Horace Coon.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skillful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

RECOMMENDED DOING AWAY WITH THE JURY SYSTEM

Stand Taken by Grand Jury at Toronto--In Capital Cases the Trial Should be by Judge Only.

Toronto, Oct. 22.—The most important recommendation contained in the presentment of the Grand Jury offered to His Lordship Justice Magee immediately before the conclusion of their work and their discharge by His Lordship was as follows;—

"We recommend that consideration be given to the abolition of trials by jury in cases where capital punishment might apply, in order that the evidence may be weighed by those most capable of judging of the guilt or otherwise of the accused, thus furthering the proper ends of justice."

Referring to the presentment His Lordship said;—

"For your suggestion with regard to trial by jury in capital cases, I cannot offer much hope that it will be carried out. Trial by jury is a very old established condition and is a bulwark of our safety.

"I think it would be a great mistake to do away with this old customary usage owing to a flash of thought of opinion. As far as I am concerned, I prefer that a man be tried by a jury. To me, trial by jury is more satisfactory than a trial by judges. I will, however, have your suggestion forwarded to the Minister of Justice as usual."

Among other things the presentment included a recommendation that, "in cases of assaults on women, the guilty party, in addition to a term in prison, be subjected to the application of the lash, in such a measure as the judge may consider the heinousness of the crime deserves."

With regard to this, Mr. Justice Magee felt that, while there are many people to whom we can appeal only through the skin, there are also many cases in which the degradation of the person suffering the lash is so great that he finds it almost impossible to regain a social standing.

THE MISSIONER WHO COMES TO ST. PAUL'S

Rev. R. G. MacBeth, M.A., was born in the historical Highland parish of Kildonan in Manitoba, his father being one of the famous Selkirk settlers. Mr. MacBeth is a cousin of the Primate of all Canada, Archbishop Matheson, of Winnipeg, who who was also born in the Selkirk Colony. Mr. MacBeth was educated in Manitoba College and University, taking two medals during his course. On graduation in Arts, he entered on the study of law, taking the full course and practising as a barrister and solicitor. During his law student days Mr. MacBeth volunteered as a private for service in the second Riel Rebellion, and was promoted to the rank of lieutenant. Mr. MacBeth then saw active service, was under fire, and has the medal and Saskatchewan clasp for actions. An affliction in the home again turned Mr. MacBeth's mind to the ministry, he having already thought much upon it, and giving up the law practise, he entered on the study of theology at Princeton, New Jersey, finishing in Winnipeg. After service in the prairie mission fields, he was called to Augustine church, Winnipeg, where he was for eight years when he accepted a call to First Presbyterian Church in Vancouver. He remained there for over four years, when partially owing to the health of some of the family with which the moist winters did not agree, he accepted a call from the strong congregation at Paris. Marked advance has been made there, and recently the church, which seats one thousand two hundred, has been re-opened after extensive improvements. Mr. MacBeth's training as a lawyer and soldier, as well as minister, and his residence in different parts of the country, as well as his active participation in the life of the communities where he has resided, has given him much experience and a wide knowledge of men and things. He is the author of books on "The Selkirk Settlers in Real Life," with introduction by Lord Strathcona, who was an intimate friend of his father's. Another volume by him, "The Making of the Canadian West" has gone through several editions, and is the only book written by one born in the country. Mr. MacBeth is also a writer of many magazines and other articles on devotional and other subjects. He has lectured on many topics and has addressed Canadian Clubs and other gatherings in many parts of Canada.

DEPRIVED OF STAR SUPPORT

It is said that the loss of Miss Marguerite Clark is severely felt by De Wolf Hopper, who is now starring in "A Matinee Idol." For years the dainty comedienne was the star with Hopper and shared the honors equally with him and assisted most materially in all his productions. The Shuberts recognizing her outstanding ability, however, decided to star Miss Clark in "The Wishing Ring," a play written especially for her by Owen Davis, one of the ablest and most widely known American playwrights and librettists.

WEDDING BELLS

THORNS—KING

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the parsonage, Norwood, on Oct. 14th, when Chole Jane, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noah King, of Belmont, was united in marriage to Mr. James Thorns of Belmont, the nuptial knot being tied by Rev. W. J. Tucker.

The bride was gowned in a beautiful pale blue silk, while Miss Ethel Ashby, the bridesmaid, was attired in soft white silk. The groom was supported by Mr. Ezra King, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony a reception was held at "Lakeview," the home of the bride's parents, when about sixty guests partook of a most dainty supper. The young couple left on the midnight train for a trip to Ottawa and Montreal, and on their return will reside near Marmora.

The many friends of the bride and groom join in wishing them a long and happy life.

LAKE—CARR

A quiet wedding took place at seven o'clock this morning at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carr, 463 Gilmour street, when their daughter, Agnes Irene, was united in marriage to Mr James Russel Lake. Rev. H J. Keith, officiated at the ceremony, and the contracting parties were unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Lake left for a trip to Toronto and other western points and and on their return to the city will reside on Perry street.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

CASE OF BRONCHIAL CATARRH PROMPTLY RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA.

MR. J. C. HERVUS PELLETIE

Bronchial Catarrh Unless Stopped Often Spreads To The Lungs, Causing Catarrh of Lungs.

J. C. Hervus Pelletier, Dep't de l'Agric ure, Ottawa, Ont., writes:

"The Peruna is particularly efficaci in the cure of catarrhal affections of the lungs and bronchial tube and it is in consequence the remedy most appreciated here in Ottawa. ix bottles cured me this winter of bronchitis. I am completely res ed and I owe thanks to the Peruna. I have recommended this remed to a large number of my friends afflicted with the same trouble, and hey have verified my good opinion of this valuable remedy."

CATARRH of the bronchial tubes often very quickly becomes catarrh of the lungs. Catarrh of the lungs makes the patient an easy victim to the germs that cause tuberculosis. Sound lungs protect themselves against disease germs.

Peruna has acquired a lasting reputation in relieving catarrh of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. This should prevent the tubercular bacilli from gaining any foothold in the lungs, and saves the patient from the inevitable result.

Mr. W liffe R. Smith, Editor of The Potlatc erald, formerly Principal of the Sc at Cameron, Idaho, writes:

"For e time I suffered with catarrh o throat and bronchial tubes. I tried y remedies, but could find nothin t would give me relief.

"Fin tried Peruna. Three bottles cured m ade me sound and well. I believe ill do as much for others as it di me. I shall be glad to recomme it to those suffering with catarrh."

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT I THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Fu hed by the Peterboroug Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arr ged for its Publication.

SPLENDID SPEAKERS FOR PETERBORO'

One of the features of the local option campaign now under way in Peterborough is to be a series of meetings which will be addressed by well known men, not only from the city, but from other points in Canada and the U.S. as well. It is anticipated that these meetings will be addressed by some of the best known temperance speakers on the continent, including numerous men who have been through local option contests in other sections and who will be able to speak from experience as to the success of local prohibition. A special committee is in charge of the arrangements for these meetings. This committee is doing splendid work.

COME OUT IN THE OPEN

The temperance workers in Peterborough want this question of local option to be discussed on its merits. If any ratepayers have any objection to local option, they are invited to make their views known. If the saloon-interests believe that local option is going to be a bad thing for this city, they are urged to bring forward their best speakers in order that the issue may the discussed on its merits.

It is believed that the ratepayers of Peterborough are intelligent enough to recognize that if this question is not debated during the next few weeks, when there will be plenty of time for the arguments of both sides to be discussed, and if necessary sifted to the bottom, that arguments brought up in the dying hours of the campaign will be open to a good deal of suspicion. Like all other public matters relating to the welfare of the city this is one that should be discussed on its merits. The temperance workers desire to discuss it. A side which cannot be defended on the public platform and through the press must be very weak.

LOCAL OPTION CAN BE ENFORCED

Additional evidence of the fact that it will be possible to enforce prohibition in Peterborough after it is carried at the polls is furnished by the following letter received by the Peterborough temperance workers from John Fleet, Acting City Marshall for the city of Fall River, Mass. Fall River is a larger city than Peterborough. If it is possible to enforce prohibition in large cities in the States, we should be able to enforce it in Peterborough. When people tell us that we cannot enforce prohibition in Peterborough, they are si ply telling us we cannot enforce ou aws in Canada as well as the peop n the United States are able to en ce theirs. Do you care to admit th The following is the letter refer d to:

"In rep to your letter, I will state that hibition is enforced in Fall River far we have found no difficu ty to peak of in enforcing the law. mer liquor dealers are strictly out business. We have got no open ba rooms where liquor is sold. We ha no kitchens or other places where liquor is sold. In case an attempt made to sell liquor our officers quick place them under arrest and en brought before the court they sentenced."

"We find at express companies and railroad arry liquor into our city as it is d to be according to law. We fi hat the express companies do car liquor coming from other states this city and distribute it to th nsignee according to law. Such wo we cannot stop, as the interstate ws or interstate commerce, if you ll, is such that liquor can be brough into cities and towns of this Commo ealth without interruption by rai oad and general express companies. We have, at the present, several cases pending before our District Court relative to express companies; while charges are made against them for unlawfully transporting intoxicating liquors for hire and reward, for delivery in Fall River, Fall River being a city in which licenses of the first five classes to sell intoxicating liquors were not granted. These will be taken up and tried in the course of the next ten days."

Signed,

JOHN FLEET,
Acting City Marshall.

DO NOT BE FOOLED

The liquor interests in Peterborough are trying to work a rather sharp game. There are a number of citizens who, while not in favor of the liquor traffic, do not like to vote for local option because they have a few friends or acquaintances in the business. These men, however, would not like to see the local option law defeated.

Friends of the liquor interests are said to be approaching these men and pointing out to them that, as the local option law will be carried on a three-fifths majority of the votes cast, it will not, they claim, affect the passing of the law if these people decline to vote. When they cannot get these citizens to promise to vote against local option, they try to get them to promise to stay away from the polls. Of course every person who refuses to vote in this way thereby helps the liquor interests and the representatives of the liquor interests are sharp enough to know it.

A vote that should be cast for local option but stays at home, is a vote lost for local option, and to all intents and purposes is a vote gained by the liquor interests. The citizens of Peterborough, therefore, are urged not to give way to these arguments. Come out and help the cause. The more votes that are cast for local option, the greater will be the victory, and the easier it will be to enforce the law after it is carried.

PETERBORO' AROUSED

The splendid audiences that greeted Dr. Crafts, of Washington, to hear his four addresses in Peterborough last Sunday, show how interested the people of Peterborough are in the local option campaign, now under way. The fact that the opera house was filled at the afternoon meeting, and people found it necessary to stand, shows the interest that is being taken in the question.

Dr. Crafts made many good points. One of them was in reference to people who claim that after local option is carried in Peterborough it will still be possible to secure some liquor, and, therefore, people should not vote for the by-law. They claim that dives will be created where liquor can be secured on the sly.

Dr. Crafts pointed out in reply that we have laws against murder, against stealing, and many other crimes, and yet these laws are broken to some extent. He pointed out that just as these laws are broken, it is probable that a prohibitory liquor law would be broken. As all laws, however, help to prevent crime, so a prohibitory law in Peterborough would restrict the sale of liquor and practically stop it altogether.

Present Laws Broken

In addition to this we might point out that our present liquor laws are being broken constantly. Some of our local hotelkeepers have been fined during this year for selling liquor during prohibited hours, to minors, to people on the black list, and for other evasions of the law. Because the liquor law is now being broken in Peterborough and because liquor is sometimes bought on the sly during prohibited hours, should we say that we should not have these laws. Everybody knows that these laws make the securing of liquor difficult during prohibited hours. They have been proved to be beneficial. So would a local option law be. Vote for it.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

It is reported that the representatives of the liquor interests are storing up a lot of arguments against local option, for use during the last few days of the campaign. It would seem as if they must be afraid that these arguments will not stand investigation or they would bring them out now, in order that the public may have time to look into them.

The mass meeting in the Grand Opera House to-morrow afternoon at 4.15 will be addressed by a woman who has had a wide experience and who will be able to give some interesting information concerning the disastrous effect liquor has on working men, particularly those employed in the lumber shanties. All are welcome, both men and women.

Peterborough is the only centre in which liquor can be secured for many miles around the city. The farmers around Peterborough have closed the saloons in nearly all the adjoining townships. Peterborough is the distributing point now for these townships. When we secure local option in Peterborough we will have driven liquor out of practically its last stronghold in the county. It will be a famous victory. Work for it.

Friends desiring to assist will find the treasurer at 396 Water street.

THE WISE MOTHER DOCTORS BABY WISELY

Nowadays wise mothers do not dose their children with nauseous, griping castor-oil or purgatives, nor do they give them poisonous opiates in the form of soothing medicines. Baby's Own Tablets take the place of these harsh and dangerous drugs, and the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that the Tablets are absolutely safe, and will cure all stomach and bowel troubles, destroy worms, break up colds and make teething easy. Mrs. Thos. Croft, Binscarth, Man., says—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for constipation and teething troubles, and do not know of any other medicine that can equal them. They are always satisfactory in their results." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

IT MIGHT BE WORSE

I'm getting eight per week just now,
I'm thankful that it isn't less,
For I am hardly worth that much—
That's something you would easily guess.

My boarding house is very bad,
I'm thankful that it isn't worse;
The steak is often tough as wire,
And frequently it makes me curse.

My overcoat is on the rough,
But still it's better far than none,
It matches well my other clothes—
I've nothing new beneath the sun.

My dad fell down and broke his leg—
I'm thankful that it's not his head.
The doctor bills are coming high,
But then, poor dad might have been dead.

Another fellow's got my girl—
I'm thankful that I see in sight
Another one, who's just as good—
I'd call on her to-morrow night.

I'm going to end this thankful rhyme,
And you'll be thankful too, no doubt,
If verses worse than these you've seen,
Just start right in and kick me out.

Installment Plan Dressing.

"Clothes for the year furnished on the installment plan" is the novel offer about to be made, it is said, to the women customers of a smart London house. The plan of the shopkeeper is to agree with a client upon a sum which shall cover that client's expenditure for dress for the next twelve months. The customer binds herself to buy everything from that shop, and the shop undertakes to supply her with what she requires. The payments are to be made monthly in advance. This plan was evolved not out of a desire to save the women customers trouble, but because the firm had begun to despair of ever getting them to pay their bills.

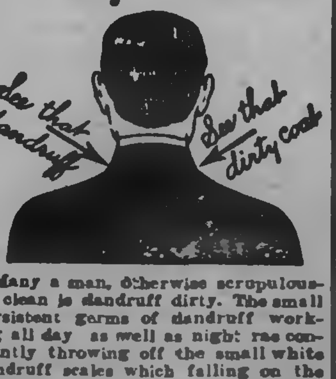
A Great Horse.

Jumbo, a horse owned by a Savin Rock shipbuilder, is said to be the largest horse in Connecticut and it would no doubt be safe to say the largest in New England. He is nearly seven feet high and weighs 1,700 pounds. He is a most powerful animal and has dragged with apparent ease a two ton load. With the children he is a great favorite. It costs a good deal to feed him, as he has the almost incredible quantity of eight pecks of oats at each meal and makes away with over 200 pounds of hay every week. His shoes are of unusual size and weigh four pounds each.—Boston Budget.

The Price of Peace.

The announcement that France is going to spend three milliards of francs for new ships of war—that is to say, for peace—reminds us how prices have gone up since 1871. In that year France bought peace of Bismarck for one milliard. And a milliard, furthermore, was deemed in that day a fairly stiff figure—the thrifty French more than hinted that Bismarck had driven a sharp bargain, whereas on the occasion of the present purchase the nation is reported as quite in a glow of delight.—Puck.

A Filthy Condition



Many a man, otherwise scrupulously clean is dandruff dirty. The small persistent germs of dandruff working all day as well as night are constantly throwing off the small white dandruff scales which falling on the shoulders of a coat gives it a filthy appearance, which is repulsive to the friends of the victim.

Many men allow this condition to exist because they believe there is no cure for dandruff; they have tried various so-called cures with unsatisfactory results and naturally condemn all.

The famous prescription called Parisian Sage now put up in America, but only by the Giroux Mfg. Co., of Buffalo, N.Y., It is for sale in Peterborough by Wm. Madill druggist, who guarantees it to cure dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed to do more; it will make short, thin hair, grow long, lustrous and luxuriant; it will stop hair from falling out; it will cure all diseases of the scalp. W. Madill guarantees it —every bottle of it. The price is only 50 cents and if you want to stop the filthy dandruff flakes from lodging on your coat and disgusting your friends, get a bottle at once.

IN RURAL BAVARIA.

Where Every Man Is Taught the Essentials of Up-to-date Farming.

"In order to promote agricultural interest the kingdom of Bavaria has established agricultural schools in almost every town," says a prominent resident of Munich, Germany, who is visiting in this country.

"These schools are in charge of teachers who, in addition to an academic education must be versed in botany, geology, chemistry, physics, zoology and natural history. At a time when nothing is doing in the fields, from November to March, these schools are open, and the peasants for a nominal fee can attend courses on cultivation and fertilization of the soil, the proper rotation of crops on the same land, the best sources for good seeds, irrigation and the raising of stock. They are made acquainted with improvements and new inventions in agricultural implements, the adoption of which can be recommended. They are taught the rudiments of bookkeeping and other commercial knowledge essential for the up-to-date farmer.

"In the spring after these farmers have returned to their work in the fields it becomes the duty of the teachers who instructed them during the winter to travel from county to county and to act as advisers to the farmers. Much good results from the travels of these teachers. By practical suggestion to the farmers they induce them to make valuable improvements in the cultivation of their farms.

"The wandering teachers helps to form co-operative clubs for the joint interests of a number of farmers in one district. From time to time the teacher has to lecture in these clubs on any subject which might prove of interest to the members. These visits and lectures to the different districts are entirely free to the people, since the state assumes all expenses. There is probably no other country in the world in which so much is done by the state for its rural inhabitants as is the case in Bavaria. Other German states have these agricultural schools, but their teachers are not sent in such a practical way direct to the places where they can do the most good, as is done in Bavaria. The results of this commendable care have been very gratifying."

SICK HEADACHE CURES.

How to Relieve This Most Distressing Form of Illness.

Sick headache, while not dangerous, is one of the most disagreeable forms of illness. Some women are subject to it at such frequent intervals that they are incapacitated for several days at a time.

Unless the headache is known to come from some functional disorder it can generally be traced to impaired digestion or a sluggish liver. These must be treated in the interims of the headaches, as at the time nothing but alleviating remedies are possible.

A treatment that is often successful is to abstain from red meats for a time and to be careful about taking foods that ferment easily. One man who had doctored for years for sick headaches was cured by his wife seeing to it that he drank a cup of hot water with a half teaspoonful of salt in it as soon as he arose in the morning.

A half lemon in a glass of cold water taken night and morning is another remedy that has proved helpful to many.

During the attack rest and quiet are imperative. Lie down in a darkened room, drink quantities of hot water and apply either a hot water bottle or an ice bag to the temples and the base of the brain.

Cloths rung out of hot witch hazel often bring quick relief. Headache cologne if rubbed on the temples in time acts as a preventive, while some sufferers are helped by taking a cathartic at the first symptom.

In severe cases five or ten minutes' treatment with an electric battery is invaluable. This is better than massage, as the pressure is sometimes too strong when the headache is bad.

In the first stages of sick headache it can often be averted by taking abdominal and neck exercises and by putting a mustard plaster over the stomach.

A BUILDING FEAT.

House Completed, Furnished and Occupied in Twelve Hours.

In the Wide World Magazine Harold J. Shepstone describes a most remarkable building feat which was recently accomplished in St. Louis—viz. the complete erection and occupation of a house in a single day. It was the bride's ardently expressed wish to have a home to go to that caused the builder to attempt it, and he succeeded. Twelve hours before the evening meal was served the plot of land where the house was to stand showed not the slightest sign of human activity. Ragweed and goldenrod greeted the sunshine, and the scene was absolutely innocent of a stick of timber, a piece of stone, brick or other material. But when the 7 o'clock whistles blew on the morning in question, however, there was a concerted movement of men and wagons toward the lot.

In the erection of the dwelling 75,000 nails were used, 11,000 feet of timber cut and fitted, 12,000 shingles put on the roof, 6,000 laths used to make the walls, 375 yards of plaster spread and several gallons of paint used.

Twenty-five carpenters were employed on the job, of whom eighteen worked ten hours and the remaining seven eleven hours each. Twelve lathers and twelve plasterers did the lathing and plastering in three hours. Two men built the chimney in four hours forty-five minutes. Four men put the roof on in three hours, while two men did the plumbing and gasfitting in five hours. One man did the electric wiring in one and a half hours, while four men did the necessary painting in five hours.

The builders had hardly cleared away before a large furniture van arrived, together with a caterer's cart. The furniture van contained the owner's goods, and willing hands quickly transferred them to their rightful places in the record built home. In just under an hour the newly married couple and their friends, who had meanwhile come upon the scene, sat down to a sumptuous dinner. Twelve hours previously, as already stated, not a brick or a stone was to be seen on the site of the dwelling.

Let Me Tell You Something

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is to blame for her own wretched condition.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in Canada and the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what these women say:

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. Emma Chatel, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Erie, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles, and at last was almost helpless. I tried three doctors but they did me no good. My sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has made me well and strong. I hope all suffering women will just give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, for it is worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. Endlich, R. F. D. 7, Erie Pa.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

☛ Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Apples at $10 Apiece.

Never in the history of fruit growing has ten dollars been paid for a single specimen apple of a standard variety. Four or five dollars a barrel is considered a good price for a barrel of Spys. Yet when you figure up the cost of a barrel of Spys at ten dollars each the price will be over $2,000. This price, which will be paid right here in Ontario is quite unusual. In Oregon they sometimes receive as high as ten dollars a box for Winter Bananna apples, but even that price only figures out at thirty dollars a barrel. Even the choicest Canadian apples that are exported to Great Britain, and sometimes sold wholesale at three to four dollars a barrel, sell retail sometimes at five cents each in the fruit shops in London this would make an average of just over ten dollars a barrel. The fact that ten dollars is being offered for the best single specimen apple of Baldwin, Greening, Spy, King or McIntosh, and that five dollars is offered for the second best of the same varieties, or seventy-five dollars in all for the lot of ten apples is making the fruit growers in Ontario very keen over the Exhibition.

This amount of money is being offered by the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition, Toronto, where the apples will be on exhibition from Nov. 9th to 13th, 1909. Fruit growers who have some extra good specimens of any of these varieties should send their apples for competition. There are rules and conditions to govern the competition, which will be furnished by the Secretary, P. W. Hodgetts, Toronto. Last year this Exhibition was visited by persons from distant parts of Canada and the United States, and even England sent her expert apple men to see the largest Horticultural Exhibition ever held in Canada.

In addition to apples there will be one of the finest displays of prize fruits, vegetables and flowers ever shown, making a splendid advertisement of Canada's products.

From present indications this year's Exhibition will in many ways eclipse last year's splendid success. The railway companies, recognizing the importance of the Exhibition, have decided to give special rates. Local railway agents can supply the information.

If any ratepayers have any objection to local option, they are invited to make their views known. If the saloon interests believe that local option is going to be a bad thing for this city, they are urged to bring forward their best speakers in order that the issue may be discussed on its merits.

It is believed that the ratepayers of Peterborough are intelligent enough to recognize that if this question is not debated during the next few weeks, when there will be plenty of time for the arguments of both sides to be discussed, and if necessary sifted to the bottom, that arguments brought up in the dying hours of the campaign will be open to a good deal of suspicion. Like all other public matters relating to the welfare of the city this is one that should be discussed on its merits. The temperance workers desire to discuss it. A side which cannot be defended on the public platform and through the press must be very weak.

LOCAL OPTION CAN BE ENFORCED

Additional evidence of the fact that it will be possible to enforce prohibition in Peterborough after it is carried at the polls is furnished by the following letter received by the Peterborough temperance workers, from John Fleet, Acting City Marshall for the city of Fall River, Mass. Fall River is a larger city than Peterborough. If it is possible to enforce prohibition in large cities in the States, we should be able to enforce it in Peterborough. When people tell us that we cannot enforce prohibition in Peterborough, they are simply telling us we cannot enforce our laws in Canada as well as the people in the United States are able to enforce theirs. Do you care to admit this? The following is the letter referred to:

"In reply to your letter, I will state that prohibition is enforced in Fall River. So far we have found no difficulty to speak of in enforcing the law. Former liquor dealers are strictly out of business. We have got no open bar rooms where liquor is sold. We have no kitchens or other places where liquor is sold. In case an attempt is made to sell liquor our officers quickly place them under arrest and when brought before the court they are sentenced."

"We find that express companies and railroads carry liquor into our city as it is said to be according to law. We find that the express companies do carry liquor coming from other states into this city and distribute it to the consignee according to law. Such work we cannot stop, as the interstate laws or interstate commerce, if you will, is such that liquor can be brought into cities and towns of this Commonwealth without interruption by railroad and general express companies. We have, at the present, several cases pending before our District Court relative to express companies; while charges are made against them for unlawfully transporting intoxicating liquors for hire and reward, for delivery in Fall River, Fall River being a city in which licenses of the first five classes to sell intoxicating liquors were not granted. These will be taken up and tried in the course of the next ten days."

Signed,

JOHN FLEET,
Acting City Marshall.

DO NOT BE FOOLED

The liquor interests in Peterborough are trying to work a rather sharp game. There are a number of citizens who, while not in favor of the liquor traffic, do not like to vote for local option because they have a few friends or acquaintances in the business. These men, however, would not like to see the local option law defeated.

Friends of the liquor interests are said to be approaching these men and pointing out to them that, as the local option law will be carried on a three-fifths majority of the votes cast, it will not, they claim, affect the passing of the law if these people decline to vote. When they cannot get these citizens to promise to vote against local option, they try to get them to promise to stay away from the polls. Of course every person who refuses to vote in this way thereby helps the liquor interests and the representatives of the liquor interests are sharp enough to know it.

A vote that should be cast for local option but stays at home is a vote lost for local option, and to all intents and purposes is a vote gained by the liquor interests. The citizens of Peterborough, therefore, are urged not to give way to these arguments. Come out and help the cause. The more votes that are cast for local option, the greater will be the victory, and the easier it will be to enforce the law after it is carried.

PETERBORO' AROUSED

The splendid audiences that greeted Dr. Crafts, of Washington, to hear his four addresses in Peterborough last Sunday, show how interested the people of Peterborough are in the local option campaign, now under way. The fact that the opera house was filled at the afternoon meeting, and people found it necessary to stand, shows the interest that is being taken in the question.

Dr. Crafts made many good points. One of them was in reference to people who claim that after local option is carried in Peterborough it will still be possible to secure some liquor, and, therefore, people should not vote for the by-law. They claim that dives will be created where liquor can be secured on the sly.

Dr. Crafts pointed out in reply that we have laws against murder, against stealing, and many other crimes, and yet these laws are broken to some extent. He pointed out that just as these laws are broken, it is probable that a prohibitory liquor law would be broken. As all laws, however, help to prevent crime, so a prohibitory law in Peterborough would restrict the sale of liquor and practically stop it altogether.

Present Laws Broken

In addition to this we might point out that our present liquor laws are being broken constantly. Some of our local hotelkeepers have been fined during this year for selling liquor during prohibited hours, to minors, to people on the black list, and for other evasions of the law. Because the liquor law is now being broken in Peterborough and because liquor is sometimes bought on the sly during prohibited hours, should we say that we should not have these laws. Everybody knows that these laws make the securing of liquor difficult during prohibited hours. They have been proved to be beneficial. So would a local option law be. Vote for it.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

It is reported that the representatives of the liquor interests are storing up a set of arguments against local option, for use during the last few days of the campaign. It would seem as if they must be afraid that these arguments will not stand investigation or they would bring them out now, in order that the public may have time to look into them.

The mass meeting in the Grand Opera House to-morrow afternoon at 4.15 will be addressed by a woman who has had a wide experience and who will be able to give some interesting information concerning the disastrous effect liquor has on working men, particularly those employed in the lumber shanties. All are welcome, both men and women.

Peterborough is the only centre in which liquor can be secured for many miles around the city. The farmers around Peterborough have closed the saloons in nearly all the adjoining townships. Peterborough is the distributing point now for these townships. When we secure local option in Peterborough we will have driven liquor out of practically its last stronghold in the county. It will be a famous victory. Work for it.

Friends desiring to assist will find the treasurer at 396 Water street.

THE WISE MOTHER DOCTORS BABY WISELY

Nowadays wise mothers do not dose their children with nauseous, griping castor-oil or purgatives, nor do they give them poisonous opiates in the form of soothing medicines. Baby's Own Tablets take the place of these harsh and dangerous drugs, and the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that the Tablets are absolutely safe, and will cure all stomach and bowel troubles, destroy worms, break up colds and make teething easy. Mrs. Thos. Craft, Binscarth, Man., says—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for constipation and teething troubles, and do not know of any other medicine that can equal them. They are always satisfactory in their results." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

IT MIGHT BE WORSE

I'm getting eight per week just now,
I'm thankful that it isn't less,
For I am hardly worth that much—
That's something you would easily guess.

My boarding house is very bad,
I'm thankful that it isn't worse;
The steak is often tough as wire,
And frequently it makes me curse.

My overcoat is on the rough,
But still it's better far than none,
It matches well my other clothes—
I've nothing new beneath the sun.

My dad fell down and broke his leg—
I'm thankful that it's not his head.
The doctor bills are coming high,
But then, poor dad might have been dead.

Another fellow's got my girl—
I'm thankful that I see in sight
Another one, who's just as good—
I'll call on her to-morrow night.

I'm going to end this thankful rhyme.
And you'll be thankful too, no doubt,
If verses worse than these you've seen,
Just start right in and kick me out.

Installment Plan Dressing.

"Clothes for the year furnished on the installment plan" is the novel offer about to be made, it is said, to the women customers of a smart London house. The plan of the shopkeeper is to agree with a client upon a sum which shall cover that client's expenditure for dress for the next twelve months. The customer binds herself to buy everything from that shop, and the shop undertakes to supply her with what she requires. The payments are to be made monthly in advance. This plan was evolved not out of a desire to save the women customers trouble, but because the firm had begun to despair of ever getting them to pay their bills.

A Great Horse.

Jumbo, a horse owned by a Savin Rock shipbuilder, is said to be the largest horse in Connecticut and it would no doubt be safe to say the largest in New England. He is nearly seven feet high and weighs 1,700 pounds. He is a most powerful animal and has dragged with apparent ease a two ton load. With the children he is a great favorite. It costs a good deal to feed him, as he has the almost incredible quantity of eight pecks of oats at each meal and makes away with over 200 pounds of hay every week. His shoes are of unusual size and weigh four pounds each. —Boston Budget.

The Price of Peace.

The announcement that France is going to spend three milliards of francs for new ships of war—that is to say, for peace—reminds us how prices have gone up since 1871. In that year France bought peace of Bismarck for one milliard. And a milliard, furthermore, was deemed in that day a fairly stiff figure—the thrifty French more than hinted that Bismarck had driven a sharp bargain, whereas on the occasion of the present purchase the nation is reported as quite in a glow of delight.—Puck.

A Filthy Condition

See that dandruff
See that dirty coat

Many a man, otherwise scrupulously clean is dandruff dirty. The small persistent germs of dandruff working all day as well as night are constantly throwing off the small white dandruff scales which falling on the shoulders of a coat gives it a filthy appearance, which is repulsive to the friends of the victim.

Many men allow this condition to exist because they believe there is no cure for dandruff; they have tried various so-called cures with unsatisfactory results and naturally condemn all.

The famous prescription called Parisian Sage now put up in America, but only by the Giroux Mfg. Co., of Buffalo, NY., It is for sale in Peterborough by Wm. Madill druggist, who guarantees it to cure dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed to do more; it will make short, thin hair, grow long, lustrous and luxuriant; it will stop hair from falling out; it will cure all diseases of the scalp. W. Madill guarantees it—every bottle of it. The price is only 50 cents and if you want to stop the filthy dandruff flakes from lodging on your coat and disgusting your friends, get a bottle at once.

IN RURAL BAVARIA.

Where Every Man Is Taught the Essentials of Up-to-date Farming.

"In order to promote agricultural interest the kingdom of Bavaria has established agricultural schools in almost every town," says a prominent resident of Munich, Germany, who is visiting in this country.

"These schools are in charge of teachers who in addition to an academic education must be versed in botany, geology, chemistry, physics, zoology and natural history. At a time when nothing is doing in the fields, from November to March, these schools are open, and the peasants for a nominal fee can attend courses on cultivation and fertilization of the soil, the proper rotation of crops on the same land, the best sources for good seeds, irrigation and the raising of stock. They are made acquainted with improvements and new inventions in agricultural implements, the adoption of which can be recommended. They are taught the rudiments of bookkeeping and other commercial knowledge essential for the up-to-date farmer.

"In the spring after these farmers have returned to their work in the fields it becomes the duty of the teachers who instructed them during the winter to travel from county to county and to act as advisers to the farmers. Much good results from the travels of these teachers. By practical suggestion to the farmers they induce them to make valuable improvements in the cultivation of their farms.

"The wandering teachers helps to form co-operative clubs for the joint interests of a number of farmers in one district. From time to time the teacher has to lecture in these clubs on any subject which might prove of interest to the members. These visits and lectures to the different districts are entirely free to the people, since the state assumes all expenses. There is probably no other country in the world in which so much is done by the state for its rural inhabitants as is the case in Bavaria. Other German states have these agricultural schools, but their teachers are not sent in such a practical way direct to the places where they can do the most good, as is done in Bavaria. The results of this commendable care have been very gratifying."

SICK HEADACHE CURES.

How to Relieve This Most Distressing Form of Illness.

Sick headache, while not dangerous, is one of the most disagreeable forms of illness. Some women are subject to it at such frequent intervals that they are incapacitated for several days at a time.

Unless the headache is known to come from some functional disorder it can generally be traced to impaired digestion or a sluggish liver. These must be treated in the interims of the headaches, as at the time nothing but alleviating remedies are possible.

A treatment that is often successful is to abstain from red meats for a time and to be careful about taking foods that ferment easily. One man who had doctored for years for sick headaches was cured by his wife seeing to it that he drank a cup of hot water with a half teaspoonful of salt in it as soon as he arose in the morning.

A half lemon in a glass of cold water taken night and morning is another remedy that has proved helpful to many.

During the attack rest and quiet are imperative. Lie down in a darkened room, drink quantities of hot water and apply either a hot water bottle or an ice bag to the temples and the base of the brain.

Cloths rung out of hot witch hazel often bring quick relief. Headache cologne if rubbed on the temples in time acts as a preventive, while some sufferers are helped by taking a cathartic at the first symptom.

In severe cases five or ten minutes' treatment with an electric battery is invaluable. This is better than massage, as the pressure is sometimes too strong when the headache is bad.

In the first stages of sick headache it can often be averted by taking abdominal and neck exercises and by putting a mustard plaster over the stomach.

A BUILDING FEAT.

House Completed, Furnished and Occupied in Twelve Hours.

In the Wide World Magazine Harold J. Shepstone describes a most remarkable building feat which was recently accomplished in St. Louis—viz. the complete erection and occupation of a house in a single day. It was the bride's ardently expressed wish to have a home to go to that caused the builder to attempt it, and he succeeded. Twelve hours before the evening meal was served the plot of land where the house was to stand showed not the slightest sign of human activity. Ragweed and goldenrod greeted the sunshine, and the scene was absolutely innocent of a stick of timber, a piece of stone, brick or other material. But when the 7 o'clock whistles blew on the morning in question, however, there was a concerted movement of men and wagons toward the lot.

In the erection of the dwelling 75,000 nails were used, 11,000 feet of timber cut and fitted, 12,000 shingles put on the roof, 6,000 laths used to make the walls, 375 yards of plaster spread and several gallons of paint used.

Twenty-five carpenters were employed on the job, of whom eighteen worked ten hours and the remaining seven eleven hours each. Twelve lathers and twelve plasterers did the lathing and plastering in three hours. Two men built the chimney in four hours forty-five minutes. Four men put the roof on in three hours, while two men did the plumbing and gasfitting in five hours. One man did the electric wiring in one and a half hours, while four men did the necessary painting in five hours.

The builders had hardly cleared away before a large furniture van arrived, together with a caterer's cart. The furniture van contained the owner's goods, and willing hands quickly transferred them to their rightful places in the record built home. In just under an hour the newly married couple and their friends, who had meanwhile come upon the scene, sat down to a sumptuous dinner. Twelve hours previously, as already stated, not a brick or a stone was to be seen on the site of the dwelling.

Apples at $10 Apiece.

Never in the history of fruit growing has ten dollars been paid for a single specimen apple of a standard variety. Four or five dollars a barrel is considered a good price for a barrel of Spys. Yet when you figure up the cost of a barrel of Spys at ten dollars each the price will be over $2,000. This price, which will be paid right here in Ontario is quite unusual. In Oregon they sometimes receive as high as ten dollars a box for Winter Bananna apples, but even that price only figures out at thirty dollars a barrel. Even the choicest Canadian apples that are exported to Great Britain, and sometimes sold wholesale at three to four dollars a barrel, sell retail sometimes at five cents each in the fruit shops in London this would make an average of just over ten dollars a barrel. The fact that ten dollars is being offered for the best single specimen apple of Baldwin, Greening, Spy, King or McIntosh, and that five dollars is offered for the second best of the same varieties, or seventy-five dollars in all for the lot of ten apples is making the fruit growers in Ontario very keen over the Exhibition.

This amount of money is being offered by the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition, Toronto, where the apples will be on exhibition from Nov. 9th to 13th, 1909. Fruit growers who have some extra good specimens of any of these varieties should send their apples for competition. There are rules and conditions to govern the competition, which will be furnished by the Secretary, P. W. Hodgetts, Toronto. Last year this Exhibition was visited by persons from distant parts of Canada and the United States, and even England sent her expert apple men to see the largest Horticultural Exhibition ever held in Canada.

In addition to apples there will be one of the finest displays of prize fruits, vegetables and flowers ever shown, making a splendid advertisement of Canada's products.

From present indications this year's Exhibition will in many ways eclipse last year's splendid success. The railway companies, recognizing the importance of the Exhibition, have decided to give special rates. Local railway agents can supply the information.

Let Me Tell You Something

A woman who is sick and suffering, and won't at least try a medicine which has the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is to blame for her own wretched condition.

There are literally hundreds of thousands of women in Canada and the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over thirty years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering.

Read what these women say:

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. Emma Chatel, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Erie, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles, and at last was almost helpless. I tried three doctors but they did me no good. My sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has made me well and strong. I hope all suffering women will just give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, for it is worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. Endlich, R. F. D. 7, Erie Pa.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering from the same trouble.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

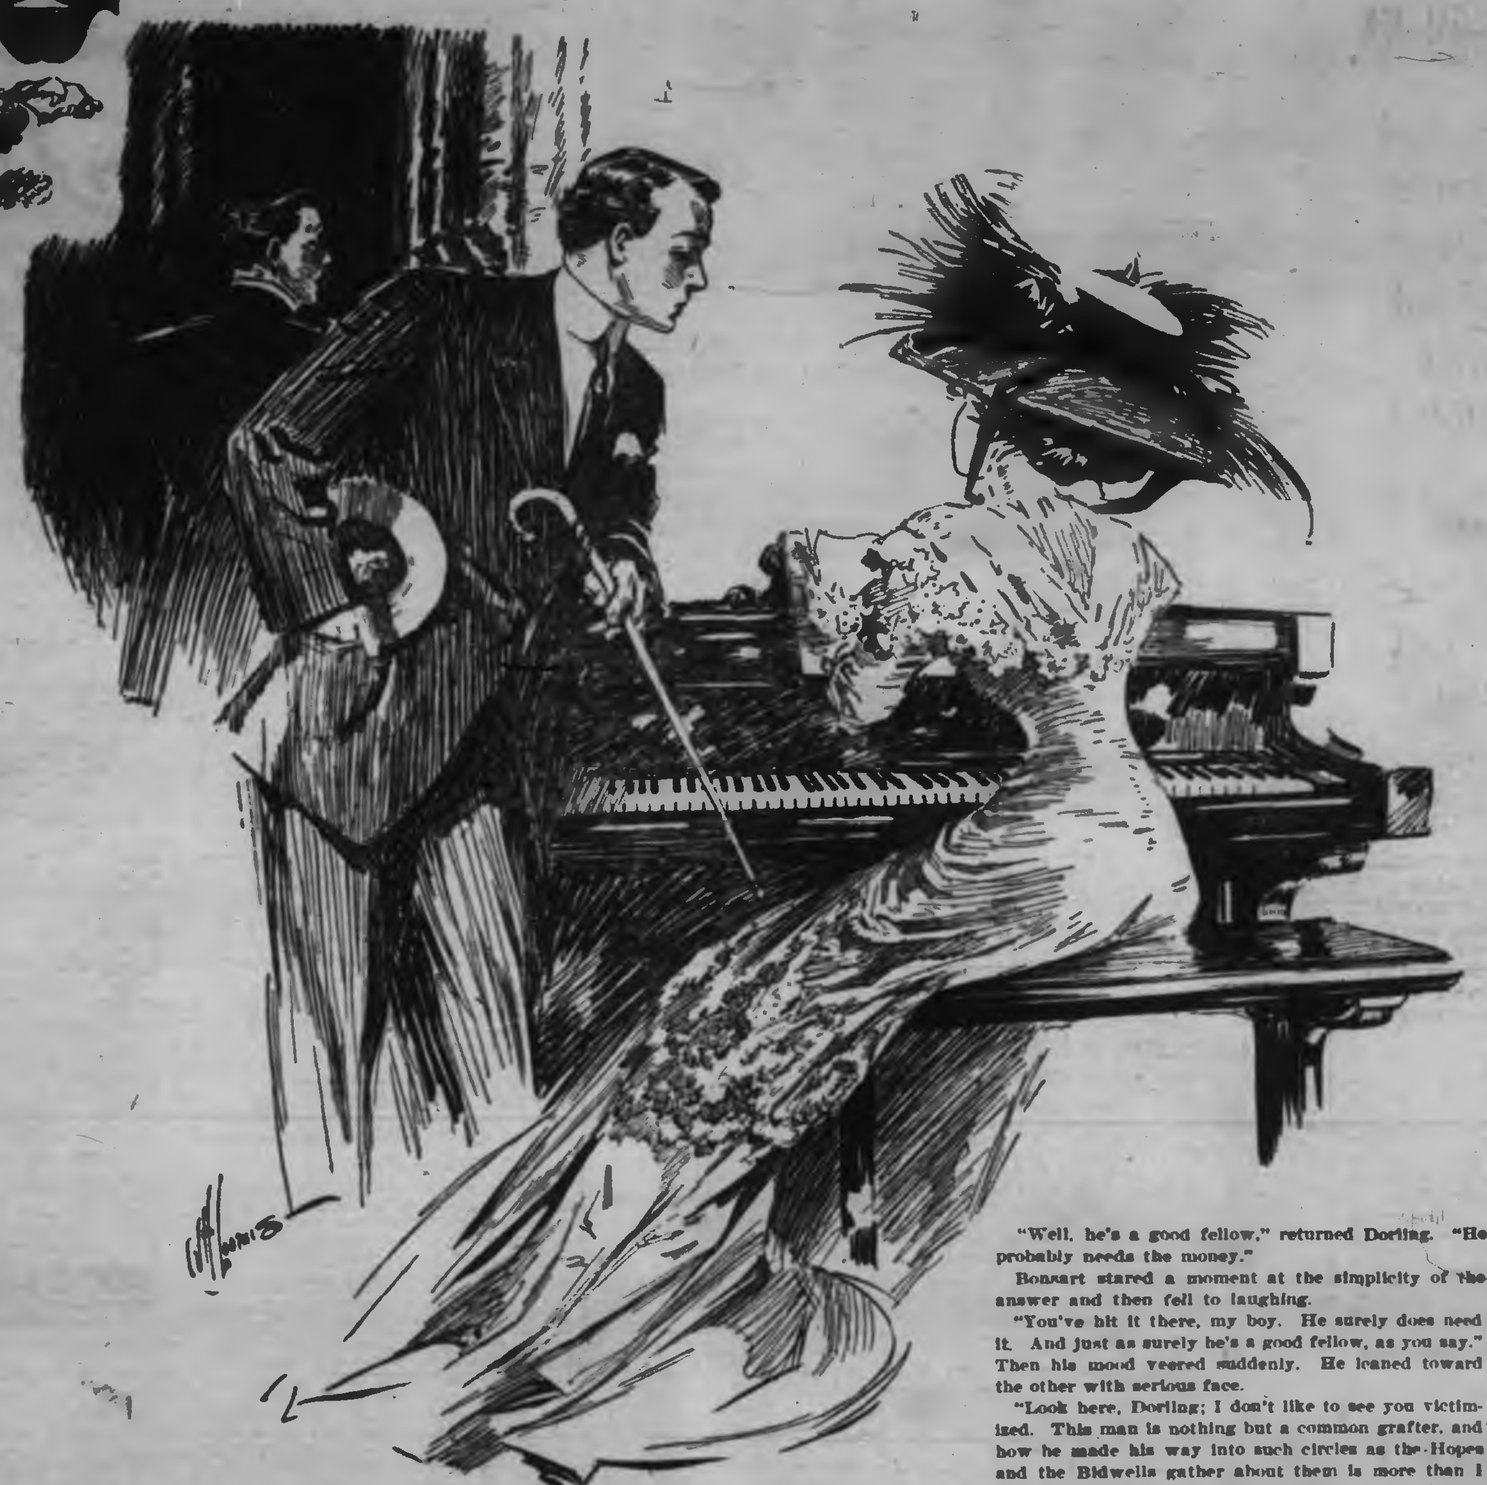
THE SOCIETY WOLF

A SUFFIXED VICTORY



SAUNTERING STEPS PASSED BEHIND CARTER, WHO WAS LEANING EASILY AT THE SIDE OF THE KEYBOARD.

BY LUKE THRICE.

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

THE first intimation of trouble with Bonsart came while those who were to make up the cast of Mrs. "Jimmy" Hope's charity play were gathered in the ballroom of the Hope home. Carter, picked for one of the lesser parts, was chatting with the hostess where she sat at the piano, running her fingers lightly over the keys. The director, an important, chubby little man, was bustling about with chairs and couches, arranging his setting, a bundle of manuscript serving in lieu of baton as he gave orders to the young men who were aiding him.

Sauntering steps passed behind Carter, who was leaning easily at the side of the keyboard. Across the casual converse which the Virginian was holding with the charming young woman there drifted two phrases:—

"Who is this fellow Carter? It seems to me you're taking a lot about him on faith."

Carter's gaze was on Mrs. Hope's face. She returned his look with a calm smile, rippling idly into the treble. He waited until the steps had echoed down the room, then shot a quick glance over his shoulder. The man who had spoken was Neville Bonsart, whom he remembered for a chilly stare and the monocle habit. The one to whom he was speaking was Stilbert, one of the youngest of the set in which he moved. Carter knew that the voice could not have been Stilbert's. He turned back to Mrs. Hope with an unspoken question.

Of all the persons with whom he had come in contact during his slow struggle toward the social citadel he felt that this woman, scarcely more than a girl, the central figure in his first Fifth avenue adventure, had the truest knowledge of his purpose and character. Perhaps it was this fact that had led him to avoid using her deliberately in any of his subsequent plans. Not that he feared her; rather he respected her intelligence and the insight that weighed him correctly while according him his due. It was the greater source of satisfaction to him that she frequently gave him a foothold in his ascent unasked and unsought, as in the present case of the society play. He awaited her comment now with mute appeal to their common understanding.

"You must have been prepared for something of this kind," she said.

"Yes," he answered, slowly; "if you mean in my general consciousness. I have known all along that there would be interference at some stage, possibly at several stages."

"It was inevitable," she nodded. "What are you going to do about it?"

"I hardly see my way yet. He is too powerful a factor to be overlooked. I wonder how long this has been going on."

"To my knowledge for a week at least. Since he was introduced to you at the Bidwells' last bridge party."

"He has standing."

"And a sharp tongue."

"What does he want?"

Estimate of a Character.

"You do Neville an injustice," she smiled again. "He wants nothing from any man or woman except recognition of his own essential superiority and the conduct of their affairs according to his own personal ideas. To be happy he must occupy the censor's office, free to pass judgment upon all things. He is tiresome, but he is listened to."

"What has he been saying?"

"He has discovered that you have no visible claim upon the section of society which he has taken under his own wing. He is unable to see that you are entitled to a place."

"If he were really in earnest he could do for me in short order," said Carter thoughtfully.

"No; hardly as bad as that. You have gone too far, I think. But he could make himself very dangerous."

"Is he brilliant?"

"Rather stupid, I should say. A remarkable person for fixed ideas. Even something of a fanatic in his way."

"Is he wealthy?"

"Abominably. He gives the most exquisite dinners in his ancient family stronghold. The Bonsarts are original New Yorkers, you know. They say that to be included in his circle of epicures is better than a patent of nobility. Absurd, isn't it?"

"A cad?"

"Far from it. I have seen him do generous things. He is susceptible to good qualities in others, particularly if they fall in with his own peculiar notion of manners. 'Knightly' is a pet word with him. Do you perceive the significance of it?"

Carter reflected. He began to have some conception of the temper of this expected, yet unexpected, antagonist.

"Then if I could win him he might perhaps repair what damage he has done me?"

"With interest, probably."

"First scene, ladies and gentlemen! We will now begin the rehearsal of the first scene." The director was waving his manuscript at them with lofty gesture.

They left the piano together and walked toward the buzzing group. Bonsart noted their approach. He turned an injuring and insolent gaze upon the young Virginian. Carter ignored it, but felt it. Decidedly the problem grew serious.

During the rehearsal he carefully avoided Bonsart and refrained from unnecessary words with any one, guarding his every action with the most scrupulous care. He could afford no mistake with a captious enemy present. Until it was time to tame this opponent, as he must if he would proceed toward success, it should be his to avoid the shadow of offence. Meanwhile he kept a watchful eye upon the other. As a result he came to the conclusion that Bonsart's enmity was not yet malignant. As far as he might judge, he was not the object of any further secret attack that afternoon.

The Campaign Is On.

The Virginian mapped his tactics with keen attention to details. Heretofore every ruse in his campaign had been conducted against passively resisting obstacles, tradition, accepted conventions, pride of wealth and rank, exclusiveness, the hedged in circles of the purple clad. His advance had been made by mines, countermines, ambuscades, surprises, manoeuvres, upon which he need not embark if he would not. Now, suddenly he was thrown upon the defensive. Here was definite, well directed opposition. An active adversary was in the field to dispute his further passage, even to hurl him back from what he had gained. Precision and caution must be his watchwords.

He noticed that at the close of each rehearsal Bonsart and one or two of the other young men usually walked down to the Waldorf for a drink. He considered these companions of the ill disposed aristocrat. He could count upon none of them as a sure friend, although he knew all of them fairly well. Going over the list he finally selected Ivan Dorling as the one best suited to his purpose. Dorling was the only son of an immensely wealthy mining man. His own acceptance in New York was not of ancient date. Carter had cultivated him to some extent and had remarked the freedom with which he dispensed large sums of money. It was his own cynical guess that this characteristic of Dorling's had recommended him more than any other for social recognition. For the rest he knew him as an easy, friendly boy, good natured to a fault and well disposed toward himself.

The charity play was nearly ready for its first performance when Carter found the setting right for his own private histrionic effort. Bonsart and Dorling were walking down Fifth avenue from the Hopes' one pleasant afternoon. The Virginian followed them unobserved. Entering the Thirty-third street entrance to the Waldorf he came around into the café a few moments later to find the two seated at a table over their glasses. As Carter had been sure he would, Dorling hailed and invited him to join. Bonsart was cold and distant and the conversation was carried on by the other two. The Virginian found ample matter for comment in the approaching play and Dorling joined him readily in the discussion. The time passed smoothly in spite of Bonsart's frigidity. Carter glanced at his watch presently.

"Half-past three," he exclaimed. "Now, that's annoying. Past banking hours. I am in a mess."

"What's wrong, old chap?" asked Dorling, with ready sympathy.

"Why, I can't imagine how it came to slip my mind. I had a very important transaction on this afternoon that depended upon a cash loan, and now I've missed my broker."

"Come, that's too bad! Can't it be remedied?" asked Dorling. The Virginian caught the curl on Bonsart's lip as he listened.

"Why, yes, it could be," said Carter, with an embarrassed smile. "Are you in a position to lend me $5,000 as a very especial favor?"

Dorling's checkbook and fountain pen came to light promptly. Carter was conscious of a little twinge of regret that he was not in a position to profit by this complacent generosity. But he was after larger game.

Gentleman Adventurer!

"Five thousand, you said?"

"That will do, yes. Thanks awfully."

The check was filled and signed. Carter folded it and tucked it in his pocket.

"This is a great favor, Dorling. Now if you'll excuse me for a moment I'll make my arrangements by telephone."

Carter never knew exactly what passed in his absence until some time afterward, though he counted confidently from his knowledge of the two men upon a scene almost identical with the one that actually occurred. The Virginian had scarcely passed into the corridor when Bonsart was upon Dorling hammer and tongs.

"So this gentleman adventurer has strung you up like all the rest, has he?" he demanded, scornfully. "Oh, he's a clever young manipulator; there's not a doubt of it."

"Why, what's wrong with him?" asked Dorling in surprise.

"Nothing, absolutely nothing. Only you can say goodby to your five thousand. He's simply played you in first class style. I wondered where the chap got his capital and his assurance. It's clear as day now."

"Well, why shouldn't I lend him the money?" asked Dorling, uneasily. Bonsart held up both hands.

"Why, indeed, good youth; why, indeed," he mocked. "Unless one cares to consider the fact that you will never see it again there is no reason under the sun why you shouldn't lend it to him."

"Well, he's a good fellow," returned Dorling. "He probably needs the money."

Bonsart stared a moment at the simplicity of the answer and then fell to laughing.

"You've hit it there, my boy. He surely does need it. And just as surely he's a good fellow, as you say." Then his mood veered suddenly. He leaned toward the other with serious face.

"Look here, Dorling; I don't like to see you victimized. This man is nothing but a common grafter, and how he made his way into such circles as the Hopes and the Bidwells gather about them is more than I can see. What does he call himself? Robert Carter. Who ever heard of Robert Carter? He says he comes from Virginia, but there are no Carters down there that I know of. Now, I've watched him, and he's just shown me his game, cards up. I'm going to uproot him. It's a shame and a scandal that we are open to the devices of low adventurers of which he is the type. Some one must keep an eye open for such people, and now that I have proof I'm going after him."

"Oh, come," returned Dorling. "You're prejudiced. He's an awfully decent chap. I don't grudge him the money."

"You make me tired. Are you fond of playing the easy fool to such a man? At least follow my advice; it can do no harm. When he returns ask him when you can expect repayment or how long he will need the money, or some such question. It is perfectly proper, even supposing that the loan was asked in good faith."

"I hate to," said Dorling, squirming.

"Now, do as I say. I want to show you the fellow as he is. You'll catch him off his guard and we can use the incident as a club to beat loose his hold."

"Well," returned Dorling, reluctantly, "if you think it will be all right."

"All right? Of course it will. You'll see him on tenterhooks."

"When Do I Get It?"

Carter was absent about fifteen minutes. He could not count upon the success of the stratagem he had planned, but he was reasonably sure that Bonsart would induce Dorling to arrange some test of his good faith. As he read the young man of the monocle he must inevitably take a hand in an affair that did not concern him in the least and seek to manage it to his own satisfaction. Hostility to the Virginian would do the rest.

"It's all right," said Carter cheerfully, re-entering the café. "I'm immensely obliged to you, Dorling. Let's have a drink," and he called the waiter. After the orders had been given he glanced at the two men. They had not spoken yet. Something was in the air.

"By the way," said Dorling suddenly, in a voice that he strove to make matter of fact and off-hand. "I've become rather methodical lately in business matters. Gone in for bookkeeping and all that sort of thing, don't you know. When can I expect repayment, if you don't mind, Carter?" With flushed face he drew a notebook from his pocket and poised a pencil.

The Virginian took a breath for inward satisfaction. This was positively too simple. It gave him the whip hand without an effort. Meanwhile his face went stern under Dorling's words. He looked at the young man intently a moment and then whipped out the check.

"Right now, my dear fellow," he answered quietly, and pushed the slip across the table toward Dorling. There was not the slightest hint of pique in his gesture or expression. His attitude was merely that of a superior mind subjected to misunderstanding. Bonsart was watching him closely. Dorling's embarrassment was painful.

"Oh, really, Carter, old chap, I didn't mean it that way. I was just making a feeble effort to be exact, you know. The governor's been after me time and again about such things."

"It's all right, my dear boy, all right. I'm not offended, not in the least. You're quite right," said Carter, soothingly. The tone, such a one as he might have used with a blundering child, completed Dorling's confusion.

"Carter, you must take it. I insist. Really, I shall have to regard it as a personal reflection if you refuse. I ask you as a favor, old chap. Do take it back, there's a good fellow."

Carter smiled upon him calmly.

"Oh, very well, if you insist." He took the check from Dorling's offering hand, sensing rather than seeing the triumphant flash in Bonsart's eye. "Let's say no more about it," he continued, and with the words he tore the check across, tore it again and reduced it to tiny fragments, which he dropped to the floor. The gesture was absolutely free from a trace of the theatric. It was merely casual.

"As you were saying, Dorling," he said, closing the incident with the firm, sure grip of one who is used to setting people at their ease in any situation, "the director has managed the little play excellently. Unless I quite forget everything he has taught me I positively feel I shall be a credit to him with my little three lines."

Dorling recovered awkwardly. Carter had rattled on for some minutes before he was able to respond. The Virginian was wholly unconscious, at his ease, the man of the world who cannot be placed at a loss or in the wrong.

Dorling Is Won.

Subtly he emphasized the absence of sulkiness or resentment from his manner. Delicately he conveyed the impression that his one idea was to relieve Dorling courteously from all embarrassment proceeding from an ill considered act. The audience he was playing to was Bonsart. He could read Dorling with one glance. The boy was his creature from that moment if he so wished.

Bonsart's face was a study. Schooled to reserve and self-command though he was, he could not keep some trace of his surprise and change of feeling from showing. Watch as he might, there was no false note in the Virginian. Word and act were those of the truest gentleman. As Carter had figured from the outline picture of the man's character supplied by Mrs. Hope, the affair had an irresistible appeal for him. He could not argue against his convictions. Affecting precise notions of conduct, he found Carter perfect, conforming to his own ideals. Slowly he readjusted his ideas about this stranger.

But Carter was minded to force home his advantage. For some time he had contemplated a certain incidental move in his scheme of advance and he saw now the way in which it could be made of service, immediate and future. He checked his flow of small talk with another glance at his watch.

"I say, isn't it about time for Mrs. Pulsain to be found in the tea room? Let's wander in there and look for her. This is rather dull."

The others assented readily and they passed down the corridor. They found Mrs. Pulsain as the Virginian had suggested. She was with Mrs. Gatz-Brown and the young men joined them at their table. The chatter of the hour engaged them and Carter's sparkling wit kept him continually, though not obtrusively, forward.

By deft management he then gradually led the conversation to a point where he had Mrs. Pulsain for vis-a-vis and the other three formed a second group, one of those divisions that fall naturally when four or more persons are together. His immediate purpose was to tune the talk to the personal note, a matter which could not be naturally or gracefully adjusted in the general flow of comment. Since the incident at the Gatz-Brown summer home the Virginian had been conscious of Mrs. Pulsain's interest in him. He could understand her feeling. He had shown himself polished and clever, yet withal a somewhat mysterious figure in the world of which he appeared to be a part. He had meant to clear that mystery before her October reception and there was no time so propitious as the present.

"I hear you highly commended for your work in Mrs. Hope's play," said Mrs. Pulsain. "It is even intimated, at the risk of causing trouble, that you should have been cast for a more important part."

Carter laughed the compliment aside.

"I'm afraid my friend the director has been doing me this unfriendly office," he said. "I suppose he detected some superficial indications that I had trod the boards before."

"Oh ho, you have performed for the groundlings then?"

"Merely as an amateur, in Virginia."

"Wonders on wonders! First a yachtsman, now a thespian! How did you happen to transfer your talents to New York, Mr. Carter?"

"Would you like to hear a dull but brief account of that operation, Mrs. Pulsain? I warn you that it will include a revelation of deceit and perfidy."

Carter or Carteret.

"Two things that I particularly adore," she returned. "Let us have the story, by all means."

"I have never told this before, but to whom should I confess if not to my mentor and guide?" he said, recalling their previous understanding with a smile. "My qualifications must have been examined at some time, and I can think of no more kindly eye than your own to scan them."

He could see that the others were lending ear to what he said while continuing their own chatter perfunctorily.

"Family reverses before my father's death left me a paternal estate the visible assets of which were a crop of mortgages, three chests full of papers in inconceivable confusion and the promise of lengthy litigation," he went on. "I did not care for the prospect. I determined to come to New York. Meanwhile I had no friends in the North. On impulse I decided to leave my name out of the situation, since if I bore it I might be led to expect aid from it and suffer accordingly."

Bonsart's glance was turned toward him expectantly.

"So I came here as plain Robert Carter, incognito, as it were, to see what I could see."

"Well," said Mrs. Pulsain, "this is thrilling. What next?"

"That's all, dear madam. Am I to be forgiven?"

"But if you're not Robert Carter who are you?"

"My own name is Robert Pendleton Carteret," he answered.

"Dear me. How romantic. Oh, folks—people," she called to the others, though there was no need, for all had heard. "I have an acquaintance here that I would like to present to you. Mrs. Gatz-Brown, Mr. Dorling, Mr. Bonsart, allow me to introduce Mr. R. Pendleton Carteret, late of Virginia."

Carter arose and bowed, a trifle ceremoniously, yet with an air of gayety that relieved the situation. The affair was explained with laughing questions and quiet replies.

"Quite a sensation, I declare," said Mrs. Gatz-Brown. "Are we authorized to give this out, Mr. Carteret?"

"You will assist me if you will allow me to bear my patronymic hereafter," responded the Virginian lightly.

Bonsart was quite vanquished. The flavor of old world adventure in Carter's concealment of name, the old world suggestion in the name itself, the explanation of the handsome young man's presence in New York, coming pat upon the affair of the check, completely won his admiration. He extended his hand impulsively and shook that of the Virginian, murmuring congratulations upon his having resumed his proper colors. As the party were leaving the hotel to enter Mrs. Pulsain's automobile a few moments later he dropped back with Carter.

"I say, Carteret, have dinner with me to-night, won't you, old fellow?"

JAPANESE CHRISTIANITY

A number of Japanese Christians traveling in the United States give it as their opinion that evangelical Christianity can never make headway in Japan until denominationalism departs. Denominationalism, in its strict sense, has been the bane of Christianity everywhere. The intense rivalry ity everywhere. The intense rivalry of Christianity produces the effect of intense rivalry in every other branch of human life. It reduces the profession or pursuit to the status of the commonest calling. In many instances the cloak of sanctity fails to hide the habit of the huckster. It is true that individuality of thought must mean individuality of utterance. It is true that while Art is one, the variety and number of its schools are no reproach to it. But the mad rivalry of its schools is a reproach to Christianity. It is always worse in matters of religion. At any rate the keen Japanese will not stand for it, and all arguments drawn from the depths of inspiration notwithstanding, they give notice that they will not put up with it. What, then, is the remedy? Not the giving up of independence and variety of opinion. Not the welding of various opinions into one. Not the suppression of all freedom of Christian thought and, therefore, of all thought. What, then? Whatever the answer is, that answer applies to every country under the sun. It is a live question, and may become a burning one. The public would like to hear from the clergy respecting it. If evangelical Christianity is to prosper abroad, or even at home, the "Japanese objection" must be met. Heaven must no longer be painted as a place to whose entrance a tangled mass of people is pressing, shouting "Hosannah!" and at the same time batting each other smartly over the head. The amount of "good" done by the various clergy is enormous. And mark! When they want to do more "good" they unite as one man. Even the separated brethren of all persuasions unite. But the instant the words "doctrine" and "Bible" are mentioned it is just as if some baneful influence or noxious drug were spread abroad in the air. The riot begins—in the name of Christianity and freedom of opinion. The Japs say: "If Christianity brings dissension it is not what we want. We sha'n't stand for it." And being a practical, logically-minded people, they tell the three hundred and forty-five different "only true ways to Heaven" that they will not have them. If the "Way" is one, why fight and scrap over it? If not one, but many, it is still more pertinent to ask "Why scrap over it?" But if the ways and means and end are all different, then the shouts of rivalry may well resound through the air. The whole theory of Christianity must then be changed.

It is a great lesson that the Japanese are teaching us. To Mr. W. T. R. Preston, and not to the missionaries, belongs the merit of discovering it. This is disquieting. It shows that our missionaries are not safe guides, even in their own sacred calling. Worldly-minded people watch the worldly-mindedness of the churches with satisfaction. "After all," they say, "we don't differ. Why bother about church?" And there is a great heap of truth in it. The superb spirit of the Christian religion is dwarfed in the puny souls of humanity. We are not living up to it, but dragging it down to ourselves. Hence the failure of mankind to reproduce it. At the present moment the "good intentions" of mankind were never better. But little less than a mockery is being made of the "religion" of the greatest Teacher since the world begun. There are exceptions. These are not denied. But the hermit-flower does not prevent the desert, which spreads for leagues about it. Nor do the oases mean that there is no Sahara.

THE CURSE OF THIS CONTINENT

An American of note writes of the pleasure of life in Britain and the bane of it in the United States. In the States people do not know much of anything, he says, outside the college professors and a few of the clergy. The great bulk of the people are utterly ignorant of anything but making money. Manifestly such a life is barren of all really pleasurable and profitable delight. A dinner in Britain is a feast of wit and solid information. In the United States it is aptly described as costing so much per plate. The people present are valueless. They are merely wax figures for clothes to hang on. In Britain, however, nature has been cultivated to a high degree of beauty and so it is with the people. They think and converse. They create and do wonderful things because they take time to think. In the United States they gossip, try to be "smart, spin yarns, and generally play the parts of third-rate or servants' hall celebrities. Eating, drinking, social status, making money, etc., are a matter of course in Britain. In the United States they are the all-in-all, especially the last. Hence as the American quoted says, we are frightfully crude, boastful, extravagant and ostentatious. In England there is little snobbery. In the United States it is rampant. The American's criticisms are rapidly becoming applicable to Canada unless we cling more closely to British traditions and thus escape the ignorance, vulgarity and crookedness of the newly rich. In Great Britain the cotter, the workingman and the middle class man are all sympathetically in touch with the highest in the councils of the nation. One touch of Britain makes all British kin. There is as much sweetness, if not as much light in a roadside cottage in Scotland as there is in a castle and sweetness is pre-eminently an old country characteristic. We have substituted sham and shoddy for it in America and lying for manliness and common honesty.

As a consequence gossip, inquisitiveness, curiosity and babyishness are the chief characteristics of our people, he says. The natural dignity of man is exemplified only in the Indian, of all Americans. We are even ruled by our children, who excel us in our chief qualities. Without doubt much of it is true and just, but in course of time we will learn better, it is to be hoped.

The Most Ancient Man.

The average reader does not see much difference in age between human remains found in the beds of the pleistocene and the pliocene, but to the geologist the difference is very great, only he cannot express it in years or centuries. Until recently the oldest remains of man known dated back to the middle pleistocene. Among these are the celebrated relics from Neanderthal, Spy and other places. But in October, 1907, a lower human jaw was found in deposits attributed to the early pleistocene or even the late pliocene. This would give it a greater antiquity than any of the others and entitle it to be called the oldest remains of the human species. The teeth are well preserved. The most remarkable feature of the jaw is the absence of a chin. The canine teeth are not unduly prominent, and the dimensions of the teeth are within the limits of variation in living man.

Vulcan.

Vulcan was discovered in 1859, only to be effectively obliterated from the planetary system fifty years later. Leverrier, who acted as godfather to the new addition, calculated a path and found that the planet revolved around the sun in about twenty days. Yet other observers failed ever to see the planet, and now Professor Campbell announces that the eclipse observations of recent years prove almost conclusively that the existence of such a body is a practical impossibility.—Argonaut.

HOW MRS. CLARK FOUND RELIEF

After Years of Suffering Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Her

Pleasant Point Matron Tells Her Suffering Sister How to be Free From the Terrible Pains That Make Life a Burden

Pleasant Point, Ont., Oct. 22.—(Special).—That most of the ills that the suffering women of Canada have to bear are due to disordered Kidneys, and that the natural cure for them is Dodd's Kidney Pills, is once more shown in the case of Mrs. Merris C. Clarke, a well-known resident of this place and a prominent member of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Clarke is always ready to give her experience for the benefit of her suffering sisters.

"My sickness commenced twenty years ago with the change of life," says Mrs. Clarke. "My health was in a bad state. Water would run from my head, which would make me faint. When I came out of the fainting spells I took fits. I was bloated till I was clumsy. The pain I suffered was awful. It would go to my feet and then to my head. Many doctors attended me, and I tried many medicines, but nothing gave me relief till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills. The first box stopped the fits and seven boxes cured me completely."

Every suffering woman should use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They make strong, healthy kidneys, and the woman who has good kidneys is safeguarded against these terrible pains that make miserable the lives of so many women.

Curious Telegraph Lines.

The most original telegraph line in the world once extended from La Paz, the capital of Bolivia, to the neighboring town of Oruro, a distance of about 156 miles. There are no growing trees in this part of the world, and wood of any kind is so rare that the telegraph poles were made of the same material as the natives' household furniture—dried mud. The pillars were built on stone foundations and measured about five feet square at the base, with a tapering height of fifteen feet. They were placed about 300 feet apart. Another curious telegraph line was constructed in Uganda by a British engineer, who transported growing trees to the roadside and used them as poles because he could not find any "dead" wood that would withstand the ravages of the white ants. In Dutch East India growing trees are also turned to account in this manner, but there a wire is stretched across the road between the trees on either side and the actual telegraph line suspended down the center.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Recommended As An Ideal Remedy

W. S. BOND, Esq.

Lloydtown, Ont., March 19th, 1909.

"For some years I have been greatly troubled with headaches and indigestion, brought on by stomach disorders, constipation and biliousness. I had tried many remedies with only indifferent success, until "Fruit-a-tives" came to my notice. Being a general storekeeper, I was selling a good many "Fruit-a-tives" to my customers and, remarking how pleased they were with the results obtained from using "Fruit-a-tives," I decided to try them and, I might say, the effects were almost magical. Headaches and biliousness disappeared and to-day I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to my customers as 'An ideal remedy.'

"I might also add that about three years ago I was laid up with LUMBAGO AND SCIATICA—couldn't get out of bed or lift one foot over the other. A good treatment of "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of these pains and banished the Sciatica and Lumbago so that to-day I am as well as ever and can lift anything necessary."

DO CHURCHES ACT UNFAIRLY?

In Renting Halls to Outside Enterprizes-A Complaint at Ottawa

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—There is evidently considerable complaint that many churches in the city are not living up to the law regarding the renting of their halls.

"A number of the churches owning halls are competing openly against us," said a man interested in a public hall this morning. "They pay no taxes on their halls and yet openly go after all the renting they can get. During the past year church halls have been rented to conventions that have no connection with the churches whatever. Then they are rented for recitals given by music teachers, society meetings and lectures conducted by organizations or persons that have no connection with the church which owns the hall. It practically means that halls that have to pay taxes can hardly live and in some cases cannot pay expenses, and is one of the causes of the financial difficulties of St. Patrick's hall. It is entirely unfair that the churches should thus compete against the halls that are taxed. Of course they do not charge a regular fee for the rent of the hall. The manager simply tells the person who wants to lease a hall that the latter will have to pay the cost of heat and lighting, the fee to the caretaker for extra work he is put to, and then a donation to the church, which is also fixed, so that it is pretty nearly the same as a direct fee, isn't it? Of course," he went on, "all the churches do not rent their halls to outsiders, but a number of them centrally located to. The public halls have to pay good and high taxes. I understand that St. George's hall on Bank street pays nearly $700 a year."

THE PLAYTIME OF LIFE.

Let the Boy Have Plenty of Time For Recreation.

Boyhood is the playtime of life. It is the business of a boy to play and that with all the zest which he may put into his work in after years in order that his mind and body may develop the vigor pertaining to man's estate. To this end sports are universally encouraged and boys are offered every opportunity to indulge in play, while child labor laws become more searching and rigid with every passing year. In addition to health and strength, confidence is also developed by the boy who learns to play his part and maintain his caste among other boys. This confidence, coming to the boy almost as an incident, he carries with him through life, and it aids him more than any other one thing to hold up his head among men.

Is your boy timid? Is it difficult to persuade him to make his way among boys? Is he slow to make friends? A little investigation will probably develop that the timid boy has been allowed to play only on rare occasions with other boys. His playtime may not be restricted, but his companionship with other boys has been too closely guarded. Thus handicapped a boy, or girl either for that matter, goes into the world of people carrying a distressing weight of doubt in himself.

Only play will develop this priceless self confidence. The boy who has learned the hard lessons of life when he should have been playing many times does accomplish much in life, but the chances are against him, and he usually makes his way craftily, mistrusting those with whom he is thrown and refusing to credit them with honest motives rather than boldly taking his place among them and relying for his chances of success upon a wholesome confidence in himself.

The lessons learned in boyhood are never forgotten and become an integral part of the life of the man.

Too frequently are childhood's bypaths hung thickly with warning signs. A rollicking boy is told that he is going to be bad. What more natural than that he should be, with such suggestion ringing in his ears?

Tiny children are warned of bears and bugaboos that will catch them, and later danger signals telling about germs and microbes and multitudinous evils are strung along their happy pathway.

Possibly the rod may not be altogether spared, but after all it is the loving hand that leads more quickly than the rod can drive, and it is the boy or girl who is wholesomely loved, not coddled and secluded, through childhood who faces the world later with the best fighting chance.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Honey is said to be a good substitute for cod liver oil.

Celery is a good nerve tonic. It also contains sulphur and helps to ward off rheumatism.

To take the soreness out of a soft, painful corn try binding it up each night with baking soda moistened with a little water.

If the hands are large do not wear tight sleeves. The pressure on the arms will make the hands swell. A tight wristband is as unbecoming to a large hand as a low heel is to a large foot.

An excellent home remedy for burns is pure vaseline. Olive oil will serve the same purpose. The point is to exclude air and dirt from the burned surface, and this either oily substance will do.

Many persons do not know that callous places upon the feet may be kept smooth by the use of the pumice stone. It must not be rubbed heavily, nor must it be allowed to remove too large a callosity. If you employ it daily you will get the best results, and you should buy the smoothest procurable.

Superfluous hair is a very usual affliction, and many requests come for something to remove this unsightly growth. All such remedies must be used with great care, unless one is wise enough to prefer an herb preparation, when no harm need be anticipated. One of the best of these herb depilatories is the celandine leaf. The plant must be steeped in a quart of water, and after the mixture is cooled it should be strained and the liquid used as a wash or a compress, which may remain upon the hair all night. This process is sure, but very slow. In time the hairs will disappear, and should they show any signs of reappearing the celandine may again be used.

MISS MAY MORRIS.

Daughter of William Morris to Lecture on Art Subjects.

Among the interesting people who will lecture in this country in the fall is Miss May Morris. Miss Morris is the daughter of the poet and artist William Morris. She is a keen student of historic design and embroidery, and a practical craftswoman. She learned in the old way—namely, by working from the very beginning in her father's workshop, supplementing this invaluable training by a few years of study in the art schools and museum at Kensington. As William Morris had no other pupil working in this way, her knowledge of his method is unique.

For many years until his death Miss Morris had charge of the designing and most of the work in the embroidery department at Morris & Co.'s. Some of her most important pieces were designed for America, notably a pair of silk curtains called the "Fruit Garden." During the past few years Miss Morris has produced considerable jewelry. She has followed the fortunes of the Arts and Crafts society from its foundation by her father and his friends until the present day and is deeply interested in the movement, which has developed so remarkably in England of late years. She has given lectures on design and embroidery at the Birmingham Municipal School of Art, at Manchester, at the Society of Arts in London and other centers.

While here she will lecture on "Medieval Embroidery," "Pageantry and the Masque," "Historic Costumes" and "Design In Dress."

The Simpler Life.

One hears so much talk about the extravagance and luxury indulged in by the people of this country that it is decidedly refreshing once in awhile to find something that points in the opposite direction.

A striking illustration of the fact that in some respects Americans are learning something about the simpler life, if not the simple life, may be had from a comparison of the dinners served at the White House now and in past generations. And in making this comparison it must be borne in mind that just as the customs of the royal households in England and European countries set the fashions for those countries so, to a certain extent at least, do the usages of the White House influence the customs of this country.

A writer who compares the president's dinners of the present day with those of former times points out the fact that, while the dinners nowadays are more frequent, they are less elaborate. They are over in one hour and a half at the latest, and the courses are fewer and more simple. Formerly no dinner was thought comme il faut unless the table groaned with supplies. The courses were freighted with rich dishes, and the liquors were abundant. The dinners lasted till midnight. It was no small labor to sit them through. Nowadays before going home the ladies have time to chat in the parlor after the dinner and the gentlemen to have a good smoke in the library of the president. The change is surely one to be looked upon with favor and is not without its parallel in the private homes of the country.

Ten or fifteen years ago a smart dinner served to a company of guests might have consisted of twelve or fourteen courses. Today a dinner of that length would be considered to be in poor taste, the modern hostess contenting herself with seven or eight courses at most and in many cases with five or six perfectly served courses.

If the woman of today could also copy the practice of the first lady of the land in making her entertainments more frequent and less elaborate another victory would be gained for the right sort of hospitality.

Girl You'd Hate to Trust.

She who is sugary sweet until she thinks she is alone. Far better be like an alligator pear with the roughness on the outside than resemble the tempting wild plum with bitterness within.

The girl who is careless to return small loans. This habit may spring from heedlessness, but it bears watching.

She who flatters you while she never has a good word for any one else.

The girl who openly boasts of the married men who are in love with her.

The girl who gushes over her love for her parents while she lets her overworked mother mend and launder for her and spends more than her father can afford.

She who dresses lavishly on a small income. There is a distinction between looking well on little and cutting a splurge on nothing a year.

The girl who says she "dotes on children," but whose small brothers and sisters shun her.

She who is prinked out for show views—and a sight when caught unawares. The man who contemplates matrimony should make it a point to see his Angelina off guard.

The girl who is horrified at calling a spade by its "right name," but whose taste in literature is lurid.

She who has great tales of her prowess as a worker, but who never sees any work to be done. The real workers of the world rarely discuss what they do and never need jogs for its doing.

Hot Water Cure.

"There would be less indigestion and fewer sick headaches," said a London doctor, "if people would stick to the hot water cure. The first dose should be taken half an hour before breakfast. This cleanses the alimentary canal and leaves it ready to digest the breakfast. If you don't care to eat fruit for that meal squeeze half a lemon in the water, and that will give you the requisite acid.

"Most sick headaches will disappear before copious drafts of hot water. If you wake up with a headache take a tumblerful of hot water and go back to sleep, and you are almost sure to wake up feeling all right. The water should be freshly boiled."

Lest You Forget.

If you are suffering from nervousness do not overlook the value of deep breathing. Many persons have warded off acute nervous prostration by drawing in deep breaths at frequent intervals during the day.

Lake Grain Rates.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 23.—Grain rates have taken another advance, and now are 2 1-4 cents from the head of the lakes to the lower lake ports. Vesselmen are not soliciting any business even at that rate, as there is enough ore to keep the vessels busy until the end of the season. There is no indication of an advance in ore rates.

Galt Hospital Deficit.

Galt, Ont., Oct. 23.—Galt Hospital Trust annual statement shows the expenditure $8,698.72 and $900 deficit. Galt granted only $1,000, and the cost of 75 free patients was over $2,000. It is proposed to ask council to make up the deficit. The cost per patient was $1.27, as against $1.17 last year.

BARRIE WANTS WIFE BACK

Dramatist Said to be Anxious to Wed Her Again—Offering Her Inducements.

New York, Oct. 26.—The American prints the following London cable:

Having divorced his wife, J. M. Barrie, with the whimsicality often displayed in his stage creatures, wants her back again.

He wants his wife; he loves her; he is willing to have her come back to him. Indeed, he is offering her all sorts of inducements to return.

All England is literally astounded by the sudden change in the affairs of its most popular playwright. It doesn't know what to make of him, for he is going to most unusual lengths to win back the woman who, according to the testimony in the case, openly flouted him for a younger and handsomer man.

For days, it has become known, Barrie has been writing innumerable letters to his wife (she was Mary Ansell, an actress), humbling himself, begging her pardon for having instituted the suit, forgiving her proven misdemeanors and absolutely begging her to wed him again.

He has offered, it became known yesterday, to settle $200,000 upon her in a lump sum if she will again be his wife. In addition to that, he has offered to take her on a trip around the world. More than that, he has requested her to make her own demand for terms, and has declared that he will accede no matter what she wants.

Mrs. Barrie thus far has been altogether unresponsive. Her affections are centered, friends assert, upon Gilbert Cannan, the young critic and dramatist, who was the co-respondent in the divorce suit. The friends do not believe that any appeal of Barrie's will win back his wife, no matter how heart-broken he may be.

NOVA SCOTIA TOWN FLOODED

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 26.—For the past twenty-four hours, this province has been swept by a fierce wind and rain storm, which has wrought great havoc in the farming districts.

In the town of Antigonish, conditions are serious. The houses are partly buried in water and the residents have been forced to abandon the ground floors and seek refuge higher up. In some parts of the town, small houses have been lifted from their foundations and are floating about the streets. In the eastern end of the town the water is five feet deep. The railroad track is flooded several places, and a bad washout has taken place at Sylvan Valley, two miles from the town, where the roadbed was torn away.

In the country, thousands of bushels of potatoes and other vegetables have been destroyed.

MRS. TURNER GIVEN FIFTEEN YEARS SENTENCE

Toronto, Oct. 26.—After he had criticized the action of the jury in bringing in a verdict of a lesser crime than murder for which the death sentence would have been inevitable, Judge Magee on Saturday night sentenced Mrs. Mabel Turner to serve 15 years in Kingston Penitentiary for strangling the infant of Mrs. Annie Authers, which she had adopted for $100. Mrs. Turner gives her age as 32 years, which will bring her out of the gray prison at the age of 47 years, or with good conduct allowance, two and a half years earlier.

Sentence was passed at 7.30, at the close of a curious scene, which many prominent lawyers say is without precedent in any Canadian court. When G. T. Blackstock, K.C., crown prosecutor, rose to move for sentence, he launched into a terrific denunciation of the jury.

N.Y. POLICE TRAIL GIRL'S MURDERER IN RECORD TIME

One Week After Finding a Bleached Skeleton on Long Island, Detectives Arrest and Secure a Confession From Frederick Gebhardt.

New York, Oct. 26.—A year and a half ago a friendless girl was murdered in a forsaken patch of woodland near Islip, L.I. A week ago her bleached and charred skeleton was found, with nothing to indicate its identity but her jewelry and a bill of sale from a German shop. Three days later, through the police of Hamburg, Germany, her identity was established as Anna Luther, though the cables first carried the name as Latter. Sunday night her husband, Frederick Gebhardt, was caught in Astoria, L.I., by a photographer's flashlight, and yesterday he confessed over his signature that he is the murderer. Gebhardt married Anna Luther under the name of Otto Mueller. The confession is as follows:

"About December, 1907, I first met Anna Luther. We were married in February, 1908, and went to Europe to live. We returned in April, 1908. She went to Henry Wertupp's in Newark, N.J., to spend a day or two. On the pretence that I was going to rent an apartment for us to live in, I returned to my wife and home in Astoria.

"I met Anna again on April 8 in Newark and we went to address in 34th street, New York, and then to Jamaica, L.I. We stayed at Jamaica until next day.

"April 9 we went to Bayshore and we walked about, and I showed her some property. I got into an argument with her about some money matters and I turned away and wanted to go back. She followed me up, screaming, and I shot her in the head. I did not look at her and don't remember whether I shot her more than once.

"I want to state that I did not kill Anna Luther for her money, as the newspapers have stated. My original reason for marrying Anna was that I did not care to live with my first wife any longer, but as she, my first wife, had given me a child, my desire to again see my child caused me to want to get rid of Anna Luther and return to my first wife and child.

Gebhardt told the police he never thought it "worth while" to go back to bury her. Instead, he wrote letters to her friends in Newark and Germany, telling them that Anna was in poor health and had gone to Florida. Then "they quit bothering about her."

Gebhardt, when he was in Germany, bought two German police dogs, and it was by tracing the dogs that the detectives found his home in Astoria.

It was first learned from the Hamburg-American Line that all baggage coming on the steamship Amerika when she docked on April 5, 1908, was handled by the New Jersey Transfer Co. of Hoboken. Friends of the slain girl said she had declared the baggage brought over consisted of three trunks. She also told of the trained police dogs that were purchased by "Mueller" in Belgium.

Through the kindness of the officials of the express company their books were obtained and the record found of three trunks belonging to an Otto Mueller having been handled by them. These, the entry showed, were kept at the company's office three days and then called for. The clerk in charge, when asked about the dogs, said one of the wagon boys had cared for them. This boy, John O'Boyle, has since become an iron moulder and is employed in a foundry near by. He remembered the case because he had been given only 25 cents for the three days' work. He explained that they were delivered to an expressman who lived on Washington street, Hoboken.

Search on this street brought one Christopher Kossow of No. 400 Washington street, to light. He remembered the case because he had been told not to divulge the address in Astoria to which he had delivered the goods.

He finally found the house. A visit was made to a nearby saloon and the bartender was asked if he knew where a watchdog could be bought.

"Yes," was the answer. "A man named Gebhardt, down the street, has some he brought back from Germany a year ago last April. He wants to sell one of them."

Gebhardt was arrested on the street. He attempted to escape, but was run down.

BLYTHE GOES TO PRISON FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS

Toronto, Oct. 26.—Walter Blythe escapes the gallows. With the verdict of manslaughter, brought in by the second jury to hold this man's life in their hands, and the sentence of Judge Magee, that he shall serve 18 years in Kingston Penitentiary, one of the most celebrated cases in Canadian criminal history finally closed on Saturday, and this man, whose fate has been on every tongue for nearly a year, goes from the limelight of a unique publicity to a long silence behind the gray walls at Kingston.

Three Boilers Explode.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 26.—An explosion of three boilers in the Pabst Brewing Co. yesterday morning resulted in the death of one employe, the injury of four others and property damage estimated at $250,000. The explosion was caused by the bursting of an 18-inch steam pipe.

BAPTIST LAYMEN HELD A BANQUET

Toronto, Oct. 26.—An evidence that the Baptist Laymen's Missionary movement is of splendid vitality was afforded at the banquet representative of Ontario and Quebec, held in the lecture room of Massey Hall, on Thanksgiving Day. With an attendance of nearly 800 men, the chairman, S. J. Moore, was apparently warranted in making the statement that the gathering was perhaps the largest of a denominational character ever held in Canada.

Banquet to Congress Delegates.

Toronto, Oct. 26.—Over 600 of the delegates to the annual congress of the Salvation Army attended the banquet tendered by the Toronto corps at the Temple yesterday evening. Commissioner Coombs, in making the farewell speech, complimented them upon the number that attended and said that it was the most successful conference that the army had ever known in its history.

WILL LOAN MONEY TO STOP EMIGRATION

Stockholm, Oct. 26.—With a view to stemming the tide of emigration which threatens to deplete the country of agricultural laborers, a national subscription has been started to obtain funds for loans to laborers left unemployed after the recent big strike. The loans are intended to enable the purchase of small farms and will be made repayable within ten years. The fund will be administered by the Anti-Emigration Society of Sweden.

MAY BE FIRST GOVERNOR OF SOUTH AFRICA

Hon. Herbert Gladstone Spoken of as Governor of the New Commonwealth.

London, Oct. 26.—Rt. Hon. Herbert J. Gladstone will, according to The Daily Telegraph, be the first Governor-General of United South Africa.

Mr. Gladstone has not been considered a great success as Secretary for Home Affairs and there have been made hints of his removal to another sphere. There is some doubt, however, whether his appointment as Governor-General would prove acceptable to South Africa, in view of the fact that the name of his father was associated with Majuba Hill.

The removal of Mr. Gladstone would lead to interesting Cabinet changes, possibly to the promotion of John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, to the Home Secretaryship.

Rt. Hon. Mr. Gladstone has been Secretary for Home Affairs since 1905, and has represented Leeds W. in Parliament since 1880. He was born in Downing street, London, Jan. 7, 1854, the youngest son of the Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, for whom he acted as private secretary 1880-1. Educated at Eton and Oxford, he was history lecturer at Keble College 1877-1880, in which year he contested Middlesex County for Parliament. DID GOVERNMENT REPRESS TESTIMONY?

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 26.—At yesterday's hearing of the W. L. Russell extradition case before Commissioner Walther in the District Court, J. W. Halefhill, Lima, Russell's attorney, charged the Ontario Government with a deliberate repression of testimony favorable to Russell.

One of the chief points brought out by the prosecution against Russell was the deposition of a mining engineer, J. G. McGee, who had been sent by the syndicate interests of Law & Russell to examine the Blue Bell Mine, which Russell is alleged to have used in a fraudulent scheme. McGee stated in his deposition that his reports when used for advertising had been changed by Russell with fraudulent intent.

Before making this deposition, McGee had been discharged by the Blue Bell syndicate for drunkenness, Halefhill said.

REPORT THAT SPAIN WILL BACK UP

Madrid, Oct. 26.—Lieut.-Gen. De Luque, Minister of War in the new Liberal Cabinet, in an interview yesterday, confirmed the report that the Government had decided not to push further the Moroccan campaign. He said that if the Liberals had been in power before, they would have avoided the bloody and costly war.

From now on the Minister of War said the work of the army would be that of pacification and not of domination. De Luque added, although the Liberals disapproved the recent acts of repression at Barcelona, Ferrer had been proved guilty on evidence and had been legally and judiciously condemned. The Republicans won at yesterday's municipal elections in Madrid.

The Government has made public the documents in the Ferrer case in the form of a brochure, which has been sent out broadcast.

THREW RINGS OUT OF CAR WINDOW

San Francisco, Oct. 26.—J. E. The diamonds belonged to Mrs. Chilberg. She had placed them in a glass of water and set them on a window sill. Then she and her husband went to breakfast.

Mr. Chilberg returned to the room first and before closing the window, he threw the water out. When Mrs. Chilberg told him of the contents of the glass, he chartered an engine and directed the search along the roadway for the gems. They were not recovered.

JOS. HUNTER ENDED LIFE IN LINDSAY JAIL

Lindsay, Oct. 26.—Joseph Hunter, the Bobcaygeon hotelkeeper, awaiting trial for the murder of his wife, hanged himself during Sunday night in his cell in the county jail.

Friday night he retired early apparently in the best of spirits. About 7 o'clock Saturday morning his body was found hanging to the cell iron work. Hunter had torn a sheet of bed clothing into strips, fastened one end to the top bar of the cell and put a noose around his neck. He had tied his feet together with his braces and his hands with his necktie, and after using an upturned pail to stand on, had knocked it away and strangled.

Hunter, an hotelman, shot his wife to death one night last August. He had been drinking heavily for some time and had domestic quarrels. When brought up in the fall Assizes, his trial was traversed until spring to permit of evidence being secured by the defence to prove that he was an epileptic. He leaves one child.

Being thus unmanageable, she struck with the bluff of her port bow a glancing blow to the Hamonic, which was at the freight shed dock at Point Edward.

CANADIAN IS MURDERED IN CHICAGO

Philip H. Hardy Shot by His Landlady Whom He had Angered — He Was From Toronto.

Toronto, Oct. 26.—The police received a telegram from Chicago yesterday morning that Philip Harrington Hardy of Toronto was shot and killed on Sunday night by Mrs. Van Eyck, who is 28 years old. She is now under arrest and charged with murder.

It appears that Hardy was boarding at the woman's house and that he angered her when he washed his clothes in the kitchen. According to the message Mrs. Van Eyck ran to her room and secured her revolver. She then went to Hardy's room. He exclaimed, "You dare not use that." Thereupon she shot him through the heart.

Mr. Hardy was an old Toronto boy. He was born in Denison avenue 23 years ago and had many friends here. He was a structural ironworker by trade and went to Chicago about a years ago. He first worked at his trade, but later secured a good position with the Pennsylvania Railroad, where he was working at the time of his death.

James E. Hardy, a tight-rope walker, who is living at 48 Fuller street, is a brother. "You know," said Mr. Hardy, when seen at his residence last night, "I can hardly believe that poor Phil is gone. The first intimation that I received of the sad affair was this morning when Detective Barton notified me. Phil was my assistant during my European tour. In fact he was with me when I was nearly killed at Alexandra Palace by a defective wire, and he had a narrow escape at the time."

E. J. Humphrey, the undertaker, left yesterday afternoon for Chicago to bring the body to Toronto.

YOUR BLOOD IS POISONED

If You Suffer From Headaches or Neuralgia.

Frequent attacks of Headaches or Neuralgia are Nature's warnings of Blood Poisoning. The pain is due simply to the tortured nerves, inflamed by the blood being overloaded with impurities, because of inactive bowels, kidneys or skin.

There is usually chronic Constipation and the foul matter, instead of passing from the body, is absorbed by the blood. The kidneys are not as strong as they should be and fail to filter from the the blood, the necessary amount of impure matter.

Instead of the skin throwing off one and a half pounds of waste matter every day, it becomes inactive and does only half its work, leaving three quarters of a pound of this waste to poison the body. Headache powders and pain killers simply numb the nerves and have no helpful action on the organs causing this poisoning of the blood. To cure Headaches and Neuralgia, the blood must be purified, which can be done only by making the kidneys, bowels and skin healthy and active.

"Fruit-a-tives", made from concentrated and intensified fruit juice, is the greatest blood purifying medicine.

"Fruit-a-tives", or "Fruit Liver Tablets", is a scientific cure for Headaches and Neuralgia, and never fails to cure because "Fruit-a-tives" stops the cause of these troubles.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE TURNER VERDICT

No doubt Mr. Blackstock was right enough when he said the verdict of the jury in this case was not equal to the occasion. He says the crime was either murder or nothing. It was be in the pitiable Robinson case. The people in the latter say it was "nothing," while in the former they say it was 'manslaughter.'

These verdicts are no doubt due to the absurd manner in which the department of justice at Ottawa interferes with the administration of punishment. We say this in no political sense. It has sometimes happened under Conservative rule. Faddists should have no place in the administration of justice. Improvements in mankind are not made in a decade. They are the slow growth of centuries. The attempt to introduce "the latest humanitarian methods" by sudden removal will bring about just what it is bringing about, viz., a complete disintegration of the administration of justice. The Blythe case as treated by the Minister of Justice has provoked extreme resentment in the country. It will lead to some poor fellow's being hanged who should have been merely "manslaughtered." Severity is not as a principle of conduct desirable, but discipline is. At the present time and in the present year the quality of crime in Ontario has made the province a disgrace to civilization. The faddists do not foresee all they think they do. Men and women in governing positions "fancy" themselves too much. They want to be known in the distant future as well as in the advertising present as wonder-workers. It is this grandstand spirit that is at the bottom of our educational fads. It is true that law and fact have little to do with each other. Law is simply order and the administration of one is the administration of the other. But fact is fact and if law and fact conflict, law must follow fact and that is just where the trouble arises in all these cases. The department of Justice takes so much upon itself sometimes that people rebel and as in the former case, do what they think is just regardless of law. At any rate it is universally agreed that the Blythe case is a positive disgrace and it is being shown conclusively that if the courts keep on with their legal refinements the people will administer the law while the courts wait. Too much form and red tape is unbearable. To advocate the abolition of the jury, however, is to put us in the hands of the department and of the courts who would lengthen the torture by appeals and probably the loss of justice in the end. The "people" best understand their own circumstances and conditions.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The famous Crystal Palace, of London, England, is to be sold up. It has proved a financial failure.

Our own Capt. Bernier sails for the Pole next year. All those wishing to send messages or parcels will please forward them to him at once at Quebec.

The Germans have discovered a new method of making steel from low-grade iron that will give them almost a monopoly of the steel trade, but the four fools (see Globe) don't know that Protection is killing them.

Cook's Cotton Root Compound.

Address: The Cook Medicine Co., Toronto, Ont. (formerly Windsor)

We have asked the opinions of not less than thirty representative men of this city concerning the Blythe business, and one and all express themselves as greatly shocked. Brutality seems to be at a premium, at least in Ontario.

While Sir Frederick Borden has been relieved by a court of law from the charges of immorality made against him, it is not likely that the Church will take steps to have him cannonized as a saint.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

The latest despatches say that Sir Frederick Borden will resign from Parliament.

Mr. Laurier has announced that next year Capt. Bernier may go north again, and stay north as long as he likes, which means that he can make a trip to the North Pole if he feels like it. Mr. Laurier might load up another vessel with certain political grafters and then give them the same privilege, without raising much of a kick from the country.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

A Berlin despatch states that Germany is determined to foster home trade and keep out the foreign, and this aim is apparent throughout the new taxation. Large increases in the price of English and other imported goods have already resulted from the new taxes, and it is certain that they will cause a further decrease in British exports to Germany.—Trade Review.

And yet the Globe will persist in attacking the "folly" of Protection.

That they are pretending to "fear a tariff war" so persistently of late in Washington, shows what's coming.

The people are at last "getting on to it that the attacks on the French" are being a little too adroitly handled by Sir Wilfrid altogether. Le Canada pretends that "the French are in danger" and replies accordingly, whereas the only objection ever taken to our Quebec friends is that they are not content to call themselves plain "Canadians" as we are. Their race-madness stands four-square against the brotherhood of men. Let us drop this pride of race and be content to be men and women. It is only a form of snobbishness, anyhow.

A man west of Toronto has got a verdict of $5,000 for the alienation of his wife's affections, a fairly good solution for affections that were obviously none too firmly set.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

"Mr. Smiff" is astray here. He is evidently not a married man. It isn't the 'affections.' It's the bother. To have a man's household upset in this way, is worth something handsome, even if the affections are only worth bankrupt prices. The "pity o' it" lies, it is true, not in the breach of trust itself. However, somebody ought to be made to suffer and there is no reason why the husband should have to stand all the inconvenience. We agree with "Smiff" in the motive and direction of his sneer, but not in his idea of the pecuniary punishment involved.

Although the proposition is not a new one, and has been repeatedly advocated, it has been reserved for the present Ontario Government to deal in a practical way with what is called "prison labour." That it is not only wrong, but injurious, to prisoners undergoing sentence, to keep them without employment, has long been made evident. But the subject has been more or less surrounded with difficulties which need not at the moment be discussed. One way of employing prisoners, without materially interfering with any accepted industry, has been, as already said, repeatedly brought forward. After Dominion Day, 1910, it is now announced, the prisoners in the Ontario Central Prison, will be employed, partly in constructing the new prison, and also in crushing stone that is to be sent out to the various municipalities at a reasonable price to enable them to build new roads and improve the existing ones. Thus, those undergoing punishment will contribute to the welfare of the Province, without competing with other labour, and will, in fact, be performing "honest labour," which will promote reform and restoration to good citizenship and society. The old statute labour theory has long since been exploded in connection with road making. Other labour has not been forthcoming in any adequate degree; and roads exist throughout the land, to the great injury of the agriculturists and in consequence, the injury of trade and commerce generally. The wise decision of the Ontario Government will greatly aid in the creation of "good roads," for which there is now so urgent a demand. The Province of Quebec has followed Ontario in connection with the pulp regulations. It can, with advantage, do likewise in this prison labor matter."—Trade Review.

No doubt there is a lot of truth in all this, but the secret of having good roads where they have good roads is in the constant repair of them. Have we worked out our system of repair yet?

AFTER SUFFERING TEN YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MARLTON, N.J.—I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me new life. I suffered for ten years with serious female troubles, inflammation, ulceration, indigestion, nervousness, and could not sleep. Doctors gave me up, as they said my troubles were chronic. I was in despair, and did not care whether I lived or died, when I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so I began to take it, and am well again and relieved of all my suffering."—Mrs. GEORGE JORDY, Box 40, Marlton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

Don't stir up a rough house frightful.
Have a merry heart delightful;

Whene'er you're discontented
Or when things don't come your way,
When the whole world seems demented
And won't let you have your way.
Don't go round and start a-kicking.
Don't you start out fights a-picking.
Chances are you'll get a licking.
Smile!

Or your wife won't treat you right,

There were none on sale; dealers report prices unchanged, at $7.75 for selects, fed and watered, and $7.50 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 23 were 2300 cattle, 2500 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 500 calves.

The offerings on the market this morning consisted of 1400 cattle, 1225 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 400 calves. A feature of the trade was the stronger feeling in the market for cattle, and prices scored an advance of ¼c per lb., notwithstanding the fact that the supply was somewhat larger than a week ago. The average quality of the stock was rather better than usual, which were mostly from Ontario points, there being only five carloads of northwest ranchers on the market. The attendance of buyers was large, and, as the weather was cloudy and cool, the demand was active, and a brisk trade was done at the higher range of prices. There was considerable demand from packers for canners, of which the offerings were fairly large, but prices for these were also firmer. Choice steers sold at 5c to 5¼c; good at 4¾c to 4⅞c; fair at 4c to 4½c; medium at 3¾c to 3⅞c; good bulls at 3¾c to 4¼c per lb., and canners at $2.00 to $2, with cows at $1.65 to $1.75 per cwt.

Cables from Liverpool stated that the weather was wet, and trade in cattle slow. There was no change in the condition of the market, except that prices for cows, heifers and ranchers were ½c per lb. higher than a week ago, the latter selling at 10¾c to 12c per lb.

In spite of the continued heavy receipts of lambs, a stronger feeling developed in the market, and prices showed an advance of ⅛c per lb. The demand from local and outside buyers is very active, but there is no business doing for export account, as prices in all the foreign markets have been ruling very low all season, for both sheep and lambs. An active trade was done in lambs at 5⅛c to 6c per lb. Sheep met with a fair sale, and prices were unchanged from a week ago, at 3¾c to 3⅞c per lb. There continued to be a good demand for calves, and, as supplies are small and limited, prices rule firm, at $3 to $15 each, as to size and quality. A firmer feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and an advance of 10c per cwt. was paid in some cases. The supply was fairly large, for which the demand from packers was good, and an active trade was done in selected lots at $8.10 to $8.60 per cwt., weighed off cars. Cable advices from all the leading foreign markets on Canadian bacon were stronger, and noted an advance of 1s to 2s per cwt., on account of the continued scarcity.

A RUNAWAY PRINCESS

Where True Love Conquered Station and Titles.

By CURRAN RICHARD GREENLEY.

"It is useless, your highness, to protest against the things that are." The baroness smoothed down her laces with plump little hands upon which gleamed innumerable rings. Marie Amalie Constantia Louise—"and all the rest of it," as she said to herself—princess of Doldrums, arose from her low chair with a most unroyal impatience. Swish, swish, went the silken skirts over the polished floor, and the Baroness von Griefenstein wisely kept silence.

Marie Amalie stood at the window and drummed a tattoo upon the pane. Below the little fountain tossed its laughing waters and the cuirassiers' band poured forth the national air. Marie Amalie was tired of fountains that played in the sunlight, tired of the national hymn, sick to the soul of the duchy of Doldrums and all it contained—all because a few short weeks before the baroness had taken her young charge with her train to the hunting schloss and then spent a glad, never to be forgotten day.

Somehow—nobody knows, for such things have a way of managing themselves—the equerries and the princess' maids drifted two by two down the forest alleys in the languorous afternoon. The baroness nodded in her chair, and Marie Amalie found herself alone.

When Marr Davent rode from the gasthaus that morning he drew long breaths of the forest freshness. For miles beneath the arching lindens of the duke's forest he rode at a walk, the reins hanging loose on the bay's neck, singing snatches of college glees and thinking of the faroff country whither he would soon be going.

He raised his eyes and looked down the linden reaches—looked and woke. So near that the bay reared in sudden fright and Davent slipped from the saddle and stood, hat in hand, Marie Amalie came toward him through the great twilight.

She did not attempt to excuse herself to herself, and to no one else unthat imperious young woman vouchsafe rhyme or reason for her deeds. It was temptation, pure and simple, at a time when the girl was sore imbittered against the traditional shackles. A prisoned thing, bound and dumb in her jewels and laces, she had known the shame of the old roue's approval when he came to view her, as one would the points of a prize mare, and pronounced her fit to be Duchess of Grafsland. "Fit!" Marie Amalie ground her white teeth together at the remembrance of it. But she smiled with level brows into the brown eyes of Davent as the handsome head was bowed before her, and then trouble began for the Baroness Griefenstein.

Two hours later they parted under the lindens, he believing her some nobleman's daughter in the train of the young princess, she knowing all the facts about him. Marie Amalie came up the linden walk, thinking deeply. An American, it suited her exactly. She thought of the yacht that lay even now at Havre; thought, too, of the doddering old Duke of Grafsland, who had buried his second wife not a year before, the pale, pretty princess out of the north, who had been sold to him, as they were selling her.

Marie Amalie went softly up the marble steps, through the portico and down the hall, her footsteps making no sound in the thick carpet. She drew back the portiere that hung in straight, heavy folds. There was a smothered cry from within, a rustle of paper, but before the baroness could close the drawer a white hand closed firmly upon her wrists.

"What are you doing here among the private papers of Duke Fritz?"

The baroness sank down, gasping, speechless, as Marie Amalie towered over her. Then the girl made a hasty examination of the drawer. The key was in the lock. A fragment of wax that adhered to the keyhole told the secret of the baroness' access to the papers of the young duke who had killed himself in that very room years before, when the Baroness Griefenstein had been a famous court beauty and Marie Amalie but a child in the cradle.

Only a bundle of yellowed letters, written in the delicate Italian script affected by the women of that generation. Marie held them thoughtfully; then, with sudden impulse, retied the faded ribbon about them, locked the drawer and placed the key in her bosom. The letters she kept in her hand. With a slow smile around the mischievous red mouth, she passed through the portiere out into the sunlight. She held the key to the situation.

The Baroness Griefenstein was a sensible woman. She knew herself at the mercy of the girl whom heretofore she had ruled relentlessly. Therefore through the weeks that followed she temporized, telling herself that it was only for a time. In a month the girl would be safely married. There were various expeditions to the forest, evening walks, when only the baroness guarded the pretty princess. The young American still lingered at the gasthaus and rode his bay through the duke's forest.

Meanwhile the women came and went, intent upon the preparations for the marriage. All around the luxurious room were scattered the silks and laces, jewels strewing the tables, and in their midst Marie Amalie at the window, her eyes upon the forest, heedless of it all. A horseman rode down the winding road and turned in the saddle for a long look at the palace. Some day he would ride from her forever to his land of "hearts content" over the sea, leaving her to the desolate pomp of the Duchess of Grafsland. She turned to the baroness, and their eyes met. The baroness shivered. The crisis that she had been dreading had come. Marie Amalie leaned down, hushing her voice to a whisper, "I will do it, and you must help me!" And the baroness knew that she would keep that word.

The old duke, her father, could hardly believe his eyes and ears when Marie Amalie dutifully accepted her betrothal presents from the old Duke of Grafsland and even bent her white brow to his kiss. Through all the festivities that followed she moved, a queenly figure, but there was a wicked light in the brown eyes, a mutinous curve to the red eyes, and the days of the Baroness Griefenstein were not days of pleasure.

The Princess Marie Amalie lay in her darkened room. Once the doctor would have let in the light, but she protested, and finally he left her alone with a sleeping draft. As he measured it, going to the window with his back to the bed, a white hand dashed out toward the little case that held his drugs. Only an instant, but as the door closed behind him Marie Amalie laughed low to herself.

The baroness was on the point of rebellion when Marie Amalie before her protesting eyes poured a generous dose into the chocolate and bade her swallow it.

"I am afraid. It will mean imprisonment, banishment."

"Take it" (the sweet voice was like steel); "take it quietly. The letters shall be yours when I am safe." The baroness drained the chocolate with quivering lips.

Davent, waiting with a closed carriage at the postern gate, heard the click of the sentry's heels as the baroness came through the gateway. A long black cloak came down to her feet, but the tawny gray hair and the password were sufficient for the sentry.

Without a word they entered the carriage and were driven through the night past the gates, where the baroness gave the word. When the morning broke they were well away to Havre.

The princess had issued orders that on no account were her maids to enter her room until summoned. But as the morning wore away and no sound came from beyond the closed doors they braved her anger and entered to find the princess' bed empty, unused, and in a chair by the window the Baroness Griefenstein, with an empty chocolate cup at her elbow, lost in a drugged stupor.

There was much hurrying to and fro in the duchy of Doldrums, but of their Princess Marie Amalie there was never a trace.

* * * * * * *

The little Lutheran minister blinked and hesitated. But in the state of New York there is no Alamancha de Gotha, and, although Marie Amalie von Halsburg awakened an old sound in his ears of the fatherland, the suspicion seemed too utterly impossible to be entertained for a moment. So he went on with the ceremony, and Marie Amalie Davent passed from the shadow of the quaint little church out into the free sunlight of a land that knoweth neither princess nor principalities.

He Called the Bluff.

A Buffalo man once lost patience with a famous ladies' tailor in Paris who had failed to make a decently fitting gown for his wife.

After several wearisome refittings and many annoying incidents the tailor was told that the costume was a hopeless misfit and would not be accepted. When suit was brought to recover the price of the dress a distinguished American lawyer who then had an office in Paris urged his irate fellow countryman to settle on the best terms possible. "You will get no favor, perhaps little justice, as a wealthy foreigner in a French court. Pay now and save money."

"Not a cent," said the Buffalonian. He had plenty of time and would at least give the eminent tailor a good run for his money in the courts. "Moreover, no verdict that he can get will compensate him for the damage that will be done his professional reputation by the evidence that will be made public in the trial."

As a matter of fact, the case never came to trial. The plaintiff suddenly withdrew the complaint and proceedings ended. And so tickled was the American lawyer by his client's courage and success in standing out against imposition of this sort in Paris that he refused to present any bill for his own services.—Buffalo Commercial.

Serpents' Ribs.

King Solomon acknowledged that there were "three things which are too wonderful for me—yea, four which I know not," and one of these was "the way of a serpent upon a rock." For hundreds of years after the time of Solomon the snake's mode of progression remained a mystery. Latter day men of science have learned that his snakeship's ribs furnish him with a means of progression, so instead of having a pair or two pairs of "feet" they really have from 150 to 200 pairs. Aristotle thought that serpents had as many ribs as there are days in a month, but had he examined a python he would have readily detected his mistake, that species having 400. Snakes move in this way: Each vertebra supports a pair of ribs, which act like a pair of legs, the extremities being connected by a broad plate. The hind part of this plate is free, and when the ribs are moved forward that end is raised, so that it takes hold of the surface underneath, even though it be glass, the straightening of the reptile propelling it forward.

A Joke Lost.

A lady who was very plain looking called on a friend. This friend's little girl came into the room, and her mother introduced her.

"But, mamma, isn't she awfully homely?" said the "young hopeful."

"Why, Laura, you mustn't say such things; it isn't polite."

"I meant it only as a joke."

"But, dear, how much more of a joke it would have been if you had said, 'How pretty she is!'"—[illegible]

WHITE MEN'S MAGIC.

Indian Chief Terrified by an Experiment With a Hand Glass.

A curious device is known as the hand glass. This glass is open at top and bottom, but the top is smaller than the bottom and can easily be covered by the palm of the hand. The lower rim is ground smooth, so as to fit perfectly tight when attached to the plate of the air pump. Then if a person places his hand over the top of the glass while the air is exhausted by the pump he will suddenly find himself unable to remove his hand. The air, pressing down, will hold it firmly attached to the glass. No wonder the Indian chief of the Pottawatomie tribe was terrified when the white men made this experiment on him.

The story is told that the chief, with other warriors, made a delegation to Washington. They were anxious to find out if the white men knew any magic. The chief was asked to place his hand over one of these glasses and told that he would be unable to move as much as a finger. The Indian, with great contempt for persons who could believe such a thing, placed his palm over the glass, and when the air was exhausted he was terrified to find that he could not get away. All his braves were ready to tomahawk their white brothers for casting spells on their chief.—Chicago News.

FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS.

Any Number May Play This Interesting and Instructive Game.

This game is played by any number of persons, who sit in a row or circle. One begins by repeating some familiar quotation, either prose or poetry, and the next must then give one the first word of which begins with the same letter as the last word of the quotation just given. The game goes on thus as long as the players choose.

Any one who does not give his quotation in one minute or any other time agreed upon before the game begins pays a forfeit, or instead of a forfeit he may be required to leave the game, and it may be thus continued till there is only one player left, who, of course, is declared the winner.

The following examples show how the quotations may follow each other:

Know ye the land where the cypress and myrtle?—Byron.

Man never is, but always to be, blest.—Pope.

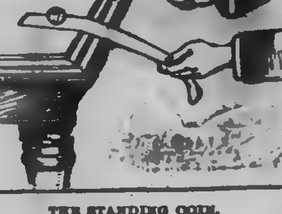
Belgium's capital had gathered then
Her beauty and her chivalry.
—Byron.

Come and walk with us, the walrus did beseech.—Carroll.

By torch and trumpet fast arrayed,
Each horseman drew his battle blade.
—Campbell.

The Standing Coin.

Take a long, narrow strip of paper and upon it place a five cent piece in an upright position, as shown in the picture. Take the end of the paper in the left hand and strike it rapidly and forcibly with the right. Give a sudden pull, and you have the paper in your hand, while the coin stands in the position it did before. It would seem as if the coin must fall, but try it, and with a little practice you will be able to accomplish the trick.



THE STANDING COIN.

I Sell My City of Rome.

All the players sit in a circle. The leader says the first sentence, and the rest repeat it in turn. The leader then adds another, and both are repeated till the whole is complete. Players who blunder are put out.

The sentences run in this way:

"I sell you my city of Rome. In this city there is a street; in this street there is a house; in this house there is a court; in this court there is a garden; in this garden there is a staircase; at the top of this staircase there is a room; in this room there is a bed; near this bed there is a table; on this table there is a cloth; on this cloth there is a cage; in this cage there is a bird.

"The bird says, I am in a cage. The cage says, I am on a table. The table says, I am near a bed. The bed says, I am in a room. The room says, I am at the top of the staircase. The staircase says, I am in a garden. The garden says, I am in a court. The court says, I am in a house. The house says, I am in a street—and here is my city of Rome sold!"

FAIRMOUNT CHURCH REACHED THE HALF CENTURY MARK

The semi-centenary exercises of the Fairmount Methodist church and the memorial services commemoration the half century mark, reached in the history of the congregation of Fairmount church, Cavan, were held last Sunday, and on the following Monday, the services of which were especially interesting and important. The preacher chosen was an old Cavan boy, Rev. M. E. Wilson, B.A., whose boyhood days were spent not far from the church, but who at present has a charge at Dunsford. Rev. Mr. Wilson's text at the morning service was "The Stone Rejected by the builders," and in the evening "What Mean These Stones?"

The congregations were large and the sermons appropriate to the occasion, and much appreciated.

On Monday evening a grand supper was given in the Sunday school room of the church. Fowl and other varieties of edibles were in evidence in large quantities, and the large number present thoroughly enjoyed the sumptuous feast. Afterwards an excellent programme, in which the Orpheus male quartette and Miss Hill, elocutionist, of this city, took part, was carried out. Rev. J. N. Clarry, B.A., the present pastor, presided, and gave an interesting account of the opening exercises of the church half a century ago. The Rev. R. Fighting was then in charge, and Rev. Wm. Scott preached the dedicatory sermon and presented the Bible used in the present celebration. Rev. Mr. Wilson also spoke and referred briefly to the retrospect and prospects of the church and gave a list of the names of the fathers of the congregation who had been active in its organization. Whatever the next half century might bring forth, the present semi-centennial exercises will pass into the history of the congregation for many a day to be remembered.

INTERESTING EVENT FOR ST. JOHN'S CONGREGATION

Dedication Festival Extending Over Two Sundays—His Lordship, the Bishop of Toronto, Will be Present—Formal Opening of New Rectory.

On Sunday, October 31st, and Sunday, November 7th, the dedication festival of St. John's church will be held. The event will mark the birthday of St. John's parish, the beautiful church on the hill having been erected just seventy-four years. The sacred edifice was re-opened after restoration twenty-seven years ago next All Saints' Day, Monday, November 1st.

The dedication festival this year will be honored by the presence of the right reverend the Lord Bishop of Toronto, whom the whole congregation are invited to meet at a reception in the rectory on Monday, November 1st, from 5 to 6 and 8 to 10 p.m.

FORMAL OPENING OF RECTORY.

The reception will be made the formal opening of the handsome new rectory on the church's own property, corner of Sheridan and Brock streets, erected by the congregation in 1908-9. The architect of this work was John E. Belcher, C.E., who also planned and supervised the large and commodious new vestry, opened some eighteen months ago, and which beautiful adjunct to the sacred building is pronounced to be second to no other Anglican vestry in the diocese. The committee entrusted with the duty of providing this new rectory was as follows;—Messrs. Peter Campbell, chairman; Dr. Halliday, W. H. Cluxton, Jos. Mills, Harry Long, Chas. H. J. Mitchell. This valuable property is vested for the congregation in a Board of Trust composed of Dr. Boucher, Dr. Halliday; Dr. Burnham, Messrs. Peter Campbell and Chas. H. J. Mitchell.

The rector, Rev. Canon Davidson trusts that the rectory may be widely used for the general advantage of the parish and church. He invites every parishioner to feel a personal share in the house, where a warm welcome will always be found within its walls.

MARGUERITE CLARKE

Who is starring this season in "The Wishing Ring," under the management of the Shuberts. Grand Opera House next Thursday, Oct. 28th. Seats now on sale.

Marguerite Clarke, perhaps one of the best known musical comedy stars, has been cast for a serious role in the whimsical comedy, "The Wishing Ring," by Owen Davis, which the Shuberts will present at the Grand theatre next Thursday evening, Oct. 28th, for the first time. The character is that of a simple country girl, the daughter of a poverty-stricken clergyman, whose innocence and sweetness awaken the interest of a young millionaire. All of the scenes of the play are laid in Devonshire, England, where the little country girl is supposed to live with her father. On account of her acts of charity and ministrations to the poor, the parishioners know the child as "the parson's Sally." Her knowledge of human nature may not be broad, but she is led into the belief that nature's gifts are to be snared by all alike. Accordingly, Sally enters the rose garden at Annesley Chase, where, during one of her incursions, she meets a young English nobleman. As he is dressed in hunting garb, the child mistakes him for the gardener, and tells him the story of her life. He is so impressed with her good nature that he allows her the freedom of the garden, giving her all the flowers that she can carry away. Complications set in during the second act when the real gardener of Annesley Chase appears on the scene. Being a man of good looks, manners and good breeding, the child is easily led into the belief that he is the master of the Chase, and for reasons unknown to her has assumed a disguise. She makes known her belief to an American girl, who is called "The Goddess," whereupon the latter makes love to the real gardener, believing him, of course, to be the possessor of a title. Sally, however, remains true to her first friend and the play ends happily for all concerned.

Mr. Davis, the author, who is a Harvard graduate, is entirely familiar with the popular elements of the drama, and it goes without saying that in "The Wishing Ring" he has not overlooked any of the essential features which go to make his last play a success. Although entirely fantastical in theme—most of the central story, in fact—Mr. Davis has introduced a sufficient amount of every day affairs to make "The Wishing Ring" something more than a thing of imagination.

PIONEER MEMBER OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH IS DEAD

On the morning of October 25th, 1909, at her residence, 102 Dublin st., Mrs. John Hazlitt, aged 82 years and 3 months, fell asleep. The late Mrs. Hazlitt was born in Belfast, Ireland, July 15th, 1827. When 12 years of age her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dick, came to Canada, settling in Kingston, where she resided until her marriage with the late John Hazlitt, on July 25th, 1850. For 50 years Mrs. Hazlitt resided in Otonabee and during that time watched the transformation from a wilderness into a beautiful country. On the death of her husband in June 66th, 1899, she removed to Peterborough, residing on Harvey street for the past ten years. Mrs. Hazlitt was one of the oldest members of St. Paul's church, she removing from St. Andrew's when the late Rev. Mr. Roger, with a band of faithful followers, erected what is known as St. Paul's church. Her life was full of kind thoughts and influences. She was always present at the services of sanctuary and it was a great trial to her when she was no longer able to attend divine worship at her church. Her tired body is at rest. Her spirit is with the Lord.

Mrs. Hazlitt is survived by one son, Thomas G., of Otonabee, and seven daughters, Mrs. Howson and Mrs. Dickson of Quill Lake; Mrs. Milbar, of Oxbow; Mrs. Frank Sanderson, of Smith; Mrs. John Lanchashire, of Otonabee; Mrs. Roland Johnson, of Lakefield and Miss Emmeline Hazlitt, of this city, and twenty-five grand children. Also one sister, Mrs. Murray, of Kingston. Another sister, Mrs. W. Robinson, of Kingston, passed away on Oct. 24th, a few hours before Mrs. Hazlitt. We extend our hearts' sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the loving Father.

Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
Life's crown well won,
Now comes rest.—Com.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

CHEMONG INDIAN VILLAGE FURNISHED WINNER OF THANKSGIVING DAY RACE

Henry Smoke Carried Off the Honors in the Senior Event With Charlie Thorp Second—"Billy" Edwards, of Keene, Captured the Junior Event.

Henry Smoke, the dusky runner from Chemong Indian village, came in an easy winner in the Examiner's road race yesterday morning, and Willie Edwards, of Keene, took the lead from Garnet Tovey fifteen yards from the finishing point, and won out by a few feet in the junior event. The two races were watched by a large crowd, the weather conditions being ideal. Smoke made the distance in the fast time of 56 minutes and 8 3-5 seconds, which is just 52 3-5 seconds short of the record of 55 minutes 16 seconds, made by Wilson in 1907. The time for the junior race was 28 1-2 minutes, being one minute more than the record hung up by Peter Wallace in 1907. The Indian ran a great race and finished strong, with Charlie Thorpe following him for second place. The runners were not bunched, as was expected, and the finish did not prove to be an exciting one. When Smoke hove in sight there were murmurs of a dark horse, and such he proved to be. He had secured a big lead on the Victoria Harrier Club runner, and kept it to the finish.

The junior race had a big list of starters, and the youngsters finished amidst great excitement and enthusiasm. Tovey and Edwards gave a pretty exhibition as they came down George street, with the Collegiate boy in the lead, but Edwards, who is a huskier runner, sprinted ahead when a short distance from the tape, and beat his opponent out. Heard came next and was followed by Brown and Bullock, who tore off another fine finish, Brown sprinting and winning out by a few feet. The races were well conducted and the runners after the finish expressed themselves as being thoroughly satisfied with the work of the officials, and those who had the arrangements in hand.

Following are the positions of the runners at the finish only, the first ten in the junior race being given;—

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY

Hon. W. A. Buchanan to be Given Important Post in Alberta Cabinet

Lethbridge, Alta., Oct. 24.—Hon. W. A. Buchanan, who has been taken into the Rutherford Cabinet as Minister without portfolio, is shortly to be advanced to full Cabinet rank as Provincial Secretary and Municipal Commissioner, an office which will be created at the next session of the House.

A corps of boy scouts is to be organized at Hamilton.

AN ENJOYABLE EUCHRE PARTY

Given at S.O.E. Hall Last Night by Woodmen of the World

A very pleasant and successful progressive euchre party was held last night in the S.O.E. hall, under the auspices of Sherwood Forest Camp No. 5, Woodmen of the World. Mrs. Fitzgerald was successful in getting the lady's prize, and the gentleman's prize was won by Mr. George Warboy. Miss Fitzgerald obtained the booby prize.

The committee in charge were Mrs. Hickey, Mrs. Long and Mrs. Roe, and Messrs. Frank Arnsby and Fred Dummitt.

MME. MARCHESI AT THE GRAND

A small but thoroughly delighted audience greeted Madame Marchesi and her gifted pianist, Herr Van den Berg, at the Grand last evening. Mme. Marchesi, who is a large woman, past the middle age, owes nothing to her appearance. Her voice does not compare with those of the great cantatrices, such as Madame Patti. Her method, however, leaves nothing to be desired, and it is to show what can be done with average gifts and the best of teaching that Mme. Marchesi has undertaken the present tour. Her series of children's songs pleased the audience most, while her "Pur dicesti;" and the arietta from "Phoebus and Pan" gave her the required opportunity for the display of her interpretative powers. Messrs. Turner & Sons, whose experience in bringing artists of high repute to the city has not been profitable, are to be heartily thanked for their kindness in booking Mme. Marchesi.

PETERBOROUGH GOOD IN FIRST HALF OF THE RUGBY GAME AT TORONTO

Toronto, Oct. 25.—Until T. A. A. C. settled down in their game with Peterborough at Diamond Park Saturday afternoon it looked somewhat bad for the Athletic Club's fourteen. But just before half-time the Crimson aggregation came out of their trance, and from then on it was nothing but a breeze for them. The final score stood 31 to 4 against the Petes. At the end of the final quarter T.A.A.C. led by but 5 to 4, a wretched showing, in view of the fact that they had been kicking with a strong north wind behind them, but accounted for partly by improper scrimmaging having caused them to lose possession of the ball through penalties at least half a dozen times when right on their opponents' line. In the second period Peterborough pressed in their turn, and ran up four points in short order on kicks to the dead line. The Crimson at this point showed plainly their lack of practice and team work, and for a moment it looked as if they were a completely beaten team. Just here, however, they took their much-needed brace, and from then on they absolutely outclassed Peterborough. Some splendid booting by McCrimmon, and spectacular following up and tackling by McGiffin and Burkart, coupled with runs by Crooks and Holden, took the ball from the Crimson line to that of the visitors, against the wind, and a few seconds before half-time McCrimmon kicked over for a point, leaving it 6 to 4 at the resting interval. In the second half, even when favored by the wind, Peterborough were never able to get the ball as far as mid-field. The third quarter produced fourteen points for the locals on trials by Maguire and De Gruchy, the latter converting his own, and kicks to the dead line by De Gruchy and McCrimmon. Dead line punts and tries by Maguire and Holden, neither of which was converted, added twelve points in the final period.

Peterborough were stronger than when they were beaten by Parkdale a week ago. Two of their halves, whose frequent fumbles were to a great extent responsible for the Quakers' overwhelming defeat were replaced by Richardson and Cahill of the junior team, both of whom did well. T.A.A.C. was an entirely different aggregation to the outfit which was walloped by the Paddlers. Burkart and McGiffin at outside wings put up a brilliant exhibition. Both are extremely speedy and deadly tacklers. Sherriff and Crooks and Holden added strength to the line, while the change of Maguire from inside wing to centre scrimmage just before half-time made a huge difference to the winners' scrimmage. The kicking of the Crimson backs, especially that of McCrimmon, with the speedy work of DeGruchy and Meredith, was a feature. T.A.A.C. lacked team play badly, however, and were far from being in condition. Campbell, captain and quarter-back of the Peterboroughs, was the bright particular star of the visitors. The line-up:—

T.A.A.C.—Back, Meredith; halves, Grant, McCrimmon, DeGruchy; quarter, Firstbrook; scrimmage, Arnot, Drummond, Grzowski; inside, Maguire, Crooks; middle, Sherriff, Holden; outside, McGiffin, Burkart.

Peterborough—Back, Craig; halves, Corkery, Richardson, Cahill; quarter, Campbell; scrimmage, Hickey, Clarke, Ecclestone; inside, Turner, Dickson; middle, Staunton, Lundy; outside, Gibson, Hall.

Referee—Jim Macdonald. Umpire—N. F. Culverhouse.

PETERBOROUGH JUNIORS OUTPLAYED THE CHAMPIONS

Lindsay's Husky Team Defeated as Result of Local's Fast and Aggressive Playing Throughout the Game—Score Was 9-5.

Peterborough has a real live junior O.R.F.U. team, which is worthy of all the support that can possibly be given them. Yesterday afternoon, at Riverside Park they demonstrated these two facts when they defeated the fourteen from Lindsay by the score of 9—5. Outside of five of the players the local team was composed of Collegiate and their plucky work and the manner in which they outplayed the visitors was pretty to watch. The Lindsay champions towered away above their opponents, almost to a man, but they did not play with the snap and effectiveness of the winners. Outside of Byron Green's fine kicking and running their work resembled that of a lot of raw recruits, but as a result of the outcome Peterborough need not think for a minute that they will have any cinch in the return game at Lindsay. They will have to play for all that is in them to wrest the game from Mudville next Saturday. Probably the most conspicuous and effective player on the locals' line-up was Fortye. He used great headwork at all stages and his drop kick on goal in the last quarter, which put his team four points in the lead, was a brilliant piece of work. The playing of the back division could hardly have been improved upon unless by more passing instead of running into the opposing line. All the wings and the scrimmage played like trojans and the manner in which the Lindsay line was bucked or held back surprised the rooters of the local bunch, who were inclined to believe during the warming up period, that the visitors as a result of their size, would have things rather easy. Neither team was able to score in the first two quarters; the play being between the two 25 yard lines the greater part of the time. After the resting spell, Peterborough secured the first counter on a long kick by Richardson; the wings broke through and followed up. Burrit secured the ball from out of a mixup and fell on it for five points. Soon after this Green got away with what looked like a try, but he was called back. Staunton was put out of commission for a short time. Peterborough got ten yards on Lindsay's offside, and Fortye pulled off a nice run before being pulled down. On Lindsay's last down, Green kicked and Fortye caught, but was pulled down again; this time near the line, and for some minutes the visitors were dangerous until the whistle blew for three-quarter time.

The last quarter dished up all kinds of excitement. On a series of kicks Lindsay got the play within 5 yards of Peterborough line. Richardson kicked to the side, and Killen caught nicely and ran over for a good clean touch. Green missed the convert. This tied the score and both teams were playing desperately. Peterborough got the ball down to the Lindsay 25 yard line. Green kicked into Quinlan, who got the ball out, was tackled a couple of feet from the line. Peterborough lost the ground gained, but on a scrimmage at the 25 yard line the ball was passed out to Fortye and he kicked over the goal for four points. The ball travelled over to the Peterborough line and the visitors pressed matters for the remaining few minutes of the game, but were unable to score. Full time, Peterborough 9, Lindsay 5.

The teams and officials follow:—

Peterborough—Fortye, full back; Burritt, Richardson, Gibson, halves; Geale, quarter; Denison, Giroux, Minorgan, scrimmage; Staunton, Quinlan, Thornton, Turner, Wood Conroy, wings.

Lindsay—Killen, full back; Sylvester, Green, Bigelow, halves; O. Coulter, quarter; Coulter, Nesbitt, Simpson, scrimmage; MacGregor, McHugh, C. Carew, Hall, McKenzie, Murdie, wings.

Referee—Joe Greenan, Toronto. Umpire—Dr. A. W. Macpherson.

RUGBY

The Collegiate second team journeyed to Lakefield Saturday and played a picked team from "The Grove" school and the village. The Collegiates won easily by 31—6.

Montreal lost to Hamilton yesterday by a 14—1 score before a crowd of 6,000. The Tigers' wing line was stronger than Montreal, and this was mainly responsible for their win. Simpson did not play his usual effective game.

A deficit of $50,000 is reported to be against the London and Port Stanley Railway.

THANKSGIVING DAY AT GOLF LINKS

Competitions Were Interesting—Mixed Foursomes in the Afternoon

Thanksgiving Day was pleasantly spent at the golf links, two competitions being held in the forenoon and mixed foursomes in the afternoon. Mr. H. C. Hill won the driving competition and tied with Mr. R. Neill in the approaching contest with ten strokes each. In the driving contest Mr. Hill totalled 579 yards.

Mr. MacKenzie and Miss Gwen Hall won the mixed foursomes. The gentleman's prize was donated by Mr. T. F. Matthews, and the lady's prize by Mrs. Peter Campbell. Handicaps were allowed.

Luncheon was served at the club house.

SPORTING TALK

James George, an Indian from Beaverton, won the Herald road race at Hamilton yesterday in 1.51.25. Hanlon Howard, of Hiawatha, secured 11th place.

The Herald road race at Montreal was won by Jim Robertson. His time was 56 min. 44 sec. for the ten miles.

The races at the Brock street roller rink were well contested, but unfortunately accidental fouls were made by those interested. PRESENTATION OF TROPHY TO CHAMPIONS

The champion ball team of the City League—the T.A.S.—were the guests last night of a thoroughly enjoyable and most successful "at home" at the T.A.S. rooms, under the auspices of the Literary Club of the society. Over two hundred were in attendance, and the evening was pronounced one of the pleasantest functions ever held in the rooms. Very appetizing and dainty refreshments were served with Messrs. Coleman Bros. the caterers, and progressive euchre formed an enjoyable feature of the evening's entertainment. The ladies' prize was won by Miss Shevlin and the gentlemen's by Mr. [illegible].

During the evening the presentation of the cup, emblematic of the championship of the City League—the Stratton-Spalding Trophy—was made to the team by President E. N. McWilliams of the City Baseball League. Mr. McWilliams' remarks were of a highly congratulatory character, and were appropriately responded to by Mr. W. O'Brien, secretary of the champions.

Advantage was taken of the occasion to honor Mr. Jack Dennard, the energetic manager of the T.A.S.A.C., who was presented with a handsome pipe and the following address:—

Thanksgiving Night,
Oct. 25th, 1909.

Mr. John Dennard, Manager T.A.S. A.C., City—

Dear Sir,—We, the officers and members of the Athletic Section of the T.A.S., feel that we cannot allow the occasion of the presentation of the Stratton-Spalding trophy to pass without impressing upon you to some extent, at least, our appreciation of your kindness and of your assistance in helping us win the coveted silverware.

The athletic section of this society is indeed to be congratulated on having such a capable and industrious manager, and we trust it will be our good fortune to receive your future assistance. In the past few years you have not only taken an active interest in athletics, but you have also enlisted the support and gained the encouragement of several other members of the society.

We therefore ask you to accept this pipe as a slight recognition of your services.

Signed on behalf of the T.A.S.,
L. J. PICARD,
President.

FAMOUS OLD WAGON.

Has Hauled as Much Money as There is in the World.

People in Washington who daily pass the treasury building and see backed up to its curb an old van of a wagon drawn by three patient white horses do not realize the intimate link that this conveyance bears to all the money there is. They are not aware that every piece of paper money that every individual in the United States has spent or hoarded in the past twenty-six years has first ridden in that wagon. They do not know that the sum of money this wagon has hauled is equal to all the money there is in the world today.

The old wagon is a great curiosity, but modest withal. It plies regularly between the bureau of engraving and printing and the treasury, always loaded down with rectangular packages of twelve and a half pounds each. In every package are 4,000 bills. If the bills are of the lowest denomination the package is worth $4,000; if of the highest, $10,000, it is worth $40,000,000. One package of this great value once rode in the wagon.

It would take a string of hay wagons twenty miles long to hold the money that has passed through this old van. If the packages were piled one on top of the other they would make a monument fifteen miles high. If the bills were placed end to end the string would be 250,000 miles long, or equal to ten times the distance around the world. They would carpet a road fifty feet wide from New York to San Francisco. Their weight in coal would supply the average family with fuel for 250 years. Had an expert begun counting this money in the days of Columbus he would have been half through when Mr. Taft was inaugurated.

All these and many more stupendous facts might be cited with reference to the old money wagon. Yet it goes unnoticed in Washington, and not one citizen in a hundred realizes that any interest attaches to it. Few people in Kentucky ever saw Mammoth cave; the native of Arizona has never taken the trouble to visit the Grand canyon, nor New Yorkers Niagara. The gold of De Soto was always a little farther on. The land of one's desire is that to which he cannot possibly go. There are realms of romance without end, but no man ever confessed to living in one. It is human nature that the unreality of distance is the haze that makes all things interesting.—Washington Post.

Lofty Mountain Peaks.

Mountain climbing, always a strenuous and frequently a dangerous sport, offers many rich rewards on this continent to the increasing number of those who are devoted to it. A writer in the National Geographic Magazine points out that in Alaska and Canada there are several lofty peaks, rivaling those of Switzerland in magnificence, the summits of which have never been reached by civilized man. Fairweather (15,292 feet) and Crillon (15,900 feet) are reasonably accessible to tourists in Alaska, and yet it is said that no one has ever attempted to climb them. The loftiest of the Canadian Rockies, Mount Robson (13,700 feet), still awaits a conqueror, and the same is true of the highest summits of the Selkirks. The difficulties of mountain climbing, it is true, are not always in proportion to the height attained. In the Cascade range, for example, Mount Baker (10,827 feet) was not scaled until the tops of several of its loftier neighbors had been reached, including Mount Rainier (14,526 feet).

Americans in London.

"It is estimated that at least 60,000 Americans invade London during the summer months, an invasion for which the west end shopkeeper is deeply grateful," stated a recent issue of a London paper. "Before the days of American invasion July, August and September were very poor months for the trade. Now all this is changed, and the army of Americans spend in London about a million and a half sterling. While hotels and boarding houses get the lion's share of American gold, there are other businesses which benefit largely. These are principally jewelers, sellers of antiques and curios, drapers, dressmakers and tailors. West end tailors and dressmakers are especially grateful to these visitors, who keep them busy during what used to be the slackest season of the year."

Very Green.

Now that the widening of London's Blackfriars bridge is approaching completion the painters are getting to work, and the structure is being coated in its old familiar green color, picked out with gold. The choice of color, I may say, is the result of a misapprehension. Years ago when the painter who had the contract for the bridge approached the authorities he was met by a high official, who said loftily: "Color? Oh, see Green," meaning see another high official.

But the painter took it for sea green the color, and sea green the bridge has been painted ever since.—London Scraps.

A Bankrupt Prince.

Prince Hermann of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, the heir presumptive to the grand duchy of Weimar, has renounced the succession of himself or his heirs, if any, to the throne of the grand duchy or its property. The prince's extravagance already has transferred him from the cuirassiers of the guard in Berlin to a uhlan regiment and later to compulsory retirement from the army, after which he was placed under a guardianship. The prince has been given the title of Count Ostheim, but he is totally bankrupt and remains under the control of his guardians.

John Jones he was a faithful clerk,
As any now alive;

"Why, Jones," replied the leader then,
"How can you be so base?
Why, I could get a hundred men
Today to take your place."

So Jones apologized and turned Back to his daily books
Until his nature fairly yearned
For fields and trees and brooks.

"I need a rest," requested Jones.
"Please, sir, may I be spared?"
Whereat the boss in honey tones
Accordingly declared:

"Why, John, old chap, I'd like to let
You off for half a year,
But how would this old business get Along without you here?"

In Olden Days.

When Hendrik Hudson landed on the beach of Manhattan Island he gave one of the Indians an uppercut for stealing his snuffbox.

"Ah, captain, that would make a fine picture," laughed one of his gallant crew.

"Methinks so," agreed the great voyager. "I suppose the future artists will call that picture 'Hendrik Hudson Landing on Indian Territory.'"

And the great and conscientious explorer traded a combination whisk broom and toothbrush to the innocent red men for a thousand acres of land.—Chicago News.

His Wail.

"Dese yuh white politicians—dawggawn 'em!" petulantly remarked a pessimistically inclined colored citizen—"dey shakes hands wid me so frequent dat it keeps me buzzin' most o' de time countin' muh fingers to see dat dey isn't stole none o' 'em. The Stories She Wrote and Her Own Self as Well

By LAURA MARY ROGERS

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Miss Lilla Hibbard opened her stamp box and looked despairingly at its emptiness. Then she turned the contents of her portfolio upon the afghan and searched among the loose leaves and envelopes. Not a stamp to be found!

The search was a mere formality, for she could account for every one of the dozen stamps she had borrowed a week ago. With compressed lips she looked for inspiration around the room and out in the hall. Mr. Wilkins was coming down the stairs.

Miss Lilla caught her breath. He was the only lodger to whom she did not owe stamps. It had been a comfort to her to feel self respecting in regard to one of the lodgers, and she had told herself that it was not merely because he had never put himself in the way of her solicitations. But now—why cling to such a small remnant of pride!

"Mr. Wilkins," she called softly.

A middle aged man with an ecru mustache presented himself at the door.

"Are you—worse?" he inquired awkwardly. "Shall I call your sisters?"

"Oh, no; please don't, Mr. Wilkins," Miss Lilla rejoined fervently.

"Will you do me a favor, Mr. Wilkins?"

"Yes'm, certainly," Mr. Wilkins murmured, and Miss Lilla hurried on:

"I should be so much obliged if you would mail this for me. I can't ask my sisters, for I don't want them to know about it, and I haven't any stamps, and I think it will take four, two inside and two out, and I haven't any change now, but I won't forget it."

Mr. Wilkins produced a stamp book, extracted a neat row of stamps and solemnly applied them to the bulky envelope.

"And two inside?" he questioned.

"Yes, please," Miss Lilla said gayly.

Mr. Wilkins looked at her with wonder and alarm in his eyes, and before she knew it Miss Lilla had broken her resolution to be reserved and was in the middle of the explanation that the seven other lodgers already knew. In the usual order she revealed to him her secret to write, her spasmodic attempts at composition during the busy years of public school teaching and her constant efforts at literary production since she had been laid low by a stricken knee.

The recital had hitherto ended there, leaving her success to be inferred, but something in Mr. Wilkins' grave attention led her to add in a voice that was intended to be indifferent, but sounded discouraged:

"But I've never had a thing accepted. Everything comes back!"

"Oh, well, you can't expect to make it go right off," Mr. Wilkins assured her.

"How do stories sell?" he inquired. "Do they pay pretty well?"

"Oh, yes, if you can sell them," Miss Lilla replied wistfully. "Why, a story of that length ought to get $25, but, of course, it makes a difference who writes it."

There suddenly seemed to be nothing to say, and Mr. Wilkins left before Miss Lilla could elaborate her thanks.

Left alone, she turned her face to the wall in a kind of spasm of shame. Now there was not a lodger she could look in the face—and she owed forty-two stamps! Then the usual reaction came. She reflected that this was no time for scruples. The simplest calculation showed her that her sisters were running behind in the household expenses, and from ordinary observation she knew that they were starving themselves.

Just then Miss Louisa brought her an eggnog, and she fancied Miss Louise looked at her hungrily.

A week later, when Mr. Wilkins hurried up the stairs one night, he was greeted by a shout from Miss Lilla.

"Come here!" she called joyfully.

Mr. Wilkins found her propped up among her pillows, as usual, but her face was pink with excitement, her eyes glistened, and the pink ribbons were in disarray.

"Look at this!" she commanded, and she thrust under his eyes a letter. It was a brief statement that her story, "A Paltry Ring," had been accepted with thanks and that she would find inclosed a check for $30.

Mr. Wilkins sought for words, and Miss Lilla laughed merrily.

"I don't wonder you're surprised," she said, "but you should have seen us when that letter came." Then followed a detailed account of the rapturous day.

"Oh, it has encouraged me so!" Miss Lilla concluded. "I am just full of plans. I'm going to begin another story tomorrow about the French revolution. I always loved that period of history."

The next day found Miss Lilla writing feverishly except during the intervals when she summoned lodgers and returned their stamps. A few days later she waylaid Mr. Wilkins again and intrusted to him the mailing of "For Love of Francois," proudly furnishing the stamps herself.

"I ask you because I think you are a good mascot," she said girlishly. "This is quite a little longer than the other one, and I can't help feeling hopeful."

"It's all in getting a start," Mr. Wilkins said, and Miss Lilla nodded.

The second acceptance was almost a matter of course. It came ten days later, accompanied by a check for $35, and Miss Lilla showed gain in poise. It does not take long to become accustomed to success.

"I'm getting only 'accepted with thanks' now," she said happily to Mr. Wilkins, and he realized that she had got started. There was a manuscript all ready to be mailed which she consigned to Mr. Wilkins.

"I wouldn't let any one else mail it for the world," she said, and Mr. Wilkins blushed deeply.

Exactly a week later Miss Louisa panted up the stairs with the letter for Miss Lilla, and Miss Luella followed after. Miss Lilla received it almost nonchalantly, but a little shriek escaped her as a blue slip fell out.

"It's for $15," she announced. "It was a short one, you know." Then she read the letter aloud in a tone that tried to be businesslike.

"Your story, 'The Love of a Life,' is accepted with thanks."

As she finished reading "C. Burton, treasurer," she suddenly turned pale, gasped and thrust the letter under her pillow.

"Eighty dollars in less than a month!" Miss Luella was saying. "Why, Lilla will be rich pretty soon."

But Miss Louisa had been watching Miss Lilla, and she threw up the window and fanned her vigorously.

"No wonder you're faint," she said. "It's enough to take any one's breath away," and she acquiesced when Miss Lilla suggested that entire quiet would be good for her.

It was only two hours before Mr. Wilkins came, but Miss Lilla had grown old and haggard since she had dismissed her sisters. Mr. Wilkins was startled as he stood in the doorway in response to her faint call.

"Has anything happened?" he asked anxiously.

"Yes," she answered hopelessly. "I got the letter."

"What letter?" Mr. Wilkins asked.

For answer Miss Lilla drew the crumbled letter from under her pillow, unfolded it and pointed to the top of the paper. Mr. Wilkins looked at the familiar words, "Horace O. Wilkins, Grain and Feed."

"Oh, that greenhorn!" he groaned. Then he looked at Miss Lilla.

"Well, what are you going to do about it now that you've found it out?"

"I don't know," Miss Lilla said desperately. "We haven't $65 in the world. We used it all for rent and things."

"Oh, I don't mean that!" exclaimed Mr. Wilkins. "But don't be hard on me. I couldn't help doing it, it made you so happy. And you never would have known it if Edward hadn't used that paper—and I'd got plain paper all ready for him."

"I'm glad he did," Miss Lilla said bitterly, "because now I can pay you back some time. I'll have to get well now."

A sudden light glowed in Mr. Wilkins' faded eyes. "Say, what do you suppose I did it for?" he asked almost angrily. "Course I see now it was the wrong way to go at it. But I wanted to give you what you wanted, and I contrived every way to do it. I see now that I ought to have come right out with it, same as any other man would, but you're a teacher, and I was afraid you wouldn't look at me. I didn't know how—I never had a girl—before." He added the last word boldly.

The color had returned to Miss Lilla's face, and tears rolled down her cheeks.

"And those stories are worth every cent I paid for them. I prize them more'n all of Shakespeare and—and John G. Saxe," he declared. "They show you know all about love, and you ought to understand"—

Miss Lilla interrupted him. "Do you know that I'm thirty"—

"I know you're my girl. I don't care about anything else," and Mr. Wilkins put the arm of possession around her.

When Miss Louisa and Miss Luella appeared a little later Miss Lilla clasped Mr. Wilkins' hand for safety and explained happily to the transfixed pair, "We're going to take the whole of this floor for ours."

After the situation had been fully grasped and considered in all its delightful aspects Miss Luella asked respectfully, "Are you going to keep on writing, Lilla?"

Miss Lilla's face clouded. "No," she stammered.

Then Mr. Wilkins came to the front with a new found sense of humor.

"No," he said hilariously, "she's been 'accepted with thanks.'"

CURE THAT OBSTINATE SORE

Where Ordinary Salves Fail Zam Buk Succeeds

Cure that obstinate sore—Oct 26

Chronic sores which cause trouble by "breaking open" may be cured by Zam-Buk, as well as recent injuries and diseases. If you suffer from some old sore—hidden, perhaps, but none the less painful for that—don't dally apply Nature's healing essences as provided in Zam-Buk. Mrs. I. E. Ashton, of 111 Vickers street, Fort William, tells how valuable Zam-Buk is as a family balm. She says:—"We first used Zam-Buk for cuts and bruises, etc., and found it so satisfactory that my husband started using it for a chronic sore. For a long time he had been bothered with an old sore on his leg, and had used various preparations, yet nothing had permanently cured it. He began applying Zam-Buk balm, and was very soon agreeably surprised to notice a great improvement.

"It was only a matter of a short time before Zam-Buk had thoroughly cleansed the sore of all foul matter and healing commenced. It is now some months since the sore was completely closed, and there is no likelihood of it breaking out again.

"Since then my baby, eighteen months old, has been cured of eczema on the scalp by Zam-Buk. This eczema came in red pimples, and if rubbed or scratched, formed into sores. The child was very fretful from the irritation of the scalp, but whenever Zam-Buk was applied it seemed to bring the greatest relief. Frequent applications were effective in clearing all traces of the disease from the baby's scalp in a short space of time. I feel it my duty to give the credit where due, and I cheerfully recommend Zam-Buk to all sufferers from chronic sores, bad leg, or eczema."

Zam-Buk is Nature's own healing balm, being composed of pure herbal essences. It is a cure for eczema, ringworm, ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, poisoned sores, chronic wounds, bad leg, piles, festering sores, chapped hands, cold-sores, frost-bite and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and stores everywhere sell at 50c. a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto; 3 boxes for $1.25. You are warned against harmful imitations represented to be "just as good."

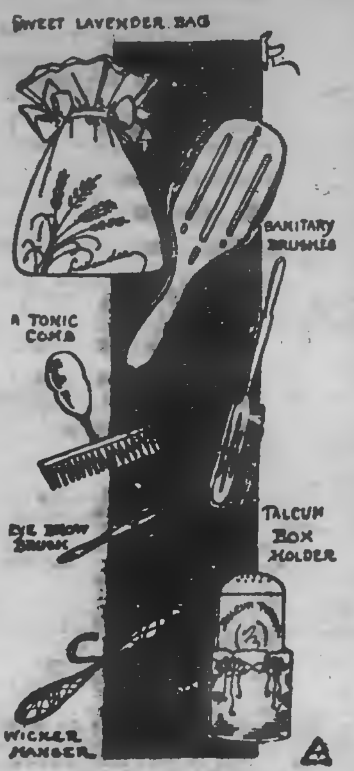
THE DRESSING TABLE.

New Appointments For This Necessary Piece of Furniture.

There is an old time charm about sweet lavender that appeals to the woman of refinement, and one of the prettiest novelties of the season is a bag of lavender to hang in the clothes press or tuck in the chiffonier drawer. Pongee silk is utilized successfully for such bags, the original of the accompanying sketch being of natural colored pongee with design of lavender blossoms.

Sanitary brushes, as they are called, represent the latest addition to the boudoir collection, the most approved being fashioned from celluloid. The backs are perforated to permit the free circulation of air and drainage of the bristles. Another new contrivance for the toilet table is a hollow comb by means of which the tonic now considered so essential for the health of the hair may be satisfactorily applied to the scalp. A special brush for keeping the eyebrows in good condition has also been added to the list.



DRESSING TABLE APPOINTMENTS.

As a substitute for the glass or metal holder for talcum powder which has been in vogue for some time past there now appears a silver stand in filigree design in which the original box may be placed. This is likely to prove as satisfactory an arrangement as transferring the contents of the tin powder box to a bottle of crystal or silver. The remaining article here illustrated is a wicker hanger.

WHAT WOMEN INVENT.

Five Safety Razors Among the Things to Be Exhibited In London.

What was the inspiration of the five Englishwomen who during the last year felt that their inventive powers were put to their best use in inventing safety razors? At all events, five such appliances will be exhibited in the forthcoming London exhibition of inventions by women. The inventive spirit of Englishwomen seems well developed. There are on an average every year about 1,500 new contrivances patented. The greater number of these are, naturally enough, intended for the use of their own sex, although there are such occasional exceptions.

Other recent forms of their inventive skill when it soared far beyond the needs of mere women were shown in an automobile, a steam engine and a flying machine. Of sterner stuff than most of their sex even in this country of militant suffragettes were the inventors who applied to patent their methods of strengthening the sides of ships in their powers of resistance and the new kind of invisible shield to be worn in war. Yet these superwomen were rare among the whole number, most of whom devoted themselves to such characteristic inventions as new kinds of hats for women and children, a method of washing furs, an apparatus to kill chickens painlessly, new fangled clothes for dogs and similar evolutions of feminine necessities. This exhibition is a contrast to that which will soon be opened in Paris, dedicated to proving the social misery of women through their legal and social inferiority to man. It is prophesied that the most stubborn opponent of woman suffrage will be convinced by this eloquent collection of documents, pictures and other evidence.

Furniture News.

To give the desired "old" look to a new finish has been found for furniture. This is nothing more or less than rubbed off edges. In heavy fumed oak the rungs and arms of chairs, the corners of sideboards, all little protuberances that would naturally have met the most wear in real antique furniture, have been treated—possibly with sandpaper—so that the lighter ground wood shows through irregularly. Inlay is a feature of much of the new furniture. Strips of satin wood in mahogany, fanciful designs in colored wood, mother of pearl, etc., and even that imitation of inlay gained by painting or stenciling some glaring flowers or vines on the surface, in the manner of bedroom sets of old, are seen on some of the handsomest pieces for use in every part of the house—drawing room, dining room, bedroom, boudoir.

A Novel Method.

Dorothy is five years old and longs supremely to join the gay democracy trooping by every morning to the public school on the next block. Incidentally she keeps the family informed of school affairs after they have been refashioned in her infant mind. The other day she hurried her mother to the window to observe a very elegant and severe looking lady passing by.

"That's the very headest lady at the school," explained the would be scholar importantly. "They send you to her when you're naughty, an' she opens the window an' sticks you half out, an' 'en she shuts it down on you while she spanks what hangs inside."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Apprehensive.

"Come on and take a ride in my monoplane," insisted the inventor. "Why, it has a speed of a mile a minute."

"Indeed!" said the cautious friend. "In what direction?"

"What has the direction to do with it?"

"Why—er—I was thinking perhaps it made that speed coming down toward the earth."—Detroit Free Press.

Sort of a Cannibal.

An old farmer for many years got his dinner on market days at a small hotel kept by a widow. She had long suspected that he ate more than the price (1s. 6d.) warranted, so she determined to test him. She accordingly arranged matters so that there was no room for him at table, but she took him into a private room the table of which was graced by a steaming leg of mutton. He set to in good earnest, and soon nothing was left but the bones. Highly delighted with his cheap feed, on passing the bar he tendered 2 shillings for his dinner and a quart of ale.

The widow declined to take any payment on the ground of having inconvenienced him so much.

Chuckling to himself, the farmer lifted down his market basket from a hook, and, finding it rather light, he tore off the covering and shouted:

"Here, Mrs. Brown, where's my leg o' mutton?"

"Why, ye old silly," said the widow, "ye have ate your leg for your dinner!"—London Answers.

WOMEN'S WOES

Peterboro Women are Finding Relief at Last

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. John Wallace, of 323 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., says;—"I had suffered with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble for over two years, and could find nothing that would benefit my condition. My back was weak and dull, heavy pain settled across the small of it extending into my sides and shoulders. I could not sleep at night as the kidney secretions were so frequent and irregular that I would have to leave my bed a number of times. I was dizzy and weak and would usually awake with a dull headache. Booth's Kidney Pills procured at McDermid & Jury's Drug Store cured me when all else failed. I am stronger and feel better generally. I can conscientiously recommend Booth's Kidney Pills, and would not be without a box in the house."

A. Peterson gave an Indian woman a drink of whiskey from his bottle as he sat in a Port Arthur restaurant, and was fined $50.

THE SALVATION ARMY BAND WON FURTHER DISTINCTION AT OFFICERS' CONGRESS

The crack band of the local Salvation Army won new laurels at the congress of the officers of the Canadian Territory of the Salvation Army, which opened in Toronto last Tuesday and concluded yesterday. Bandmaster Greene and 35 musicians from the Peterborough corps report a splendid reception in Toronto and judging from the marks of appreciation shown the band must have found high favor at the congress. The band went to Toronto on Saturday and returned last night.

The gathering was the most successful one of its character ever held in Canada, 600 officers being present representing the Canadian Salvation Army from Halifax to Vancouver. A dozen bands took part in the musical portion of the services and the massed parade yesterday morning and it is estimated there were between 250 and 300 bandsmen in attendance at the congress.

On Sunday afternoon at Massey Hall at the prayer service held there the local band played a special number and also the praise service at the Salvation Army Temple, Albert street yesterday morning. In this latter service the Peterborough band represented the bands of the territory, which was decidedly high distinction and was a flattering recognition in view of the number of bands present at the Congress. "Great Masters," one of the strongest numbers in the band's repertoire, was the selection given on this occasion. Last night the band played a special concert at Riverdale Hall. An interesting programme was given and won appreciative favor from the large audience.

This morning Bandmaster Greene stated to the Review that the band had had a most enjoyable trip and was received very cordially at the Congress, which he states was a most encouraging one. The greatest enthusiasm was shown by those taking part in the Congress and splendid support was lent by the public.

On Sunday afternoon and evening in Massey Hall the big auditorium was altogether too inadequate to accommodate the large crowds that sought admission.

The parade yesterday morning was a mammoth one and it might be said of the Congress in general that it afforded striking proof of the strength and organization of the Salvation Army in Canada. One of its special features was the beautiful and impressive memorial service held in Massey Hall on Sunday night in memory of the departed officers of the army. All the available accommodation in the hall was taken up for the service and the massed bands provided the music service.

Bandmaster Greene had the honor of being presented with Col. Mitchell's baton in recognition of the fine playing of the band. This is a token of distinction that is greatly appreciated by Mr. Greene and the band.

MANY HEARD MISS SPROULE

Gave Interesting Talk on Work in Connection With the Men of the Lumber Camps

Before a large and interested gathering at the Grand Opera House Sunday afternoon, Miss Sproule, missionary to the lumbermen in Northern Ontario, told of her work in connection with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Rev. H. J. Keith acted as chairman, and after the meeting had been opened by singing the speaker was introduced.

Miss Sproule dealt first with the work of the W.C.T.U., but based her main remarks on one of the mottoes of this organization. For God, Our Home and Native Land. As to her own work, the speaker dwelt interestingly to the audience on her travels through the district assigned to her by the W.C.T.U. She told of the manner in which she went among the men of the woods and how her talks were appreciated by them, narrating several instances where some of the men had met her afterwards and thanked her for the good they had received. Miss Sproule, in her closing remarks, appealed to those present to do all in their power to help the work of the Union in this respect.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

MACEDONIAN IS ON TRIAL

Stefof Faces Jury on Charge of Killing Countryman

Toronto, Oct. 27.—Slowly, through all the tedious obstacles of a strange tongue, G. T. Blackstock, K.C., crown prosecutor, is laboring before Mr. Justice Riddell in the Assizes to establish the guilt of Pavali Stefoff of the murder of Evan Simoff at 16 Eastern avenue April 21 last.

The case opened yesterday morning and the court sat until 7.15 last night. During this time nearly a dozen witnesses, most of whose evidence was unimportant, were heard.

Little interest is being attracted by the case and the court-room is almost deserted of spectators, in marked contrast to the crowds which swarmed about the doors eager to gain admittance to the sensational Blythe and Turner trials of last week.

The evidence of Dr. Gideon Silverthorn, who was the last witness examined by Mr. Blackstock last night and who will be cross-examined by John Godfrey, who is conducting the defence, was perhaps the most interesting given thus far. The doctor swore that, as the result of lengthy and intricate scientific tests, he was prepared to swear that there were stains of human blood ou the boots and about the bottom of the trousers worn by Stefoff when arrested on the day of the murder. Other stains he identified as blood, but could not say positively that they were human blood.

Strangest of all, he found that while the stain of the hatchet with which the murder is believed to have been committed was plainly human blood, he could find no trace of human blood in that upon the handle. Nor was there any blood upon any of the money found on the prisoner and believed to have been taken by him from the body of the murdered man.

TEN YEARS FOR BLACK HANDERS

Hamilton, Oct. 27.—Ten years in Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence handed out yesterday by Judge Snider to the three "black hand" Italians, Sam Wolfe, Camelo Colombo and Ernest Speranzo. The evidence showed that they had written a letter threatening to kill Salvatore Sanzone, a well-to-do Italian wholesale fruit dealer, and all his family if he did not hand over $1,000. Sanzone appeared to be a nervous wreck when he went into the box to testify against the trio and morphia had to be administered to him. The letter was written in a house on Cannon street, and was posted at Niagara Falls. It was arranged that they were to meet Sanzone on the Dundas road to get the money. When Sanzone went in his rig to hand over the money, he was accompanied by three detectives, who were hidden under a tarpaulin. Sanzone handed over the package, containing $20 and some newspapers, the three detectives jumped out and captured the trio.

PECULIAR SITUATION IN N. Y. ELECTIONS

New York, Oct. 27.—The unique situation of a mayoralty candidate suing for libel, a newspaper which is his chief supporter in his campaign, was one of the political developments in New York.

Wm. J. Gaynor, Democratic candidate for mayor, has brought suit against The Press Publishing Co., publishers of The New York World, for $100,000 damages, for alleged libelous statements in an article in The Evening World, by Arthur Brisbane, editorial writer for Hearst's newspapers, who has been presenting the Hearst side of the campaign in a series of articles under his signature.

The Evening World opened its columns at the beginning of the campaign to the principal supporters of the various candidates.

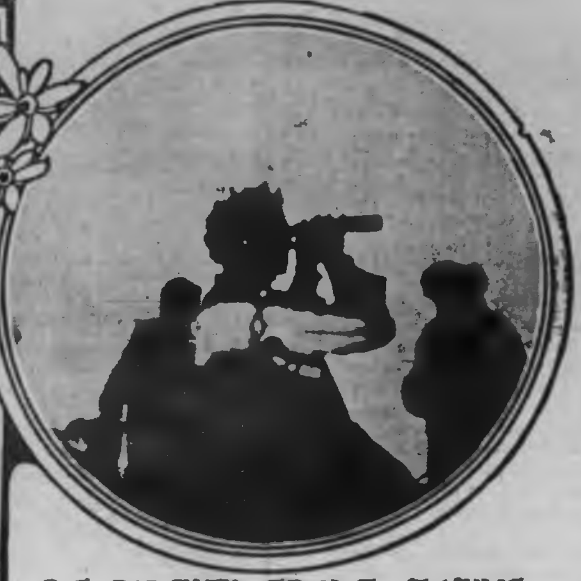
SHIP OWNERS FEDERATION

London, Oct. 27.—The big ship owners union is to resist unreasonable attacks by trade unions and similar bodies formed in London under the title of the international shipping federation. Delegates of the shipowners' federations of Great Britain, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark and Sweden, met in London last week and formed a council representing the different countries. It is understood that the French and Norwegian federations will join after certain formalities have been carried out, and that it is intended ultimately to embrace the ship owners of the whole world.

THE WRECK OF THE DUNDEE WHALING SHIP THE SNOWDROP

ONE OF THE NATIVE WOMEN AT CAPE HOVEN AND HER BABY HARRY WHITNEY STANDING BY.

CAPTAIN JAMES BROWN, OF WRECKED WHALER SNOWDROP.



O. C. FARSYTH GRANT TAKING LAST LOOK AT ESKIMOS WITH WHOM HE HAD LIVED DURING WINTER.

ONE OF THE LARGE ICEBERGS GROUNDED NEAR CAPE HOVEN.

"Friday, Sept. 18, 1908.—Frobisher Bay.

"A strong east-southeast gale and thick. Barometer falling fast. Ship dragging her anchor.

"Barometer at half-past twelve, 28.51; one a.m., 27.35, and two a.m., 26.30.

"Steaming full speed. Anchor still dragging.

"At four a.m. the ship struck the rocks with her hull. Got as far ashore as possible. Got all the people ashore over the ice, as well as some provisions."

There is not so very much description about the foregoing, and many sea writers have written more about the wreck of a ship, but that is the story written in his log cabin by Captain James Brown, of the Dundee whaling ship 'Snowdrop,' after her wreck, and the day, September 18, marked the beginning of a year of hardships for the crew, all but two of whom were brought back to civilization by the schooner 'Jeanie,' the little boat which made the expedition into the Arctic this summer, and returned with Harry Whitney, who had spent the winter in North Greenland.

Although being wrecked at sea and the loss of the ship are not incidents so common in the life of any man that he becomes accustomed to them, Captain Brown has had his share. No less than six times have ships of which he was master or mate been lost, and once he was compelled to walk across the steppes of Siberia to civilization, but he was younger then. When showing the log of his latest adventure he apologized for using so many words in describing the wreck.

Entered on the shipping lists as a whaling vessel, the 'Snowdrop' was more than that, and she had few, if any, competitors in the unusual business in which she was engaged. Her owner, O. C. Forsyth Grant, is a younger son of a wealthy resident of Montrose, Scotland, who was first attracted to the Arctic by the love of sport, and who conceived the idea of making his shooting expeditions profitable. He already had made two expeditions into the section with the 'Snowdrop' and owned a whaling station near Cape Haven, Baffin Land, which he purchased from a Boston firm that had found whaling unprofitable.

LOOKED ALWAYS FOR WHALES.

His usual plan was to start from Dundee in the early spring and cruise up the coast of Greenland to Disko Island, where he would shoot walrus for a time. He selected only the big bulls, for the hides that weigh more than four hundred pounds are the most valuable for buffeting for emery wheels and bring the highest price. The tusks are saved for the ivory and the oil is stowed away in the large casks aboard ship. From Greenland he would work his way across Baffin's Bay, always looking for whales, for a black whale is worth from $10,000 to $20,000, according to the size, and would shoot the hair seal for the skins and the oil, and continue to look for walrus. Another source of profit was the polar bear, and he would take back after a six months' cruise from fifty to seventy-five fine skins, worth in London from $60 to $100 apiece before they are tanned. It was a fascinating business for a man who enjoyed the sport, and there was a chance to make a big winning. The walrus, seal and bears would make the expenses of the ship and perhaps a little more, and there was always the chance of striking a whale, which would mean an enormous profit.

For this work Mr. Grant had the 'Snowdrop,' a ketch, equipped with a kerosene engine. She had a registry of sixty-two tons and carried enough canvas to go ten to twelve knots with a fair wind. She had left Dundee in April and the summer work had been successful. The tanks were filled with oil, and the men were looking for the trip home after making a final search for walrus in Frobisher Bay. The plan was then to make a run for Signia, as the Eskimos called the whaling station, and load the bear skins and start for home.

When the anchors began to drag the Snowdrop started to drift on the rocks stern first. James Smith, engineer, stood at his post until the water came up over the engine, but they do not make kerosene engines, nor steam engines, probably, to stand against a gale that is blowing with a barometer at 26.30. It was soon evident that no power could save the ship and all the engines were then turned to the task of saving the lives of the Eskimos as well as the crew. There were women and children among the natives and they were put ashore first, then the Eskimo men, and then the crew. The ship had gone ashore at flood tide, and as it began to ebb, there was little difficulty in getting the people to a safe place.

The wind had moderated by morning and an effort was made to save a few provisions from the ship, which was pounding herself to pieces on the rocks. Captain Brown saved his sextant, chronometer and glasses, and each of the crew saved a few personal effects. A little bread and some meat in tins was found, but there was a problem of food as well as shelter for the winter confronting this little party. There was a let up in discipline after the wreck of the ship which made the problem all the more difficult to solve.

Eskimos were sent over the land to Signia to get some whaleboats kept in reserve there, and the next day the large whaleboat on the ship was seen in a few feet of water and pulled to a place of safety, where the necessary repairs were made. Luckily there were rifles and ammunition, so any game that could be found could be shot, but there was little or no game, for the seals were timid, and it required an expert marksman to kill one instantly, for unless the bullet took immediate effect the animal would slip in the water and sink.

An attempt was made to cross the land to the north shore of Hudson Bay and get to a place where the men could be picked up by another Scotch whaler due to start for home about that time. The snow was so deep that after a fair trial it was apparent that it was impossible to get to civilisaton in this way. The second attempt was made by boat, the plan being to cross Hudson Straits in a whaleboat to the Labrador coast and then work along to a settlement. This start was made on October 6th. Captain Grant and his party soon found the plan impossible, and after being caught in a gale succeeded in getting the whaleboat back to Signia. Captain Brown was compelled to remain where he was until the early part of December, when he could get back over the ice, and in the meantime he went through many hardships.

THE MURDER OF THE JAPANESE PREMIER

On His Arrival at Harbin Whither He Had Gone on a Mission of Peace, Great Japanese Commoner is Shot by Disaffected Korean.

Tokio, Oct. 27.—Hirobumi Ito, a prince of Japan, but the greatest commoner in the empire, and for two years the uncrowned ruler of Korea, who above all stood between Korea and the degradation of immediate annexation, hoping to build up that country anew, was assassinated by Koreans yesterday just as he alighted from a special train at Harbin, Manchuria, to which place he went from Tokio in his capacity as president of the Privy Council on a mission of peace.

Prior to his departure, Prince Ito said to the Associated Press: "I am going on my own initiative, with the approval of my emperor, with the hope of securing a better understanding with China and of assuring the world that Japan's intentions in Manchuria are amicable to China and friendly to the commerce of all nations. When I return I hope to give positive evidence of this."

Undoubtedly Prince Ito intended to inaugurate and enforce a distinct policy in Manchuria, but the exact nature of this was not disclosed. Marquis Katsura, the Premier and Minister of Finance, after the assassination, said in an interview: "The death of Prince Ito will not change the policies of Japan. The pacific motives of Prince Ito will ever be maintained and the traditions left by him will be followed."

Smiling and bowing, the prince had turned towards Russian Finance Minister Kokovsoff, who was awaiting him on the station platform, a few paces distant, when suddenly came half a dozen revolver shots in quick succession. At the second report, Prince Ito staggered and a moment later fell, having then received three bullets, two of which entered the abdomen. He died in twenty minutes without recovering consciousness. He was 68 years of age.

Three other members of the party on the platform were also injured. They were Prince Ito's private secretary, Japanese Consul-General Kawakan, and General Manager Tanaka of the South Manchurian Railway, who had moved closer to the prince as the firing began.

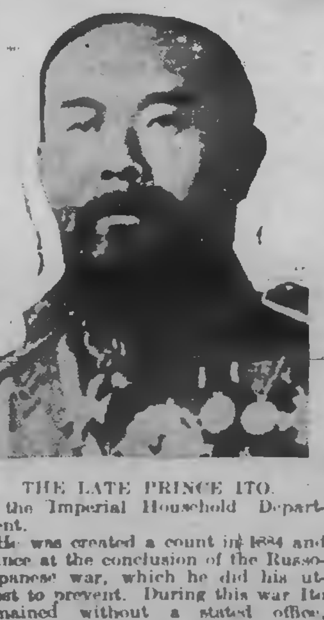
The assassin stood defiantly in the crowd, revolver in hand, until arrested. He proved to be a Korean. With two companions of the same nationality, he boasted of a conspiracy, the object of which was the life of the former resident-general of Korea, and exclaimed dramatically: "I came to Harbin for the sole purpose of assassinating Prince Ito to avenge my country."

Later, he admitted that he had a personal grudge, against the Japanese statesman, who, while resident-general in Korea, caused the execution of several of the murderer's friends.

The prince was born Sept. 2, 1841, the son of a gardener. As an orphan he was adopted into the family of Juzo Ito, a Samurai of the lowest rank of the Chochu clan. Young Ito studied under the great master of the time, Yoshida Shoin, and developed brilliantly. In 1863 he undertook a pilgrimage to England in defiance of the laws of Japan, which forbade natives to go abroad under the penalty of death. He took part on the imperial side during the war which led to the restoration, and after the establishment of the present Meiji Government, began his official life as a judge of the Osaka court. He was then 27 years old. Later he became governor of Hiogo, and in 1869 was made vice-minister of the Central Government. The following year he visited America, commissioned to investigate the financial systems and on his return was appointed vice-minister of public affairs.

Prince Ito visited Europe in 1871, 1882, 1901 and 1902, in which latter year King Edward created him a Grand Commander of the Bath.

His rise was rapid, and in 1880 he was appointed Premier and Minister of the Imperial Household Department.



THE LATE PRINCE ITO.

He was created a count in 1884 and prince at the conclusion of the Russo-Japanese war, which he did his utmost to prevent. During this war Ito remained without a stated office, though often consulted and entrusted with important missions by the throne. He was four times Premier, resigning finally in 1901.

He was one of the few great Japanese who rose from the peasant class.

Prince Kirobumi Ito has been called the Bismarck of the Kingdom of the Rising Sun. The achievements with which his name has been chiefly associated in the minds of occidentals was the framing of the imperial constitution by virtue of which Japan took her place for the first time in the rank of modern civilised states.

LITTLE BOY WAS WANDERING ALONE

Toronto, Oct. 27.—Harold Ellis, aged five, of Columbus, Ont., was found wandering along East Queen street yesterday afternoon by Mrs. White of 17 De Grassi street. He said he came to Toronto with his grandmother and was separated from her while passing through the crowds at the Union Station. Her name, he said, was Mrs. Nicholls.

Mrs. White took him home with her. If the boy's relatives are not located soon he will be taken to the Children's Shelter.

THIRTY-FOUR BELIEVED TO HAVE PERISHED OFF ST. JOHN

Donaldson Line Steamer Hestia Strikes Snbmerged Rock Near Seal Cove, N.B., and of Entire Crew Only Six Men Are Saved.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 27.—That the entire crew of the Donaldson Line steamer Hestia, with the exception of six men, or thirty in all with four boy passengers, have been lost beyond the shadow of a doubt is the firm belief the survivors, who were taken from the forward rigging of the steamer at three p.m. yesterday. The rescue was effected by the Seal Cove life-saving station with great risk to their own lives, as seas were running mountains high, covering every portion of the ship except the very top of the foremast, which threatened to go by the board with each wave.

Meagre information from the six survivors now on Grand Manan Island, N.B., contain story of terrible suffering and death.

At one a.m. Monday morning, while the Hestia was proceeding into the mouth of the bay, she struck with terrific force on submerged ledges five miles from Seal Cove and four miles north of Gannet Rock. The seas, which were very high, began to wash over her from stem to stern, and Capt. Newhall ordered the boats out. The first boat containing one of the four boy passengers and several of the crew, parted at the davit tackle and fell headlong into the sea. The crew on board heard the boy crying, "Mamma, save me." This boat righted and drifted away with one man in it, only to be swamped a moment later.

Another boat was lowered, with the captain, first officer and all the rest of the crew, except the six men rescued yesterday, who remained on board, and rowed away. This boat has not been heard from.

The survivors think no boat could live ten minutes in such a sea and gale.

After the captain's departure the remaining members of the crew built a raft and placed it in readiness for launching. A supply of water and food was lashed to it.

Through the hours of darkness and dawn the Hestia gradually settled by the stern. At daylight Mate Stewart hoisted the Union Jack, reversed, as a signal of distress, but the wreck is not in the line of transatlantic or other steamship navigation. It was late in the afternoon before the vessel's plight was discovered.

Against the gale, which threatened to upset them, nearly a score of fishing craft set out to the assistance of the wrecked steamer. One after another was forced to turn back. Finally the Seal Cove life-savers were successful.

The place where the Hestia was wrecked is one of the most dangerous on the coast. A sixty mile an hour gale was blowing and the rain falling in torrents. Just how the captain came to miscalculate will probably never be known, as all the officers of the ship, except the third officer, lost their lives. Freight is now floating from the ship's hatches. A tug left St. John last night for the scene of the wreck.

The names of the rescued men are: Stewart, third mate; Morgan, second engineer; Able Seamen Keene, McKenzie, Smith and Frank Vicar.

SHORT CUT ACROSS LINE

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 27.—The Detroit News publishes a despatch from St. Clair, Mich., that the Michigan Central has in contemplation the establishment of a car ferry service between that place and Courtright, Ont., to give shorter connection with St. Thomas for freight in that district.

Charles M. Hays wires from Montreal that the Grand Trunk is negotiating terms for using the Michigan Central tunnel here.

P. J. M. Hally, corporation counsel of Detroit, has evolved a plan of renting to the Detroit United at $300 a day the streets whereon the franchises have expired or will expire.

ARE HEIRS TO IMMENSE FORTUNE

Ottawa, Oct. 27.—As the result of a romantic elopement nearly one hundred years ago in England, several resident of Ottawa and vicinity expect to share in the "Talbot millions." They are J. Bleeks, and Mrs. J. Andrews of Ottawa, Mrs. Gideon Taylor, Aylmer; W. H. Bleeks, Carp; Tolbert Bleeks, Chicago; W. W. Mann, Stittsville; and several others, who expect to receive about $65,000 each.

About 1820, Lady Anne Talbot, daughter of a wealthy nobleman of England, fell in love with George Healey. Her father was strenuously opposed, but she eloped and married—one son and one daughter being born to the couple. While comparatively young, she died and Healey came to Canada, and settled near Ottawa. The son, William Healey, was for many years a resident of Goulbourn, and the daughter became Mrs. William Mann. They were the grandparents of the present claimants to the fortune, excepting Mrs. Gideon Taylor, a daughter of the late William Healey.

Upon the death of Lady Anne Talbot's father, the estate passed into the hands of a son, who died intestate, and the property reverted to the children of Lady Anne, but at that time they could not be located.

SUBPOENA AT AWKWARD TIME

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 27.—Premier McBride, Hon. Mr. Tatlow and other members of the Government were summoned yesterday by The World Newspaper Co. as witnesses in a suit in which the newspaper is defendant to R. F. Green, who asks damages for alleged libel. The matter has been delayed for several years and politicians are having a big joke about it, the suit being revived for Nov. 10, which will be right in the midst of the Premier's political tour through the upper country.

Mayor C. S. Douglas announced yesterday that he would go before the Conservative convention for nomination Friday evening. He was three years a member of the Manitoba Legislature.

Douglas will in any event be a candidate to succeed himself for the mayor's chair in January next.

HAS CENTRAL ONTARIO RY. BEEN SOLD?

Toronto, Oct. 27.—Have Mackenzie & Mann purchased the Central Ontario Railway?

Is the C.N.R. planning a system of steam railways in Ontario outside of the trunk line now under construction?

If reports current on the street yesterday have any foundation, in fact, the Central Ontario line has already been acquired by the Canadian Northern, or is being negotiated for. When seen last evening, W. H. Moore, secretary of the Canadian Northern, said he knew nothing about the reported purchase.

THREE YEARS ON THEFT CHARGE

Toronto, Oct. 27.—William Rodda will disappear from the sunshine for a term of three years to be spent in Kingston penitentiary under the decree of Magistrate Denison in Police Court. He pleaded guilty to breaking into Cockburn, Dickins & Co.'s jewelry warehouse, where he was caught with goods by Policeman Langtry early Sunday morning. Rodda had three previous convictions for like offences. Upon receiving sentence the prisoner murmured a scornful thanks, to which he added a direction for the care of the magistrate's soul.

THE SALVATION ARMY AND WESTERN SCHEME

London, Oct. 27.—Col. Lambe says his report to General Booth is distinctly favorable to Calgary as a centre for colonization. Asked as to financing of his scheme, Col. Lambe replied: "It is purely a business arrangement on the part of the C.P.R. They met us handsomely, and although there is no philanthrophy in their action for the increase in trade will bring them better revenue."

HEAVY DAMAGE DONE BY STORM

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 27.—The storm of Monday has abated and winter weather prevails in this province. Many are homeless, and in the County of Antigonish the storm has left ruin and destruction. The railroad is one mass of washouts, ranging from 10 to 200 feet in length. All trains were cancelled yesterday.

So dangerous are many highways and bridges that it is impossible for country people to reach town.

THE GAZETTE'S FORECAST

The Montreal Gazette, which has not been friendly to Sir James Whitney's "public ownership" style of government, after giving a history of the Reform party in Ontario down to its political bankruptcy and inglorious ending in the Gamey episode gives it as its opinion that a really first-class man might lead the Liberals back to victory. But the Gazette represents "private interests" and while the paternal or socialistic form of government is not good neither is the grab-all form in which "private interests" take all the profit and leave the work to the people. This is hardly a square deal. If the Whitney government has something to be ware of, so have the prime-fed interests. It is true that the form of crookedness, now universally known as "Canadian," from its wide-spread and hopeless character, is as possible under a public ownership government as anywhere. But the possibility of concealment is not so great and with a capable Opposition the public may expect to see threshed out on the floor of the House anything of a doubtful character.

The most dangerous feature of Canadian political life, however, is the "trading" system by which the knowing politicians of both parties "trade off" help in time of need and that help often takes the form of feathering each other's nests. "One good turn deserves another," is the motto of these gentry. At the present time they are the gravest possible element of danger to Canada. Heretofore we have been content to rely upon party critics as likely to explode any plot likely to develop against the public weal, but that era has quietly slipped by. There is a band of "patriots" in each party whose political prejudices are not so violent as not to be susceptible of being softened by the prospect of "a little gain." Like the children of the ancient hero these precious bands of patriots are in the ranks of the faithful of both parties as so many "hostages to fortune" the word fortune in this case being read wholly with a pecuniary reference.

EDITORIAL NOTES

This at least can be said of poor Hunter, the Caygeon hotelkeeper. He alone of the recent killers complied with the requirements of the occasion. He paid the penalty.

Local Conservatives are not much impressed with some of the names of the National Conservative Convention Committee. This convention may do vastly more harm than good. Organization is a good thing, but not always or without exception. Conservatives do not intend to be bossed even by their own political kin. When the crash comes we'll know whom to blame.

Weekly Sun in demanding that before parliament decides upon the creation of a Canadian navy it shall consult the people; in other words, that there shall be a dissolution before decision. If such a situation were to be created, the peculiar spectacle would be seen of the leaders of both great parties standing upon practically the same platform.

It is not by any means sure that the Canadian people approve of this "both party" policy. The question is big enough and serious enough to require a plebiscite.

It seems to me that the vast majority of our poor don't mind their poverty. When they come to hospital they will scarcely be forced to eat custards and jelly, and beef tea; they positively prefer, if you would permit it, their so-called 'tea,' loaf and molasses. Thus, a boy, who after two years in our comfortable orphanage, and whom we sent home for a visit, has just been abroad. The family has practically next to nothing for the winter. The boy has lost weight on their tea and loaf diet during only three months; yet, he 'wishes to stay home for a winter.' It is easy to me to understand contentment when nothing better is known, a kind of narcotised sensibilities generously provided by nature—but I can't understand lethargy. To stimulate a sanctified discontent must, it seems, ever be one function of the missionary, as well as of the testimonial agitator.

ATTENDED BY FIVE DOCTORS

But Got No Relief Until He Used Dodd's Kidney Pills

Wonderful Cure of A. F. Richard Who Was Tortured by Rheumatism and Kindred Pains, Sets Kent Country Talking

St. Ignace, Kent Co., N.B., Oct 27.—(Special).—After being tortured for four years with Backache, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints and Pains in the Loins, and getting no relief from five doctors whom he called in, Mr. Antoine F. Richard, a well-known farmer living near here, is spreading the good news that he is once more a well man, and that he owes his cure to Dodd's Kidney Pills. Speaking of his wonderful cure, Mr. Richard says:—

"I was a helpless man in July, 1907. For four years I had endured the greatest torture from Backache, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints and Pains in the Loins. I had dark circles under my eyes, my head ached and I was often dizzy. I was attended by five doctors, but not one of them could help me.

"Then I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after the first few doses I began to improve. I used four boxes in all and now I am working every day on the farm a well man. I owe my wonderful cure to Dodd's Kidney Pills, and nothing else."

There is no case or kind of Kidney Disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure.

Here is a New Kind of Soap

You are now using some soap and naturally think it is good. But here is a kind that is different from any you know—one that has taken us 43 years to perfect.

Try one cake and compare it with what you now use. We welcome such a test as this for we know in advance the result. You will never go back to the other kind. Here is a soap made from vegetable oil pure enough to use on your table. We pay far more for this in France than we might pay. So we get only the best.

Cocoanut oil from the isle of Ceylon is brought over 12,000 miles and mixed with the olive oil. Then both are boiled doubly long.

After this we mill them by our own special process. We have scoured the best factories of England, France and Austria for almost half a century to perfect this process. We have combined the best ideas of foreign lands with our own improvements to attain perfection.

When milled, the soap falls like flakes of snow into enormous bins and is then crushed under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture. Then it passes through granite rollers and comes out in miles of silky ribbon.

After being dried eight times it is pressed into cakes and is simply perfect soap. It lathers into a rich creamy foam and wears as thin as a wafer. It leaves the skin rosy and pink like an infant's. So we call it Infants' Delight.

The perfume is dainty and pure—it suggests only the delicate scent of the roses. Use one cake today and see what a wonderful difference there can be in soap.

10 Cents a Cake At All Dealers

JOHN TAYLOR & CO., Limited, TORONTO, CANADA

How to Shampoo

Place a pint of warm water on the stove and shave up a cake of Infants' Delight. Let it simmer until the soap is dissolved. Then pour into a wide jar to cool into jelly. Clean the hair with a brush, wet it with warm water, and rub the soap jelly into the scalp thoroughly. Rinse off the thick lather and dry the hair by rubbing and fanning with a towel. This will leave the hair soft, shiny and lustrous.

STAMP ISSUE FOR PATENT MEDICINES

It is announced in Canada's Saturday Gazette that while an act came into effect on April 1, 1909, providing that all proprietary or patent medicines in stock on that date should have a special stamp provided by the department, many cases are arising where persons unaware of the act have neglected to stamp the goods, making their sale illegal. It is recommended by the Minister of Inland Revenue that when it is shown on affidavit that the medicines were in stock before April 1, the department should furnish stamps for them at two cents per 100.

WHY GIRLS SUCCEED.

The Business Maiden Must Be Careful With Her Pennies.

One of the hardest lessons the business girl has to learn is to save, says Barbara Boyd.

It is difficult for youth, with its enthusiasm and ambitions and rose colored view of life, to anticipate want. Whereas for age—isn't there a Prince Charming coming some day who will take care of her?

It is difficult to save on $6 a week. Try it.

But nevertheless a girl should resolutely make herself save. And if she once gets the habit, if she acquires ever so small a bank account, this in itself helps. It pays to start a saving fund, if only with $1, just for the little niche it makes in the memory and the insistent voice with which it asks for more.

Many schemes are devised by business girls to help them save. One girl has a number of little envelopes labeled with her various needs—"luncheon," "car fare," "church," "board," "laundry," and so on. Each week when she gets her salary she slips into each envelope its requisite amount, and when it is due the money is there for it. She is not the girl who must run and borrow of her landlady when the laundry comes or who must ask her friends at the office to loan her enough for her lunch the day before salary is due. This method of planning leisurely and calmly how she will spend her money enables her each week to set aside a little for saving.

Another girl puts away a certain amount when she gets her salary, saying laughingly, "If I don't have it I can't spend it." But though she saves by this method, she probably doesn't get as much out of what she spends as though she planned more carefully.

Planning in one form or another is the keynote to saving. Hasty buying and thoughtless spending are its deathknell. The girl who wants to save should plan carefully her expenditures, her regular weekly expenses as well as the twice a year expenditure for clothes.

The girl who wants to save should not buy her clothes thoughtlessly. She should not buy on impulse. She should deliberately plan her clothes campaign, know beforehand what she wants, buy that and that only. She will be dressed with better taste and better get the worth of her money.

This all may be tiresome and boresome to do. But it will pay a girl to set herself to the task resolutely. It puts a different aspect on life to have a few hundred dollars in bank. And it may put you in a position to grasp opportunities which will mean much to a happy and useful future, but which you might be afraid to venture without some money to your credit to fall back upon.

SIXTY YEARS A HARPIST.

Rosalie Spohr a Figure In Berlin's Musical and Social Life.

One of the most interesting characters in the musical life of Berlin is Rosalie Spohr, the harpist, who is a niece of the great violinist Louis Spohr. She made her first appearance in public on Dec. 13, 1849, at a concert given by Jenny Lind. She attracted attention first because of her distinguished musical descent, but after the world had once heard her her art made her famous.

There are few women before the public today who play the harp as virtuosa, although one sees them occasionally in the opera orchestras. So it is difficult nowadays to realize that Rosalie Spohr toured Europe in triumph. She found in Franz Liszt a devoted friend and enthusiastic admirer, and he was proud to play with her at Weimar as well as give her the benefit of his artistic advice. Her career as a public performer ended after about six years. Then she became the wife of Count Sauerma, and the stage knew her no more. She still lives in Berlin, more than eighty years old, but enthusiastic in her devotion to the instrument with which she won the triumphs of her brief professional career. For three hours every day she practices the harp, and her technique has for that reason remained very complete for one of her age. Her talent was in a measure hereditary, since her aunt was a well known harpist in her day. It was through her playing that Rosalie Spohr, who had begun her musical life as a pianist, turned her attention to the harp.

A widow for more than twenty years, it has been her devotion to her art that has made life interesting to her during all that time. Her education was sound in the first place, for she studied for two years under the harpist Grimm, who allowed her to play in public at the end of that period, although it was one of his principles that a harpist should study for ten years. Countess Rosalie has been an intimate friend of the German royal family, and both Friedrich and the empress were delighted to hear her play. Nowadays she is a unique figure in the musical and social life of Berlin and an inspiration to the younger students, who see what a joy and consolation an art may be to one who has acquired it faithfully.

COOKING RULES.

Green Vegetables Should Be Dropped Into Salted Water.

If vegetables appear wilted they may be freshened by soaking them in cold water.

Perfectly fresh vegetables, however, may be cooked as soon as prepared.

Green vegetables should be dropped into salted boiling water and cooked very rapidly, but such vegetables as asparagus, spinach, beans, peas and corn should be cooked in as little water as possible, just enough to keep them from burning. Other vegetables, such as cabbage and cauliflower, should be covered with water and a pinch of soda added. In cooking onions they should first be scalded and the water changed twice during the course of cooking.

Spinach, if it is to be cooked immediately, may be washed in scalding water, which will remove the sand clinging to the stems much more thoroughly than cold water.

Green corn should not be washed. Some people prefer to boil it with the husks on.

Cabbage and cauliflower should be thoroughly washed and soaked head downward so as to remove any insects lurking inside them.

Every kitchen should have a scrubbing brush to be used exclusively for scrubbing vegetables. Potatoes, for instance, should be scrubbed thoroughly before they are pared; also parsnips and carrots.

In preparing beets do not break the skin before cooking them or all the juice will be lost.

In baking potatoes first scrub them well. Then grease them with a little butter applied on a piece of brown paper. Bake for an hour, testing one when they seem to be done by bursting it slightly with the fist. If the potato is soft and mealy they are ready to be served.

A little chopped parsley tied up in a small muslin bag will greatly improve the flavor of string beans.

Stewed tomatoes are improved by adding a little finely chopped meat and meat gravy; also a sliced onion fried in butter until brown. Stewed tomatoes are seldom cooked long enough and invariably have a raw taste. They should be cooked down until quite thick.

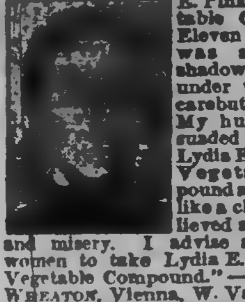
Torn Buttonholes.

If a buttonhole tears out lay a piece of closely woven tape back of it, stitch firmly in place, hem the old buttonhole to it neatly and then cut and work in the tape a new buttonhole of the proper size. An extra fine way is to rip the band apart and take out the threads of the old buttonhole, stitch the tape on the inside of the back fold of the band, stitch up the latter in its original shape and proceed as before. When buttons have torn out it is comparatively easy to squeeze a small square of good tape through the hole, lay it flat in the proper position between the two folds of the band and stitch it in place. Hem down the ragged edges on both sides and sew the buttons to the tape. Any button or buttonhole that is to bear the strain should be stayed with tape when the garment is being made, the stay tapes for both buttons and buttonholes being placed in the band before it is stitched.

Lieut. Thos. Heath, of Hamilton Fire Brigade, has been appointed chief of the Saskatoon Fire Department.

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Vienna, W. Va.—"I feel that I owe the last ten years of my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven years ago I was a walking shadow. I had been under the doctor's care but got no relief. My husband persuaded me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like a charm. It relieved all my pains and misery. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. EMMA WHEATON, Vienna, W. Va.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

No Help For It.

The young benedict was experiencing his first trouble. "My wife," he said, "is so exceedingly nervous at night that she scarcely sleeps. "Burglars?" queried the old married man. "Yes." "Well, you have to expect that. My wife was that way. Every time she heard a noise downstairs she'd rout me out and chase me down to investigate. After a time, however, I convinced her that if a burglar ever did get into the house he wouldn't make any noise at all." "Clever!" exclaimed the young one. "I'll try that." "Don't do it," pleaded the old one, "for if your wife's anything like mine she'll turn right about and worry every time she doesn't hear a noise downstairs."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Cause For Worry.

"We are going to consult a specialist about our boy," says the father.

"About your boy?" echoes the friend. "Why, he seems to be a perfectly healthy, rugged lad."

"I know, but we have asked him time and again what he wants to be when he grows up, and he never has said that he wants to be a railway engineer."—New York Life.

Identity of Person Who Pilfered Launch Has Been Established

Within the past ten days the launch "Flossie," which is tied up on the west shore of the Otonabee river, above the "Otonabee" boat-house, was robbed of its coil box and some other equipment. C.P.R. and G.T.R. Report Exceptionally Busy Holiday Season

The Thanksgiving holiday traffic on both the C.P.R. and G.T.R. was particularly large this year, and both roads were kept unusually busy in providing the necessary accommodation for the thousands of travellers. The local stations and uptown ticket offices report a very busy time, and say the traffic was much larger than last year. This was due to the fact that the excursion privileges this year allowed a stay of three days longer on the tickets.

MARGUERITE CLARK

"THE WISHING RING"

Speaking of "The Wishing Ring," which appeared at the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, Thanksgiving Day, the Ottawa Journal makes the following flattering reference;—

Marguerite Clark in the leading role of "The Wishing Ring" completely captivated the two large holiday audiences at the Russell Theatre yesterday. The comedy itself is somewhat unique and very charming, and Miss Clark in her sweet, captivating manner from the moment she appears takes possession of the hearts of the audience. In "The Wishing Ring," the role Miss Clark plays is peculiarly effective. In it she is the simple, kind-hearted and very lovable daughter of the village parson. Both in the emotional and lighter parts she appears to advantage. Her delightful voice, captivating smiles and coquettish ways and capable handling of her role won her many sincere encomiums.

Miss Clark is fortunate in being supported by a capable cast. The acting throughout is well balanced and the various parts intelligently interpreted. Robert Dempster as Giles, King Baggett as William, and Miss Grace Goodall as the Godess Girl, all taking important roles, did excellent work.

The staging of the play is lavish, floral decorations being profuse. The ladies' gowns are very beautiful. A number of live fowl, dogs, parrots, etc., give the play a touch of reality.

A BIG COMPANY OF ALL-STAR PLAYERS IS ASSOCIATED WITH MISS CLARK IN THIS CHARMING PRODUCTION

MARGUERITE CLARK

STORY OF THE PLAY

Miss Marguerite Clark, having forsaken musical comedy in which she shone so conspicuously for several years, comes here, in a new fantasy by Owen Davis, entitled "The Wishing Ring."

All of the scenes are laid in Devonshire, England. Miss Clark plays the part of Sally, the daughter of a poorly paid parson. Induced by Socialistic teachings to believe that all men are equal, and that nature's gifts belong to all alike, the child enters the rose garden of Annesly Chase. During one of these excursions, she accidentally meets the owner, an English nobleman. He is wearing the dress of a hunter, which fact causes Sally to mistake him for the gardener. From this meeting grows a friendship which Mr. Davis causes to ripen in a manner so different from the average stage love that it will doubtless be accepted as one of the brightest, most romantic and beautiful stories seen on the stage for many years.

The plot does not depend on mistaken identity, although as a matter of fact the real gardner is introduced. He happens to be a man of unusual good looks, and when Sally confides to an American girl friend, that she believes the nobleman to be in disguise, many mistakes arise. Chief among them is the impression gained by the American that the gardener is the Lord, and forthwith she sets about to win his heart.

In order to offset the love of the real nobleman for the parson's daughter, an aunt tells the child that it is her gardener with whom the American girl is in love. Realizing that the American is more fitted to make a suitable wife for the man she loves, Sally decides to give him up. This unfortunate state of affairs, however, does not come to pass, as the nobleman eventually discloses his identity, thus upsetting the plans of the American girl and bringing happiness to the others.

Miss Clark will be remembered as the co-star of "Happyland" two years ago, in which production she made an excellent impression.

MARGUERITE CLARK

Like all Shubert's Shows "The Wishing Ring" is handsomely staged.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

The Rev. Canon Davidson, M. A., Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, Rev. A. G. Reid and Mr. W. E. Soward, returned to the city this morning from Colborne, where they attended the ceremony in connection with the laying of the corner stone of the new Anglican church of that place. To Rev. Canon Davidson was given the high honor of giving the address and laying the corner stone and he was presented with a beautiful silver trowel on which was an inscription with his name and the nature of the affair, which took place on Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Addresses were also given by other clergymen in attendance and at the conclusion a service was held in the church in which the resident Protestant ministers took part. In the evening the Lord Bishop of the Diocese preached to a congregation that filled the present church. The new place of worship will be a large and imposing one. FIREPROOF THROUGHOUT

PALMERSTON G.T.R. STATION IS DESTROYED BY FLAMES

Kenora Opera House is Burned and Hilliard Hotel is Badly Damaged—Lumber Mills at Kingsbury, Que., Are Badly Scorched.

Palmerston, Oct. 27.—The Grand Trunk Railway's frame station here was gutted by fire last night. The flames were noticed about 9.30, breaking out upstairs over the general waiting-room, and, although the alarm was given promptly, it was impossible to save the building. Six lines of hose were played upon the building, the waterworks system recently installed being worked up to high pressure. Most of the papers and books were saved from destruction. The loss will be in the neighborhod of $10,000. The baggage and express departments, which were in a building adjoining the station, were not damaged. Temporary accommodation will be provided for the railway officials in the Queen's Hotel and in railway coaches.

Hotel and Theatre Burned.

Kenora, Oct. 27.—The Hilliard House with the opera house adjoining, caught fire Monday night and is now a heap of ruins, the structure being almost wholly gutted.

Lumber Mills Damaged.

Montreal, Oct. 27.—Fire last evening broke out in the big Williamson & Crombie lumber mills at Kingsbury, Que., and caused between $10,000 and $15,000 damage before it was extinguished.

Barns Destroyed.

Strathroy, Oct. 27.—The barns and drive-sheds of Mrs. William Cau[illegible] on the 8th concession of Caradoc, were burned to the ground last night, together with the implements and the season's crops. The live stock and horses, with the exception of a calf, were all taken out in safety. Although the origin of the fire is a mystery, incendiarism is strongly suspected. Two weeks ago poison was found in the well, but was detected before any damage was done. The loss will be about $2,000.

Cheese Factory Burned.

Belleville, Oct. 27.—Fire Monday night destroyed the cheese factory and evaporator near Rednersville, in Prince Edward County, the property of ex-Mayor R. J. Graham, this city. The loss is estimated at $2,000, mostly covered by insurance.

During the electrical storm a large barn, drive house and vacant dwelling on the farm of J. D. Naphin, 8th concession of Tyendinaga, were struck by lightning and all destroyed, with the season's crops. The loss is very heavy, with only $350 insurance in the Liverpool, London & Globe.

Farm Buildings Lost.

Elgin, Man., Oct. 27.—All the buildings, with the exception of the residence on the farm of T. Westerman, together with 2,000 bushels of wheat, were burned yesterday. Seven stacks of barley and oats are all that remain of the season's crop.

THE LARGEST CONVENTION OF BARBERS EVER HELD

Secretary Gainey Will Present Report as Delegate on Monday—Organizer for Canada—A Remarkable Photograph

A busy session of the local barbers union was held last night. It was the intention to have the report of the secretary, H. Gainey, who attended the Milwaukee convention, presented at the meeting, but as the report is such a lengthy and important one, a special meeting was called for Monday night when the report will be given.

The quintennial convention of the Journeymen Barbers of the International Union of America, which was held this year at Milwaukee, occupied from October 6th to 13th, and was the largest congress of knights of the razor ever held. Six hundred and fifty delegates from different parts of Canada and the United States were in attendance. Mr. Gainey was present for the entire convention and reports a highly profitable and most interesting visit. Practically the same officers were elected, the most radical change in the official system being the appointment of four organizers in the place of one as heretofore. One of these will be the chief organizer and the other three will be his subordinates. Mr. A. Bouchillier, of Ottawa, was appointed organizer for Canada.

Mr. Gainey brought home with him a remarkable photograph of the 650 delegates in attendance. It is over five feet in length and was taken in the Public Service Park, Milwaukee. He intends to have it framed and it will shortly be placed on view in the window of Gainey Bros.' tobacco store, George street.

As there will be no big walk here this fall the tramp ped was advised to proceed with his journey. "See that he gets a proper send-off," said his Worship.

WRESTLING

WHO DID HE EVER BEAT?

Chicago, Oct. 23.—Antonio Pierri, importer of foreign wrestling talent, is coming back to America with another Turk with whom he expects to dethrone Frank Gotch from his position as world's champion.

Pierri was the man that brought Youssouff, the mighty Turk, who swept the boards clean many years ago, and last winter he brought Yussiff Mahmout here to beat Gotch. He failed by a wide margin, but when he departed said he would yet get a man to beat the Iowa farmer. Now he writes that he is bring Maxoom Murat, with the hope that he will dethrone Gotch.

THE RING

It will be interesting to watch the proceedings of Jeffries and Johnson and their respective managers in arranging details for the fight, which, if it ever comes off, will be the biggest drawing card the ring has ever been called upon to hold. In the past the negro has been dubbed a fourflusher and a yellow scrapper, but, notwithstanding these taunts, he has been beating all comers in decisive fashion, and endeavoring to show the sporting men that he is willing, if not anxious, to meet the big boilermaker. Jeffries has returned from a trip across the ocean and makes a statement to the effect that he will fight Johnson before the club offering the largest inducements. It all depends on what Jeffries means by the "largest." Will any club be able to meet with his demands? Probably the real fact of the matter is that Jeffries is doing the side-stepping, but will be willing to go on with Johnson if the public are easy enough to hand out their bank notes and not till then will the question of who is four-flushing will be settled. Johnson is not popular and is a negro, and it is these facts alone that places his rival in the limelight to-day, and not where he would be were the conditions reversed—serving up highballs.

Ald. Duffus' Car Struck a Trench and Stopped Suddenly

Ald. Duffus' automobile came to a sudden stop on Charlotte street this morning at the railway crossing. The machine was running east, but the driver failed to see a trench on the east side of the track, and when the front wheels of the machine struck it it stopped rather quickly. The workmen engaged in the erection of the semaphores at this point gave a helping hand and the auto was soon speeding along none the worse for the mishap.

Finance Committee Takes No Action Regarding Proposition From Wireless Telepraph Co.

A meeting of the Finance Committee was held yesterday afternoon, when there were present Ald. Morrow, chairman; Mayor Rush, and Aldermen Phelan and Gillespie.

A letter was read from Adamson & Dobbin, objecting to paying an account for $6.96 for a balance of the cost of a sewer connection at 501 Water street, on the ground that the cost was excessive. The committee decided that the account must be paid, and passed a resolution to that effect.

No action was taken regarding a claim from F. L. Robinson for $5 for damages to a hack, also regarding R. Redmond's request that he be paid the money collected in fines from boys who stole plums from his orchard.

The committee decided to take no action regarding the proposition of the Lepel Wireless Telegraph Co to install their system here.

A number of accounts were passed.

THE CHARM OF THE BERMUDAS

Described by Rev. Dr. Marsh at Meeting of Astronomical Society

The meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society last evening was of an unusual nature, being an illustrated travel talk. The president, Dr. Marsh, gave a very charming description of a winter trip to the Bermudas, which, supplemented by about seventy-five excellent colored views, more than delighted the audience.

Of all the unique corners of the earth the Bermudas must hold a distinctive place in the catalogue. As it is of coral formation—built by insects—the roads, houses, dykes, fences, and churches are all built of coral. All as white as the driven snow, or possible here and there a few grey streaks to mark the hand of time upon certain portions, the scene presented is one of spotless cleanliness and refinement.

The speaker gave a very instructive description of the natives with their characteristic politeness, refinement and high morals. This, coupled with the magnificent views, gave the Bermudas an aspect of 'Eden' loveliness.

As the temperature is quite constant, holding between 60 and 80 degrees, the climate would be ideal if it were not for the excessive moisture. Within the house, however, the dampness does not appear to be noticeable, as the coral seems to absorb it nicely.

There are no wild animals and no snakes or other reptiles except a small turtle and lizard.

As there are no rivers or springs on the islands the natives have very hard work to understand references to such. Many amusing incidents were told of conversations with the natives relative to such, and of times when people and horses are able to walk upon the water. Where ice and snow are never seen it is simply impossible to form a conception of our frozen rivers and lakes.

On the conclusion of the lecture a great many questions were asked the speaker relative to details of the country and climate. Many of the questions were most interesting and bore evidence of the instructive nature of the address and the close attention of the audience.

During the evening an announcement of special interest was made in connection with the next meeting, a fortnight hence. Mr. Stupart, director of the Meteorological Observatory, will give the address. Everyone will have the opportunity of seeing and hearing the man who "makes the weather for Canada," as he is the man who issues the forecasts and all the details of this important work.

As there will be no doubt of an exceptionally large attendance, a suitable place to hold the banquet is being sought. The market hall has been suggested, but it is stated no definite place has been decided upon.

Scarecrows

The Last One Saved the Corn and Won a Bride

By GEORGE R. WARDEN

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

The woman who sat on the doorsteps of her little house, situated in the midst of about three acres of land, was crippled with rheumatism, and though she had a white rag tied to the end of a crutch and was waving it at half a dozen crows sitting on the fence they seemed to regard her with contempt. Presently they dropped down into the field and began to scratch. The rag was waved and the woman shouted, and a voice at her gate asked

"Is anything wrong with you?"

A girl of eighteen had left the big farmhouse on the hill, half a mile away, for a walk, and as she neared the cottage the shouts of the woman and the cawing of the crows had attracted her attention.

"Yes, there's lots wrong," replied the woman. "The crows are scratching up the sweet corn I planted last week."

The girl entered the gate and picked up a stick and advanced upon the crows with a "S-h-o-o!" and they took to flight. Then she sat down beside the woman.

"I'm from Jasper's," said the girl. "Mrs. Jasper is my sister, and I am there on a visit. I passed here yesterday and was wondering who lived here."

"It's me that has lived here all alone for the last five years, child. I'm a widow. The rheumatism came on me two years ago and now I can hardly walk. The crows have scratched up most all I've planted this spring. I'm waiting for Farmer Johnson to come along and set up a scarecrow for me."

"But I can help you. You stuff old clothes with straw and make them look like a man."

"Bless you, dear! It will be the saving of my corn. You'll find trousers and coat and hat hanging up in the shed. I got them out the other day."

An hour later the "scare" was set up on the corn ground, and there were dismal lamentations from the crows as they sought other fields. They had bluffed and robbed a poor rheumatic widow, but when it came to a man with his hat cocked on one ear and a stick in his hands to represent a gun they realized that times had changed.

That was May Kelly's first visit to the Widow Hempstead, but after that scarcely a day passed that she did not run in with a gift of some sort and to see that the scarecrow was attending to business. One afternoon as the couple sat on the step and the girl was telling the woman of her home in the city a tramp came along the road. He may not have been hungry enough for food, but he did want a new outfit of clothing. He caught sight of the scarecrow, and his hopes rose. He was no crow to be fooled with a straw stuffed man. He saw the women, but he climbed the fence and shouldered the "scare" and walked away with it.

"Let that alone! You shan't take it!" called the girl.

"Beg pardon, ladies," replied the tramp, with a bow and a scrape, "but you do not understand the situation. I am invited to attend a wedding in the next town, and I've got to have a suit to wear. This isn't as good a one as I could wish for, but I'll have to make it do."

"It's stealing, and you can be arrested," threatened the girl.

"And if I'm to be arrested I must have a suit that is decent to go before the judge. I ain't bragging on my looks right this minute, but if you see me half an hour later you'll take me for a broker going to business."

"And now the crows!" sighed the widow as the tramp walked off.

"And the 'scare' was such a beautiful object!" added the girl. "When we sat here looking at him I almost felt that he could talk to us. You've got another old hat and a ragged blanket in the shed, but I'll have to bring something from the house."

Half an hour passed when a crow was sighted. The absence of the "scare" had been noticed. The one crow became five—ten—twenty. They sat on the fence and held a caucus. They determined to despoil that widow of her last grain of corn. Miss May threw sticks and stones, but of course they laughed at her. All crows laugh when they see a girl throwing. The widow found a rag and waved it to save the country, but the crows winked at it. Ragtime had passed with them. They were ready to drop to earth and begin scratching when the girl cried out:

"Don't shoo any more. I'll scare the life out of them!"

In another minute she had the old hat on and the ragged quilt around her and was running across the field. With a grand chorus of frightened caws the crows rose up and sailed away and then began circling round to see if it was the real thing or only a bluff. To convince them the girl took a pose, and she was such a comical object that the widow forgot all her sorrows in laughter. The new "scare" had been in position about ten minutes when a young man with a gun on his shoulder came out of the woods beyond the field and headed for the house. The "scare's" back was toward him. The widow saw, but dared not call out.

The young man would have passed the object forty feet to his left, but after a glance at it his curiosity was excited. He had seen scarecrows before, but never one like that. It seemed to waver now and then, instead of being tied fast to a stake. Presently Miss May heard the footsteps of a man.

"Here, you! What do you want?" called the widow from the doorway.

The young man wanted to investigate that scarecrow. He walked right up to the object and laid a hand on it. The brown eyes of the object looked straight into his.

"By George!" gasped the young man as he fell back.

"Well, you've done it!" replied the girl as she flung away hat and quilt and faced him with burning cheeks.

"A thousand pardons! I had no idea—no idea."

"Then why didn't you go along and mind your business? I didn't ask you to come."

"Of course not, and I'm so sorry, and I beg so many thousand pardons. Really now, but I'll go at once."

"No, you won't! I was playing scarecrow here to keep the birds from the corn. You had to come along and discover me and humiliate me. Now play scarecrow yourself for an hour! It's for the poor widow there in the door."

"I'll—I'll—by George, I'll do it! Only serve me right. I'll stand here for an hour by the watch, and then I shall expect to receive your forgiveness."

"I—I didn't quite mean what I said," stammered Miss May as she saw that he was about to take her at her word.

"But I'm willing—quite willing. I will excuse you for an hour, please."

Miss May went to the house and sat on the doorstep with the widow. She wanted to be angry, but the humor of the situation prevented. She wanted to think the young man very impertinent, but really he was a fine looking fellow and a gentleman, and he was out there playing scarecrow under her eyes. The widow laughed and the girl giggled, and the "scare's" punishment was cut fifteen minutes short by a hand being waved to him. As he came to the steps an informal introduction took place. Then Mr. Mortimer, with his superior ingenuity, managed to rig up an object warranted to keep all crows forty rods from a cornfield or no pay.

Next day Miss May had to come down to bring the widow some tea and pie, and Mr. Mortimer had to see how his scarecrow was working. Then, as the girl failed to appear next day, Mr. Mortimer had to call at the Jasper farmhouse to inquire for her. Then widows and scarecrows and loving hearts and the good old summer time got all mixed up, and the last report from the widow was:

"Yes, sir, that last scarecrow saved the corn, and if you don't believe those young people have fallen dead in love with each other and are going to be married next year you just wait and look at the society papers."

Women Who Hate Men.

From time to time strange instances crop up of women who not merely remain unmarried of their own free will, but carry their antipathy to the opposite sex to most peculiar lengths.

Thus one of these is utterly resolved to have nothing whatever to do with men on any pretext. All her food is bought of women, and consequently meat never appears on her table, since there is no female butcher in her neighborhood.

Not long since a handsome legacy was refused simply because it came from a man, while instances are known of women who make it their boast that they have neither spoken to nor allowed one of the opposite sex to cross their thresholds for a quarter of a century and upward.

But probably the bitterest man hater of modern days was an Austrian lady who at the time of her death was engaged in perfecting an elaborate plan for the ultimate extinction of the male sex.—London Globe.

Sightseeing.

It was an American tourist at the door of Warwick castle who was bent on seeing the place and pending the arrival of a guide was busily studying his guidebook. When the doorkeeper made his appearance the American asked in a quick, businesslike tone:

"Have you that famous vase still?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"And the table that cost so much money?"

"Yes, sir."

"And have you still that likeness of Charles I. by Van Dyck?"

"Oh, yes, sir," said the doorkeeper. "They are all here. Won't you come in and see them?"

"No, thanks," replied the American. "I will take them all as per catalogue. I have got to see Coventry today, and I want to visit Stratford-on-Avon and sleep in Leamington tonight, and I guess I'll have to be in Sheffield tomorrow morning on business. Good morning."—Exchange.

Prepared to Suffer.

A road weary traveler plodding northward from Mountain Home, Ark., came to a crossroad barber shop. The temptation to risk a shave was strong. In fact, it was so strong that the tramper decided to take a chance.

"Of course it's going to be awful," he philosophized. "He'll scrape my poor face till I shriek and then rub in his aromatic liniment until I weep in agony. But this beard"—

He entered. The barber was an expert. His razor was sharp and didn't pull. Neither did he deluge his victim with an excess of bay rum. When the shave was finished the barber asked, "Shall I shave your neck?"

But the traveler, recently from the city, was not to be denied. Why tramp if there are no hardships to relate?

"No," he replied; "scrape it the same as you did my face."—Kansas City Star.

English Joke.

Londoner—Bah Jove! Yes, over in our country the upper classes are much attached to a fish called the sole. Blooming fine fish too.

American—How funny! That sounds like a shoemaker's report.

Londoner—What, my dear man?

American—Why, the uppers are attached to the sole.—Chicago News.

CATARRH CURED

No Cure, No Pay, is a Most Generous Offer

To get an antiseptic strong enough to kill catarrh germs and not destroy the tissues of the membrane at the same time, has been a problem which was never solved until the discovery of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me.)

Hyomei is prepared from eucalyptus, the most powerful healing antiseptic known. Breathe it through the inhaler over the inflamed and germ-ridden membrane four or five times a day, and in a few days the germs will disappear.

The inflamed condition will go, too, and the suffering, hawking and offensive breath, and the discharge of mucous and crusts in the nose will cease.

Then why should any catarrh sufferer hesitate when Wm. Madill has such faith in Hyomei that he offers to return your money if, after a fair trial, Hyomei does not cure catarrh.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including the inhaler, costs a dollar, and extra bottles, if afterwards needed, cost but 50 cents. Hyomei also cures asthma, croup, sore throat, coughs, colds or grip.

THE HARDY ANGORA.

Great Brush and Weed Eater and Costs Little to Keep.

Every farmer who has brush and weeds should have a bunch of goats, as there is no vegetation which they will eat in preference to the leaves and twigs of all kinds of bushes, says a successful Iowa breeder of Angoras. A patch of brushwood which may be so dense that a man cannot get through it may soon be converted into an open wood lot if Angoras are kept on it for a season or two. They will often strip saplings to a height of five feet.

While the sheep is a natural grazer, the goat is a browser. Goats may be kept in pastures with sheep, cattle and horses and are in no way obnoxious to any of these animals. On the other hand, a few of them in a flock of sheep are a protection against dogs and wolves. They do well in practically any section of the corn belt and seem to be able to stand extreme heat as well as extreme cold. They are also less expensive to keep than sheep.

A CHAMPION ANGORA.

In commenting on the Angora goat in his book on "Types and Breeds of Farm Animals" Professor Plumb states that they range in weight from 60 to 100 pounds, although some are found that weigh considerably more, especially if fat. Their value as mutton producers is not regarded commercially as very important. The flesh of the fat young Angora makes excellent mutton. However, as a rule, nothing but mature stock finds its way to the market, as even the wethers are commonly shorn for several years before being fattened. The browsing of the Angora gives to the meat a gamey flavor, regarding the excellence of which there is a difference of opinion.

The fleece of the Angora goat is commonly known as mohair and is somewhat coarser than fine wool, but is longer and stronger. An average fleece weighs about three pounds, though it may yield as heavy as sheep under the most favorable conditions. The mohair lies over a short coat of hair known as kemp, which is hard and white and is very objectionable fiber. Its presence in American flocks is due to the influence of common goat blood on which the Angora has been crossed in the past. In selecting sires, therefore, those with a great amount of kemp should be avoided. Like wool, mohair differs considerably in quality and consequently sells at varying prices.

THE HORSEMAN

For horses that are confined to the stable on dry feed a hot bran mash once or twice each week is most beneficial.

Horses In Hot Weather.

Few horses would die of sunstroke if their owners would use a little judgment and care. A sunshade for the poll or crown of the head will add to the horse's comfort immensely if it is arranged so that the air will circulate beneath it. A sponge fastened on the poll is positively injurious unless it is kept wet and cool, which is practically impossible. It is the continuous work while exposed to the direct rays of the hot sun that leads to heat exhaustion and sunstroke; therefore short rests should be allowed at frequent intervals in a shady place, if possible, and a few swallows of cool water should be given as often as possible.

Signs of Heat Exhaustion.

When a horse begins to lag, droops his head, pants hard or ceases to perspire he should be stopped at once, for if he is kept going he will surely go down, perhaps drop dead. As soon as the horse shows himself to be suffering from heat exhaustion unhitch him and remove the harness. Spray him along the back with ice cold water and apply it freely to the poll with a hose or a sponge. Let him stand out of doors in a shady place, and with such treatment a recovery will usually come quickly.

Work the Stallion.

A well known breeder says: To improve the drafter work him. One firm has imported 4,000 stallions into the United States from Europe in the past ten years. This is a frightful waste of money, but it will continue until Americans work their stallions. In Europe all stallions are worked, and we have to go there for the qualities that labor perpetuates. We could breed just as good draft stallions as the French if we would work them as the Frenchmen do. We lose the labor of these grand, good workers, impair the vitality of their progeny and pour a flood of money into Europe as a consequence of our wasteful and extravagant methods. I have owned stallions for forty years and have always noted that the idle, fat stallions deteriorate rapidly, rarely having a stallion son equal to themselves.

A Pittsburg expert is examining the Telkma Valley coal deposits for the G.T.P.

STOCK GLEANINGS.

Some Suggestions of Value For the Stock Breeder.

There seem to be much stewing and fretting among many farmers about covering cement floors where the cows lie. It has been proved in many instances that the ordinary cement floor, even with all the straw bedding they can provide, is injurious to cows in various ways. The cold cement floor, and it is always cold to the hand, is very productive in causing udder troubles—like garget—and rheumatism in the body of the cow. Now, it is a simple thing to cover the cement with inch boards. Do this and all will be well. Why not do it?

The hog is a well regulated machine for the transformation of food into crude material for the packing house. The hog which can assimilate the most during a given period is the most profitable to the grower. Therein lies the difference between the purpose bred animal and the razorback, as shown in recent experiments.

From many quarters of the southwest and from practically all parts of the main hog breeding states come reports of a shortage in brood sows. High prices of feed and the extra good prices offered by the packers for all kinds of swine have combined to send the hogs from the farming districts to the packing houses.

Put a small quantity of copperas in the drinking troughs and tanks for stock. It purifies the water and rids it of the green scum known as alga.

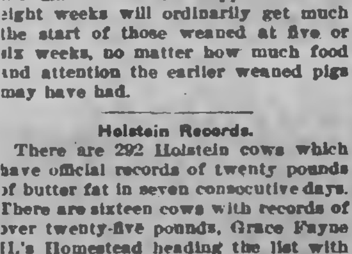
Musty or moldy hay is harmful as a feed, and the one who feeds such to his stock will be rewarded by cases of sickness, paralysis and sometimes death.

Ohio has appropriated $25,000 to assist in fighting epidemics of hog cholera in that state. Large appropriations made by other states consist of $15,000 for Iowa and $10,000 for Missouri. Texas has appropriated $1,000 to aid in the work, and other states have given considerable amounts.

Swine Management.

Referring to an authority, it may be of interest to quote a few paragraphs on the care of the young pig:

A hog is half made when past the weaning period without a stunt or kink in its growth. Every check or halt in prosperity through its first two months is more expensive than at any later period. Too much rich, feverish milk of the dam, causing thumps or other ailment, may leave harmful results, perhaps as much so as scant feeding or other neglect of the sow. More injury may be done to a pig's growth in two or three days than can be repaired in a month even if he is made the subject of special care, which where many are raised is not the rule or easily practicable. Good luck with pigs calls for attention, and that not occasional, but frequent and regular.



SIX-MONTHS-OLD BERKSHIRE BARROWS.

From the first week after farrowing until weaning time the sow will be little else than a milk machine, and to be a high power machine in perfect operation she must have proper care. Nothing else is so well calculated to make pigs grow as a bountiful supply of wholesome sow's milk, and the pigs that have plenty of other feed with the milk of a well slopped sow for eight weeks will ordinarily get much the start of those weaned at five or six weeks, no matter how much food and attention the earlier weaned pigs may have had.

Holstein Records.

There are 292 Holstein cows which have official records of twenty pounds of butter fat in seven consecutive days. There are sixteen cows with records of over twenty-five pounds, Grace Fayne II.'s Homestead heading the list with 28.44 pounds and Colantha IV.'s Johanna standing second with 28.176 pounds. Holstein breeders have a large list of performers to select from in their cattle breeding, and they are taking advantage of it. "Record blood" is in demand for grading up dairy herds and for building up pure bred herds.

Dairy Gems.

Milk regularly and at reasonable hours.

The farmer who milks cows is not always a dairyman.

A few good cows are worth more than a lot of ordinary ones.

It's good management, not luck, that makes dairying profitable.

Spend plenty of time at the dairy barns on the state fair grounds.

The cow that pays through the pail and separator is the cow to keep.

Care in marketing the butter is almost as important as care in producing it.

Fly repellants are still necessary. Do not try to get along without them.

Even forty bushels of wheat to the acre at $1 per bushel can't beat dairy farming.

It's a mistake to build a creamery before there are cows enough to make it a success.

The statement that the Standard Oil company can make butter out of its byproducts isn't worrying real dairymen much.

When you admit that you haven't time to test and weigh the milk so as to keep a record of each cow, you haven't time to dairy right.

There are twenty excellent orchards at Morden, Man., a proof that Manitoba can grow apples.

HOUSEWIFE HINTS.

Use strips of shoe leather to tack heavy roses to the house or trellis, since it outlasts twine or strips of goods.

Cut out the corners from all heavy envelopes, for they are excellent for holding coins sent by mail. They also make good book corner protectors.

Knitted underwear makes the softest and best ironing holders. Put several thicknesses together and quilt on the machine. Make a tape loop to hang the holder to a nail.

A box of sardines and a can of shrimp, both prepared for eating and served together on lettuce leaves with a dressing of oil, vinegar, onion juice, salt and pepper, make a delicious salad. Mayonnaise dressing may be used.

Be careful where you place your dressing tables and mirrors. Sunlight will destroy the finest bevel French plate, and it is impossible to restore the backing without considerable expense. Dampness will destroy it in the same manner.

When scraping new potatoes they will invariably blacken the hands. There is nothing better than a piece of lemon for removing the blemish, and when obstinate if a pinch of powdered pumice is placed on the lemon it will instantly remove the stain.

To quickly prepare cocoanut or horseradish pare for scraping and lessen the task and the usual "crying" when grating the horseradish by running the roots through the chopping machine. All hard and fibrous pieces of horseradish should be pared before running the roots through the machine.

To have a hardy scarlet rambler make a good showing plant it with the rack extending north and south. In this way the rose gets all of the eastern and western sun and will bloom profusely on both sides. This is one of the most luxuriant roses one can cultivate, and it delights in the entire sunshine of the day. If the long branches of this rose are turned down and covered with earth it will make a new branch, and in this way one can soon have an arbor of scarlet roses.

Very Absentminded.

An interesting event occurred in the household of a scientific gentleman who is a member of one of Uncle Sam's chemical bureaus in Washington.

The gentleman himself was hard at work in his home laboratory when the news was brought him.

"It's a boy," quietly announced the physician as he stopped on the threshold.

"All right, all right," muttered the absentminded chemist as he bent over his work. "Er—eh—ask him what he wants, won't you?"

SEEING PETERBORO'S BIGGEST INDUSTRY

Toronto City Council, Board of Control and Heads of Several Civic Departments, Guests of C. G. E. Co. Here To-day--Were Taken Over Plant of the Company.

The Canadian General Electric Company are to-day doing the honors in connection with the visit of a party of prominent Toronto men to Peterborough. They are here on the invitation of the C.G.E. Co., who are showing the visitors over the mammoth plant of the company in this city. The deputation consists of His Worship Mayor Oliver, nearly all the members of the city council, three controllers and a number of the city officials. They are accompanied by several of the head officials of the C.G.E., including Mr. G. E. Watts, the general manager, and Mr. R. E. Layfield, assistant manager of the Canada Foundry. The visitors, about thirty in number, arrived on a special car on the 11.16 C.P.R. train from the west, and on their arrival were taken in cabs to the lift lock. They were much impressed by the gigantic nature of the structure. Afterwards they dined at the Oriental hotel, along with Mayor Rush and a number of the Peterborough aldermen, Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., and other prominent citizens. In the afternoon the C.G.E. works were visited. The civic solons from Toronto were shown through every department, and the various processes of manufacturing various electrical goods were explained to them. They return to Toronto on a special train leaving here at seven o'clock.

At the Oriental Hotel Mayor Rush proposed the toast to the "Toronto visitors," and welcomed them to the city of Peterborough.

Among those in the party were Mayor Oliver, Controllers Ward, Hocken and Harrison, City Treasurer R. T. Cody, City Engineer C. H. Rust, Assessment Commissioner J. C. Forman, Property Commissioner R. C. Harris and G. B. Wilson, secretary to Mayor Oliver.

A number of Toronto newspaper men were with the party.

CHRONIC CATARRH RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA.

MRS. F. CARR.

MRS. F. CARR, Vineland, Ont., Can., writes:

"For several years I was afflicted with catarrh, which made life a burden. The coughing and hacking which accompanied the disease was terrible.

"The complaint finally extended to the stomach and I was in a wretched condition.

"I tried different remedies and the best professional treatment all in vain.

"Finally, as a last resort, I tried Peruna upon the recommendation of my sister in Hamilton.

"I could see steady improvement and after using four bottles of that precious medicine I was feeling well again, my old trouble being completely a thing of the past.

"To-day I would not take one thousand dollars for what this grand medicine has done for me."

Peruna is a universally recognised catarrh remedy. It will relieve catarrh in its most obstinate form.

WEDDING BELLS

CLARRY—CAMERON

A wedding of much social interest was quietly solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, 141 Reid street, this afternoon at three o'clock, the contracting parties being Miss Jean Milne Cameron, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cameron, and Ernest Simpson Clarry, of the Trent Canal staff, Peterborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Clarry, of Millbrook. Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, was the officiating clergyman. The matron of honor was Mrs. W. T. Hall, of Peterborough, and Mr. Walter B. Snow, of the staff of the local branch of the Bank of Ottawa, supported the groom. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present.

The bride's gown was of white liberty satin trimmed with Brussels lace. She wore the conventional veil caught with white heather, sent from the former home of the bride's father in Scotland, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley. The matron of honor wore a gown of white net with touches of yellow, and carried a shower bouquet of 'mums, tied with yellow tulle.

The wedding march was played by Miss Mabel Clarry, sister of the groom.

Amongst the many costly presents were a handsome solid mahogany suite from the office staff and outside employees of the Trent Canal, a beautiful Limoges dinner and tea set from a number of the groom's gentleman friends, as well as a cabinet of silver from the members of the C.D.A., a social club that some years ago flourished in Peterborough, and of which the groom was secretary, members of the club who are now residents of distant parts of Canada contributing to the valuable and useful gift.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarry left for a wedding trip to Montreal, Quebec and Halifax. They will reside at 337 London street.

Band to-night at Auditorium Roller Rink. 8 Ladies tickets $1.00. 6 Gents tickets $1.00.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

CHATHAM WOMAN SEEKS REVENGE ON HER FAMILY

Mrs. Mary Rumble is in Jail on a Charge of Having Tried to Blow up Her Husband's House—Says She Was Ill-used and Driven From Home.

Chatham, Oct. 28.—Protesting her innocence and wailing about alleged sufferings that she says have been inflicted upon her by her husband and children, Mrs. Mary Rumble, was incarcerated in the county jail yesterday morning to await trial on the charge of trying to blow up the home of John Rumble, her husband, with dynamite, while Rumble and his family were sleeping inside.

The Rumble home on the river road was partially demolished by dynamite put under the foundation about 1 o'clock Friday morning. A burning fuse, attached to another charge of dynamite, in another portion of the house was just snuffed out in time to save the inmates' lives.

Suspicion fell on Mrs. Rumble, who fell out with her family about a year ago and went to Detroit. Provincial Detective Mahoney traced her movements to the house and back to Detroit, where he arersted her Tuesday night.

"I have been most shamefully wronged and thrown out of my home by a plotting gang of villains," declared Mrs. Rumble in court, naming her husband, her son George, and John Rumble, the latter's wife Ann, and Sydney Knapp, landlord of the farm.

"They wanted to get my home, to get what I had worked hard for. My God, why should the world treat a woman that has been wronged like I have like this. No person knows what I've suffered in 18 years of married life with that reprobate.

"Just as we were beginning to make money they threw me out. My daughter was on her deathbed. They drove her to her grave."

Although she tearfully told Detective Mahoney to tell her sickly daughter Edna, in Detroit, where to find $5 in a trunk, saved by hard labor from her wages as a working woman, she telephoned for a taxicab to convey her to the jail.

Had Chloroform, Too.

Windsor, Oct. 28.—Detective Mahoney returned yesterday afternoon from Chatham, where he investigated the dynamiting of John Rumble's home in Chatham Township. He had Rumble's wife arrested in Detroit and taken to Chatham, where she confessed that she purchased four sticks of dynamite in Port Huron and chloroform in Sarnia. She bored a hole in the wall, but the chloroform had no effect at such long range, and only her ignorance in placing the dynamite where she did saved the Rumble family from annihilation.

SAYS IT IS A FRIGID LIE

London, Oct. 28.—Alexander Ure, Lord Advocate for Scotland, and as such a member of the Government, has fallen under the lash of the Rt. Hon. Arthur Balfour's ire for repeating the statement, after the Conservatives had given denial of it, that the payment of old age pensions would be cancelled if the Conservatives again came into power.

On Monday Mr. Balfour denounced the Lord Advocate's remarks as a "frigid, calculating lie," which amounted to a crime against the poor receiving pensions. By the course he had adopted, persistently and energetically, and with obvious design, he dishonored the legal profession, of which in Scotland he is the head. He dishonored his office and dishonored the country in which he was born.

CONFESSES TO MURDERING HIS SISTERS

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 28.—James McMahon yesterday confessed that he murdered his sisters, Miss Rose McMahon and Mrs. Alonzo Van Royen, Kas., last Tuesday. A long standing family quarrel caused the tragedy. McMahon killed Van Royen in a wood and later went to the Van Royen home and shot his sisters.

"It took me three months to plan and execute the crime," he said. "I waited until my victims would be in right positions for me to kill them, and get away.

"Later it dawned on me that I had committed a crime. I tried to keep it a secret, but hour by hour something told me that I must tell all. Now I'll sleep in peace."

PROBABILITIES.

Cloudy and cold with snow flurries. Friday fair and cold.

REPORTED LAND SALE IS DENIED

Montreal, Oct. 28.—Last evening D. McNicholl, vice-president of the C.P.R., said that he knew nothing of the story which originated in Wall street to the effect that the company had made a huge land sale in Alberta to an American syndicate.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the president, who is in Quebec, wires that the story is untrue.

The directors also declare that they are unaware of any such transaction.

The story was to the effect that 965,000 acres of irrigated lands had been sold to the syndicate, which had also an option on 2,000,000 acres more.

FRENCH TARIFF REDUCTIONS

Paris, Oct. 28.—In the course of the tariff debate in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, M. Jaures, leader of the Socialists, demanded that the Government at once begin pour parlers with foreign Governments, with a view of securing a general reduction in the tariffs. Foreign Minister Pichon replied that such a project would be impossible until France had completed the revision of her own rates.

For Photographing Bacilli.

Paris, Oct. 28.—Jean Comanden announced at the Academy of Sciences yesterday the discovery of a new method of photographing bacilli by the combined use of an ultra microscope and a cinematograph. The discovery is considered of first importance, opening as it does, a new field for the study of microbic action.

THE ACCIDENT TO THE EMPRESS

Quebec, Oct. 28.—Capt. Demer, Canadian wreck commissioner, yesterday opened an enquiry into the recent accident to the Empress of Ireland, near Matane. The ship's officers maintained that a perfectly safe course had been steered, while Joseph Begin, a diver, said the damage, which consisted of two plates near the keel being separated about 15 inches, was apparently due to having struck a submerged rock, rather than a lock.

It was also stated that the steamship Kildona had met with a similar mishap near the same place in May, 1901.

NEW SECRETARY FOR EARL GREY

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—The Earl of Lanesborough has been appointed military secretary to the Governor-General of Canada, vice Sir John Hanbury Williams, resigned to assume the northern military command in Scotland.

The Earl of Lanesborough, Charles John Brinsley Butler, was born in 1865, was educated at Eton, entered Coldstream Guards in 1888, major in 1904, assistant military secretary to the Duke of Connaught, then commander-in-chief and high commissioner in Mediterranean in 1908. The earl served in South Africa.

CIVIC INQUIRY AT ST. CATHARINES

St. Catharines, Oct. 28.—A civic investigation opened yesterday morning before Judge Carman, and was adjourned for a week. The investigation was asked for by the City Council because Miles Plumley, a citizen, wrote two letters to the local newspapers, in which he made reflections on the council over the contract for paving Queenston street, in which he hinted at graft.

LARGE REWARD FOR MISSING MAN

Montreal, Oct. 28.—No definite trace has yet been found of B. F. Rapley of Belleville, traveler for Brophy, Parson & Rodden of Montreal, who mysteriously disappeared from his hotel in Napanee last week. A reward of $500 is now offered.

One "L. H. Rapley of Strathclair, Man.," is a passenger on the Corsican, which sailed for England last week.

SHOOTS WIFE THEN SUICIDES

Boston, Oct. 28.—Jealous of his 18-year-old wife, and his mind inflamed because she had left him and gone to the home of a friend in the Backbay district, Irvin Fletcher, sought her out late yesterday and shot and killed her. He then killed himself. A two-year-old daughter of the couple witnessed the tragedy.

Australians' Great Shooting.

London, Oct. 28.—At the Victoria Rifle Association's annual meeting in Australia Tuesday shooting unprecedented in Australia, and possibly in the world, for the King's prize resulted: At 200, 500, and 600 yards, out of a possible 105, fifty-eight marksmen scored over 100, and over seven scored 103.

To Renew the Subsidy.

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—It is understood that the Government has renewed for six months the contract with the Allan Steamship Co. for the direct line between France and Canada upon the old terms.

BYE-ELECTION IN ESSEX COUNTY

Windsor, Oct. 28.—A lively contest is being waged for the Liberal nomination at the convention Saturday afternoon. The principal aspirants are W. J. McKee, A. F. Healy and James Anderson, while J. A. Tremblay, of Tilbury, has many supporters. McKee is the recognized party candidate, but his selection is anything but assured. O. E. Fleming, who opposed Sutherland a year ago declares positively that he will not run, and does not expect the Conservatives will offer any opposition. Mayor Wigle, however, is being strongly urged to run. Oliver Wilcox of South Woodslee, is also being boomed, and seems to be the probable man in the event of contest.

SALUTE WILL BE ABOLISHED

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 28.—The establishment of Feb. 17, the anniversary of the death of Miss Frances Willard, as a special memorial day, when contributions to the Frances Willard Memorial Fund are to be made, was the most notable work of the national W.C.T.U. yesterday.

It has also been decided to establish a printing plant, where the organization may do its own printing, to make an addition, valued at $10,000, to the Willard Rest Cottage at Evanston, Ill., and to abolish the "Chautauqua salute," the waving of handkerchiefs, for sanitary reasons.

The convention also adopted for suffrage work the motto "Woman's ballot for the King's business."

STEFOFF TO HANG

Macedonian Convicted on the Charge of Slaying Simoff at Toronto.

Toronto, Oct. 28.—Pavli Stefoff is guilty of the murder of Vani Simoff, and at 11 o'clock this morning was brought before Justice Riddell in the Criminal Assizes Court to receive the death sentence.

The verdict was returned at five o'clock yesterday afternoon, after an hour and forty minutes deliberations upon the evidence. Fifteen minutes before their final return the jury filed into the court to hear read that portion of the evidence as to the statement made by Stefoff to the police as to his actions on the day of his arrest.

The scene in the court-room was dramatic indeed. As the jury seated themselves the prisoner's eyes scanned the faces of the men who were so soon to decree his fate. As their finding was translated to him he shook his head in a dazed way, and murmured a barely audible "No."

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Oct. 28.—Poral Stefoff, the Macedonian, who was found guilty yesterday of murdering Vani Simoff, a fellow countrymann, was sentenced by Mr. Justice Riddell this morning to be hanged, December 23rd.

TORONTO LEADS CANADIAN CITIES IN AMOUNT OF POST OFFICE RECEIPTS

Ottawa, Oct. 28.—Toronto is the banner Canadian city in the matter of grass postal revenue, the total for the year being $1,513,310. Montreal was a bad second with receipts of $963,729, Winnipeg takes third place with a gross income of $580,385. Vancouver was fourth with $205,935 and Ottawa fifth with $199,394.

Figures for other Canadian cities were: Quebec, $152,384; Hamilton, $164,746; London, $141,985; Port Arthur, $21,650; Fort William, $24,679, Halifax, $113,555; St. John, $109,990; Brandon, $48,307; Portage La Prairie, $18,257; Moose Jaw, $25,601; Regina, $71,603; Saskatoon, $28,340; Calgary, $99,595; Nelson, $24,129; Cranbrook, $10,117.

The Postoffice Departmental figures show for the period 1900-1909 a steady increase in the use of money orders and postal notes. In 1900 only $17,499,045 were transacted in this way. Since then there has been a steady increase year by year, the money transmissions for the year ending June 30, 1909, totalling no less a sum than $57,740,622.

During the year there was an increase in the number of postoffice savings banks. There was, however, a falling away of 9,796 in the number of depositors and $2,373,880 in the amount of deposits, which totaled $45,190,484.

The total number of letters posted during the year was 414,501,000. Of these, 91,108 were sent to the dead letter office. The proportion of unpaid letters sent to the dead letter office is steadily decreasing.

TWO LIFEBOATS CONTAINING FOUR CORPSES REACH LAND

Bodies of Four Men Are Found in Boats of Donaldson Liner Hestia and Fifteen Are Known to Have Perished in Addition to Those Recorded.

Halifax, Oct. 28.—Mute testimony that fifteen more names must be added to the twenty known to have perished in the wreck of the Donaldson liner Hestia came to light yesterday. When that steamer crashed on the ledges of the Grand Manan in the Bay of Fundy Monday morning twenty men perished, while two lifeboats containing fifteen men got away. Yesterday morning two lifeboats drifted ashore on the southwest coast of Nova Scotia. One contained three corpses, the other one. All wore life belts, with the Hestia's name on them. Fourteen men put off in the third boat launched. One man who was thrown into the sea when the first boat capsized managed to scramble into it again, and two boats with their load of human freight drifted off into the mists of the Bay of Fundy. A boisterous sea was running, and the wind and tide would drive them on the Nova Scotian coast.

What happened after they disappeared from the view of those still on the steamer will never be known, but flotsam thrown up on the shores yesterday proves that all who left the Hestia perished. Fishermen out setting their nets at Pembroke, near Yarmouth, yesterday morning saw a ship's boat tossing in the breakers. They put out to it in dories, towed it ashore and started to examine it. Huddled up under the stern sheets they found three corpses. There were no marks on the boat.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 28.—That the Donaldson liner Hestia was wrecked off Seal Cove, Grand Manan Island, at one o'clock Monday morning, not twenty-four hours later as previously supposed, was declared yesterday by Third Mate Stewart, and the other five survivors. These half dozen men, who had been unable to find places in the small boats remained lashed to the rigging for thirty-eight hours without food or water, before they were taken off by the life-savers.

One of their number, Seamen Keene, was in a serious condition yesterday. So far as can be ascertained last night those on board the Hestia comprised Captain Newman, a crew of thirty-five, three cattlemen, and two boys.

When the steamer struck, Third Officer Stewart was below and so is unable to account for the cause of the wreck.

"It was very dark at the time of the wreck, and a high wind and sea made it a perilous undertaking to start out in an open boat. The two boats on the port side were carried away by the big seas that broke over her. In one of these boats, a man in charge of the horses aboard had taken his place and he was swept over in an instant.

"The third boat, in command of the second officer, contained eleven men, but in some manner, the forward tackle was let go and the rear tackle held, and all on board were thrown into the water. Ropes were thrown over to the men, but, owing to the darkness, it was largely guess work. Two of the occupants were saved, however, Morgan and McVickar.

"The captain was the last leaving and he went in the big lifeboat, in which there was at least twenty-five men, and possibly more, if any were picked up from the boat that upset. Those remaining on the steamer did so from choice, and we were fortunate in doing so.

"After the departure of the captain's boat, we sought refuge in the rigging, as the tide came up, and washed over the forward end, the rest of the ship was entirely submerged at high water."

Several times on Monday a sail was observed, but apparently the wreck with its survivors was unnoticed. Two blankets were hoisted amidships when the tide went down, and on Tuesday morning a blanket was hoisted in the main rigging. This was probably the signal Capt. Gaskill of the schooner Mizpath reported seeing.

All the food they had in 36 hours was one big onion and a can of condensed milk, which had not been washed out of the galley.

JAS. ROBINSON IS ON TRIAL

Judge Magee Says Man Was an Accessory to Murder of Children Near Sudbury-Robinson Not Insane

Special to the Review.

Sudbury, Oct. 28.—The trial of Jas. Robinson for murder began this morning. Judge Magee explained to the jury at the opening of the court that while his wife, Mrs. Annie Robinson, now under sentence of death, probably killed the three children, Robinson was at least an accessory. The evidence of prisoner's child, Helen, now in the hospital, was read. She had heard her mother say, "Oh Jimmie, I can't." He answered, "You have got to do with this as you did in the others."

The lunacy commission consisting of Dr. C. K. Clarke and Dr. Bruce Smith, examined Robinson and declared him not insane.

The only restriction on the labor of children is that they must not be employed before fourteen years of age, but the law is not enforced.

HOW DID HE GET IT ?

In connection with this Morse case in New York, referred to in these columns last week, a pointed query is put by La Follette's Magazine. During the few months Morse was out on bail he is reported to have "made" $7,600,000, although he was bankrupt when released from jail on June 17th last. How did he "make" so much money in so short time, rather from whom did he take it? asks La Follettes.

The spirit that prompts this enquiry is also present in the minds of the men who have framed the new scheme of taxation in Great Britain. In the future, said Lord Randolph Churchill in defending that scheme, the British tax gatherer will ask not only "how much have you got?" but "how did you get it?"

All over the world the man who acquires wealth by fraudulent manipulation of the stock market, or by means of unjust privileges obtained through improper legislation, is being called upon to answer for his possessions.—The Weekly Sun.

So long as some of our churches cringe for favors from the questionably rich, how can it be expected that the members of their congregations, individually, will do better? We are a very inconsistent people. We are charged with being irredeemably stupid. All because we preach one thing and persistently do another, fancying no doubt, all the while, that we are deceiving ourselves. Let any man in his right mind sit down and think out what it means to found the success of the Lord's teaching upon the ill-gotten gains of stock-gamblers and the like. The whole gist and purpose of Christianity is "freedom from sin," or "pardon for sin," and here we have not only the encouragement of sin, but sin's being made the foundation of modern Christianity. It is not necessary to say more. The captious sophist will say "Oh! but you would not say that virtue is injured by being provided for by the vicious!" But we would say so and all those who have regard to the intent, meaning and purpose of Virtue, know that the vicious cannot help Virtue. The taint itself causes the vicious hand to wither at the very instant that it is lifted to "assist" Virtue. 'How then,' it is asked, "can Virtue and, in the same way, Christianity be injured if the taint destroys the tainted hand that affects to proffer help." It is this very form of vicious and improper reasoning that keeps us chained in the dungeon of our inconsistency. Virtue is Virtue no matter what befall. The same is true of Christianity, but—and here is where the fallacy of the mock argument becomes exposed. Those who adopt vicious means knowing them to be vicious are themselves practising Vice, not Virtue, and the same holds true of Christianity. Therefore he who goes out to gather toll or tribute from the unworthy practises unworthiness and though he "saith Lord! Lord!" yet shall he "not enter the Kingdom of Heaven."

It is a fact that the people regard this failing of our churches as so general and so deep-rooted as to cause suspicion of wilful hypocrisy. We hear the sneering words every day. And who can say that they are altogether undeserved? The temptation is great—to the ignoble only. But the yielding to it is a sign of a canker too far gone for treatment. This fact is plain. As laymen, let us say and emphatically say, that our churches are wanting in holiness. They do not furnish us with examples of good conduct. They claim holiness, we admit. They assert the claim always and persistently. It would appear so by the lists of societies and institutions. But is it a fact? The world says not. The world says that the churches are bowing the knee to Baal, that the successful church nowadays is the one which, like the theatre, has a balance on land.

Yet the sweet-faced and serious-minded saints that go amongst the poor, know that to be good one must be poor, and that a rich man can, with extreme difficulty only, find entrance to heaven. It is the "taint" that bars him. It should bar him from his earthly aim also. The great fundamental necessity of the true revival of faith is holiness and until the churches realize this they will prosper only by being turned into eating-houses, bowling alleys and peep-shows. It is evident that some Christians think that Heaven is made up of these things and unless these "heavenly" attractions are provided on earth, that duty is not being done. To cry "But what can we do to get the people otherwise?" is to admit that Christianity, pure and undefiled, is a failure. Either that or else the so called Christians and Christian churches are themselves failures. They are on trial before the world and it behooves them to realise it.

THE GLOBE ON "SUCCESS"

In an editorial on "Success" with especial reference to German success, the Globe points out that the latter is due to "working longer hours and getting less for it." Apart from the simple fact that every nation could not do this, looms up the reactionary character of the Globe's advice. The world of workers is not going to work longer and get less for it. A more heartless explanation of German success could not well be devised. But instead of guessing, why not ask the Germans? They will answer that Protection is the foundation of German success. It has enabled the Germans to develop Germany, and that is the real basis of German success.

Life in Germany was never so orderly and delightful as at present. A sane and simple system of Labour bureaus enables idle workmen to find work at once. He is not allowed to drift about in a fruitless effort to find employment, while perhaps the employment is also looking for him. With such a complete system of finding and providing employment it is easy to establish insurance against accidental or enforced unemployment, the basis of which is, of course, merit. In addition to this system of insurance during life is the German national system of insurance in case of death. From one end to the other the whole German system is one of order. Order and organization is what Germany has given to the world, more than anything else. If this is Socialism it will do much to lessen general antipathy to it. One-third of Germany is Socialistic. But it is possible to have all this without Socialism, but not with its opposite laissez-faire or freedom of trade. Freedom of trade means that everybody shall be free to do as he can find as he pleases. It is a splendid system for the rich and powerful, but it is death in the long run to the worker and employee. Unionism is the Protection of Labour. Tariff reform is the protection of Labour. Free Trade is violently opposed to both of these. Germany is like an industrious and well-ordered household in the very van of modern progress and civilization. While we are haggling over theological differences, the Germans have been going ahead. Unless we put our national household in order, as the Germans have done, we shall fall a prey to our fatuity. Canada's measure of success is due to Protection. If not, why does the Globe not thunder against the Government for retaining it? It knows better. It keeps up a sort of academic advocacy of its former belief but that is all. It is just a little bit like our friend, Mr. Facing-both-ways.

NOT GUILTY

The Examiner accuses us of inaugurating a new method of attack upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that of naming him "Mr." instead of "Sir." We are wholly unaware of having done so, however. We quoted the Caygeon Independent upon another point, the paragraph containing that point referring to the Premier as "Mr." Laurier. This is where the mistake arose, probably. The editor of the Independent being a real Democrat, and not of the Liberal "up-to-the-hilt" pattern, has probably overlooked the "Sir." As for ourselves, however, if Sir Wilfrid were entitled to be called "The Champion of Chinese Labour," "The Lord of Labrador," of "The Absentee Landlord of the Western Provinces" we should regard it as appropriate, and give his full name accordingly. The Examiner is very careful in this respect. If there is the slightest pretence of an excuse in the shade of a departed past for headlining a certain gentleman as "Hon." it is done. It might be impolite, if not dangerous to do otherwise. However, titles are necessary to some people, else no one would recognize their honourable qualifications. Their deeds do not speak more loudly than words in this direction. As for Sir Wilfrid, we trust we shall never forget ourselves so far as to omit the courtesies due to the first minister of Canada, and an amiable gentleman.

EDITORIAL NOTES

We are not in favor of being ruined by naval expenditure.

Distress in Britain is 60 per cent. greater this year than last, and this in spite of the return of good times the world over. But Britain is the last and lonely stronghold of Free Trade.

Once again is heard the shout against the methods of the local Liberal, coming from the neighborhood of the Conservative Club. For goodness sake keep quiet. This great family journal heard you the first time.—The Peterborough Times

---

In the Ontario courts suit has been entered against Senator Ratz at the instance of Absolom Merner, the ground being an allegation that Mr. Ratz agreed to pay the Merner family $1,400 and $1,000 a year as the price of former Senator Merner's retirement to make way for the new legislator. In the case of the Brockville shrievalty it was in effect held that such an agreement was legal. It may also be legal in the case of senatorships. If the facts are as alleged, however, it will be something of a shock even to Canadians to learn that the succession to places in their so-called national Parliament may be a matter of bargain and sale between holders and those who would be holders."—Montreal Gazette.

Morality is fast becoming a joke in this country, and a poor one at that.

DANGEROUS DANDRUFF

Will Make Canada a Baldheaded Nation if Not Checked

M. Pasteur, the great French physician of Paris, once said: "I believe we shall one day rid the world of all diseases caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Wm. Madill guarantees it. It will stop itching scalp, falling hair and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray.

It is the hair dressing par excellence, daintily perfumed and free from grease stickiness. It is the favorite with women of taste and culture who know the social value of fascinating hair.

A large bottle costs only 50 cents at leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by Wm. Madill. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package.

MILITARY BALL AT BELLEVILLE

One of the most elaborate functions in the social history of Belleville was the ball given in the armories in that city last night, under the auspices of the officers of the 15th Regiment. A very large number of guests were present and the affair was a brilliant and successful one in every respect.

Master Frank Halpany, solo violinist of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music orchestra, was engaged by the committee to play first violin in the special orchestra of seventeen pieces that supplied the dance music and overtures for the occasion. Mr. R. Busch, trap drummer of the 57th, looked after the drums and traps.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Firm—United States Markets Active and Generally Steady.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 27.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning, the offerings were 1800 cattle, 1000 sheep, 1225 lambs, 700 calves and 1000 hogs. The supplies of all lines of live stock, and especially cattle, were the largest this season to date at this market, and in consequence a weaker feeling prevailed in the latter, and prices declined ⅛c per lb. At this reduction the demand was good for all grades, owing to the fact that the attendance of buyers was very large; consequently, an active trade was done. A feature of the trade was the brisk demand from packers for canning stock, of which supplies were fairly large, and prices ruled lower than on Monday. Choice steers sold at 4⅝c to 5c; good at 4¼c to 4½c; fair at 3¾c to 4c; good cows at 3½c to 4c; common at 3c to 3¼c; bulls at 2½c to 3¼c, and canners at 1½c to 1¾c per lb. There were also 75 milch cows offered, for which the demand is very good at present, and a brisk trade was done at prices ranging from $40 to $65, and in some instances as high as $80 to $85 was paid for extra choice ones.

Supplies of sheep and lambs were large; but, as the demand was active from local buyers, a steady feeling prevailed in the market, and prices show no change.

Lambs brought 5¾c to 6c, and sheep 3½c to 3¾c per lb. A weaker feeling developed in the market for calves on account of the increased supplies, and prices ruled lower at from $2 to $5 each, as to size and quality. The market for hogs was stronger under a good demand, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.50 to $8.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars, and in some cases as high as $9 was paid for extra choice lots.

At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market there were 700 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 175 calves. The bulk of the cattle consisted of northwestern ranchers, of which the quality was good, and in consequence there was a good demand for them. Sheep and lambs were steady, and hogs sold at $8.50 to $8.60 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

PRESENTATION TO ORGANIST

By the Congregation of the Fairview Methodist Church

On Monday evening, Oct. 18th, a number of the congregation of Fairview Methodist church, gathered at the home of Mrs. Hopkins-Smith, to bid farewell to her niece, Miss Perrin, the organist, who is leaving for a visit to her father in Saskatoon.

After spending a social time, Mr. Graham, president of the Epworth League, read the address and Mr. Elliott, superintendent of the Sabbath school, made the presentation of a pearl brooch and souvenir spoon.

The address was as follows:

Miss Cora Perrin:

Dear Friend and Co-worker,—It is with feelings of sincere regret that we, the members of Fairview Methodist church, have learned of your proposed removal from our midst. We assure you that we have appreciated and will remember your services as organist of our church, league and Sunday school. We know that many times this must have meant self-denial and inconvenience. While we cannot make a return for such service, we ask you to accept this little gift as a token of our good-will, and as something with which to remember the friends you are leaving behind you.

Commending you to any with whom your lot may be cast, and to the great Father of all, that His presence may go with you, and assuring you of our high esteem. We bid you farewell till we meet again.

JOHN ELLIOTT,
CECIL GRAHAM,
MRS. PAYNE,
MRS. S. ROSBOROUGH

Miss Perrin made a suitable reply.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

ATTENDED BY FIVE DOCTORS

But Got No Relief Until He Used Dodd's Kidney Pills

Wonderful Cure of A. F. Richard Who Was Tortured by Rheumatism and Kindred Pains, Sets Kent Country Talking

St. Ignace, Kent Co., N.B., Oct 27.—(Special).—After being tortured for four years with Backache, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints and Pains in the Loins, and getting no relief from five doctors whom he called in, Mr. Antoine F. Richard, a well-known farmer living near here, is spreading the good news that he is once more a well man, and that he owes his cure to Dodd's Kidney Pills. Speaking of his wonderful cure, Mr. Richard says:—

"I was a helpless man in July, 1907. For four years I had endured the greatest torture from Backache, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints and Pains in the Loins. I had dark circles under my eyes, my head ached and I was often dizzy. I was attended by five doctors, but not one of them could help me.

"Then I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after the first few doses I began to improve. I used four boxes in all and now I am working every day on the farm a well man. I owe my wonderful cure to Dodd's Kidney Pills and nothing else."

There is no case or kind of Kidney Disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure. [illegible]

A LOVE AFFAIR.

With Nothing of a Romantic Ending, However.

He was a young man as some young men are who are everlastingly paying their devoirs to pretty girls and never reaching any definite business conclusion.

A man like that learns exactly what a girl thinks of him, and when he finds it is favorable, even to matrimony, he begins to hedge, and after a few painful struggles of a choked Cupid the affair is all over, and the girl wonders whatever she was such an idiot for, while the man laughs softly to himself and seeks fresh fields and pastures new.

Really there ought to be a law against it, and if Judge Lynch would intervene now and then it would clear the atmosphere. But public sentiment isn't sufficiently educated yet, and we must wait awhile for the needed reform.

However, all girls are not the same, and the one of this chronicle was different, though the young man was like those referred to.

He had been paying assiduous court to her for six months, and it is not to be denied that she liked it. Most well balanced girls do, and nobody can or wants to censure them for it. He was not quite sure where he stood in her affections, and he was anxious to know, so he proceeded in the usual fashion. Only this time the girl wasn't an idiot.

"What would you do, Fannie," he said in his pleasant offhand way, "if a fellow should tell you he loved you?"

"That would depend," she responded, with a little flutter of she didn't exactly know what.

"Depend on what?" he inquired.

"Oh, on a good many things," she said rather weakly.

"And suppose he were to ask you to marry him?" he asked next, concluding that promptness was the soul of dispatch.

"That would depend, too," she answered nervously.

"On what?" And he became very tender indeed.

"Well, you ask me to marry you and see," she said so forcibly that he was disconcerted to the point of utter rout, and he has been kicking himself ever since, for he learned afterward that the girl was worth $100,000 in her own right, and he might have won her.—Detroit Free Press.

Was Napoleon of Greek Descent?

The question is raised in the French press as to whether Napoleon was of Greek descent. There has recently been found, we are told, in the neighborhood of Mania an interesting "document," which has been placed in the museum in Athens. It is a tablet in marble which formerly ornamented the house of one Calomeros, a rich proprietor of good family who flourished early in the fifteenth century. It is claimed that this Calomeros was the ancestor of the victor of Austerlitz.

The name Calomeros is met with in Corsica, and the chroniclers mention it in the list of Greek families who under Constantine Stephanopoulos sought an asylum in Italy. For the most part these emigrants pushed as far as Corsica, but some settled in Tuscany and Genoa. Their first care was to Italicise their name. The Calomeros, following the custom of their time, changed their name, which signified "bonne part," into Buonaparte.—London Globe.

His Difficulty.

"Jinks seems to be having a hard pull to get along."

"His hard pull is just the reason he can't get on."

"How do you make that out?"

"Because he's a dentist."—Baltimore American.

Ontario Consolidated Mines

Merson & Co., 16 King street, west, Toronto have undertaken the flotation of the "Ontario Consolidated Mines Limited, the particulars of which will be found on our financial and mining page. The Ontario Consolidated Mines have the low capitalisation of ($150,000.00) and shares are now offered to the public at 15 cents.

The property owned by the Ontario Consolidated Mines consists of 40 acres in the Township of Bucke, about one and a half miles from Cobalt and about a mile from the celebrated mines of the Temiskaming, Hudson Bay, Trethewey, La Rose, Nipissing and Chambers-Ferland.

On the property itself six distinct calcite veins measuring from one-half to three inches wide on the surface have been found and the stripping of these has been made from 160 feet to 700 feet in length. One shaft has already been sunk to the depth of 60 feet and at the 50 foot level silver values were found at the vein level.

The shares are being offered at 15 cents. The development work already done on the property, the showings which have already been uncovered and the conservative capitalisation of the company offer a good opportunity for investment.

Messrs. Merson have stood behind several of the good Cobalt propositions and their success in the past will stand as a guarantee of the ultimate outcome of this one.

Merson & Co. received on Monday a report from their representative in Cobalt stating that on the property adjoining to theirs a vein has been struck which shows ore to the value of 1,000 ounces to the ton.

This vein runs through the property of the Ontario Consolidated Mines and the engineer in charge says that the main vein on this property is a continuation of the big vein on the adjoining property which has shown such splendid results. The engineers are busy tracing the veins and in the meantime big results are looked for.

NOAH WAS BLACKBALLED

Detroit, Mich.—The Society of Naval Architects rejected Noah for honorary membership, when his name was proposed as the father of the ship designing profession. The reason given was "that Noah was a gamekeeper and not a ship designer primarily".

It all depends on the point of view. It is the same with "Fruit-a-tives".

Some people take "Fruit-a-tives" for Constipation and Biliousness. Others use them for Stomach Troubles and Dyspepsia. Still others find "Fruit-a-tives" an excellent tonic and blood purifier. Many more say that "Fruit-a-tives" are the best Kidney Regulator and a certain cure for Neuralgia and Rheumatism. For all these troubles, "Fruit-a-tives" may be said to be infallible.

Everywhere in Canada — in the crowded city—on the lonely prairie—in fishing villages and mining camps—people depend on "Fruit-a-tives" to cure them and keep them well.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c—or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

JASPER PARK

The New National Playground Set Aside by the Federal Government

The scenic beauties of a vast mountainous region stretching from north of the Yellowhead Pass to the watershed of the Saskatchewan, and from the foothills of the Rockies to their summit are to be preserved in perpetuity for the pleasure and delight of the people of Canada by the Federal Government.

This great national playground and pleasure and health resort is situated on the line of the Grand Trunk Railway, and will be known as Jasper Park, comprising nearly 5,000 square miles. From the date that has been received at the offices of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway it is learned that the scenic grandeur of the mountains in the vicinity of the Yellowhead Pass are sublimely beautiful, surpassing anything on the American continent. The engineers report that it is impossible to picture or portray the grandeur and stupendous magnificence of the natural wonders there. All is on a greater and more beautiful scale than any other portion of the Rockies. Large rivers and beautiful lakelets are everywhere in evidence to refresh and charm the eye of the traveller from the time the Athabasca is encountered in the Pass. Historic spots, such as the ruins of Henry House and Jasper House will be carefully safeguarded as soon as arrangements can be developed of the Park where nature has been so lavish.

(Within a comparatively short distance from the Grand Trunk Pacific in this locality are found the great sulphur springs, which will be utilized and developed according to the plans of the engineers. There are three sets of springs, one of which has a good flow of water with a temperature of 116, and those with stronger flow have a temperature of over 125.

Harry Adams

EXPIRED SUDDENLY AT CLOSE OF HIS DAY'S WORK

The sudden death of Mr. Ernest A. Hutchinson, which occurred last evening, came as a shock to his many friends in the city. He had been working during the day on a roof at the farm of Mr. C. L. Hall, near Scott's Corners, in North Monaghan, and was about to leave at the close of the day's work, in company with his nephew, Mr. Harry Hutchinson, and Mr. Percy Pease, when he expired. The late Mr. Hutchinson was a tinsmith, and was engaged by his brother, Mr. George Hutchinson. He was born and had lived all his life in Peterborough, being widely known and respected. He was 39 years of age, and leaves to mourn his loss a wife and three children, Marjorie, Kathleen and Jack. His brothers are Messrs. George, of this city, and Joseph, of Lindsay. Mrs. Stone, of London, and Mrs. Fred. Fosby, of Chatham, are sisters. To all will be extended sincere sympathy in the bereavement they have been called upon to bear.

The deceased was an active member of the 24th Field Battery, of which he was Sergt.-Major. He had been identified with the 14th and 24th Batteries for over twenty-one years, and had always been popular with his comrades.

The funeral, which will take place to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock, from his late residence, 578 Stewart street, will be held with military honors. Interment will take place at the Little Lake cemetery.

ORANGEMEN HELD A VERY ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

Largely Attended and Interesting Meeting at Zion Methodist Church—Several Prominent Peterborough Workers Present—The Addresses of the Evening.

Dummer, Oct. 27.—A more enthusiastic meeting was never held in the County of Peterborough than that held at Zion Methodist church, Dummer, under the auspices of L.O.L. No. 281, last night. The church was well filled, among whom were a party including Messrs. Jos. Batten, Lt.-Col. J. W. Miller, R. N. Hopkins, A. F. Jackson and N. A. Howard-Moore, from Peterborough; Messrs. D. Andrew, sr., and Mr. Andrew, jr., of Norwood; Rev. Dr. Marvin, of Warsaw, and Rev. C. R. Spencer, of Young Point, were among the speakers, who gave short addresses. As a chairman Mr. Jos. Batten excelled expectation, and the programme, which is found below, was interspersed with short and witty speeches from the chairman, who certainly had the knack of keeping his hearers in good humor. Rev. C. R. Spencer referred to the Orange Association in glowing terms as an association of equal righters who wished to see all Roman Catholics and Protestants get what was due them, but no special privileges to any. He emphasized the fact that true Orangemen sworn to loyalty to the teachings of the Bible and the British constitution to each other and his neighbor made the better citizen.

Mr. David Andrew also thought that men were better for being Orangemen if they were true to their obligation.

Lt.-Col. Miller rapped the politicians of both sides pretty hard for catering to any religious denomination, sect or creed. He pointed out the vast heritage which had been entrusted to our care and which would have an enormous influence in the world if we watched ourselves and went to the poles and voted honestly, instead of waiting to be bought. He emphasized the fact that our influence against corruption would lessen it. Mr. N. A. Howard Moore gave a brief history of the "Protecting of the Protestant Church in England from 60 A.D. to the Reformation," and showed conclusively that there was a Protestant church there ever since.

Rev. Dr. Marvin gave an address worthy of the genial doctor on "Some Results of the Battle of the Boyne," and it was listened to with wrapt attention throughout.

The balance of the programme was furnished by local talent and friends from Warsaw and Norwood. Mrs. Ross, of Norwood, and Mrs. Hamlin, of Dummer, gave excellent solos. Mr. J. Anderson recited "Jimmy Butler and the Owl," in true Irish style. Master W. Clemmens recited "How I Went to Confession"; Mr. Roland Kidd sang, "My Bonnie, Bonnie Jean," and the choir rendered several musical and vocal selections, and received its just meed of praise. At the close of the programme a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the visitors and the choir.

The Peterborough and Norwood visitors who took part in the above programme were entertained to a fowl supper at the residence of Mr. Wm. Batten, W.M. of L.O.L. No. 60.

HUNTING CLUBS MAKING READY FOR ANNUAL OUTING

With the opening of the hunting season a few days off, local sportsmen are preparing for their annual trip in search of the big game of the forests. Thirty-six licenses have been taken out, but by Saturday many more will be added to that number. The Ketcheson Hunt Club will locate at Ketcheson Lakes again this season, and Messrs. R. Gibbs, R. Munro and Major Bennett left this morning to get everything in readiness for the rest of the party, who will leave on Saturday with Mr. H. C. Winch as captain.

The Eagle Lake Hunt Club will also leave on Saturday morning. One absentee from this party will be Mr. George Fitzgerald, who will be unable to make the trip.

The Sam Ray party, composed of nearly twenty members, will take the early C.P.R. train to-morrow morning for the north shore of Lake Superior, travelling by a private car, which will have all the conveniences for such a journey. The party will stop off at Shawanaga station, from which place the hunting grounds is but seven or eight miles distant.

Other parties of small numbers will also leave for various points to try their luck against the deer and his larger brother, the moose.

DUKE OF MANCHESTER LODGE IS FORGING TO THE FRONT

Duke of Manchester L.O.L. No. 50, Peterborough, composed of nearly all young men, is forging well to the front in Orange circles in Ontario, and may be heard from in the near future with no uncertain sound. About two months ago one of the members gave notice of a by-law, to institute a regular degree meeting once every three months. The first meeting was held on Thursday, Oct. 14, and fully demonstrated the fact, that a set night for degrees is a good thing. Invitations were issued to all members of the Orange Order in the County of Peterborough to be present. About 50 responded, and were present to assist in conferring the Royal Arch Purple Degree upon several who were desirous of receiving it. From start to finish everything was done in a very orderly manner. After the floor work had been finished refreshments were served by the members, and speeches made by Past District Master Bro. Jos. Bolton, the District Master, Bro. Charles E. Wiley, W. C. in C.; Bro. John Carscallen, W. M. No. 1175, and ex-Ald. Bro. J. W. Johnston, of our own lodge. All expressed the pleasure it gave them to be present, and gave some very amusing reminiscences of how they travelled the thorny road, the four young men went that night.

A degree team has been organized, and expected to visit several of the County Lodges in the near future, and give a demonstration of the floor work. This is what has been wanted in this section for a long time, and has been so far quite a success.

This lodge has initiated a new order of things in connection with parade matters. No member is allowed to own his own regalia. It must be the property of the lodge, so that the lodge can control what each member wears when on parade. Another feature is the class of membership which is invited to join No. 50. Young men of temperate habits are only invited to become members. The fees are a little higher than usual, and all candidates are solicited with the understanding that they will take the whole four degrees. A finer class of young men could not be found anywhere in Canada than in this young lodge. The vigorous Baby of West Peterborough, "Excelsior," is its motto, but not at the expense of its sister lodges in the city of Peterborough. They meet the second and fourth Thursdays of each month, and Royal Arch Purple upon the 2nd Thursday in January, April, July and October, and all Orangemen visiting Peterborough are cordially invited to give them a call.—Orange Sentinel.

24th Field Battery Notice

All members of the 24th Field Battery are requested to be at the Battery Gun room at the Armouries to-night at eight o'clock sharp to make arrangements for the funeral of our late comrade, Sergt.-Major Hutchinson. Members of the 57th Regiment and Third Prince of Wales Dragoons are also invited.

T. W. H. YOUNG,
Major 24th F. B. C. A.

Ready By Next Fall

Word received from the front of the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific west of Edmonton announces that construction gangs all the way along from the Pembina River to Tete Jaune Cache are working, and that at the rate at which the work is progressing the line will undoubtedly be graded and ready for steel by next fall. The bridge over the Pembina River is almost half completed and will likely be finished by the end of next November.

REVELATION TO MANY OF THEM

What Toronto World Says About Toronto Men's Visit to Peterborough

The cultivation of cordial relations between the city council and Canadian General Electric Co., with its allied industry, the Canada Foundry Co., was advanced another step yesterday when the mayor, controllers and aldermen journeyed to Peterborough to view the workings of the huge electrical enterprise.

While the object of the company is not to further the brotherhood of man or to give the civic rulers an industrial education so much as to secure civic contracts, this circumstance did not detract from the enjoyment of the day. The electrical company was a generous host, and its hospitality was appreciated in no small measure. While the addresses made by Controller Ward and others indicated that the city was more or less bound by the principle of lowest tenders, it was also intimated that the sympathies of council man were with Canadian industries, and that their claims for support were fully recognized.

The inspection of the plant, which occupied more than two hours, was a revelation to many in the civic party, as its magnitude, completeness of equipment, and the wide range of its production of electrical supplies had been little realized.

It was found that the seventy-five acres occupied contained a dozen large buildings, each devoted to a separate branch of the industry.

There were 800 employees at work, or about half full strength.—Toronto World.

The Ladies' Aid of St. James's Church will hold a Rainbow Bazaar and Social in the basement of the church on Friday afternoon and evening, Oct. 29th. Refreshments served.

WEDDING BELLS

STINSON—LONG.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. William Long, 710 Water street, was the scene of a quiet wedding yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, when their eldest daughter, Lillian, was united in marriage to Mr. William Stinson, of this city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. A. Pearson in the presence of only the immediate relatives and friends, and there were no attendants.

After a dainty wedding repast, Mr. and Mrs. Stinson left on the 4.38 train for Toronto and other western points for a honeymoon trip, and on their return to the city they will reside on King street.

Many beautiful wedding gifts were received as an evidence of the high esteem in which the young couple are held by their many friends.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

THE GRANDEUR OF THE YOSEMITE

In a Series of Captivating Travel Pictures—A Drama of Historic Appeal

An excellent example of the wonderful results that are being obtained in moving picture photography is the magnificent travel picture, "A Trip to the Yosemite Valley," now being shown at the Crystal, in which the natural wealth and grandeur of the striking and picturesque scenery of the world's famous valley is realistically portrayed in a series of descriptive and beautifully tinted motion pictures.

"Leather Stocking," a dramatic adaptation of John Fennimore Cooper's famous Indian novel, an intensely interesting picture of primitive American life, also plays a conspicuous part in a programme of outstanding quality.

"GIRLS" COMING TO THE "GRAND"

"Girls," the Clyde Fitch comedy, will be the next attraction of importance to be seen at the Grand, next Wednesday evening, November 3rd. Sam S. and Lee Shubert are the producing managers, which is a guarantee of the excellence of both play and presenting company.

"Girls" is a comedy pure and simple, written along novel lines involving the taming of a trio of bachelor girls, who, under the influence of a strong-minded leader, become confirmed man-haters. At the opening of the piece two of the girls have already begun to weary of their solemn oath to ignore the sterner sex, stand alone, and assert the independence and equality of woman. But the ringleader in the conspiracy of the petticoats still holds sway over them until the eventual occasion when a man enters the sacred precincts of the studio and—horrors!—refuses to go until he gets ready. Then the defection spreads, with terrible rapidity, and within three weeks each of the three "man-haters" has become an affianced bride. While laughter remains supreme through the entire unfolding of the plot, there are times when more tender emotions are aroused, and girls will find much to their liking in this stage story, known the world over as "Girls."

TWO HUNTERS HAVE GONE TO POWASSEN

The deer hunting season is near at hand, and already the nimrods of town and district are making their preparations for a trip to the hunting grounds.

Many hunters have already started out for the hunting grounds, so as to be on hand when the season opens. License Inspector Bradshaw states that many licenses have already been secured.

This morning Mr. E. Gregory, of town, and Mr. Robert Neill, Peterborough, left for Powassen on a hunting expedition. This section of the north land is a great moose and deer centre and the hunters ought to have great luck.—Lindsay Post.

WARNING FOR HALLOWE'EN

Chief Rossel announces his annual warning to boys as to their conduct on Hallowe'en. Everybody can have all the fun they like as long as it doesn't include damage to property, and petty tricks, which are liable to cause serious injuries to the unsuspecting.

EYELET BORDERS.

Reason Why This Work Is Seldom Well Done.

Few women can work smoothly the open eyelet borders so much seen in madeira embroidery. There are sure to be roughness and unevenness where one eyelet joins another, and the general effect is spoiled.

The reason of this is that the work is not properly done. An instructor who had a number of natives from the island of Madeira exhibiting their work in this country disclosed the secret of the smooth openings.

Each eyelet is outlined with cotton in the usual way, is then slit if the shape be oval and pierced if round and the edges turned back with a needle. This is as any one would do, but in the working of the over and over stitch lies the difference.

Instead of finishing each eyelet at a time, as most of us would do, it is worked half way around on each side to where one opening joins the next one. Then that eyelet is done in the same way, and so on around the entire outer line of the border. The work is then reversed and the upper half of the eyelets embroidered in the same way.

With this treatment there is no unevenness, pulling or ugly ridges where the stitches meet, so hard to avoid by the ordinary method of working.

Cash of the Ancients.

The little brass cash, the Chinese coins, are the lineal descendants, in unbroken order, of the bronze ax of remote Celestial ancestors. From the regular hatchet to the modern coin one can trace a distinct if somewhat broken succession, so that it is impossible to say where the one leaves off and the other begins. Here is how this curious pedigree first worked itself out: In early times, before coin was invented, barter was usually conducted between producer and consumer with metal implements, as it still is in central Africa at the present day. At first the Chinese in that unsophisticated age were content to use real hatchets for this commercial purpose, but after a time, with the profound mercantile instinct of their race, it occurred to some of them that when a man wanted half a hatchet's worth of goods he might as well pay for them with half a hatchet. Still, as it would be a pity to spoil a good working implement by cutting it in two, the worthy Ah Sin ingeniously compromised the matter by making thin hatchets of the usual size and shape, but far too slender for practical usage. By so doing he invented coin, and, what is more, he invented it far earlier than the claimants to that proud distinction, the Lydians, whose electrum staters were first struck in the seventh century B. C.—Cornhill Magazine.

The Czar has expressed his inability to visit the Vatican.

The Flying World and the Future.

The world of forty years hence will look up into a sky as thickly sprinkled with aeroplanes as were the city streets with automobiles fifteen years ago, and it will grow loud in its boast of being the epoch of the air; also there will be good reason for its boasting and self congratulation, and there will be no one to blame the generation of 1950 for mantling its brow with the wreath of greatest progress. Still, in view of the achievements of the Wrights and Curtiss and the even more wonderful doings of Bleriot and Farman at Rheims, it will do no harm to remind this coming generation while still in its infancy that the foundation of the great things it will achieve was really laid in the first decade of the twentieth century.—New York American.

The Rockies' Snows.

It is well known that the amount of snowfall in the Rocky mountains determines the flow of water in the leading rivers that head in this range; consequently the snowfall has an important bearing in determining the volume of the floods which frequently devastate the middle western states. Many of the most important irrigation ditches, moreover, depend for their supply upon the annual snowfall. To place it in a position to make an accurate forecast of the amount of water that will be released by the melting snow the United States weather bureau has established a series of snow gauging stations in the Rocky mountains.—Scientific American.

The Talking Pigeons.

"The new science of eugenics is an excellent thing," said Luther Burbank, the plant wizard of California. "Eugenics will do for mankind perhaps what has already been done for plants. Man is still in the wild, or weed, state. But eugenics won't work miracles. The science mustn't be taken up with the credulity of the Pasadena pigeon breeder who, you know, crossed his pigeons with parrots so that when flying long distance matches they could ask their way home if they got lost."

HAVELOCK WILL CLOSE UP SHOP AND GO TO SEE FINAL FOOTBALL MATCH

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Oct. 27.—The last game in the finals for the intermediate football championship of Ontario will take place at the local park on Friday afternoon, Oct. 29th, when Havelock and Brussels come together in the second game of the round to decide which is the better team.

With Brussels with a lead of one goal, scored when Havelock played at Brussels, and with Havelock on their own grounds, it will certainly be a fast exhibition of football from start to finish.

Havelock have been very successful this year, only having lost one game and that one to Brussels on a foul score, and have only had three goals scored on them.

With both teams in fair condition and both determined to win, and a total play of 90 minutes, this will be a game that spectators will come for miles around to see. The Havelock people are very enthusiastic, and a good turn out of rooters is guaranteed.

LINDSAY TEAM EXPECTS TO OVERCOME LOCALS' LEAD

The Lindsay Warder has the following to say of the Lindsay-Peterborough game on the holiday:

A compact team of Peterborough juniors won from the Lindsay junior O.R.F.U. team in Peterborough yesterday by the close score of 9—5. It was splendid rugby the two teams played.

The Peterborough team turned out to be fast and by no means lightweights. It is by no means a disparagement to the Lindsay team to say the Peterborough juniors beat them. Peterborough scored a try and a field goal, and Lindsay a try.

Peterborough's try was fluked, to say the least of it. Sylvester muffed a punt and it rolled over to the dead line and over it. Sylvester let the ball go, thinking it was a "dead ball" and two or three Peterborough men fell on it. The referee decided it was a try, however, and the fluky ones count as well as those hard-earned.

The locals had every bit as much of the play as the Petes, and the ball was in the enemy's territory for more than half the time. It goes without saying that the Lindsay team expect to overcome the lead on home grounds next Saturday.

Gaele, the little Peterborough quarter, played immense rugby. He figured conspicuously in many plays. Richardson, the centre half, punted well, and dropped the deciding field goal over the Lindsay citadel. Staunton also showed speed and dash on the wing.

RUNNING

Just before Jimmy [illegible], the Indian runner, broke away from the leaders in the bay race on Monday, Jack Caffery rubbed a big beaver's foot up and down Jimmy's back. As soon as the Indian saw the foot and superstitious to the core, he broke in a clip that soon made the rest of the field look like selling-platers. Now the beaver's foot will follow him in every race. The foot is from a beaver caught in the Beaver river, near Beaverton, and Jimmy is a member of the Beaverton A. C., which has adopted the beaver as its crest. Why wouldn't he be superstitious?—Spectator.

SPORTING TALK

Owen Sound will be represented by two O.H.A. teams this season, an intermediate and a junior.

Yank Kenny, formerly Jack Johnson's trainer, has sued the champion for $3,000. The amount is for training fees and breach of contract.

Leo Quinn may not be able to play hockey this winter. The Lakefield boy has been sick for some time at Oshawa.

There are now six challenges for the Stanley Cup. The Edmonton club are the latest to send a challenge to the trustees of the mug.

Jimmie George, the winner of the Herald road race, is twenty years of age. His next race will be at Yonkers, Nov. 25th.

Jim Jeffries may go on the stage. A play in which James will be the main guy is being prepared.

The Manitoba Jockey Club, Limited, has been re-incorporated with a capital of $500,000.

Reddy Lamont, who played in the baseball team here some years ago, is now the trainer of John D. Marsh, the runner.

RUGBY

The local rugbyists are very confident that they can defeat the Peterborough juniors by required number of points and pull out winners of the district. The local team had an unlucky day in Peterborough Thanksgiving, and will not acknowledge defeat until the Petes come along and win out on the Lindsay gridiron. Monday's game will teach the Lindsay outfit one or two things and they cannot but benefit from it. If Peterborough wins on Saturday they will play better rugby than they did at home.—Lindsay Warder.

Making Money On the Farm

XIV.—Poultry—The Question of Breed

By C. V. GREGORY,
Author of "Home Course in Modern Agriculture"

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

THERE are breeds, varieties and strains of poultry almost without end. To the beginner in poultry culture the question of which one to select is a puzzling one, and the older poultrymen often wonder if they would not do better to change breeds. The purpose for which chickens are kept will determine which class of fowls is best. As to the varieties within that class, it is largely a matter of individual preference. A brief description of some of the leading varieties may be of help in making a selection.

The General Purpose Breeds.

Chickens may be grouped into four general classes: (1) General purpose breeds; (2) meat breeds; (3) laying breeds; (4) ornamental breeds. The aim of the breeders of general purpose fowls is to combine laying and meat producing ability to the greatest extent possible. The general purpose birds will not average as prolific layers as some of the more strictly egg fowls. For producing meat, however, they are fully as efficient as the strictly meat breeds. For the general farmer who is keeping poultry as a side issue the returns from the general purpose breeds will usually be greater than from any of the more specialized breeds.

The most popular and most widely distributed of the general purpose breeds is the Plymouth Rock. It is a medium sized breed, deep breasted and well proportioned. Plymouth Rocks are very good layers, especially the first year. After the hens are a year old they tend to become fat and sluggish and lay fewer eggs. The meat is of excellent quality. The chickens make good broilers at from three to four weeks of age or can be profitably fed for later markets. They are early maturing and as rapid growers excel all other breeds. Chicken feeders who crate-fatten extensively put the Plymouth Rock in first place for this purpose.

There are three varieties of Plymouth Rocks—Barred, White and Buff. The great trouble with the Barred Plymouth Rock is the difficulty in keeping the color markings up to standard. They tend to become unevenly barred, the bars become too wide or too narrow or the general color too dark or too light. From a utility standpoint this factor is of little importance, but where birds or eggs are sold for breeding purposes it is important that the color markings be up to standard. The Buff Rocks have a tendency to vary somewhat from the desired shade and to produce black feathers in wings or tail. They average a little smaller than the Barred or White varieties. The White Rocks breed true to color the easiest. The hens of this variety show even more of a tendency to become overfat than do those of the Barred variety.

Plymouth Rock eggs are brown, which is something of an objection in some markets and an advantage with others. The standard weight for the breed is nine and a half pounds for cocks and seven and a half for hens. Plymouth Rocks are criticised somewhat for lack of hardiness as compared with the other general purpose breeds, and there is doubtless some ground for this criticism. They may be greatly improved in this point by the use of birds of exceptionally strong vitality in the breeding pen.

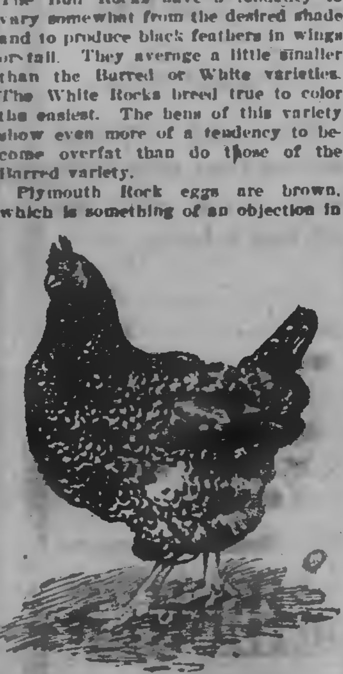

FIG. XXVII—GOOD TYPE PLYMOUTH ROCK HEN.

Next to the Plymouth Rocks in popularity as a general purpose breed are the Wyandottes. They average about a pound lighter than the Plymouth Rocks. The chickens are nearly as rapid growers and produce meat of as good or even better quality.

The Wyandottes are generally considered to stand heavy feeding for rapid growth a little better than most of the other breeds. The hens are active and do not become overfat as easily as Plymouth Rocks.

There are several varieties of Wyandottes, all the same type and having the same general characteristics. The only distinguishing point is the color. With this breed, as with the Plymouth Rocks, the mixed colors are difficult to breed true to standard. For the man who does not wish to devote a great deal of time to breeding for fancy points a solid color is preferable.

One of the newest of the general purpose breeds is the Rhode Island Red. These fowls are very hardy and for that reason well adapted to farm conditions. They rank up well with the Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes in laying ability and as meat producers. They are about the same size as the Wyandottes, the standard weight being eight and one-half pounds for the cock and six and one-half pounds for the hen. The color is a brilliant red, with portions of the tail and wings shading off to black. The exact shade of color varies considerably.

There are a number of other general purpose breeds, such as the Dominiques, Buckeyes and Javas. The latter are about the same size as the Plymouth Rocks, though of a little different shape. They lay well, are fairly good for meat and are good sitters. There are two varieties, black and mottled. The objection applies to this breed that is made to all birds with black plumage—that the black pinfeathers detract considerably from the appearance of the dressed fowl. Such birds are seriously discriminated against in the markets. The foregoing breeds have been developed in this country and are known as American breeds. There is also an English breed, the Orpingtons, that gives very good satisfaction as a general purpose fowl.

The Meat Breeds.

The meat breeds, most of which are Asiatics, are the oldest breeds in this country. The Brahmas, one of the most common of these, are large, the male weighing eleven to twelve pounds and the hen eight and a half to nine and a half. This large size is one of the chief points in favor of the Brahmas. They are slow maturing, and it takes considerable feeding to get their large frames thickly enough covered with meat to be in good market condition. Like all feathered legged breeds, the Brahma is clumsy and for this reason does not make a first class mother. The pullets are too slow in maturing to lay many eggs the first winter. Even when matured they are not heavy layers, though they do most of their laying in the winter, when eggs are high. This is largely because their large size and heavy feathering make them less susceptible to cold. As meat producers the Brahmas are about equal to the general purpose breeds, though for high class capons they are perhaps a little superior. There are two varieties of Brahmas, light and dark. The light Brahmas are the more popular. The black variety is more difficult to breed for color, and much attention to fancy points has caused utility to be largely lost sight of.

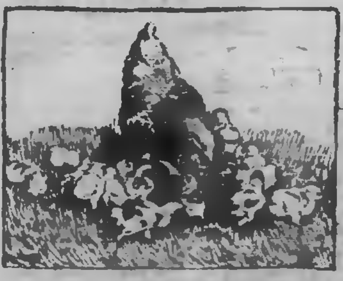

FIG. XXVIII—WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCK CHICKENS.

Cochins are the second of the meat breeds in size, the males weighing eleven pounds and the hens eight and a half. They are of the same massive, full feathered type as the Brahmas, averaging a trifle shorter legged and wider across the back. Like the Brahmas, they are hardy. They are not as good layers, however, and are just as slow in maturing. There are four varieties, of which the buff is the most common.

Both these breeds have served a good purpose in grading up the mongrel strains of the country and providing foundation stock for the American breeds. At present, however, they have few points of superiority over the American breeds as meat producers and are inferior to them in laying ability. As show fowls they are prized because of their size and beauty.

The smallest and quickest maturing of the Asiatic breeds is the Langshan. They are objectionable because of their black color, white skin and feathered legs and do not excel the American breeds in any practical qualities. An English breed, the Dorkings, are good meat producers, but poor layers. For the man who is in the poultry business from a utility standpoint one of the general purpose or laying breeds will be more satisfactory than any of the meat breeds.

The Laying Breeds.

The laying breeds originally came from the region around the Mediterranean sea, and hence are often referred to as the Mediterranean breeds. The most popular of these is the Leghorn. Leghorns are small birds, not more than half the size of the Asiatics. They are very active and good foragers. They outrank any of the other breeds in laying qualities, laying both summer and winter if properly cared for. They are not adapted to the poultryman who pays no attention to his chickens, as they will not lay unless they are given good care. They lay white eggs weighing ten to the pound. The eggs of the American breeds weigh eight to the pound.

The small size of the Leghorn hens makes them cheaply kept. They are early maturing, often beginning to lay when they are four and a half months old. Their flesh is of good quality, but their size is against them from a market standpoint. The only way the cockerels can be disposed of at a profit is to sell them as broilers at two pounds weight or smaller. Of the several varieties of Leghorn the white and brown are the most popular from a utility standpoint.

Cleaning Ostrich Feathers.

An authority on cleaning gives this information: To bleach white ostrich feathers use peroxide of hydrogen, one-half pint to ten pints of water, to which add three teaspoonfuls of ammonia. The feather should be entirely covered with this solution and allowed to remain in it overnight.

Take out in the morning, and if not thoroughly cleaned the process should be repeated.

Rinse in clear water, and if a bluish tint is desired the feather should be again rinsed in slightly blued water. Hang up in the air to dry and then curl with the blunt edge of a knife.

RAN A RUSTY NAIL INTO HIS FINGER

USING Zam-Buk on a cut or scratch is insuring yourself against the danger of blood-poisoning, festering, or inflammation. As soon as you sustain an injury—a scratch from barbed wire, a cut, a burn, a bruise—put on a little Zam-Buk, and then don't worry! Zam-Buk kills the disease germs, which, entering wounds, set up festering, etc. Not only so, but Zam-Buk stimulates the cells to rapid action, and in this way builds up healthy skin very quickly; also, it eases pain and smarting. You have ease, insurance against blood-poisoning, and rapid healing—only Zam-Buk combines the three! Try it!

Mr. Alf. Hy. Orth, of Shipley (Ont.), says:—"While at work recently I had the misfortune to run a rusty wire nail under my thumb nail, to the depth of about one and a half inches. The pain was terrible, and what I feared was that the nail, being so dirty and rusty, would set up festering and blood-poisoning. I knew, from previous experience, how good Zam-Buk was, so I cleaned the wound, melted a little of the balm, and ran it into the wound. The result was wonderful. It soothed the pain, and the thumb actually did not swell. Zam-Buk kept away all inflammation. I was able to go on with my work all the time, and in a few days the thumb was as good as ever."

Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, bruises, sprains, piles, festering sores, ulcers, scalds, blood-poisoning, eczema, varicose ulcers, prairie itch, ringworm, scalp-sores, bad leg, diseased ankles, and all other skin diseases and injuries. Rubbed well into the parts affected, it cures neuralgia, rheumatism, and sciatica. All Druggists and Stores sell at 50c. box, three for $1.25, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

LOCATION

The property is situated in the centre of the Cobalt mineralized area, approximately one and one-half miles due north from the Townsite of Cobalt, and such well-known mines as the Timiskaming & Hudson Bay, La Rose, Chambers-Ferland, Coniagas, Tretheway and Nipissing.

There is a good wagon road from the Town of Cobalt to the mine.

The property has been inspected and reported upon by Mr. D. G. Kerr and Mr. Geo. R. Rogers, Mining Engineers.

It is admitted by the Engineers who have examined it, to be a most favorable proposition and is ordinarily considered to be one of the most promising of the low-priced Silver issues on the market today.

There is an abundance of timber on the property for all mining purposes. The necessary camp buildings are erected, consisting of a good substantial log house to accommodate 30 men for sleeping and cooking, a shaft house and a blacksmith's shop.

The geological formation is Diabase, Gabbro, Lower Huronian or Cobalt series of Conglomerate, brecca quartzites and grey slate. In these formations the richest of the Cobalt Silver veins are found.

Within an area of about four acres have been found no less than 6 distinct calcite veins measuring from one-half to three inches in width on the surface. These have been stripped for distances as follows:

Vein No. 1, 190 feet; No. 2, 160 feet; No. 3, 210 feet; No. 4, 198 feet; No. 5, 790 feet; No. 6, 396 feet.

A shaft has been sunk nearly 60 feet deep and at the 50 foot level silver was found in the vein matter.

No Royalty is imposed upon the property.

Concluding his exhaustive report, Mr. Geo. R. Rogers states:—I may say that it is seldom I have seen so many stringers and feeders in so limited a boundary, and I am forced to believe, after examination, that they are feeders connecting with the main vein running through your property. If I am allowed to judge from the location of your property and the general conditions, I am forced to look upon it in the light of a good proposition.

Of the shares now available a large block has been arranged for through a New York Brokerage House of high repute.

VISITORS EXPRESS ADMIRATION OF C.G.E. WORKS IN THIS CITY

Capable of Filling Any Contract—A Credit to Canada—Interesting Comparison of Wages Here and in Scotland.

A Review representative met several of the Toronto visitors to the C. G. E. who invaded the city yesterday in such large numbers to see the huge works which, under the able superintendence of Mr. E. G. Paterson, have become a national Canadian asset.

The City Treasurer of Toronto, Mr. Cody, spoke in the highest terms of the works. He has lately returned from Great Britain, where he had an excellent opportunity of comparing similar industries with those in Canada. He could not speak too highly of the local establishment and the appearance of the employees.

Ald. R. G. Graham and Ald. J. J. Graham both expressed themselves in a similar way, stating also that they believed in fostering home industries and that it was only by protective measures that great works like the C. G. E. were possible in Canada, since the difference between the finished product here and the foreign article was wholly in the price of labor. One large employer of labor said, "I can give you an instance that ought to bring this fact home to every well-wisher of Canada. Recently he wanted a high-class superintending mechanic. We were short of them. We wrote to Scotland and will you believe it, this man received 19 cents an hour in the works in Scotland, while we pay 45 cents an hour for the very same identical employment here in Canada. Unless the workmen accepted similar wages how could we compete with the older countries? But we wouldn't wish to compete at the price of the loss to the worker."

Ald. Maguire remarked that a Canadian wage-earner aspired to have a comfortable and well-furnished home and was entitled to it. If labor was to be honorable, free and intelligent it must be paid accordingly. Numbers of others of the visitors expressed themselves emphatically in favor of protecting Canadian labor. A droll member of the party remarked that it made a noise like a party of Tory tourists, to which another visitor replied; "No, we are not all Tories by any means, but that talk is right. But I'll say this: Tories are not bigots. In Toronto, that gives a Tory majority of twenty to twenty-seven thousand, there is now a Grit majority in the Council this year, and a Grit Mayor. What do you think of that?"

After expressing their great obligations to Mr. E. G. Patterson for his indefatigable kindness and after renewing their expressions of admiration of the great size and capabilities of the workshops of the C.G.E. the visitors departed amid tremendous cheering at 7 p.m. on their special train.

FURS ARE SCARCE AND PRICES HIGH

Those who are thinking of buying furs this winter would do well not to delay too long, as a jump in prices from ten to a hundred per cent appears to be likely.

The Review made some inquiries to-day as to why prices for furs are higher than last year. Local fur dealers say that lynx is the one fur that is going to be much dearer; in fact, already it has become more valuable through an advance of a hundred per cent.

The reason assigned for this is that the fur is very scarce, and that there is now a demand for dyeing it. Lynx is sent to Leipsic to undergo a particular dyeing process which gives it a special gloss that is in demand; but the outlet is so great there being extra duties, etc., that the cost had advanced by leaps and bounds.

Russian pony, sable, and pointed fox are expected to jump in price from 50 to 75 per cent.; while mink, ermine and seal have gone up from ten to fifteen per cent.

Even the skunk, that is often abused, is worth something now, for the skins will sell at a much higher price this winter.

A local furrier stated to-day that business was just as good this year as last, despite the increased prices, and probably better.

HANDS AND ARMS BADLY BURNED

David Fleming, an employee in the Test Department of the Canadian General Electric Co., was painfully burned yesterday afternoon. Both hands and arms to the elbow were severely burned and parts of his face scorched. Dr. Young attended to his injuries and he was taken to the Nicholls hospital in the Dan Spence ambulance. The young man is resting easier to-day.

MUCH INTEREST IN BAND CONCERT

Considerable interest is being shown in the "first night" promenade concert to be given by the 57th band at the Armouries to-morrow evening. The programme, with its special vocal numbers, is one that will doubtless prove very popular. The band has had many thorough rehearsals in preparing it, and it will undoubtedly be excellently played.

JUNIORS WILL BE IN GOOD CONDITION

The Junior O.R.F.U. team is practicing hard during their spare time, so that they will be in the best of shape for the big struggle in Lindsay on Saturday. A large number of players were out in uniform yesterday afternoon and the regulars had a great workout. The game in Peugoxville is sure to be a hard one and the locals will have to play every minute to win the honors. That lead of four points could easily be overcome by a little carelessness.

The team will be practically the same as on last Saturday.

WONDERFUL CAVES.

Discovered Amid the Modoc Lava Beds of California.

The Modoc lava beds in California near the Klamath county line, long a place of historic as well as scenic interest, have grown more prominent lately by reason of new discoveries, especially as to the caves, of which there are a great many in this region, all among lava beds of the ruggedest description.

As one traverses Tulu lake, the southern margin of which rests on the lava field, about forty extinct volcanoes can be counted in the region of the lake. Many of these are weathered and ancient, covered with shrubs and trees, and others are absolutely bare, and the reddish lava about their craters has a modern look.

Following the lava flows from these cinder cones are vast crevices and crinkled ridges of lava and caves of great extent and of various forms. A man who lives in this region and who has spent thirty years as a cowboy claims to have discovered a cave many miles in extent, which he calls the Mammoth cave of California, and steps are being taken to make a thorough exploration of its vast subterranean recesses.

A party of three persons from Klamath Falls recently returned from a four days' outing in the lava beds and reported a most interesting outing in that land of dead volcanoes.

Several new caves were discovered by the party, one of which is some 200 feet in length, 50 in width and with a level ceiling 40 feet above the floor. The most important discovery made by the party, however, was of a two story cave which is indeed one of the world's marvels. A hole was found some ten feet in width in the bottom of a large cave. A lantern was lowered on a rope until it was evident that there was another floor with a surrounding cavity some twenty-five or thirty feet below.

A small pine tree was cut, divested of its limbs and brought into the cave. This was lowered until it touched the lower floor, and by it the party descended to a great corridor thirty or forty feet wide extending apparently parallel with the corridor above in both directions from the point of descent. The corridor is not less than 500 feet in extent and is obstructed at the ends by loose material fallen from above. No thermometer was at hand to determine the temperature, but it is cool enough to contrast greatly with the degree above ground, and icicles five or six feet in length descend from the ceiling in many places.—Portland Oregonian.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

GARLOUGH NOT GUILTY

Farmer Acquitted of Charge of Murdering Beckstead Jury Out 15 Mins.

Cornwall, Oct. 29. Isaac Garlough was last night acquitted by an Assize Court jury of a charge of murder. It was claimed that he had shot and killed Ross Beckstead on May 13, in the rear of Williamsburg Township. Garlough and his wife both swore that they had been annoyed two or three times by parties throwing stone at their dwelling. On the night of the shooting, rotten eggs accompanied the stones. Something which they described as a bomb had been thrown in through an open window in August, 1908. On Saturday, May 8, a dead hen was left at the door, and next day he borrowed a shot gun, and some loaded shells from John Lewis. On the night of May 13, Mr. and Mrs. Garlough swore that they were aroused about 9.30 by stones thrown at the buildings, and looking from a window saw two men on the road east of the house. Garlough seized his gun, and going to the west side of the house, stuck the muzzle through a pane of glass and fired at random.

Garlough claimed to be very good friends with Ross Beckstead, whose body had been found next day in a nearby field.

Several witnesses for the defence testified to Garlough's good character as a harmless, inoffensive man, and others gave testimony that the night was very dark. The jury were out about fifteen minutes. I. Hilliard, Morrisburg, and R. A. Pringle, K.C., acted for the prisoner, and J. C. Milligan for the crown.

Weird tales of the frozen north, romances and adventures of the sea like those of the roving Norsemen of the long are are brought back from the bleak and barren Labrador, one of the storm centres of the controversy over the discovery of the North Pole by Dr. Frederick A. Cook, and the subsequent reaching of the same point by Commander Robert E. Peary. True stories are told that read like legends, journeys that sound like fairy tales, and all are coupled with the life of a militant and muscular missionary who outrivals Robinson Crusoe for everyday resourcefulness.

Labrador, cold and forbidding as its name, offers perhaps less reward to those who seek its shores than any other place in the world, yet thousands of fishermen flock to the country from Newfoundland every summer. They toil and struggle during the warm months, and ship their catches to Europe, the United States and the West Indies for a profit that is a mere pittance. Even in the most profitable season the return is very small, and these people are about the poorest of the poor. They have almost nothing besides just barely sufficient to keep them from starving to death; they labor all summer so that they may exist through the winter. There are more than forty thousand who go there every spring and about five thousand and who live along the shores all the year around and are called liveyeres. They are a simple folk; their desires are few and their interest in the outside world is almost nothing, perhaps from a hopeless sort of philosophy that leads them to believe that nothing but great unhappiness can come to them from knowing too much of the happiness of other peoples.

MAKE FORTUNES FOR OTHERS.

Strange as it may seem, these poor people have been the means of making fortunes for others. Their catches were sold to the owners of the owners of the sailing vessels for as little as it was possible for the master to pay. The people were under a system almost like peonage of the South, and a fisherman, to go into the business, would practically have to mortgage himself and the services of his children to obtain the necessary trappings. Almost every man was in debt to such an extent that his catch of fish was bought one, two or three years in advance.

This was the condition that existed in 1892, when Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell, an Englishman, went to the coast. He found oppression and starvation in every settlement of any importance, to Eskimo Point, on the Canadian Labrador. He learned that the fishermen had practically mortgaged themselves and their families and that it was almost an impossibility for a man to work out of debt, for if he did manage to get a few cents' credit above what he owed it was gobbled up by the unscrupulous traders, who charged exorbitant prices for flour, molasses and tobacco. He found disease and illness on every hand and no medical aid, so that when a person was stricken he was put in a little hut by himself and left to die.

Dr. Grenfell started in to remedy all this. He does not call himself a philanthropist or a reformer. He is just a man trying to make his life count for something. There is no one so tireless as he, not a skipper on the coast so fearless. He is ever looking for the chance to help some one in trouble. He is an adventurer in the highest sense of the word. His religion is one of entire simplicity, directness and naturalness. It knows no creed, sect or cult; no first, second or third. It is of the kind that gives to any who needs without the slightest thought of reward. With a warm sympathy for those who get his help, a practical, inventive mind, a strong sense of humor, a cheerful optimism and an undaunted courage, he has made the coast of Labrador. His work has been such an unselfish one that the King of England has rewarded him and made him a Companion of St. Michael and St. George.

NO COONVENTIONAL MISSIONARY

He is not the conventional missionary. He is a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, England; master mariner, magistrate, minister, agent for the Lloyds, superintendent of the Royal National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, and general opponent of all fraud and crookedness. He can amputate a leg with the skill of a specialist, can handle dynamite with the ease and safety of an expert or can put his ship into a dry dock when there is none within two hundred miles of him and repair a stripped propeller with scrapiron. He is a deer breeder, having imported two hundred of these animals from Norway and put them in a great preserve in Newfoundland. He is teaching them to draw loads and finds them as practicable as horses.

This master mariner in the truest sense covers nearly one thousand miles of Atlantic coast noted for its desperate destitution. His work lies among between forty thousand and fifty thousand permanent residents through the winter. His storm centre is around the Straits of Belle Isle, perhaps the worst graveyard in the world for ships of all kinds. In spite of the fact that icebergs are swirling down through the reef dotted waters, his staunch little vessels are going continually until the harbors freeze up for the winter. Then he takes to the kamiks, or dog sledges. No storm ever stops him, and he might aptly be called the Stormy Petrel of the Labrador Missions.

IS EUROPE NEARING WAR?

Vienna, Oct. 29.—The Vaterland, which has close relations with Archduke Frans Frederick, nephew of Emperor Francis Joseph and heir presumptive to the throne, in a sensational article declares that the Rassonigi meeting brings Europe within measurable distance of war, because, for Italy and Russia to declare before the world their identity in Balkan interests, is in reality a war cry against Austria.

IS WATCHING FOR RUNAWAY SISTER

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 29.—Sitting on a chair on the west wing of the main floor of the postoffice, Miss Catherine McKay of Lucknow, Ont., took up unique vigil Wednesday morning. Throughout the day and until midnight she sat, and yesterday morning again resumed her watch. She is looking for a missing sister, Sarah McKay, aged 20, who ran away from their home on a farm five weeks ago. Friends in Lucknow received letters from the girl, dated Detroit, directing that replies be sent her at the postoffice here.

GOVERNMENT BY ULTIMATUM

Athens, Oct. 29.—Some thirty naval officers, supported by the Military League, have been for some time demanding the elimination of a number of the highest officers in the navy, on the ground of incompetence, as a preliminary to the reorganization of the navy, and Wednesday evening presented a 24-hour ultimatum, requesting the enactment of an ordinance suspending all promotion for five years, the abolition of the post of rear admiral, heretofore held by Prince George, together with two vice-admirals and 15 places of lesser rank. It is believed that the cabinet will be compelled to grant the demands. Intense excitement prevails.

OPPOSED TO A TIN-POT NAVY

Cape Town, S.A., Oct. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the House of Assembly, Premier Merriman announced he was asking Earl Crewe's consent to the publication of the deliberations of the Imperial Defence Conference, and said he and the Transvaal representatives were strongly opposed to "wretched tin-pot navies."

He hoped in future the British naval program would be discussed with the colonial Parliaments beforehand.

ANOTHER ONE ACCOUNTED FOR

Harry Churchill, Who Broke Gaol in Toronto is Caught.

Toronto, Oct. 29. Harry Churchill with innumerable aliases, and one of the first pickpockets of the United States, is once more under arrest, and will be extradicted to Canada. Churchill is one of the seven who escaped from Toronto jail July 17, 1908, and is wanted here for picking the pocket of a Chicago architect on the G.T.R. sleeper between North Bay and Toronto. He had been indicted by the grand jury and was awaiting trial at the sessions when he made his escape.

Churchill was arrested Oct. 7, at Butte, Mont., for a like offence, and is there awaiting his trial, and it is doubtful whether the Montana authorities will not insist on trying him, and having him serve out his sentence there should he be convicted, but failing this, County Crown Attorney H. L. Drayton will make every effort to have him brought back to face his trial here.

This is the second time that Churchill is known to have been in custody since his sensational jail delivery. Nearly a year ago he was arrested at Dallas, Texas, but had been allowed to go before the Toronto authorities were aware that he had been taken.

Of the seven who escaped, two are now in Canadian prisons. Alexander Rose is serving a life sentence in Kingston, having been brought back from West Virginia by Inspector of Detectives Duncan, and Robert Snow was taken in the city, and is now serving in the Central Prison.

At the time that Rose was arrested in West Virginia, James Clark and William D. Jones were also arrested there, and were sent to Newcastle, Pa., where they were wanted for escaping from the Pennsylvania Penitentiary previous to their coming to Canada.

Edward Lee, the only other member of the escaping septette heard from since the jail delivery is now wanted for murder, it being said that he is the man who shot a constable who was attempting his arrest at Niagara Falls, N.Y. John Copeland, the seventh man has never been heard of since the escape.

M. Sharp, of Selkirk, Man., has patented a bottle that cannot be refilled.

STORY OF ROBINSON'S CRIME IS TOLD BY HIS CHILDREN

Ellen Robinson Corroborates Mother's Evidence That Father Forced Mother to Kill Children—Mrs. Robinson Appears in Court.

Sudbury, Oct. 29.—James Robinson of Warren, husband of Annie Robinson, now under sentence of death, was yesterday morning placed on trial on a charge of murder. It is alleged that he forced his wife to kill the infant son born to him by his young daughter Ellen.

A. E. Creswick of Barrie is crown counsel and R. R. McKessock of Sudbury for Robinson.

Following a report by Mrs. Bruce Smith and Clarke, it was announced that the defence would not attempt to prove Robinson insane.

The evidence of the daughter, Ellen, was taken at Sudbury General Hospital, where she recently gave birth to her third child. The effect of her evidence is mainly a corroboration of her mother's evidence, whom she heard say, "Oh! Jimmy, I cannot do it," and that he said "You must." She also asserted that her father was the father of her three children.

The first witness called in court was the daughter Jessie. Before she appeared Robinson sat in the dock with head bowed down in his hands and his face completely hidden. Jessie stated her age as 19 and told of her father's misconduct toward her. Once or twice she was on the verge of breaking down, but recovered.

"You are trying to tell the truth, are you not?" asked defence counsel.

"Yes," she replied, "but I mind nothing about what I said at the last court."

"Do you pretend to remember what happened last March?" he asked.

"Yes," was the emphatic reply.

"Then, has your memory been refreshed by talking with people since last court?"

"No, I never talked to anyone."

"Has your memory not failed you since?"

"Some of it has," she replied.

At ten minutes to six there was a flutter of excitement when the name of Annie Robinson was called. She entered the court-room, slow and shaky. She looked years older yesterday than when she received sentence a month ago. She was dressed in black from head to foot, and was provided a seat near the legal table. She sat with clasped hands, paying no attention to surroundings.

Argument ensued between counsel as to the admissibility of her evidence, and an adjournment was made until 9 o'clock this morning, when Justice Magee will make his ruling.

John Robinson, the son, a youth of 20, was taken in hand by Justice Magee for his slowness in answering questions.

PROBABLY DESERVED

The Britisher in Canada is generally charged with being hypercritical and the born Canadian appears so sensitive of comment on any of his institutions, that absolutely unprejudiced criticism is labelled "tinged with bias." Yet the stranger within the gates, unless he be purposely unobserved, must be struck by certain elements that go to form the national life; by none more so than by the extraordinary character of Canadian politics. Briefly, political morality as understood not only in the old country, but in the old world appears to be non existant.—The Canadian Times.

If we agree with the "general verdict" this statement of the Canadian Times is true. The worst of it is that a man who cheats at one thing will cheat at another. "Playing fair," isn't a motto for one thing in life and not for another any more than one can speak the truth at one time and deliberately perjure oneself at another. When a man swears falsely that stamps the man as one who has called God to witness while he lies. It is so everywhere. A liar is a liar and when the object of his lying is his own political or financial gain the end and aim of it is apparent.

ATHLETES AND DECENCY

Mr. J. M. Robinson, of Hamilton, in addressing a number of Sunday school teachers in Toronto, observed that no young man could be an athlete and be decent. While there is a tendency to "sugar-coat the pill" by providing various adjuncts to churches, Sunday schools and Y.M.C.A.'s, nevertheless it has little to do with amateur sport, which in itself is one of the purest and best of the avenues of a young man's activity.

The principles of Christianity, it is now generally agreed, in Evangelical circles are best preached by exemplification. If a young man grows up with a healthy body, containing a healthy mind, he furnishes the best possible agency for religious or merely human well-doing. Sport, like other good things, may be overdone. So may religion, which, done to excess, produces hysteria, madness, murder, and even suicide. Per se there is nothing deleterious in sport. On the contrary, it is an ennobling and healthgiving pursuit. The body is meant to be kept in "trim" by exercise, and where young men work in shops, etc. it is necessary that they engage in sport to preserve their health.

PURE WATER FOR OTTAWA

(The Ottawa Free Press.)

The recommendation which the civic Waterworks Committee passed last night, on the motion of Ald. Hinchey, brings before the City Council a question that vitally concerns the whole population of Ottawa.

Pure drinking water is an essential to the health of every community. That Ottawa does not at the present time enjoy the boon of a regular supply of pure water is made evident by the warnings that are from time to time issued by the city health department advising the public to boil all drinking water.

But even if there were not these periodical official warnings, the people of Ottawa know for themselves

That sewage is being dumped into the river only a few miles above the city's intake pipe;

That dead animals are, during the winter, drawn on to the ice above the city's intake pipe and allowed to float down with the stream in the spring;

That water drawn from the taps is always cloudy and frequently positively dirty;

That one week's normal use of a household filter results in deposits of decomposing organic matter that are warranted to disgust even the most careless

This question of pure drinking water for Ottawa is not by any means a new one. From time to time there have been agitations for improving the supply. But in the past these agitations have resolved themselves around proposals to change the source of supply, and the enormous cost of that change has always proved an insurmountable obstacle.

Ald. Hinchey's proposal does not involve any alteration in the source of supply. It does contemplate the purification of the water before it is pumped into the city mains for public use.

In the last decade wonderful strides have been made in the direction of water filtration. In England and all over Europe municipal filtration plants have been established with the greatest success.

At the last meeting of the British Institution of Mechanical Engineers, a paper read by one of the members followed by a discussion extending over several days and participated in by many city engineers who spoke from actual experience, revealed the fact that mechanical filters have been brought to such a pitch of excellence as to be practically perfect as water purifiers.

And the cost of these filters, in every case, was shown to be inconsiderable when compared with the results obtained.

In our own country, Toronto, which gets its water supply from Lake Ontario, recently decided upon the establishment of sand filters.

And the little town of Lindsay about a year ago took the very enterprising step of installing a plant for purifying the water by electric treatment. So sure was the inventor of the plant that he could accomplish what the town desired, that he undertook to install the system at his own cost until its efficiency had been demonstrated to the town's satisfaction. The proof was forthcoming and Lindsay has now extended its plant and the town clerk reports that it is giving "continued and universal satisfaction."

Ald. Hinchey at the present stage is not asking the City Council to commit itself to the expenditure of any money.

But he does ask that the city of Ottawa shall at once make itself acquainted with what other communities are doing in the way of water filtration, and, with that end in view, he suggests that the inventor of the system which has given so much satisfaction in Lindsay, should be invited to come to Ottawa and explain how he would handle the conditions here and give an estimate of the cost.

This gentleman has publicly stated that—with electric power costing $18 per horse power, as against $15 in Ottawa—water can be purified at a cost of 25 cents per million gallons, or, based on the present Ottawa supply of sixteen million gallons, $4 per day. When water purification has been got down to so low a cost, it surely is time that Ottawa began to open its eyes to the possibilities.

As we have said, the question of pure water concerns every citizen. But it concerns the citizen of moderate and small means even more than it interests the wealthier resident. The latter is able, and does in large quantities at the present time, purchase bottled spring waters for the family use, but the children of the poor man are compelled to use the water which is supplied to them through the taps, whether pure or impure.

We have little patience with those aldermen who tell us knowingly that the Ottawa water supply is not contaminated. It smacks very much of the attitude of mind of the village councillors who object to reporting the presence of smallpox or other contagious disease, because it would hurt the reputation of the community.

Ald. Hinchey is deserving of the thanks of the citizens for having brought this subject to the front, and the Free Press sincerely hopes that the City Council will give it that serious consideration which its importance warrants.

(Note: It is understood that the drawback to the ozonizing system at Lindsay is that when the pumps are turned on in case of fire the drinking water becomes impure. With this obstacle overcome the simple and inexpensive character of the Lindsay system is apparent. It costs not more than one-third of sand-filtration. If it is as effective as it seems to be, and if this drawback can be provided for it might prove a good thing for Peterborough. The expense of sand-filtration is great.—Ed. Review.)

OBITUARY

LATE JAS. HOWDEN.

Millbrook Mirror.

It was a sad day for the brethren of L.O.L. No. 46, on Oct. 4th, when they were called upon to follow the remains of their Brother, James Howden, to their last resting place, not only sad to their brethren at his own lodge but also to the brethren of the district, to all of whom the news of his death came as a sudden shock. The deceased was born in the township of Cavan 41 years ago, and speak to whom you might, to them who went to school with him, or to those who formed his acquaintance in later years, none of them but had a good word to say of him. He was liked and respected by all for his quiet, unassuming ways and his sterling character and largeness of heart, and his death will be regretted by all.

Two weeks before his death he was in the best of health when he was taken suddenly ill and in spite of all the skill of good doctors and nurses and the care of loving friends and kind neighbors on the evening of the 2nd inst. he breathed his last. All through his illness he bore his pain with Christian fortitude and was more concerned about his wife and little ones than himself.

The sympathy of his brother Orangemen, as well as the whole community, goes out too his sorrowing widow and little Willie and Mabel, and his mother, sisters and brothers in their time of trial, but He who has promised to care for the widow and orphan, will, in His loving kindness remember them and "give them strength to bear their trial, and to meet him in that better world where there will be no parting.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCEE.

To Mrs James Howden.—

We, the officers and members of L. O. L. No. 46. Frazerville, desire to convey our sincere sympathy to you in the irreparable loss you have sustained by the death of your loving husband. By his death we have lost a respected brother, a true and loyal member of our association, therefore we mourn with you in your great sorrow and bereavement.

Our prayer is that you may be sustanied and led "by your Heavenly Father, who, in His kind providence has taken your loving husband to Himself and Who doeth nothing amiss, although there is a vacant place in the home, there is comfort in the thought that by living a life such as he has lived we may join him in our Eternal Home. Signed on behalf of the Lodge,

WOMEN'S WOES

Peterboro Women are Finding Relief at Last

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs John Wallace, of 323 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., says;—"I had suffered with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble for over two years, and could find nothing that would benefit my condition. My back was weak and dull, heavy pain settled across the small of it extending into my sides and shoulders. I could not sleep at night as the kidney secretions were so frequent and irregular that I would have to leave my bed a number of times. I was dizzy and weak and would usually awake with a dull headache. Booth's Kidney Pills procured at McDermid & Jury's Drug Store caured me when all else failed. I am stronger and feel better generally. I can conscientiously recommend Booth's Kidney Pills, and would not be without a box in the house."

Exporters.

A few export bulls were bought at $4 to $4.50 per cwt. Extra choice quality bulls would bring a little more money.

Butchers.

There were a few odd cattle, of prime quality which if sold alone, would have brought $5.25, but they were few in number.

George Rowntree, who bought 300 cattle for the Harris Abattoir Co., reported prices as follows: Butchers, steers and heifers, $4 to $5.10; cows, $4 to $4.40; bulls, $2.20 to $4.40.

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby reports a quiet, steady trade for feeders, the market for them was not as brisk as the fat cattle, that is, there was not the same life, and prices were certainly not any higher, altho all of good quality was readily taken at unchanged quotations. Mr. Murby bought 250 cattle and quotes prices as follows: Best steers, 900 to 1050 lbs., at $4 to $4.50; steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $3.50 to $3.90; good stockers, 600 to 700 lbs. each, at $2.75 to $3.25; common stockers, $2 to $2.75.

Milkers and Springers.

A fair supply, but not enough, of good milkers, and forward springers met a ready market at prices as high as at any time this season. Prices ranged from $45 to $75 each; of course there were few that brought the latter figure, but several sold up to the $70 mark. There were also a lot of late springers and common cows that sold at lower quotations than those given above.

Veal Calves.

There was a strong market for veal calves at prices ranging generally between $3 and $6.50 per cwt., and very few choice calves brought $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

A fair delivery of sheep and lambs sold at firmer prices as follows. Export ewes, $3.50 to $4 per cwt.; rams, $2.50 to $3 per cwt.; lambs ranged all the way from $5.25 for light, common quality to $5.90 for selected lots.

Hogs.

Receipts on the railways from all sources were reported at 3619 for the two days. Prices were quoted about steady at $7.75 to $7.80 for selects fed and watered, and $7.50 to $7.65 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Parsons, counsel for the American Sugar Refining Co., is quoted as saying that he and his fellow directors, indicted in the Pennsylvania Sugar Co. conspiracy cases, will not take advantage of the statute of limitations as construed by Judge Hold of the United States Circuit Court. "It would not show good sporting blood for us to take shelter behind this technicality, We'll fight the thing out," he says.

EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN AT KNOX PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Will Open Sunday Morning When Rev. J. D. Morrow will Preach—Rev. A. E. Mitchell, Hamilton, and Rev. Dr. Farquharson, Durham, expected.

On Sunday morning, Oct. 31st, the evangelistic campaign that will centralize in the three Presbyterian churches will be opened in Knox church at the morning service by Rev. J. D. Morrow, of Dale Presbyterian church. Mr. Morrow is an enthusiastic minister, who puts the same energy into his ministerial duties and pulpit work that he did when doing 440 yards in championship time. For Rev. J. D. Morrow is a Canadian champion and withal is most attractive speaker who puts the true note in all his messages. He will preach in Knox church morning and evening and the officers of the church are preparing for large congregations.

Mr. Morrow will also be one of the special speakers at the mass meeting in the Opera House, Sunday afternoon at 4.15.

On Monday evening, Nov. 1st, Rev. A. E. Mitchell, of Knox church, Hamilton, will take charge of the services in Knox church. Mr. Mitchell has won a distinguished place for himself in the ministry of the Presbyterian church as an organizer and preacher. When he first took hold of Erskine church, Ottawa, it had a membership of 83. He left it after a few years of his vigorous work with a membership of nearly a thousand and with one of the largest Sunday schools in the Dominion. He is now pastor of Knox church, Hamilton, one of the largest in that city. He was chosen by the General Assembly's Committee to take part in the Kootenay campaign last spring. People of the city should not miss the opportunity of hearing him.

The second week of the campaign will be under the direction of Rev. Dr. Farquharson, of Durham. Dr. Farquharson is a distinguished scholar and a strong preacher. His service in the church was recognized by Knox College a year ago when the Senate conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

The services in Knox church are open to the public, particularly to those living in the southern part of the city.

WEDDING BELLS

CROLY—TROTTER

The marriage was solemnized last Wednesday at noon, at the residence of the bride's mother, of Florence Helen, eldest daughter of the late Rev. J. E. Trotter, of the Port Hope Baptist church, and Mrs. Trotter, to Louis Croly, of New York city. None but family friends and relatives were present at the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. J. C. McFarlane, of the Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Thos. Trotter, D.D. LL.D., of Toledo, uncle of the bride.

The bride, who was given away by Dr. Trotter, was daintily gowned in white net over white taffeta silk, and carried a handsome shower bouquet of white roses. Miss Mary Trotter, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, while Mr. A. J. Haddon, of Peterborough, officiated as groomsman.

Among those present were guests from Peterborough, New York, Toledo, Berlin, Meaford, Toronto, St. Catharines and Norwich.

Mr. and Mrs. Croly, the bride wearing a striking travelling gown of walnut broadcloth, left on the flyer for New York, where they will reside.—Port Hope Times.

SHEPPARD—MUNDELL

The marriage of Miss Olive Mundell, of Parkhill, and Mr. Edward Cornelius Sheppard, of Peterborough, took place at the Knox church Manse, 264 Rubidge street, on Tuesday evening. Rev. H. J. Keith officiated, and the contracting parties were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Killingbeck. They will reside on Stewart street.

BARRETT—FLAVELLE

Several hundreds of relatives and friends assembled at Sherbourne St. Methodist church at half past three o'clock to-day to witness the nuptials of Miss Mina Flavelle, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Flavelle, and Mr. William Wallace Barrett, son of the late Harold Barrett. Professor Jackson, of Victoria University, performed the ceremony, assisted by Dr. Rose, and Mr. Flavelle gave his daughter away. The church was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and Easter lilies. The organist, Mr. Arthur Blakely, presided over the musical part of the service, playing excerpts from Die Valkyrie and Mendelssohn's wedding march. A quartette choir greeted the bride with a burst of song, "Oh Love Divine and Tender," upon her entrance. The bridal robe was severely simple, but very rich, being composed of satin charmeuse with a very long train. The only trimming or ornamentation was on the bodice and sleeves, which were of silver net embroidery. The tulle veil was held by a coronet of orange blossoms and sprays of the same caught it to the hem of the train. The lovely bridal bouquet was a present of the bridegroom, who also presented his bride with a diamond necklace. The bridesmaids were Miss Clara Flavelle, sister, and Miss Edith Flavelle, cousin of the bride, and Miss Valda Bonnick. They wore pale turquoise Liberty satin draped frocks with silver trimming and their velvet and silver beplumed hats exactly matched. Their bouquets were of American Beauty roses, and they, with opal rings, were gifts from the bridegroom, who presented the groomsmen, Mr. John A. Fraser, Mr. Ralph Burns, Mr. B. Wickens, Mr. Douglas Henderson and Mr. Howard Barrett, his brother and best man, with silver-mounted walking canes. Mrs. Flavelle received the guests afterwards at Holwood, the beautiful family residence in Queen's Park. She stood in the large drawing room, wearing taupe charmeuse with an applique of velvet, fashioned in the new draped style, and a toque to match. She also was lavishly decorated with American Beauty roses. The bride and bridegroom stood in the palm room to receive the congratulations of their friends. During the afternoon they left for Bermuda, where the honeymoon will be spent, the bride travelling in a suit with a long coat of dahlia cheviot and toque of gold tulle with plumes to match, and ermine furs, the gift of her mother. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Barrett will settle down at 77 Chestnut Park, which has been presented to them by Mr. Flavelle.—Toronto News.

STOLE A HAT PIN WHILE INTOXICATED

Visitor From Campbellford Was Caught in the Act Was Allowed Off

David Cottrell came up from Campbellford yesterday to have a few schooners—something he could not get in his own town. He, unfortunately, took too many, and, being attracted by the sign in front of Milburn's jewellery store, denoting the big fire sale, he sauntered in, and after an inspection of a number of ladies' hat pins, decided to take one without paying for it. But he was spotted in the act, and an officer arrived and took him to the police station.

This morning his excuse for the theft was that he was intoxicated at the time. The magistrate dealt leniently with him and allowed him to go on the understanding that he was to take the afternoon train back to Campbellford.

Why Stanfield's Make Underwear

UP to 20 years ago, most everyone considered that all Underwear—no matter how well cut and made—would shrink and harden.

In those days, the makers were working on the wrong idea. They were trying to find a way to finish Underwear so that it would not shrink, instead of trying to find a way to get the shrink out the wool before the yarn went to the knitting machines.

The late C. E. Stanfield—who knew wool as only a man can know it who studies it from the sheep's back to the wearer's back—gave his attention to the problem for years.

Living in Nova Scotia, he soon realized that woolen underwear, and the best of pure woolen underwear, was the only kind that would and could protect the Canadian against the rigorous Canadian Winters. He found that as underwear was then made, he could not make woolen underwear that would not shrink, mat and harden. He devoted himself to this problem and after many years of experimenting, he finally discovered a method by which he could take the shrink out of the wool before the garments were knitted.

This method, improved and perfected, has made possible the immense business of Stanfields Limited, with a larger output of their special classes of Underwear than any other factory in Canada.

The Stanfields make underwear today because Canadian people find Stanfield's Underwear the most comfortable, the most durable, and the warmest for its weight.

The Stanfields are making more underwear every year because the buying public demands more of it. Popularity is a good test of quality.

In 3 standard weights—Light (Red Label), Medium (Blue Label) and Heavy (Black Label) and 17 other weights and qualities to suit the needs and requirements of every man and woman.

The best dealers everywhere handle Stanfield's Underwear. Catalogue showing styles, and sample of fabric, sent free for your address.

Owners of Old Houses Afraid to Make Sewer Connections—They Say Pipes Would Freeze

Several citizens were summoned to attend police court this morning to explain why they neglected to conform with the city by-law and make sewer connections with their premises.

Their excuse was that the houses, being old ones, the degree of warmth necessary to keep the pipes from freezing up in the cold weather, could not be obtained. Present conditions were looked after by them with all possible care to guard against injurious effects to the health of their neighbors.

The magistrate could not see how it would be possible to make any exception in their case, but made an enlargement of one week, in order to see what could be done.

Reduced by Days

Comparisons are interesting when distances of travel and time are in the balance. In a new country like Canada the advancement of great transportation systems create some amazing differences from old conditions. A case in point: On the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway through to Prince Rupert, B.C., the time spent in reaching the East from Alaska and the great North-west coast will be reduced by days.

In travelling from Alaska to Chicago or the east by the G.T.P. route the passenger will be able to take train at Prince Rupert and be in Chicago on the same day that the steamship which he quitted at Prince Rupert arrives in Seattle, a saving of three days.

CHOIR OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH AT OMEMEE

On Monday evening a fowl supper drew a big house, and the auditorium of the church was crowded to the doors when the programme began. The Rev. D. H. Currie occupied the chair in a pleasing and efficient manner.

The choir of St. Paul's church, Peterborough, furnished the larger part of the entertainment, which was punctuated with bright and congratulatory addresses by the Rev. Mr. Earl of Christ church and Rev. Mr. Griffith, of Bethel.

The singing of the choir was much appreciated, and more particularly in its ensemble parts, which were of superlative proficiency.

The proceeds of the supper and concert amounted to $115, making a total of $200 from the anniversary services. The Presbyterians are indeed to be congratulated.—Omemee Mirror.

General DeLuque, the new Spanish Minister of War, says Ferrer was legally condemned to death.

ANNUAL MEETING OF HISTORICAL SOCIETY HELD

The annual meeting of the City and County of Peterborough Historical Society was held last evening in the pleasant parlors of the Y.M.C.A., the President, Mr. T. A. S. Hay, C.E. in the chair.

Amongst those present were: Mrs Birdsall. Messrs. Richard Hall, J. H. Burnham, Cornish, Elcome, Smith, W. J. Dunlop and Dr. Burnham. The report of the secretary-treasurer for 1909 was read and adopted. It showed the satisfactory condition of the Society. The two points under consideration for 1910 are the condition of the specimens in the Museum, which Mr. Elcome, the taxidermist, thought needed looking after and a better setting. The other point was the proposed or supposed removal of the Museum to the top flat of the new Carnegie Library building. Although a proposition to that effect had been made and discussed before, nothing further had reached the Society concerning it. The Secretary was instructed to find out how the matter stood. The Society decided that it would be necessary for it to secure at least one position on the new Library Board in the event of removal in order that the Society might retain control of the Museum. A singular fact is that the register shows that the proportion of out-of-visitors to the city people who register is about nine to one.

A Magnificent Scenic Route

On October 15th the last spike was driven on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway near the crossing of the Wabigon River connecting Winnipeg with Lake Superior.

The grades on the completed line are lower than any other completed line to the head of the lakes, and are four-tenths against it.

Towns are being stakes out along the line by the Ontario Government who will supervise the sale of them. The road opens up a rich mining and timber country, as well as a magnificent scenic route.

Scene from Clyde Fitch's greatest comedy, "Girls," at the Grand next Wednesday evening, Nov. 3 Plan opens Monday morning.

FOUNDATION HAS BEEN COMPLETED

High Water a Handicap to Contractors at New Smith Street Bridge

Very favorable progress is being made on the construction of the new Smith street bridge under the direction of Messrs. E. and F. Conroy. The contractors have completed the foundations and are now building the castings for the piers and abutments. They have been handicapped a little by the high water, but they expect that the Quaker Oats Company will lower the water so that they can get over the difficult part with more speed. Messrs. Conroy have a gang of nearly twenty-five men at work and they are rushing things. The lower part of the bridge will be completed this fall unless the weather turns too severe, and in the spring only the top and the arches will remain to be completed. The Smith street bridge will be an ornament to the city as well as the most useful and permanent structure in the city.

Y.M.C.A. CLASSES WELL ATTENDED

Much Enthusiasm Shown by Members in Preparing for Season's Work

Much enthusiasm is being shown by the members of the Young's Men's Christian Association in the gym. The classes are being well attended, and under the direction of the physical director much progress has been made. The new game of volley ball has been introduced, and promises to be very popular. A league will be formed in the near future. The boxing classes, which are taught by Mr. Chris Graham, are being well attended, and several of the pupils are becoming very proficient with the padded mitts. The physical director has already started practices for the country circus to be put on around Christmas, and the novelty should make a big hit when it is presented. Basketball will soon be in full swing again, and last year's teams are getting busy again.

Windsor's population is 18,192, an increase of 363.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

HIGH PRAISE FOR W. HUGHES AND THE VERNON BAND

A decided compliment was paid to the Vernon, B.C., band when it was selected to play at the New Westminster, B.C., Provincial Fair this fall. The New Westminster Fair is an annual exhibition which is practically the same in relation to British Columbia as the Toronto exhibition is to Ontario. The following reference to the excellent playing of the band under Mr. Walter Hughes' direction and of Mr. Hughes' ability as a soloist is from the Vancouver Province, one of the leading dailies of Western Canada:

"The strains of music attracted the dampened visitors to the indistrial building, which was the centre of attraction last night. It was here that the band concert was given and the hall was crowded. The Vernon Fire Brigade Band was the organization on duty and there were many surprised people in the audience for the class of music was most enjoyable and Vernon should be proud of its band. Under the leadership of Mr. W. Hughes, the band, consisting of some 35 members, rendered a programme of high-class music and came in for an enthusiastic reception. It is well balanced and perfectly trained and the best advertisement Vernon could have sent to the fair. It numbers some highly trained soloists in its ranks too.

Mr. Hughes is a talented soloist and was encored for his cornet selection."

Mr. F. W. Boyd, an ex-army man who was for many years in the Scots Guards band, and now piccolo player in the Vernon band was the other soloist on the programme and is spoken of as a very accomplished player.

THE SIMULTANEOUS MISSION

In view of the evangelistic services which begin in the city next Sabbath the following article from the pen of a distinguished Presbyterian minister in Chicago, Rev. A. Z. Conrad, D.D., on what the Simultaneous Mission stands for, and what may be expected from it, merits the careful consideration of all. Dr. Conrad says:—

"To be definite, what is the object of the Simultaneous Evangelistic Campaign, and what may it be expected to do?

"To arrest attention. To stop the absorbing truth for pleasure and temporal gratification, and fix the thought upon things permanent. To impress the thoughtless and indifferent with the realities and finalities of religion. Then as the great vital fundamental and controlling purpose of the campaign to get men to commit themselves to Jesus Christ as their Saviour and Lord. To cause people to see the folly of depending on anything other than Jesus Christ for salvation from the guilt of sin and the love of sinning. To reclaim lost men and women and create in the heart new hope and in the life the lost image of the Master. To revitalize the church, making its pulse beat more rhythmic with the heart of God, and more harmonious with the Divine will. To elevate the whole ethical tone of society, making things odious which are wrong and creating a public opinion which will brand as infamous much that now goes unchallenged. To create such a sense of justice and honor as will improve the business ethics of the whole city. To make righteousness and virtue attractive and worth fighting for everywhere and at all times. To lessen the difficulties of living virtuously, honorably and devoutly. To double the delights of life under all circumstances and increase daily enjoyment and zest in all of life's honorable pursuits. To decrease, and so far as possible, eradicate selfishness and self-seeking, by emphasizing the sacrifice of Jesus. To develop a sense of brotherhood which does not exist or subsist merely by the fact of God as Creator, but which results from a sense of brotherhood of God, realized only in the Saviourhood of Jesus Christ. To sweeten and sanctify home life by producing mutual love and fidelity. To create a new sense of civic honor so that all the duties of citizenship will be performed from higher motives and in greater loyalty to our country. To unite sects and denominations so fully that lines of demarcation will be scarcely distinguishable, so that the absorbing passion will be to make Jesus Christ a reality in daily life and practice.

"To gain a new appraisement of the values of the things with which we have to do, thus centering the energy of men and women on things that are worth while.

"To develop a true national philanthropy which will sympathize without patronizing and contribute without impoverishing.

"To increase happiness, lessen misery, awaken hope and destroy despair, develop faith and make the beginnings of Heavenly felicity a reality right here and now.

"Are these worthy objects of effort? If they are, then it is our privilege to help on every one of these things by promoting, supporting and sustaining the simultaneous and otherwisely conducted revival movements."

PROTECTION FOR THE FARMER

Liberal M.P. Wants Protection for Farm Produce—U.S. Has Long End

A recent Ottawa despatch says:—W. O. Sealey, Liberal M.P. for Wentworth, who is in the city, is urging an increase in tariff on agricultural products. He argues that protection should be extended to farmers as well as to the manufacturers and also quotes statistics to show inequality of Canadian exports from United States in agricultural products. The United States has by far the long end of the business. Mr. Sealey wants the government to put up the tariff on butter, cheese, pork, eggs, hay and horses.

Settling the West

The gigantic colonization scheme for Western Canada by the Robbins Limited Company is creating interest. Messrs. F. B. Robbins, J. R. Nelson and R. S. Perry returned from the west recently after having been over the route of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Their intention is to choose options on the land along the Grand Trunk Pacific, opening offices of the company. They have home offices in London, Glasgow and Berlin, and from the time emigrants leave the shores of their native land until they arrive in the new country and settle on some farm, they will be looked after. It is the intention of picking out for colonization the more thrifty of the agrarian class in the old land. Speaking of the west, Mr. Nelson said he was particularly struck with the wonderful progress which seemed to pervade the very air. Considering the age of roadbed of the Grand Trunk Pacific he considered the surface and alignments marvellous. The towns along its route were also progressive, particularly Wainwright, the terminal for the present passenger service.

SPORTING NEWS

CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE WILL MEET IN THE NEAR FUTURE

What are the prospects for the Peterborough city hockey league for the coming season? While it will be some time yet before the puck chasers will be called upon to perform, the constitution of the league calls for the annual meeting to be held on the first of November or as soon after this date as possible. The meeting will likely be called in the near future and according to reports there will be no shortage in hockey teams. All of last years' teams will likely be in line with the exception of the Lakefield seven, who have suffered considerably by the removal from the village of several of the best players. A new club which will bear watching this season is the Park street A. C., who, it is understood will be represented by a fast seven. There should be an endeavor made to get at least two outside teams in the league as it creates more interest and aids the league financially as well. The ticket question is liable to receive considerable discussion and it is an important one. Several of the clubs are not satisfied with this system and will put up a big fight to have it abolished.

RUGBY

To-morrow's "big four" rugby fixtures are Hamilton at Montreal, and Ottawa at Argos. In the Intercollegiate, Toronto plays at Ottawa and McGill at Queen's. In the senior O.R.F.U. Parkdale and T.A.A.C. meet.

C. M. Hays denies that the G.T.R. will tunnel the Detroit river.

ATHLETICS

"I think Robinson must be a very old man, and 50 years behind the times," remarked J. J. McLeod, physical director of the Central Y.M.C.A. "He must have lived all his life in the backwoods. He isn't abreast of things at all. Nor can he have associated with virile men, or he would have known that athletic associations in connection with churches have been doing grand work. There is nothing better or more up-to-date to keep, and interest the boys and young men in church work than church athletic organizations. He must be an idiot who expects lively young men to sit around a church library reading Pansy books. No man of gumption would make such senseless, uncalled for, and wholly untruthful remark."

To all of which every athlete and lover of athletics in Canada will cry "Carried!"—Star.

Jimmy George will be sent to Athens next year, providing the Olympic games are held in Greece. The citizens of Beaverton are convinced that in the winner of the last Herald race they have the man that can bring the Marathon honors to Canada, and if he is not sent by the C.A.A.U. there will be no trouble in raising enough money here to send him.

THE RING

"Jack Johnson says,—I will insist on only one point," he said, "and that is that there shall be a division of the purse, with both a winner's and loser's end. Jeffries can name the percentage."

Johnson was accompanied by George Little, his manager, who also stated that his pugilist in charge was anxious to sign up with Jeffries.

"We won't say a thing in the way of an immediate agreement," Little said. "If Jeffries is as ready as we are, it oughtn't to take more than half an hour to draw up the articles."

Washington, Pa., Oct. 28.—Rev. J. H. Jeffries, of Fremen, Fairfield county, Ohio, father of Jim Jeffries, the heavyweight pugilist, declared here that his son and Jack Johnson will never face each other in the prize ring.

"Jim will never fight Johnson. He will not enter the ring again, and would not fight a negro anyway. This is the only straight news there is concerning Jim, and you can bank on it being gospel truth."

SPORTING TALK

Joe Kelly has signed a contract to manage the Maple Leafs again next year.

To-day will be a memorable one for New York. Jack Johnson and James J. Jeffries meet to talk fight.

The Hamilton Spectator accuses some of the runners in the race conducted by the opposition sheet, the Herald, with resorting to crooked ways. We have no fault to find with the Examiner road race.

FAST GAME FOR TO-MORROW

Local Junior Rugby Team are in Great Shape for Big Struggle in Lindsay

The local Junior O.R.F.U. team are all ready for the game in Lindsay tomorrow. There may be two changes in the lineup as Denison is on the injured list and Wood is out of the city. Some of the members will leave tomorrow morning and the remainder on the noon train by way of Millbrook. The team is confident of winning and can be depended upon to make a big bid for the championship of the district.

The Lindsay fourteen claim they will have no trouble in overcoming the lead of four points against them and eventually win out. They have been hard at work practicing all week and will lineup in better shape to-morrow than in the last game.

DELIGHTFUL PROGRAMME GIVEN BY MUSIC PUPILS OF ST. MARY'S CONVENT

At St. Peter's Hall Last Night — The Annual Recital — Prizes and Testimonials Presented to the Successful Candidates

The annual recital of the music pupils of St. Mary's Convent at St. Peter's Hall last night was an unqualified success in every way, thanks to the capable and painstaking instruction of Sisters Theodosia and Mercedes, of the music teaching staff of the convent, and the talent and adaptability of the pupils taking part. There was a large attendance of the parents of the pupils and their friends, and the programme was received with evident appreciation. The programme was the same as originally prepared, with the exception of one number, Miss L. Fife, who was to have played a piano selection, being unable to appear, through illness, and Helen McCarthy, a clever pupil nine years of age took her place. Miss McCarthy sang a highly appreciated humorous selection, "Father Will Settle the Bill," and was enthusiastically encored and sang "Always Me."

All the selections were thoroughly enjoyed, and the "Toy Symphony" seemed to please the audience particularly. Twelve juvenile artists took part, and the effect was most pleasing.

A feature of the evening was the presentation of medals and testimonials. Rev. Father McColl, who occupied the chair in a most happy manner, made the presentations, and at the conclusion congratulated those contributing to the programme for entertaining and interesting evening they had provided. He spoke of the refining influence of a musical education, and of the value of culture and the higher education in the various walks of life.

BYE-ELECTION IN NORTH MIDDLESEX

Liberals Fear They Will Lose the Seat

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Oct. 29.—The writ for the bye-election in North Middlesex will be issued without delay and the election will likely be held in the last week of November or the first of December. Local Liberals fear that they will lose this seat, bringing down their representation to eighteen, as Duncan Ross' majority was only 100 and they do not expect to get as strong a candidate. This will be the first election since the Government was returned last year, as the Algoma vacancy was filled by acclamation.

COMPEL "SOBER SUE" TO MORE THAN SMILE

Many Laughs in "Girls" Which Comes to the Grand Opera House on November 3rd

"Girls," by Clyde Fitch, with the firm name of Shuberts as producing managers, is about the best inducement the most critical theatre-goer desires, and needless to say, thousands have profited by witnessing the play at Daly's Theatre, New York, where it ran for a year. "Girls" is a comedy that would compel "Sober Sue" to more than smile. It is constructed along strictly original lines and brimful of situations that compel laughs to flow incessantly; and while this seems to be the author's objective point, he has not overlooked the serious or sentimental side. "Girls" contains a pretty love story so cleverly interwoven in the plot—which is not disclosed until the end—that the interest does not lessen. "Girls" is a tonic for all ages and many a girl will profit by the good, wholesome lesson it teaches.

"Girls" will be seen at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday evening, Nov. 3rd.

The Wishing Ring

The Shuberts are to be thanked for the exquisitely dainty offering provided an appreciative audience at the Grand last night when Marguerite Clark and a satisfactory assisting company appeared in Owen Davis' charming play, "The Wishing Ring." It was a great relief to note the utter lack of anything foreign or superficial about the piece, and the entire absence of unnecessary characters and situations, which happily in "The Wishing Ring" are not required at any time to stimulate the tone of the play. It is simple and interesting, and in its simplicity lies its charm and highly entertaining qualities. The action of the play runs smoothly and evenly. No startling surprises are furnished, but a growing appreciation becomes natural to the audience as in the case of a reader finding real enjoyment in the succeeding chapters of a well written book. The plot is logical and intelligent, and has been given refined embellishment by the author. Refinement, in fact, is marked throughout, and there is not a single suggestive or embarrassing line or situation from the first to the last curtain. The stage pictures in "The Wishing Ring" are productions of art and are speaking testimonials to the skill and delicacy of the scenic artist, and excellent taste on the part of the producers. All the settings are rich and descriptive without being too elaborate, and provide a delightfully natural background.

No more charming or winsome actress than dainty little Marguerite Clark ever captivated a Peterborough audience. Miss Clark is diminutive of stature, but has a remarkably big and fascinating personality, and a most bewitching and delightful manner. She was wonderfully entertaining and clever as Sally, the parson's daughter, and is a comiedienne of thoroughly pleasing methods. In her more serious moods she was convincing and appealing. Robert Dempster, as the young man of good birth, masquerading as the gardener, ably supported the star, and the rest of the company ably lived up to the demands of their various parts.

Wonderful Jasper Park

The Commissioner of Dominion Parks who has recently returned from Jasper Park and Pass in the Rocky Mountains on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is enthusiastic in his praises of the scenery in that district. The opening of this new wonderland by the construction of the railway will add another to the attractions of life in the Province of Alberta. Vigorous construction next summer will put the Grand Trunk Pacific steel into the new Park and open its wonders to those who have the time, money and inclination for an outing. Switzerland has made perhaps as much from its scenery as it could have made from agriculture had its surface been more level, and the Province of Alberta in the Jasper region has a Switzerland declared by competent judges to be quite as attractive as that to which the wealthy of Europe and United States now flock, and built on a much larger scale.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

CREWE IS MENTIONED

He is Talked of as Next Governor-General for Canada ---Son-in-law of Lord Roseberry.

Ottawa, Oct. 30.—The cabled announcement from London that Canada's next Governor-General is likely to be a member of the Asquith Cabinet, is taken in well-informed circles here to refer to the present Colonial Secretary, Earl Crewe. It is believed here that he would be the most likely first choice of the Imperial Government, as successor to Earl Grey, if he desires the position. Earl Crewe is a son-in-law of Lord Rosebery, and even if the Unionist party should come into power next year in Great Britain, the Colonial Secretary would probably still be a not improbable choice for the Canadian Governorship. His appointment or that of Lord Morley, who is also mentioned for the position, would be well received here.

EARL CREWE.

The Earl of Crewe is a man of many parts. In addition to being a statesman of note, he is an art connoisseur, a bibliophile, a writer of verse and a keen sportsman. Lord Crewe entered political life twenty-six years ago as assistant private secretary to Earl Granville in the Foreign Office, and has never been long out of the struggle since that time. He was Lord-in-waiting to Queen Victoria in 1886, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland from 1892 to 1895, and Lord President of the Council from December, 1905, until he became Colonial Secretary in April last. He holds, in addition, the offices of Lord Privy Seal and Government leader in the House of Lords. His lordship is the son of Baron Houghton, who is better known, perhaps, as Monkton-Milnes, the writer, conversationalist and kindly patron of literary men. He is a man of great wealth, owning some 26,000 acres of land, including rich mineral areas in Yorkshire and Staffordshire. Besides, he is allied with some of the wealthiest and most distinguished families in the United Kingdom through his wife.

LINE FROM HAMILTON TO LONDON

Woodstock, Ont., Oct. 30.—W. S. Dinnick of Toronto, and a couple of New York capitalists who are behind the projected line from Brantford through to London, were in the city yesterday looking over the local line. They said that now the financial outlook had brightened, immediate steps would be taken to build the connecting links between Brantford and Woodstock and Ingersoll to London, making an unbroken line from London to Hamilton. Considerable money will also be spent on improving the line between this city and Ingersoll.

BADLY MANGLED

R.O. Rogers G.T.R. Brakeman Crushed at Garden Hill While Coupling Cars To-Day

Special to the Review.

Millbrook, Oct. 30.—R. O. Rogers, of Lindsay, a Grand Trunk brakeman, was terribly injured at Garden Hill this morning. He was braking on the mixed freight from Port Hope which reaches Millbrook about eleven o'clock and the accident occurred while he was coupling cars. His left arm and left leg were badly mangled and may have to be amputated. The fingers of the left hand were also badly crushed. The unfortunate man was attended by Dr. Beatty, of Garden Hill, and Dr. Turner, of Millbrook, and he was taken to the hospital at Lindsay.

WAR ON "RATS" IN KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, Oct. 30.—"On and after Nov. 1 all lady clerks and employes must discontinue the wearing of 'rats' in their hair dress. Please govern yourself accordingly.

"A. B. Richards, District Supt."

This order, issued from the office of the superintendent of the Postal Telegraph Co. here, has become a matter of grave concern to the women clerks and operators in the employ of that company in this city.

They declare that not only will the order compel them to appear out of date, but that the modern feminine hats cannot be worn without the universal "rat."

The general opinion among the women affected, is that Mr. Richards will find it difficult to enforce the ruling.

How the Drills Would Work at the Base of M. Flammarion's Gigantic Geothermic Pit.

M. Camille Flammarion's idea of a great pit from which the internal heat of the earth could be extracted for the practical purpose of running factories and workshops is, of course, at present quite a hypothetical project, says the Sphere, but it is none less interesting in view of the constant warnings which scientific economists are voicing as to the coming shortage of coal, on which, with the exception of waterfall energy, our present civilization is based.

CREATE COURSE IN HARBOR ENGINEERING

Montreal, Oct. 30.—McGill University has decided to create a course in harbor engineering. This is an immediate effect of the decision of the Government to create a Canadian navy and of the general harbor improvement tendency of the times. ROYAL SWINDLER WAS ARRESTED

Paris, Oct. 30.—A man about 25 years of age, who says he is called Count Cubata, but who is really Archduke Karl Heinrich, son of Archduke Otho, and a woman aged 50 years, who has a certificate showing she was married to Count Cubata in 1905, have been arrested on the charge of swindling tradesmen. The couple occupied a handsome apartment on the Avenue Kleber. The woman says she was born in New York. She was formerly the wife of an American named Beck or Peck, who is now dead. She and Count Cubata took the apartment in the Avenue Kleber a month ago. They had little baggage, but were accompanied by seven children. The principal charge against them is that they procured 200,000 francs worth of jewels without paying for them. Half of the jewelry was found in their possession.

MAN LOOMS UP IN DYNAMITE CASE

Chatham, Ont., Oct. 30.—A report that Mrs. Mary Rumble, accused of dynamiting her husband's home, had confessed, is false. On the contrary, she has retained O. L. Lewis, K.C., and W. G. Richards to defend her and will fight to the limit.

It is believed that there is a man in the case. The night the explosion occurred a man was seen driving toward the Rumble house. He had a companion, but whether man or woman, could not be ascertained. The horse had a white face. The same was seen at the time the Rumbles were burned out of house and home a number of years ago.

NAVAL FIGHT REPORTED

Greek Mutineers Attacked Ironclads With Destroyers, But Were Beaten Off---Vessels Damaged.

Athens, Oct. 30.—Athens was startled at 4.35 o'clock yesterday afternoon by the sound of a vigorous bombardment, which lasted about a quarter of an hour and then ceased completely. It is stated on good authority that Lieut. Tibaldos, leader of the naval mutineers, who quitted the capital on Wednesday, and who yesterday seized the marine arsenal at Lyons on the famous "Sea-born Salamis," attacked three ironclads with a flotilla of torpedo-boat destroyers, that the attack failed, and that one of the destroyers had been badly damaged by a shell and driven ashore. The destroyers after the engagement withdrew into the harbor at Salamis, according to the information received at the Ministry of Marine.

KING GEORGE.
Who Is Anxious to Resign the Greek Crown.

The casualties of the loyal fleet in the engagement were two men wounded. The losses of the mutineers are not known, but of their three destroyers one was disabled and another took to flight in the direction of Eleusis and disappeared in the darkness. The third succeeded in reaching the Poros Naval Station, where, however, it met a hostile reception and was compelled to put to sea again. The loyal fleet is cruising off the Piraeus to-day, in order to prevent any attempt at landing or any attack of the town, and also with the object of closing the Straits of Salamis. No torpedoes were discharged during the fight.

WHAT GOVERNMENT PROPOSES TO DO FOR IMPERIAL DEFENCE

First Step Contemplated by Premier and Cabinet is the Establishment of Docking Facilities and Repair Plants.

Ottawa, Oct. 30.—The part that the Canadian Government means to play in the scheme of Imperial naval defence was officially outlined yesterday evening.

It will be seen that Canada's portion of the great program, which has stirred the British Empire from end to end, is one which will early prove of value to the British navy.

The question of prompt assistance to Britain is to-day, broadly speaking, the only point of difference between Canadians. In the hope of rendering speedy aid, some are arguing for a direct contribution to Britain, believing that if Canadian aid is confined to the establishment of a Canadian navy, it will not be effective until years after a crisis may have been reached, with Canada a helpless spectator.

The expedient which the Government has hit upon to meet this consideration is the early establishment of docking facilities and repairing plants. It is understood that the Imperial authorities have stated that facilities of this kind will be of greater practical value than the early establishment of a naval force.

Accordingly, the Canadian Government has taken steps to bring about the erection, as soon as possible, of dry docks and repairing plants on the Atlantic coast, in the first place. Afterwards the same policy will be pursued on the Pacific coast.

These, then, will be pushed forward as soon as a definite understanding has been reached between the Government and the leading British firms with which negotiations are now proceeding.

The scheme must not be confounded with the proposition laid before the Government a few days ago by a delegation representing all the shipping interests in Canada, who asked for assistance for a scheme to build a dry dock at St. John, N.B., and a dry dock and repairing plant at Levis, Que. This was entirely a commercial undertaking, and the subsidy, which is likely to be granted, will be in the same category as subsidies to railways, or iron and steel bounties.

The arrangements which are being made with British firms will, when completed, be the concern of the Public Works Department.

The shipbuilding firms, which are now negotiating are Harland and Wolff of Belfast, along with Allans, Swan and Hunter of Newcastle-on-Tyne, and Vickers & Son, and Maxim.

There are three distinct proposals. One is to erect dry docks and repairing plants for battleships on the Atlantic coast only, which proposal Harland and Wolff favor, the second is to build a dry dock at Montreal and a repairing plant on the Gulf of St. Lawrence, or at Halifax, which is put forward by Swan & Hunter, and the third is to build dry docks and repairing plants on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. Vickers, Son & Maxim favor this idea.

While it is impossible to forecast accurately what the Canadian Government do eventually, it is probable that an arrangement will be made with all, and not one of the British firms, that a dry dock will be built at St. John, N.B., there being one at Halifax already, and that repairing plants will be land down at both Halifax and St. John.

R. L. Borden, Conservative leader, when questioned this morning as to what attitude the opposition will be on the Governments' naval proposals when they are introduced in the House, said:

"So far as the Conservative party is concerned, the question of Canada's participation in the organization and maintenance of Imperial naval defence rests to-day exactly where it did when the unanimous resolution of Parliament was passed on March 29 last.

"That resolution was so modified as to permit of a special contribution in time of emergency. Whether such emergency existed then or is imminent to-day is within the knowledge of the British Government.

"The report of the proceedings and conclusions of the recent Imperial Defence Conference, when laid before our Parliament, will doubtless throw some light on the subject.

"Canada should take no action which does not receive the unqualified approval of the British naval experts."

NEGROES MISSING AFTER A MURDER

Meridian, Miss., Oct. 30.—W. H. Palmer, a Kemper County farmer, who came to Meridian on Thursday, reported that four negroes probably had been lynched in Kemper County, Missouri, last Tuesday, as a result of the murder of a peddler named Kahn. Kahn's head was cut off with an axe, and after his money and goods were stolen, the body was placed in his cart and the horse started down the road. White farmers who found the horse, cart and body, also discovered some of the stolen goods in a negro cabin. Four negroes were charged with the crime, and one is said to have confessed, implicating the other three. Palmer declares all four negroes have disappeared.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

ROBINSON GOES TO KINGSTON FOR TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS

Jury Acquits on Murder Charge For Lack of Evidence to Corroborate That of Mrs. Robinson—Prisoner Pleads Guilty to Three Other Charges.

Sudbury, Oct. 30.—James Robinson was yesterday afternoon acquitted of the charge of murder, in having assisted in the slaying a child born to him by a young daughter, but was sentenced to twenty-eight years imprisonment in Kingston Penitentiary on other charges to which he had pleaded guilty, while the jury were deliberating on the capital crime.

Justice Magee, in imposing sentence, said: "You appear before me confessing guilt of the most horrible crimes conceivable in a Christian country, and you have shown a nature so entirely devoid of any sense of morality or right, or care of your offspring and the decency of Christian society, that it is difficult for me to say anything to you. I hope it will never again be paralleled in Canada."

His lordship then sentenced Robinson to twenty-eight years, divided, fourteen years for incest against Ellen, his daughter; fourteen years for incest against his daughter Jessie, to begin at conclusion of first sentence, and twenty-eight years for rape of his daughter Maggie, to run concurrently with other sentences.

As Robinson is a man of fifty, the sentence is virtually a life sentence. He listened to the judge, with bowed head and sank back to his seat dazed, burying his face in his hands.

On the murder charge, the jury were out two hours. At first, three of the jury were willing to convict. Justice Magee, in his charge, explained that there was only the direct evidence of Mrs. Robinson against him, and her evidence, as that of an accomplice should be carefully weighed, as the experience of law was that corroboration was needful.

The evidence of Mrs. Robinson yesterday morning was admitted by Justice Magee after granting to the defence a reserve for appeal purposes. Justice Magee did not warn her that she could decline to testify against her husband, saying he would leave that to herself. She wept at intervals. She said it was after conversation with her husband that the babe had been smothered between mattresses. There were no witnesses for the defence.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterboroug Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

A LOCAL EVIDENCE OF GETTING OUT OF THE BUSIMESS

Peterborough citizens will need to exercise care before accepting arguments against local option as advanced by the liquor interests for history shows that gross ignorance and misrepresentation are weapons aften used against the banishing of the bar. This may be seen in the fact that at the time of the vote for the reduction of licenses in Peterborough many citizens were made believe that the taxes of Separate school supporters would be increased and some who were then in the liquor business in Peterborough were supposed to pay much to the Separate school. What has happened? Since that time ten Catholics have dropped out of the business and with what result? The taxes on Separate school supporters have been lower, the schools have been better equipped and the teachers have received higher salaries.

Is it not evident to everybody that in every conceivable department of civic life there has been increasing benefit?

PUT IT AWAY

I have no harsh word to speak of any. The liquor traffic is the awful heritage of a less wise, less kind, and less enlightened past.

For its existence in this gentler age we are all more or less responsible. Let us combine to put it away, "with malice toward none, with charity for all."--FRANCES E. WILLARD.

WHAT LIQUOR HAS DONE

As Peterborough citizens reviewed their papers during the past few days they must have been struck by the reports of horrible crimes for which whiskey is responsible. Take, for example, Walter Blythe, who pounded the head of his wife into a pulp with a poker. He was so maddened with whiskey that his actions were the actions of a demon.

Remember that sad and broken-hearted mother, Mrs. Robinson, with such a blighted life, waiting for her death sentence to be carried into effect as the result of the unnatural and brutish outrages committed by her husband while under the control of whiskey. Then poor Joe Hunter, of Bobcaygeon, the hotelkeeper, wife murderer and suicide, who begged his friends in a note not to blame his wife but whiskey.

Why should the question of compensation be even mentioned? Yet some weak-kneed people call local option confiscation.

PROBITION IS NOT CONFISCATORY

The clearest thing that has appeared in the daily press in years in reference to the liquor men's claim that prohibition is, or amounts to, "confiscation," is the following from the Detroit News:—

"The liquor business has no standing before the law. It has no rights. It is merely tolerated by society. A license is not a property. It is not negotiable. When it expires that is the end of the State's special obligation.

"The contract has been fulfilled and is dead—what is there to do about it?"

There can be no compensation for a business that ruins and destroys human life.

COMPENSATION FOR PROBITION

In the course of the foregoing article "The Independent" says: "By local option and State law the area of prohibition is rapidly spreading. The saloon business is being made more disreputable, and the brewers and distillers less admired members of society. They know they are in a risky sort of business, like the manufacture of explosives. If they suffer from hostile legislation they have no right to complain; they know the nature of their business, and no public spirit or private generosity on their part can purchase them the privilege to do a public injury and a multitude of private wrongs."

It is clearly inconsistent for a government to license and protect a business, in the progress of which vast sums of money are invested, and then by a reversal of its position enter upon a policy of prohibition and endeavour to destroy the same business, but the mistake is in following the first and not the second line of action. The saloon is at war with mankind. The liquor dealer understands this, or should do so. He is failing to reap a harvest from the suffering and misery of his fellow creatures. He knows the efforts constantly being made in favor of prohibition. He knows, or he can easily know, the degree of success attained in this direction. And when he invests his thousands, or millions, in the liquor business, he does it at his own risk. If prohibition destroys his business, he is entitled to nothing. He has been giving the public drunkenness and misery instead of value received. He has too long grown rich through his unproductive and destructive trade. The government owes him nothing. The people owe him nothing but suppression. He need expect nothing in the way of compensation for his business.

The whole ground of argument, however, is fallacious, because it is always assumed that a good hotel will not thrive without all the foul accompaniments of the saloon. Wherever men have gone in to succeed, there has been success, and the proprietors themselves have acknowledged that they felt that they were better men and more highly respected for at once it changes them from being malefactors to that of benefactors of any city.

TEMPERANCE HOTELS

When many good temperance hotels are found all over England, Scotland and Ireland, some of them earning as high as twelve per cent. on the investment, in a country where dividends are usually lower than with us and where abstainers are much fewer, it is surprising that we have hardly half a dozen hotels outside of prohibition territory worthy to be compared with the West Central of London or the Cockburn of Edinburgh. It is certainly one of the fields where philanthropic investments on a paying basis might be even more wisely made than in model lodging houses, for these last are mostly used fro men already impoverished by drink, while the hotels might save many of the travelling men before they are caught in the temptations incident to every hotel where liquors are sold. The common saying that "a hotel can not succeed without a bar," means no more than to say a man could make more money by becoming a pugilist than as a physician. Hundreds of hotels have paid as reasonable a return as average investments without the blood money of a bar.

THE MAYOR OF ATLANTA, GA., ON STATE PROBITION

Large cities in the States are making a success of local option or prohibition. So can we in Peterborough. This is what the Mayor of Atlanta, Ga., says about prohibition:

"I don't believe the city of Alabama has been damaged by prohibition. The places that were formerly occupied the whiskey saloons, have all been rented to the near-beer dealers or other lines of business.

"Real estate values have not decreased in Atlanta during the one year and a half of Prohibition, but on the contrary, they have been fully maintained, and are to-day the highest in the history of our city.

"Building permits to the amount of $3,714.55 have been issued during the past seven and a half months of 1909, which exceeds any corresponding period of any other year.

"The Prohibition law is being enforced in Atlanta. The blind tiger, where whiskey is being illegally sold, is hard to find, and I believe the number of them is decreasing. The arrest of 264 blind tigers attests the fact that the law is being enforced.

"As to the statement frequently made that the Prohibition law can not be enforced where public sentiment is against it, I desire to say, that in my opinion, an honest and courageous police judge, backed by a mayor of the same kind and by superior court judges who also believe in the enforcement of the law, will, in cities of 100,000 to 200,000 inhabitants, very soon create public sentiment which will stop the illegal sale of whiskey or reduce it to a minimum. A study of the arrests shows that the drunks are far behind the the times of the whiskey saloon.

"A great deal of whiskey is being legally shipped into the city from other States and many cases of drunkenness may be attributed to this source of supply."

NOT THE HOTELMAN EXACTLY BUT YOU

If every citizen would remember that he is a partner in the business and that it is allowed to exist because he allows it by his vote there would be a little more conscience regarding the matter. We adopt the language of one of the foremost leaders of Reform on the continent, when he says:—

"Does someone say, 'What can I do to hasten this glad day?' Do what you can and do not underestimate the power of little influences. 'Shamgar, what is that in thy hand?' 'Only an ox-goad.' 'Come, dedicate it to God and go slay the Philistines.' 'David, what is in thy hand?' 'Only a sling and a small pebble.' 'Come, dedicate them to God and go slay the giant.' 'My little lad, what is that in thy hand?' 'Only five loaves and two little fishes.' 'Come, dedicate them to God; they will feed thousands and have basketfuls left.' 'My brother, what is that in thy hand?' 'Only a little ballot.' 'Come, dedicate it to God and go cast it for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, and may God bless it to the overthrow of all that is wrong and the triumph of all that is right.'"

Only Medicine That Did Any Good

After Suffering Tortures For Years, This Lady Found Happy Relief In "Fruit-a-tives".

Frankville, Ont., June 11th, 1908.

"I have received most wonderful benefit from taking "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered for years from headaches and pain in the back, and I consulted doctors and took every remedy obtainable without any relief. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives" and this was the only medicine that ever did me any real good. I took several boxes altogether, and now I am entirely well of all my dreadful headaches and backaches.

MRS. FRANK EATON

I take "Fruit-a-tives" occasionally still, but I am quite cured of a trouble that was said to be incurable. I give this testimony voluntarily, in order that others who suffer as I suffered may try this wonderful medicine and be cured."

(Signed) MRS. FRANK EATON.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial box, 25c —or sent post-paid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

DANGERS OF THE MARATHON.

A Craze Which Is Working Much Harm to Our Boys.

"Who is fit to run a Marathon?" inquired a newspaper head-line that I saw recently, writes John H. Girdner, M.D., in Munsey's.

The answer is: "Nobody." No human heart can be trained to a condition that will permit its owner to run 26 miles at top speed without exposing him to the danger of collapse and sudden death, or without bringing about conditions which favor the development of disease in later life.

From the moment when we draw our first breath at birth until we draw our last breath at death, the heart has to pump the blood throughout the body. It must do so day and night, year in and year out, Sundays and holidays, with never a let-up. I know of nothing else in the world that works without ever getting a day off, a few hours off, or a few minutes off, except the heart: and yet, with the possible exception of the stomach, no organ in the body is so badly treated.

A German proverb says that a willing horse is driven the hardest; this is certainly true of the heart. Every time we get angry, laugh inordinately, take stimulating food or drink, run to catch a car, get deeply in love, and do ever so many other things, it all lands on the poor old heart. That indispensable organ fulfils St. Paul's definition of charity—it suffers long and is kind; but there is one thing that it cannot stand—a Marathon race.

The law would not permit any one to drive a horse 26 miles at top speed; or, if it did, the horse would collapse long before the finish. Now in the matter of food, drink, and other things, a horse leads the simple life. It also has another great advantage over man, in the fact that its body is horizontal while man's body is perpendicular. It is much easier for a heart to pump all the blood horizontally than to force half of it directly upward, as is the case in man.

A distinguished colleague recently remarked that any one who, for the sake of a few dollars, a cup, or a day's newspaper notoriety, exposes himself to the dangers of a Marathon race, deserves no sympathy, whatever may happen to him. Doubtless many will share this sentiment, but the trouble does not end with those who actually enter the races. The Marathon craze has spread all over the country. It has taken possession of our boys and young men, and many are injuring their health in efforts to train for future Marathon glory.

No Longer Popular.

"The padded out shoulders that have been characteristic of the ready-to-wear clothing," says an illustrator, "went into the discard weeks ago and now they are supplying the inspiration for the comics. In the same way the man with thick muscles and biceps is no longer in demand among the men who make the pictures for the young girl's books. He's a back number of the most decided type.

"The popular figure is slim all the way up. It is not narrow shouldered, but of the measurement that the tailors call natural, which means that the shoulders seem little broader than they really are. There is no padding in a coat, but the least bit of lining that carries the shoulder a little out.

"Such is the shoulder style of the present year. The hulk that looked like a champagne bottle turned upside down is a thing of the past. Even on the beaches this summer the new medium shouldered man is the real thing in masculine beauty.

"The broad-shouldered idol of former years seems to realize this, for he attempts to make himself look narrower by the cut of his bathing suit, letting the jersey run out to the arms."

Another David.

Before David Belasco had reached the top rung in the theatrical ladder—in fact, when his foot was on the first step and he was a small and obscure play producer in San Francisco—he was one time rehearsing a melodrama at the old Alcazar theatre. The play contained a few Biblical lines, and the rest was stirring western drama. The company rehearsing was none too intelligent and none too familiar with the great literary works of history. Melodrama was about all some of them understood. When the hero came to the quotation from the Bible he looked a little puzzled and turned to a companion to ask who wrote that part with the quotation marks around it.

"Oh, David!" replied the other actor.

"Well, Belasco always was a rotten writer," exclaimed the hero, with disgust. "Somebody ought to stop him."

"Who'll Buy My Lavender?"

When lavender pillows are put in a sunny apartment they are charming, and the more they are shaken up the more fragrant they become.

Lavender was called by the Romans lavandula. At cutting-time people travel from long distances to inhale the fragrance of the fields.

In the eighteenth century lavender-water was the principal perfume of the ladies of that period. Then the fashion changed. Chemically-prepared perfumes imported from the continent became the mode, and "sweet" lavender-water became almost unknown, except in country cottages. A lady who still cultivated the plant and manufactured the scent wrote to Queen Victoria asking Her Majesty to use her great influence to restore this old English perfume to popularity, and she acquiesced.

The Child Viewpoint.

Here are two Sunday school stories: "Why did Lot's wife look back?" a minister asked one day in the address at the children's service. Up went a little girl's hand, "Please, she lost her 'at."

Excellent was the reply of another little girl when the class was being questioned on the story of the prodigal son. "Now were they very glad to see him? What did they do to show how glad they were?" "They had a party."

As a Last Resort.

The new minister of a small town in Inverness-shire was walking home from morning service recently when he chanced to overtake one of his parishioners, an old shoemaker. "Good morning, Mr. Bain," said the minister. "How is it your good wife is not out to-day?"

"She's no' but poorly," was the reply. "It's nae wink of sleep she's had for the last three nichts."

The minister was sorry to hear such a poor account of Mrs. Bain's health and expressed a wish for a speedy improvement.

"I'm thinking if she could get a guid sleep," said the shoemaker, "she'd soon be on the mend. Maybe if ye're passing the hoose to-morrow ye'll no' object to ca' in an' just give her frae 'lastly' to the end of your discoorse this morning. I'm no' saying it wadna be very helpful."—Dundee Advertiser.

Kissing Customs.

In ancient Egypt it was considered a high degree of politeness to kiss one's hand and then place it on the top of the head. Men of rank occasionally kissed each other, but in the land of the pharaohs men never dreamed of kissing women.

They were very careful of kisses in Rome. If a slave kissed a free woman there he was liable to be torn to pieces by wild horses. The great Cato promulgated a law making the kissing of parents before their children a punishable offence.

The Greeks put to death any man who kissed a woman or girl in the public street.

In Austria to-day a man only kisses a woman's hand. In Russia the forehead is kissed among equals, but a Russian peasant salutes his lord by kissing his knees. The Pole kisses the shoulder of his superior

REMAINS WERE INTERRED WITH MILITARY HONORS

The remains of the late Ernest A. Hutchinson were consigned to the last resting place at Little Lake cemetery yesterday afternoon, with military honors and admist many evidences of regret. The Rev. The gun on which the coffin was carried to the grave, was in charge of Sergt. Thomas and Drivers Led and Frith. The pall bearers representing the 57th Regiment walked to the right, and the representatives of the 24th Field Battery to the left. The Third Prince of Wales Dragoons was represented by Major W. MINISTER AT WARKWORTH GOES TO THE CAPITAL

Rev. John F. MacFarland Becomes Pastor of an Ottawa Church—Presbytery of Peterborough in Session —Evangelistic Campaign.

The Presbytery of Peterborough met in special session this morning at nine o'clock to deal with the resignation of Rev. John F. Macfarland, B. A., of Warkworth, as minister of the Presbyterian church of that place.

Rev. Mr. Johnston occupied the moderator's chair, and Rev. D. A. Thomson was clerk. There were also present Rev. Messrs. Pogue, Keith, Potter, D. D. McDonald, D. A. McKenzie, S. S. Burns, and representative elders from a number of churches.

The resignation of Mr. Macfarland was considered. Mr. George Carlaw, elder of Warkworth church, spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Macfarland's faithful work as pastor, and of his untiring efforts for the success of the congregation, yet, in view of the fact that Mr. Macfarland had received a call to Hull, Que., and had fully made up his mind to go, the congregation regretfully acquiesced in the decision. It was resolved that the Presbytery accept the resignation and release Mr. Macfarland, according to his own request, after to-morrow, October 31.

His induction into his new charge will take place on November 5th.

At the conclusion of the business a most interesting conference was held on evangelism. At this meeting a large number of the missioners from other places, who are to conduct the meetings throughout the Presbytery were present: Rev. Messrs. R. G. MacBeth, Paris; J. A. Brown, Fergus; Dr. D. B. Winchester, Toronto; J. Koukle, Sonya; W. R. Craig, Quebec; J. Pritchard, Galt.

Canon Davidson, Rev. J. R. Webb, and Rev. J. F. Fee, of this city, were present. Canon Davidson, on behalf of the city clergy, extended greetings to the visitors, and wished them God-speed in their mission.

A conference on the various phases of evangelistic work was a most helpful feature of the gathering.

CHOIR MAKING FINE IMPRESSION

Celebrated Welsh Choir Singers Take Montreal and Ottawa by Storm

Judging from press reports, the Welsh choir is one of the finest musical organizations that ever visited these shores, and is receiving the generous and deserving support of the Canadian public. The choir reached Montreal on Monday and sang two days at the large Arena Rink to capacity houses. After the Montreal engagement the choir appeared in Ottawa, and met with an enthusiastic reception from the Ottawa public, and was acclaimed by the press of that city as giving one of the finest exhibitions of choral singing ever heard in Ottawa.

REBUILDING THE WHOLE BODY

That is the Constant Business of the Blood

That is Why a Blood Making Tonic Will Make the Body Well and Keep it so

Pure, red blood is the vital principal of life, for upon it the tissues of the body live. It goes practically to every part of the body, carrying nourishment and oxygen, taking up the wastes and so changing them that they can be cast out of the body. As our every act results in the breaking down of some of the tissues and the formation of waste material, the body is in a constant state of change. To maintain health, strength and life the blood must be pure in order to replace these tissues with plenty of fresh nourishment and rid the body of its waste material.

Men and women who are run down will find Dr. Williams Pink Pills the best tonic for their condition because these Pills are a certain blood-builder and purifier. They enable the blood to meet the unusual demands of the body and give perfect health. We offer the case of Mrs. John Harman, of Welland, Ont., as a proof of the great power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills over disease. Mrs. Harman says;—"For several years I lived a life of pain and misery, and even now as I recall that illness it seems awful to contemplate. The trouble began with weakness and loss of appetite. This was followed by headaches and emaciation. At times I had violent palpitation of the heart and shortness of breath finally I was completely prostrated. I was so haggard that my friends hardly knew me, and I often thought my last hour had come. My sufferings would follow me into the region of dreams with such distinctness that often I would awaken shivering and shaking with sobs, and scarcely able to realize that I had been but dreaming. The best efforts of three doctors at different times failed to help me. Then I was urged to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Within one month I felt a distinct improvement, and after using eleven boxes I was again in the full possession of health and strength. Several years have now elapsed since this illness and as I have constantly enjoyed the best of health I am warranted in saying that the cure is permanent."

Dr. Williams Pink Pills should be used in all diseases caused by thin, watery or impure blood, such as anaemia, rheumatism, stomach trouble, the after effects of la grippe and fevers, neuralgia, headaches and the various ailments common to women and growing girls. These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A SCRAP BOOK.

To Be Useful It Must Be Arranged With System.

The scrap book habit, provided it is not carried to excess, is invaluable. For reference nothing takes its place, as it has an advantage over other compilations of information that it is usually formed along lines that peculiarly appeal to the owner.

A scrap book to be useful must be arranged with system. A hodge-podge of information defeats the purpose of the book. It is well to have smaller books than are usually used both because a scrap book is more valuable if it treats of but one class of subjects.

Be careful in selecting a scrap book that it opens out flat and is well bound. It is a mistake to get one with a flimsy cover or poor paper that crinkles with pasting. Many books ready mucilaged can now be bought, but these are more expensive than ordinary kinds and sometimes fails to stick.

A good photographer's paste is the best medium; mucilage is sticky and not lasting and flour paste sours. Have a broad brush to apply the paste and put it on thinly enough not to get lumpy.

There will be less danger of pages sticking together if, after a clipping is pasted in, a thick paper or piece of muslin is put over it and pressed with a moderately hot iron. This makes the pages look neater and flatter.

Even where a book is devoted to one class of subjects the clippings should be grouped in subdivisions, and an index should be placed in the front of the book. If the scrap book is not alphabeted and paged, it should be done by hand. The alphabeting may be omitted, but the paging never.

It saves much time in making a scrap book if each clipping is carefully trimmed as it is cut out. It should be pasted at once; to let it lie around for some convenient time means to lose it possibly or to have the edges curl so that it is doubly hard to paste.

There should be a censorship of clippings though it is self imposed. It is not worth while to cumber the book with information which has no definite value or is of only passing interest. To cut out everything one reads that attracts for the moment is to cumber oneself with clippings valueless by their number.

Ants That Fight Spiders.

Few more wonderful adaptations are seen in the whole round of nature than the webs spiders spin to entrap the wary ant. They are not high hung, lacy affairs, caressing every breeze, but low set silken tubes stretched in the grass, the crevices of rock or about tree roots. Ants of every size creep heedlessly into them. The spiders eat them with relish, but occasionally a very little spider and a very big ant engage in a duel to the death. If the spider can bite, the ant can sting and does it with a right good will. The spider does not try to get rid of such an ant as he does of a wasp or been too strong to be safely attacked. Such an insect, which threatens destruction to the web, is often cut out of it by the web builders. The entangling cables are not loosed, but the web rays neatly snipped in two, first those underneath and at the very last the highest filament. Often the letting go of such a captive means destruction to half the nest. But some spiders are wiser than some people. They know not merely when they have enough, but when they have too much.

Moonlight and Clear Skies.

It is well established that the moon's aerial envelope must be extremely thin, if it exists at all, and consequently the heat received by the lunar surface from the sun must escape into the outer space almost as rapidly as it is received. It follows, therefore, that at the end of the long lunar night the temperature of its darkened surface must fall 200 degrees or more below zero, while its surface when illuminated by the sun must be ice cold. Our most delicate thermometers exposed to the radiation of a full moon fail to show any appreciable rise of temperature. Nevertheless there is reason to infer that the radiant heat from our satellite is sufficient to dissipate to some degree the higher and thinner cloud forms of the earth, so that scientists hold that there is some confirmation of the popular belief that moonlight clears the skies.

Queer Courting.

All the courting is done by the women of Ukraine, Russia. When a girl falls in love with a man she goes to his house and tells him the state of her feelings. If her affections are reciprocated a marriage is arranged. If, however, Barkis is not willin' she remains in the house, hoping to coax him into regarding her suit with favor. The poor fellow cannot treat her with discourtesy or turn her out, for her friends would be sure to avenge the insult. If he is really determined that he won't have her his best plan is to leave his home and stay away as long as she remains in it. Thus a man may be turned out of house and home.

A Wonder.

A baseball player had two fingers of his right hand pretty badly bunged up in practice, and on his way home from the grounds he dropped into a doctor's office to have them attended to.

"Doctor," he asked anxiously as he was leaving, "when this paw of mine heals will I be able to play the piano?"

"Certainly you will," the doctor assured him.

"Well, then, you're a wonder, doc. I never could before."

A Mean Trick.

Mr. S.—Toddler is a mean man; that's what Toddler is.

Mrs. S.—Why, whatever has he done to you?

Mr. S.—Bet me $25 that I could not hit a barn door with a revolver at five paces; taunted me into betting him, got me to put up the money, measured off the five paces in the presence of a lot of witnesses, gave me a revolver loaded and then set up the door edgewise.

The lady was a peach, he said,
The apple of his eye—they wed;
(She was a lemon, on the dead.)

Do You Realize?

That despondency in women is a mental condition often traceable to some distinctly female ill!

Women who are well do not have the blues, neither are they irritable and restless. Derangement of the female organism breeds all kinds of miserable feelings such as backache, headache, and bearing-down feelings. Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. There is no doubt that it has made many remarkable cures of female ills after all other means had failed. There is hardly a day that some woman does not write us that this simple old medicine, made only of roots and herbs, has cured her of a severe illness after several doctors had done their best and failed.

Here are two such letters — read them — they are genuine and reliable.

Belleville, Ont. — "I was so weak and worn out from a female weakness that I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took several bottles of it, and I gained strength so rapidly that it seemed to make a new woman of me. I can do as good a day's work as I ever did. I sincerely bless the day that I made up my mind to take your medicine for female weakness, and I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind letters, as I certainly profited by them. I give you permission to publish this any time you wish." — Mrs. Albert Wickett, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Rockland, Me. — "I was troubled for a long time with pains in my back and side and was miserable in every way. I had doctored until I was discouraged and thought I would never get well. I read a testimonial about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it.

"After taking three bottles I never was so well in my life. I am recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all my friends." — Mrs. Will Young, 6 Columbia Avenue, Rockland, Me.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Following upon the winding-up of the former Wm. It must not be supposed, however, that the city is dependant upon a few business concerns for its stability. It has passed that stage. Yet as a number of those who can ill spare the loss will suffer by the winding-up of the Shovel Co., it is a matter of general regret. It is to be hoped, as in the case of the Wm. Hamilton Co., that another directorate may be able to bring affairs to a more successful issue and to re-establish a large and important industry upon a sound and enduring basis.

VERY HEAVY DAMAGE FROM BIG BLAZE AT NATIONAL HOTEL

Started in Furnace Cellar—$1500 or $1600 Worth of Cigars and Liquors a Complete Loss—Contents Insured--Guests Forced to Leave and Hotel Closed to Public.

A fire which caused a great deal of damage and inconvenience, broke out in the National Hotel yesterday afternoon, and it was 10 o'clock last night before the fire brigade left the building, assured that there was no probability of any further damage. The brigade responded promptly to the call in the afternoon, reaching the hotel at about twenty minutes to five, and during the fight against the conflagration seven streams were employed. It was a very difficult matter to combat the flames, however, owing to the fact that they gained considerable headway in a very short time, and also because of the awkward place, from the firemen's standpoint, where the fire originated.

The blaze got a rapid start and became dangerous in a remarkably short time. One of the employees of the hotel was shaking ashes in the basement, where the furnace is, and, it is thought, a clinker from the shaker got into a pile of papers nearby and set them on fire. The man engaged in the work went to the laundry on some other duties and the blaze broke out.

The amount of damage done was very large. It was confined to the greater extent to the east section of the house, and no estimate of it can be made until the adjusters have placed the amount. All the joists and timbers are burned out of the cellar. The loss to the contents, fixtures and furnishings will be heavy, but is covered by insurance.

Mr. D. B. Denison, the proprietor, stated to the Review at a late hour last night that his actual loss, not protected by any insurance, would be in the neighborhood of $1,500 or $1,600. This is on the stock, on which there was no insurance. It consists of whiskey, beer, wines, liquors, cigars, etc. The interior of the hotel presents a dilapidated appearance to what it did before the fire. The rotunda ceiling is blackened and burnt, the walls in the writing room are cracked by the heat and water, and charred embers cover the rotunda floor. The water and smoke also did distressing damage, and the fire crept up to the second and third stories through the parting walls at the rear of the rotunda, doing further harm.

There are rumors that the damage altogether is in the neighborhood of from $15,000 to $20,000, but, as before stated, this cannot be given with any degree of certainty until the adjusters have decided it.

It didn't take the crowd very long to gather at the scene of the conflagration. Immense clouds of smoke issued from the building, and it was feared by the spectators that the building would be practically destroyed. Willing hands assisted in the removal of the portable hotel property and did what they could to render aid. The dense and choking smoke was a great hindrance to the firemen, who found great difficulty in combatting the flames. Seven streams were turned on the building. One of the most wrecked portions is the bar. The floor was reduced to a shell and several holes were burned through it. The stock in it was lost by the water, fire and smoke, and as the hose had to be turned indiscriminately onto the big quantity of valuable goods in the case room. When the fire got burning in the parting walls disastrous results were feared. Chemicals were used to extinguish it, however, and it was finally checked. The whole blaze was under control by 7 o'clock in the evening, but the firemen stayed till 10 o'clock to reduce the damage to a minimum.

The work of repairing and rejuvenating will be commenced as soon as the underwriters have adjusted the insurance claims. There was $10,000 on the contents.

The hotel cannot be occupied as a result of the fire, and all the guests have been forced to seek accommodation in other hotels and lodging houses of the city.

The only melodramatic touch in connection with the fire was when one of the female employees of the hotel called for help from one of the upper windows. A ladder was secured and she made her passage to terra firma.

THE AWAKENING OF CHINA; MANY REFORMS INTRODUCED

Mr. George Thomas Tells About Conditions in the Great Oriental Kingdom—Chinese Government's War on Opium.

After an absence from the city since last October, Mr. Geo. Thomas, proprietor of the Dominion Cafe, has returned to the city from China, where he has been on a visit to his parents at Hong Kong. Mr. Thomas says he had a most interesting visit to his native country. He spent a considerable portion of his time in sight seeing there, also taking in the principal points of interest in the Island of Japan.

On his voyage home he sailed from Hong Kong on September 25th on the "Empress of India," and landed at Vancouver about ten days ago. The trip across the Pacific occupied about three weeks and was an exceedingly rough and unpleasant one. Three hundred and fifty-eight Chinese passengers for various parts of Canada were on board, and four Chinamen had their wives with them. From Vancouver Mr. Thomas went to Ottawa, where he paid a short visit to friends before returning to Peterborough.

REFORMS IN CHINA.

Mr. Thomas said the manners of the Chinese people had not changed much, in his opinion, although many radical reforms are being adopted in the customs of the country. The ese race is famous, is cue, for which the Chin- disappearing, and a growing number of the Chinese are having their hair cut and trimmed after the manner of the Europeans and Americans. The practice of binding up the feet of the female children and keeping their feet encased is being discontinued under the pressure of Government measures forbidding it.

The Government is also taking very positive steps to stop the opium smoking habit and its use as a drug, and stringent laws with this object in view have been passed and are being strictly enforced by the police.

The old-time antipathy to the foreigner is disappearing, and the stranger within the gates is quite welcome and unmolested. In every respect the people are becoming much broader-minded, and are also growing much more prosperous, as is evidenced by their improved manner of living and better dress.

Mr. Thomas says his friends in the Old Country were very glad to renew acquaintances with him, and asked him many questions about Canada. He was pleased to speak of this country in the highest terms, and as a place where foreigners were treated with every consideration.

WHAT THE Y.M.C.A. BOYS ARE DOING

A committee of Y.M.C.A. boys met last night to arrange for the re-organization of the boys' work. "This year the boys will elect their own cabinet, which will be responsible for the various departments of their work. Nominations have already been made and will be posted. The election by ballot will be held Friday, November 12th. Polls will be open on that day from 4 to 6, and from 7 to 8 p.m. All members of the boys' department hold the franchise. Immediately after the polls close a mass meeting of the members of the department will be held, at which will be presented reports by the boys who attended the Conference of the Boys of Canada at Lake Couchiching last August, and the Thanksgiving conference of the boys of Ontario and Quebec, which was held in Toronto. Members of the Y.M.C.A. Board of Directors, parents and members of other boys' clubs in the city are specially invited to this meeting.

MASS MEETING AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE

A mass meeting will be held in the Grand Opera House to-morrow afternoon at 4.15, to mark the opening of the two weeks' evangelistic campaign in the Presbyterian churches of the Peterborough Presbytery. St. Paul's, St. Andrew's and Knox will all hold special services in the morning and evening, and special preachers will be present. At this meeting Rev. R. G. MacBeth, M.A., of Paris, will be the first speaker. He is a man known throughout the Presbyterian Church in Canada as being able, clever, eloquent and interesting.

Rev. J. D. Morrow, of Toronto, the athletic preacher, will be the other speaker. He is a man who appeals at once to the young men. He understands young men and their pastimes, as he himself has been and still is a great athlete. His last great work is the erection of a church in Toronto with funds furnished by the athletes of the country, and he is meeting with great success.

Special music will be provided for the occasion, and familiar and rousing hymns will be sung. All are cordially invited to be present, as it is for the benefit of the general public.

Russia will sell her interest in the Manchurian railroads.

PROMENADE CONCERT

The promenade band concert given by the 57th Regimental Band, met with the approval of a big audience, who appreciated the programme and apparently enjoyed the novelty of the first concert in the armories. The selections given by the band were beautifully played, and the vocal numbers "Killarney," which was sung by Mr. McIlroy in his usual highly acceptable manner, for which he was encored, and "Hey, Mr. Joshua," sung by Mr. Jos. Halpenny, in rube makeup, won him a recall, and he cleverly gave the humorous recitation in which arrivals of various nationalities at New York harbor expressed their opinions on the Statue of Liberty, were an attractive feature. The public was given the privilege of hearing for the first time the latest composition of Mr. R. Gliddon, the conductor of the band. It was the "57th Regiment" march, and is a well-written and splendidly harmonized selection. It is to be hoped that the march will find a frequent place on the 57th's programmes. Mr. Gliddon's widely-played and popular "Vanguard" was also one of the most interesting numbers played.

"Under the British Flag," an appealing and beautifully arranged fantasia, gave a splendid opportunity of showing the ability of the band to interpret in a most musicianly way an arrangement of widely varying parts. It is one of the best arrangements in the band's library.

Sergeant Hughes, whose presence in the first chair was greatly missed during his absence in Vernon, played a cornet solo with his customary finish and skill.

The various pieces on the programme were all acceptably given.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARY YOUNG.

The death occurred yesterday of Catharine Crough, aged 52 years, wife of Mr. Francis Young, at her late residence, lot 6 in the 8th concession of Ennismore. The late Mrs. Young was married 32 years ago, and for the past eight years resided in Smith, and during the last twenty-four years in Ennismore. The Test of Efficiency in a typewriter does not consist in simply writing letters. Correspondence in a modern office is an incident in the day's work, but not much more.

The True Test of typewriter efficiency consists in doing the work as it comes, changing from one to the other and back again without loss of time or the operator's energy — card records to the special reports and comparative statements; correspondence to complex billing and tabulations; this, that and everything.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Like [illegible] watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a tick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and [illegible] rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former [illegible]. ROUTINE BUSINESS AT MEETING OF BOARD OF WORKS

Number of Communications Read and Dealt With --- Mr. Switzer Wants Sewer Connections to House Outside the City Limits---Special Meeting to Deal With Report on Sewers.

The members of the Board of Works had a quiet time together at their meeting last night and a large number of communications were dealt with.

The first item of business was the granting of the request of John B. O'Dette, Crescent street, who asked that he be allowed to build a drain from his premises to the creek for sanitary purposes. When the sewer is built on his street, he will have to make connections.

On motion Mr. Switzer, representing the Toronto Loan and Savings Company, was heard. He said that he wanted to make arrangements for sewer connections to a house on Wolseley st., which is just out of the corporation; in the north end of the city. Another citizen with two houses, immediately across from the house in question and in the city limits also wanted connections. It would mean that the sewer would have to be built 72 feet from the present terminus of the Benson street sewer. A discussion by the members of the board followed. The general feeling was that should the request be granted it would mean trouble in the future as others in a similar position would demand the same rights.

On motion of Ald. Duncan and Bradburn, the matter was referred to the City Solicitor and City Engineer.

In regard to the purchasing of land from Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald for the widening of Benson st. and Benson avenue, a motion was made to the effect that Mr. Fitzgerald be paid $500 for the strip of land 10 feet wide and the length of his property. This will allow the street to be made the regulation 66 feet in width.

Mrs Mary Bowman asked that she be refunded the sum of $8; that amount being the sum she expended in flushing out the sewer in the front of her property on Simcoe street. She will get it.

Mr. Harry Evans asked for two weeks holiday at the close of the operations of the sidewalk gang. He also stated that there were some trees at the city gravel pit which needed attention and further that conditions would be more favorable in the winter time if the fence next to the Water street sidewalk was torn down. The chilly breezes from Hilliard's peak blow the snow up against the fence and on to the sidewalk to considerable depths.

It was moved that the fence be done away with; the trees cut up and sold and the request for two weeks' holidays be granted to the street commissioner.

White Bros., carters, complained that they were not getting their share of the city's cartage. Ald. Duncan thought it ought to be equally divided amongst all the carters. The matter was left in the hands of the chairman.

A petition, properly signed by a number of residents of Waterford st., applying for a sewer on that street 225 feet north of McDonnell street, found favor with the members and on motion of Ald. Duncan and Gillespie the petitioners will get the sewer.

By-laws for the sewers on Reid and Wolfe streets will be prepared as a result of the motion of Ald. Duncan and Gillespie.

Mr. J. C. Higgins, whose property ajoins the gravel pit, asked that the Board reimburse him for gravel taken from his property. He mentioned that a law suit would follow should his demands be ignored. A settlement will be made.

Owing to the Smith street bridge being closed, William Irwin wants the Board to repair the old bridge near the Cereal dam, for the convenience of traffic. The communication was put on the received list.

A report of the City Engineer on the proposed stands for the fire engine was read. Ald. Bradburn said the matter should receive serious consideration and if possible, one be built this year. On motion of Ald. Bradburn and Duncan Mr. Hay will look over the ground at the extreme east end of Simcoe street and see if the conditions are favorable for the building of one at this place.

The chairman read a report from Mr. Willis Chipman in regard to the sewers in the south-western portion of the city. On motion of Ald. Butler and Bradburn, the report will be discussed at a special meeting called by the chairman.

WATCH AND RING TAKEN DURING FIRE AT NATIONAL

During the excitement at the National Hotel last evening, as a result of the fire, a gold watch and a ring was taken from two of the rooms of the hotel, and Jesse Ayress was taken into custody by P. C. Newhall and when he appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning he was charged with having stolen them.

The ring is the property of Mr. Gordon H. Clarke and the gold watch belonged to Mrs. A. P. Poussette.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams represented the prisoner, but declined to elect, and the case was enlarged until Wednesday morning.

The Magistrate intimated that he would accept bail bonds to the extent of $500.

It appears that Ayress offered his services when the fire first started, to get some property from the rooms facing the back yard. He went up a ladder and entered through the window and threw out several articles of clothing it was while he was in the hotel that it is alleged he stole the watch and ring.

His version of the affair is that he took the articles along with the other property, but did not mean to keep them. Both the ring and the watch were afterwards returned.

LADIES' LITERARY HAD GOOD MEETING

The ladies' branch of St. Peter's T. A.S. held the second literary of the season last night, at which a splendidly written paper on the life, work and virtues of Samuel de Champlain, read by Miss Agnes Holland, was much enjoyed. Delarr and Miss McCabe, added much to the pleasure of the evening. A synopsis of the essay read by Miss Holland will appear in Monday's issue of the Review.

HAVELOCK WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Oct. 29.—Havelock defeated Brussels here to-day by a score of 1—0 in the second game of the finals to decide the intermediate football championship of Ontario, thus making the score a tie 1—1, on the round. The referee ordered the teams to play on until either side scored again, according to the rules, covering such a circumstance, but the Brussels team refused to and the referee declared Havelock winners on the round.

ORDER MADE FOR WINDING UP OF PETERBORO SHOVEL AND TOOL COMPANY

The following item of legal news appears in to-day's Toronto World:—

Judge's Chambers
Before Meredith, C. J.

Re the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Co.—L. M. Hayes (Peterborough), for Bank of Montreal, petitioner, on motion to wind up. J. F. Boland, for the company. Judgment. I have with some hesitation come to the conclusion that the material filed in support of the petition shows that the company has exhibited a statement showing its inability to meet its liabilities or that it has acknowledged its insolvency, within the meaning of the Winding Up Act. The usual order for the winding up of the company may therefore issue, and the Trusts and Guarantee Co., Limited, may be named as the provisional liquidator.—The World

The officers of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company are:—
Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., President.
Mr. W. Rudkins, Vice-President.
Mr. J. G. Pratley, Sec.-Treas.

(The Globe)

Mr. Justice Britton granted an order yesterday for the winding up of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company, on petition of the Bank of Montreal, a creditor, for $52,017.69. The company was incorporated in 1904, with a nominal capital of $50,000. The assets are nominally $51,252.22, and the liabilities are not mentioned. The Trusts & Guarantee Company is appointed provisional liquidator.

THE SYSTEM OF MACHINE VOTING

As Employed in New York State—Hon Everett Smith Mayoralty Candidate in Schenectady

Mr. Robt. Fair, of this city, has received a copy of the Daily Union, Schenectady, N.Y., in which appears a self-explanatory five column cut of the ingenious method of machine voting employed in New York State. Among the four candidates for mayor of Schenectady appears the name of Hon. Everett Smith in the Republican column.

Mr. Smith is well known among the cottagers of the Kawartha lakes having frequently visited Buckhorn lake. The Review along with the many citizens who have the privilege of becoming acquainted with Mr. Smith wishes him every success in the campaign and hopes he will be honored with the chief magistracy of Schenectady in the civic campaign at hand. Mr. Smith deserves to win if veracity is an essential qualification for a mayor, and presumably it is, for he always had the reputation in these parts of being a particularly truthful narrator of any fish stories he might have in his copious store of interesting anecdotes and episodes.

TO CREATE LAUGHS WAS HIS OBJECT

What Clyde Fitch Had in Mind When He Wrote "Girls"--Here on Nov. 3rd

"Girls" under the management of the Shuberts, will be the offering at the Grand next Wednesday, Nov. 3rd. The play is from the pen of Clyde Fitch and has to its credit an all season run at Daly's Theatre, New York. To create laughs was the intention of the playwright and in this he has been most successful. There are laughs for the pessimist, for the lovelorn, for the woman-hater, for the man-hater, for young and old in "Girls"; and then again we are told that it contains a pretty love story so cleverly interwoven as to make it not only a play for those who seek the lighter form of entertainment, but one that appeals to the more serious minded. Taken as a whole "Girls" will prove to be one of the most entertaining productions of the season.

WEDDING BELLS

GREENE—MELDRUM

One of the prettiest of October weddings took place at 2 o'clock this Saturday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meldrum, Fairview, Peterborough, when their only daughter, Mary Hawes (Mollie) Meldrum was united in marriage to Ernest Alexander Greene, eldest son of the Rev. Canon Greene, St. James' church, Orillia.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon Greene, father of the groom, assisted by the bride's pastor, the Rev. R. Pogue, of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Peterborough.

The drawing room was beautifully banked with palms, ferns, chrysanthemums and pink roses.

Miss Marjorie Brodie, of Toronto, presided at the piano, playing the Lohengrin and Mendelssohn wedding marches, and the music from Valykrie. Miss Lillian Shannon sang very sweetly, "Beloved, it is Morn," "O Fair, O Sweet and Holy."

At precisely half past two o'clock pretty little Margery Boulter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Boulter, Toronto, as flower girl, dressed in a Kate Greenaway costume with a basket of flowers, headed the bridal procession, entered the drawing room, scattering rose leaves, followed by the two bridesmaids, Miss Margery Greene, of Orillia, sister of the groom, and Miss Marguerite Boulter, of Toronto, cousin of the bride. Both looked enchanting, being handsomely gowned alike in pink marquisette with short veils of tulle and carrying sheafs of pink roses.

Lastly, with her father, came the bride in all the beauty and brightness of her young girlhood, wearing a graceful gown of white Duchess satin made en traine with handsome Berthe of Duchess and rose pink lace caught with cabouchons of pearls. Over this was arranged a flimsy veil caught with a chaplet of orange blossoms.

The groom was supported by Mr. T. B. McQuesten, of Hamilton, as best man.

After the ceremony a reception was held, many relatives and friends from Guelph, Chatham, Ottawa, Hamilton and Toronto being present, as well as a host of friends in her native city. Mrs. Meldrum received with Mrs. Louis B. Stewart, of Toronto, sister of the groom, both being becomingly gowned and carrying American beauty roses. The large number of presents to the bride were both beautiful and expensive and spoke volumes for the popularity of the young bride. After congratulations have been showered upon the bride and groom, dejeuner was served in the large dining room.

The Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, of St. Luke's church, proposed the health of the bride. After the cutting of the cake the bride slipped away, changing her bridal dress for a travelling suit of camel brown broadcloth with hat to match, with mink furs.

Amongst a shower of confetti, Mr. and Mrs. Greene drove away to catch the 4.38 train en route to New York. On their return they will take up their residence at 133 Yorkville avenue, Toronto.

The Church of the Sacred Heart will be formally opened on Sunday, November 21st. Rev. Father McColl received a letter this morning from his Lordship Bishop O'Connor to that effect, and also that Archbishop Gauthier, of Kingston, will sing mass on the occasion and Archbishop McEvay, of Toronto, will preach the sermon.

Something Better Now

There was a time when people were satisfied with any glasses with which they could read, regardless of whether they were using one eye more than the other, knowing nothing of how the eyes were strained by wrong lens powers, and careless of the frame fitting the face.

All this is changed now. A thorough examination by experienced men, lenses specially ground for each eye, and the neatest, most becoming mountings are now required by discriminating people who realize that nothing is too good for the eyes.

We make appointments for eye examination by our phone, Bell 1221, Machine 7. It saves waiting your turn.

WEATHER FOR NOVEMBER

A reactionary storm period is in progress as we enter November. On the 1st and 2nd falling barometer will pass eastwardly over the country, attended by cloudiness and resulting in rain in many localities. Stiff, northwesterly winds and sharp changes to colder will come in promptly on the heels of these disturbances.

A regular storm period covers the 4th to the 9th, being central on the 7th. This period is near the centre of the Venus period and promises to bring very active storm conditions. If the barometer falls to low readings from about the 6th to the 9th, look for energetic storms of rain and wind, with dangerous gales over the lake regions. These disturbances will be southward, while in the northwest sleet and snow will be quite probable. All outdoor work that can reasonably be put in order, and all perishable goods that can be securely housed and sheltered, before these Venus storms in November, will be great gain, saying nothing of the convenience and comfort of the people. We believe that too much emphasis of possible danger on the lakes, and also on the North Atlantic can hardly be given for this and other November periods. There are those who will take chances, as is always the case, some of whom are sure to pay the penalty by loss of cargo and life. The Venus influence will cause a prolonged disturbance of weather conditions at this time, so that the storm periods are liable to overrun their normal limits and blend into each other.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 12th, 13th and 14th. The conjunction of the moon and the earth on the 12th naturally indicates that high temperature for the season with low barometer and general storms are probable on and following that date. It is a rare exception when rising temperature does not attend new moon, and when new moon falls on or very close to the celestial equator, especially in a Venus period and in a storm period, thunder and lightning are almost certain to attend the storms. The fact is well worth contending for, a thing we have been doing for more than a quarter of a century. It is vitally important for the scientific suggestions which lie behind it. Change to very much cooler, with high barometer and high northwesterly gales will bring up the west and northwest flanks of storms, say about the 13th to 15th. Seismic reports will be timely within three days of moon on the 12th.

A regular storm period is central on the 18th, falling at the culmination of the Mercury period which is central on the 17th. The Venus period will also be at its maximum strength about this time. From Tuesday, the 16th, to Sunday, the 21st, is a time of vast storm probabilities, especially on the oceans and the Great Lakes. This is a period in which Boreas will make a stubborn fight for domination in most parts of the northern hemisphere. Early blizzards of snow and sleet need not surprise any reader of these forecasts in north and northwest before the final windup of the storm period. These storms will be followed closely by a rushing high barometer out of the northwest, causing high gales and unseasonable cold to push rapidly far into the south and east. Many heavy ocean storms will be encountered, both on the Atlantic and Pacific, during this and other November periods. Make it your business to watch the telegraphic reports from land and sea, through all the part of the month, and see if this forecast is not verified to a degree out of the ordinary. If your farm and orchard and garden products are not safely housed before these mid-November, Venus storms, you will suffer great discomfort and heavy loss. The sailors who dare to brave the open lakes will do so at the peril of their ships and lives. Ask your marine friends to make a note of this "gentle reminder."

A reactionary storm period is central on the 23rd, 24th and 25th. This period embraces the moon's passage across the equator on the 23rd, and moon's perigee on the 25th. Full moon, or moon's opposition with earth and sun, is only a day or two later on the 27th. Little consideration has been given to the part the moon plays in our weather, as well as other terrestrial phenomena. patient and long observation will convince any unbiased person that our satellite cannot be ignored, or that some of the periodic phases and conditions of the moon. Restless and threatening weather will mark this reactionary period. Fitful gusts of rain, cold winds and occasional sleet and snow squalls will be the general results, sending in quite cold weather for Thanksgiving.

A regular storm period runs from the 27th into December, being central on the 29th. This period enters with the full moon on the 27th. Falling barometer and brisk autumnal storms of rain and wind, turning to sleet and snow, will be passing eastward across the country during the last three days of November. The 27th is the centre of a probable seismic period, extending from about the 25th to the 29th.—Hicks.

Wanted Half Jury of Compatriots.

Winnipeg, Oct. 29.—At the Assizes Wednesday, prisoner's counsel, M. Doyle, in King v. Lutz, asked that at least half the jury be compatriots of the prisoner, who is a Galician.

Justice Richards, however, took the ground that the section which specifies that in King's Bench cases half the jury shall be able to understand the language of the defence, referred only and specifically to French and English jurors.

Lutz is charged with manslaughter. It is alleged he threw a stone through a house window, striking an infant.

THE REVIEW'S NEW SERIAL

Opening Chapters of the "The Black Bag" Appear To-day

Is From the Pen of Vance and is the Real Thing in the Story Line

My Lady Romance has many attendants. Mainly they are clad in hauberk and helm, or they carry rapiers at their sides and swear strange oaths. But sometimes we encounter in the pages of a novel a genuine knight in modern broadcloth or in tweed, who speaks the language of our own day and may be met on Broadway or State street. Such is Philip Kirkwood, artist painter, whose adventures in pursuit of the mysterious black bag and whose heroic deeds in the service of his beautiful lady-love are worth the staying up late o' nights to read. To descend to the idiom of the day, "The Black Bag" is "the real thing" in the story line, thrilling, mysterious—but not too mysterious—and most interesting.

QUAINT TOWN FEASTS

ENGLISH MUNICIPALITIES WITH STRANGE ANNUAL SUPPERS.

Uckfield Has a Pea Supper Every Year — Colchester Dines on Gin, Gingerbread and Oysters—Memory of Sir Francis Drake Honored at Plymouth—Bread and Cheese and Spring Onions.

Uckfield has just held its annual pea supper, a function which owes its origin to a practical joke. Fifteen years ago a plot of land belonging to a resident became, on account of its neglected state, such an eyesore to his fellow-townsmen that they took the matter into their own hands and dug it up. The owner resolved to profit by their labor and plant the field, but on his next visit to the spot he found, to his annoyance, that it had already been sown with peas.

Soon, however, anger gave place to amusement, and he laughingly told the perpetrators of the joke that they would have to eat the peas. This in due course they did, and from that day the celebration has grown yearly in popularity. Over fifty sat down recently to a capital repast of peas, bacon, and other excellent fare.

The Colchester oyster feast, which has acquired world-wide celebrity, is annually preceded by another function at the opening of the oyster season, when the corporation of the Essex town, who are the owners of the Colne fisheries, steam down the river to Brightlingsea, where they dredge for a few samples of the bivalves—a mere prelude to satisfying their appetites on the hundreds that await their coming in the packing-house at Pyefleet Creek. Previous, however, to this ceremony the worthy citizens fortify themselves with a meal of gingerbread and gin.

The "Fishynge Feaste" is held every August at Plymouth. It commemorates the deeds of Francis Drake, to whose enterprise the town owes its water supply. "To the pious memory of Sir Francis Drake" is first drunk in water from two golden goblets, which afterwards, refilled with wine, are emptied to the toast, "May the descendants of him who gave us water never want wine." Then, after having lunched off Devonshire patties, those present go about their several amusements until summoned to the feast proper, at which fried trout, caught during the afternoon in the lake, and sucking-pig are invariably served.

November is the month wherein Clacton-on-Sea holds its whiting dinner. Then this usually tasteless fish undergoes a marvellous metamorphosis, appearing at table in delectable and unrecognizable guises that fully justifies the concluding toast, "Success to the Whiting Feast and Prosperity to Clacton-on-Sea." Another seaside town, Yarmouth, boasts a sprat banquet which commences with sprat hors-d'oeuvre, and, after having run through some thirty courses, is brought to a conclusion with sprat biscuits.

Sausages and champagne are Peterborough's speciality. Every October at Bridge Fair time the mayor and corporation proceed in solemn procession to the bridge beneath which flows the Nen. There a halt is called and the town crier declares the fair open, both in Northamptonshire and Huntingdonshire. Having transacted the official business of the day, the mayor and his guests adjourn to a neighboring hotel, where a repast consisting of the above-mentioned delicacies awaits them.

Equally tasty although simpler fare is that spread before the company who attend the annual auction of the White Bread Meadow at Bourne, the rent of which goes to supply certain poor people with bread. Every Easter a curious custom is observed, the auctioneer putting up the field and accepting bids only so long as a number of boys are running a race over a fixed course. The moment the hindermost boy reaches the goal the hammer falls, and the meadow is knocked down to him who has made the last bid. This having been satisfactorily settled, those present sit down to a meal of bread, cheese, and spring onions.

On Easter Monday the game of bottle-picking takes place at Hallaton. Previous to the start of play, a rough-and-ready meal is provided in the shape of a scramble for two large meat pies and a dozen penny loaves. Then appears upon the scene a large wooden bottle, bound strongly with iron, and filled with ale. Over this a fierce contest rages between the Hallaton champions and the youths from the neighboring village of Medbourne, each party endeavoring to wrest it from the other. Play concluded, the victors repair to the market-place, where they drink the contents of the bottle, which has served its purpose for over fifty years.

SAFETY FOR CHILDREN

Mothers should never give their little ones a medicine that they do not know to be absolutely safe and harmless. The so-called soothing medicines contain opiates that stupify the child without curing its ailments. An over dose of these medicines may kill the child. Baby's Own Tablets is the only child's medicine that gives the mother the guarantee of a government analyst that it contains no poisonous opiate or harmful drug. The Tablets cure constipation, indigestion, wind colic, diarrhoea, destroy worms, break up colds, and make teething easy. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The monetary loss on the great lakes this season was over $2,000,000.

TAKING THE OATH.

There Are Many Symbolic Variations In the Different Countries.

Taking of the oath in America and in Great Britain, whether in court or in the assumption of official duties, is a simple matter. Not so everywhere, however. When a Chinaman, for instance, swears to tell the truth, it is customary for him to kneel, when a china saucer is handed him and the oath is administered as follows:

"You shall tell the truth and the whole truth. The saucer is cracked. If you do not tell the truth, your soul will be cracked like the saucer," the last words being spoken as the one kneeling breaks the chinaware. The exact significance of this oath has never been made precisely clear to Occidental minds; but its solemnity and force, however, are quite clear, it appears, to the Oriental temperament.

Other symbolic variations of the Chinese oath are the extinguishing of a candle or the cutting off of a chicken's head, the light of the candle representing the witness' soul, and the fate of the fowl symbolizing the end of a perjurer.

In parts of India tigers' and lizards' skins are substituted for the Bible of Christian countries, and, it is averred, the penalty of breaking the Indian oath is that in one case the witness will become the prey of a tiger, and in the other that his body will eventually become covered with scales, like the skin of a lizard.

In the courts of law in Norway there is a prelude to the oath proper, consisting of a long homily on the subject of its sanctity and a disquisition on the terrible consequences of not abiding by it. When the witness is thought to be appalled by the sense of his fearful responsibility, the oath is then administered, he holding aloft the while his thumb and fore and middle fingers as an emblem of the Trinity.

Turks and other Mohammedans take the oath with their foreheads reverently resting on the open Koran. The one sworn takes the book into his hands and, stooping low as if in the presence of a higher power, slowly bows his head until it touches the volume which is to him inspired.

In some provinces of Spain the witness must cross the thumb of one hand over the forefinger of the other, then, kissing this symbolic if primitive cross, he announces, "By this cross I swear to tell the truth!"

Valuable Ragged Clothes.

It often happens that the parts taken by actors on the stage oblige them to wear ragged clothes. To obtain such clothes, of the requisite degree of decrepitude, is likely to be very difficult. They cannot be made to order; it is necessary that they shall have arrived at the desired condition of prolonged wear. The remark applies as much to a coat or a pair of pantaloons as to a pair of shoes.

Many a professional comedian has spent anxious days in searching the slums of a city for some accidental "bummer" whose coat or trousers possessed the requisite attributes of raggedness and obvious antiquity.

The same idea applies, of course, to the shabby and ragged clothing often worn by women on the stage. To look right, it must be the real thing—which is by no means so easy to get as one might imagine. A "find" of the kind, once made, is anxiously treasured—the first thing done with it naturally, being to subject it to a thorough fumigation. Ash dumps have furnished many a precious article of apparel for theatrical wardrobes.

Dreadnought Plans Gone.

London, Oct. 29.—Discussing a recent rumor in the House of Commons yesterday, Reginald McKenna, First Lord of the Admiralty, admitted that confidential drawings having to do with the construction of the Dreadnought cruiser Indomitable, had disappeared.

He added, however, that as the battleship had been in commission for some time the missing plans had lost much of their value.

The loss of the sketches has resulted in the usual suggestion that they have found their way into the hands of the German Government, but so far as known this is a surmise purely.

Judge Censures Jury.

Goshen, N.Y., Oct. 29.—After considering the case for twelve hours a jury yesterday acquitted Frank Perry, who was charged with the murder of Scanlon Carminio. Perry was held to answer another charge of murder.

When the jury announced its verdict Justice Morschauser expressed himself in strong terms of disapproval and dismissed them from the courtroom, saying: "I do not see how you can face your townsmen. If verdicts like this are to be rendered by juries upon such evidence as was presented in this case, then neither life nor property will be safe."

Police Catch Two Burglars.

Kingston, Oct. 29.—Augustus Wilkinson and William Bermingham, young married men, were committed for trial for burglary at R. J. Carson's wholesale grocery. At 1 o'clock yesterday morning the police were given a tip that two men came out of the grocery with bundles and hid them in the rear of St. Andrew's Church, across the road. Three policemen waited twenty minutes and got the men, who had cigarettes and cigars valued at $66.

Vault Door Fell Off.

Kingston, Oct. 29.—Postmaster James Stewart and Arthur Ellis, architect, were injured at the post-office yesterday afternoon, when a new vault was being put into the office. The postmaster tried to open the door, which, as it swung, loosened from its bearings and fell, knocking Ellis down. His escape from death was miraculous. He had severe cuts about the head and body. Stewart, in endeavoring to save Ellis, suffered severe cuts in both arms.

A REVERSE FOR ASQUITH; TARIFF REFORMER WINS

In Bermondsley Bye-election—Dumphrey, the Conservative Candidate, Has a Large Plurality Over the Ministerialist Candidate.

London, Eng., Oct. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Bermondsey bye-election yesterday resulted in the return of the Conservative and tariff reform candidate, who polled 4,278 votes. The runner-up was Spencer L. Hughes, the Ministerialist, with 3,291 votes; Dr. Alfred Salter, Labor-Socialist, totalled only 1,435 supporters. Ald. Dumphrey's plurality over the Ministerialist was thus 987, but his vote fell short by 448 of the combined poll of his two opponents. This is an opposition gain, the late member, Dr. George J. Cooper, having been returned as a Liberal in a straight party contest by a majority of 1,759. In the now preceding election, Bermondsey returned Conservatives, and it has always been regarded as an uncertain constituency.

The Women's Freedom League took advantage of the fact that yesterday was the first anniversary of the "grille protest" in the House of Commons (when attendants who sought to empty the ladies' gallery found that two suffragettes had firmly chained themselves to the grille or lattice, to inject violence into the bye-election. A Mrs. Chapin smashed a bottle containing corrosive acid upon a ballot box. Her intention evidently was to destroy the ballots in the box as a protest against the exclusion of women from the right of franchise. What she accomplished was the painful burning of some of the election officers and the assurance of her own arrest.

A similar outrage was attempted at another booth, by a young girl who wore the suffragette colors. In the latter instance little damage was done beyond the burning of the finger tips of the election officials who removed the bits of broken glass.

Later, in an interview, Miss Christobel Pankhurst, while deploring the wounding of the officials, asserted with much emphasis: "It is the Government that is responsible. It is the Government that drives women to these acts."

EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN AT KNOX PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Will Open Sunday Morning When Rev. J. D. Morrow will Preach—Rev. A. E. Mitchell, Hamilton, and Rev. Dr. Farquharson, Durham, expected.

On Sunday morning, Oct. 31st, the evangelistic campaign that will centralise in the three Presbyterian churches will be opened in Knox church at the morning service by Rev. J. D. Morrow, of Dale Presbyterian church. Mr. Morrow is an enthusiastic minister, who puts the same energy into his ministerial duties and pulpit work that he did when doing 440 yards in championship time. For Rev. J. D. Morrow is a Canadian champion and withal is most attractive speaker who puts the true note in all his messages. He will preach in Knox church morning and evening and the officers of the church are preparing for large congregations.

Mr. Morrow will also be one of the special speakers at the mass meeting in the Opera House, Sunday afternoon at 4.15.

On Monday evening, Nov. 1st, Rev. A. E. Mitchell, of Knox church, Hamilton, will take charge of the services in Knox church. Mr. Mitchell has won a distinguished place for himself in the ministry of the Presbyterian church as an organizer and preacher. When he first took hold of Erskine church, Ottawa, it had a membership of 83. He left it after a few years of his vigorous work with a membership of nearly a thousand and with one of the largest Sunday schools in the Dominion. He is now pastor of Knox church, Hamilton, one of the largest in that city. He was chosen by the General Assembly's Committee to take part in the Kootenay campaign last spring. People of the city should not miss the opportunity of hearing him.

The second week of the campaign will be under the direction of Rev. Dr. Farquharson, of Durham. Dr. Farquharson is a distinguished scholar and a strong preacher. His service in the church was recognized by Knox College a year ago when the Senate conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

The services in Knox church are open to the public, particularly to those living in the southern part of the city.

A BIG SHAM-BATTLE

ontreal, Oct. 28.—Messrs. Laurier, lding and Brodeur, three ministers of the Crown, have been in conference to-day with a local representa ive of Swan, Hunter & Wigham hardson, of Newcastle-on-Tyne. Clarence I. DeSola, the representative, submitted a precis to each of Ministers setting forth the proposals of the company in definite m, which will be studied individu lly by the Ministers before naval airs again come up in the Cabinet. ter the conference Mr. DeSola only: "We are in the field; that all I can say." It is known, howr, that the SwanHunter Company has purchased land at Halifax, ough it has been denied that the m's activities would be limited to at port.

The battle of life is beginning to k like a big sham-battle in this ear of comparative grace, 1909. The inant feature of world-life is ll war, and the spirit of r, common, everyday, brutal murr. In order that we may take away m the other fellow what he has wants to have. It is bad enough have to kill people in self-defence, t the furthering of mere trade by peals to arms is little better than present deliberate butchery of Congo natives. So long as men int to the slaughter of battles as e proud record of history, we can pect nothing better. The "pride, mp and panoply" of war is, perps, on the wane. It is fostered by great financiers since, without r the world's business might ttle down to a regular system of w and order with its limited profits. A war is the making of financiers' fortunes. It provides a time reaping the true harvest of blood m the needs of the people. But hat can we expect when some minters of the Gospel are found to endorse it on the plea, of course, that hrist said that He had brought not ace, but a sword. Such a transparent distortion of the meaning of he Scriptures, however, serves its urpose.

There are occasions when the people arise and put a stop to the wholesale robbery that goes on under the name of war, which leaves most nations in a much worse condition after than they could possibly have been without it. If war is hell, as some scientious commanders have said, hy go on with it. The spirit of ternationalism is gradually breakg down the lust of blood which hich rivalry of trade, rivalry of and the unlisted schemes of he great financial houses of Europe have so long fostered. The Rothschilds founded their fortunes on the attles of Napoleon.

Must it be acknowledged, then, hat the storm and stress of life, the fight for food, is so fierce that we must kill some in order to enable the rest to live? No better work ies to the hand of the clergy than showing to the people the folly of strife of all sorts. It would produce good results, and nowhere more quickly than in the direction of the present attempt to make the poor poorer and the rich richer in Canada by the foundation of a "New Canadian Navy." This determination to keep control of the high seas is too expensive and unholy. Why should one nation more than another desire it? The answer is as it is in all such cases that the rich get richer by plundering their rivals, not (as a rule) by fair trade. If a step is put to it the greatest waste in the world would cease. Let us think for a moment what the people of Europe would have been without war.

Opening the door to a participation in the world's wars by adding another to the navies of the world is a crime. It is enough that we have to keep up the present status of the empire by contributing a dreadnought or two, without assuming a burden that no man knows when we can lay down. "There is civil war between the sexes," says the Montreal Star. The horrors of anarchy are looming in the near distance. The principles of conduct have been dropped for those of the rankest sort of materialism. The one outstanding exception is the determination to open the land to the people. Monopoly and graft are doing now what physical disease used to do in the old days of superstition and ignorance. We shall have to apply the analysis of science to the war-disease. It may be due to a microbe after all. In which event let us "declare war" on it.

AGRICULTURE IN BRITAIN

Simcoe Reformer, Liberal.

Editor J. A. Macdonald, of the Toronto Globe, in his speech the other night at the Hamilton Canadian Club, attributed the decay of British agriculture to one thing only—landlordism. This is surely a superficial view. There were landlords in Britain in the heyday of its prosperity. If there is less land tilled there now than fifty years ago, it is because Britain took down the bars and decided to permit the foodstuffs of the world to go in free, that her factory workers might have cheap bread. The men who repealed the corn laws were not ignoramuses; they came to a parting of the ways—or thought they had—and, with their eyes open, deliberately made a choice. As to whether that choice will, in the final solution of things, be found wise or foolish, is another question. The one thing clear is that the adoption of free trade started Britain on another splendid burst of industrial expansion, that her rivals are only now beginning to overtake. But the shield had another side. Free trade built ten thousand British factories, but it turned as many farms into grouse preserves and sent her tenant farmers her agricultural peasantry, the very breath of life of the old Britain, to the Argentines, to the United States to the colonies.

Blatchford's "Darkest England," says great stress on the error of making England one-sided, a mere world workshop by Free Trade. At any rate Free Trade killed the British farmer and by the time protected Germany United States and France have finally overhauled British mechanics, as they are rapidly doing, Britain will re-introduce Protection, which they they call Tariff-Reform. Has that time come? If Canada's food supply became as cheap as Great Britain's by cutting out our tariff and letting in the foodstuffs of South America Canadian manufacturers could supply our market, but it would be at the expense, as we see, of Canadian agriculture and the higher standard of Canadian popular life.

COLLEGE ANARCHY

It is not the wild young things called students who are to blame for the anarchy prevailing at various colleges. It is the alleged authorities themselves, who are to blame. It might be a wise thing to establish student police since education seems to aggravate rather than alleviate that disease of youth which is a compound of energy and asininity. Many a young man has been maimed for life and many a poor student has been made poorer by the loss of his clothes, all because the hoydenish spirit of the unformed youth of our colleges has no better outlet than roughhouse. It is doubtful if many of these gentry would stand up and "fight fair." They never do. They hunt in packs and attack the defenceless. At any rate the authorities are those upon whom the blame rests and when, one of these days, a life is lost we shall know where to fix the blame. Meanwhile it would be wise to let loose a half-dozen third-rate pugilists and bums amongst the rioters who would, no doubt speedily find that discretion was the better part when any real fighting had to be done.

The winning of the Bermondsey, England, bye-election by a Conservative on Thursday was significant. The majority was unexpectedly large Tariff reform won.

Lloyd-George speaks Welsh in the family circle. Racery, if we may coin a word, dies hard. No matter how democratic people are they cling to pride of race, which, after all, is perhaps the greatest obstacle to human progress. Reduced to its lowest terms, race-pride is personal pride or snobbery.

When the British Columbia people agree at the coming election to aid the C.N.R. by a Government guarantee of bonds for the B.C. section of that railway, Canada will have a third great trans-continental railway. It will not have cost her a dollar. Why was the G.T.P. contracted for at such an enormous cost to Canada? This question stares us all in the face and looks as if it demanded an answer. It may be the greatest graft of them all.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Chas. N. Cyr's Rheumatism

Statement of a Man Who Suffered for a Year From Different Forms of Kidney Disease and Found a Speedy Cure

New Richmond Station, Que., Oct. 29.—(Special).—In these cold fall days when Rheumatism, Sciatica, Backache and other Kidney Diseases are working havoc in every corner of Canada, thousands will be interested in the statement of Mr. Chas. N. Cyr, the well-known barber of this place.

"I had been a sufferer from Rheumatism and Backache for a year," Mr. Cyr states. "My head also troubled me and it was hard to recollect my thoughts. I heard of cures made by Dodd's Kidney Pills and made up my mind to try them. The marvellous effect of the first box on my system at once raised my hopes and by continuing to take them I am now a sound and well man. All my pains and aches are gone and I am able to do my work without pain."

Mr. Cyr is only one of thousands whom Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured of Rheumatism, Sciatica and Backache. For Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure sick or disordered Kidneys. And if your Kidneys are well you can't have Rheumatism, Sciatica or Backache.

Where Inspiration Sits.

Mrs. Quilluser came tiptoeing softly into her husband's study, rested a hand lightly on his shoulder, and peered over at the sheaf of half-written sheets on his desk.

"What are you working on now, dearest?" she asked gently.

"On Mary's mittens," he answered, pleasantly, but without looking up.

Mrs. Quilluser studied a moment, as if planning. "Dearest, Willie needs a pair of shoes more than Mary does the mittens. I have already promised them to the poor boy. Hadn't you better work on Willie's shoes first, dear?"

"All right, Nellie, all right," he replied, kindly, turning his eyes up into Nellie's great patient ones.

Then he pushed back "An Ode to the Dancing Leaves," and cheerfully began to write a Sunday special on "A New Substitute for Coal."

His Trouble.

"What brought you here, my poor man?" inquired the prison visitor.

"Well, lady," replied the prisoner, "I guess my trouble started from attendin' too many weddin's."

"Ah! You learned to drink there, or steal perhaps?"

"No, lady. I was always the bridegroom."

Put Union Before Wages.

New York, Oct. 30.—Action taken at a mass meeting of the Ladies' Waistmakers' Union Thursday night strongly foreshadowed a probable strike of 42,000 operatives within the next few days, unless the employers accede to the demands of the workers. The union is asking recognition and a ten per cent. increase in wages. The employers have submitted a compromise offer of fifteen per cent. increase without recognition, but this the mass meeting rejected Thursday night.

No one heard the shots fired, but it is thought the man committed suicide.

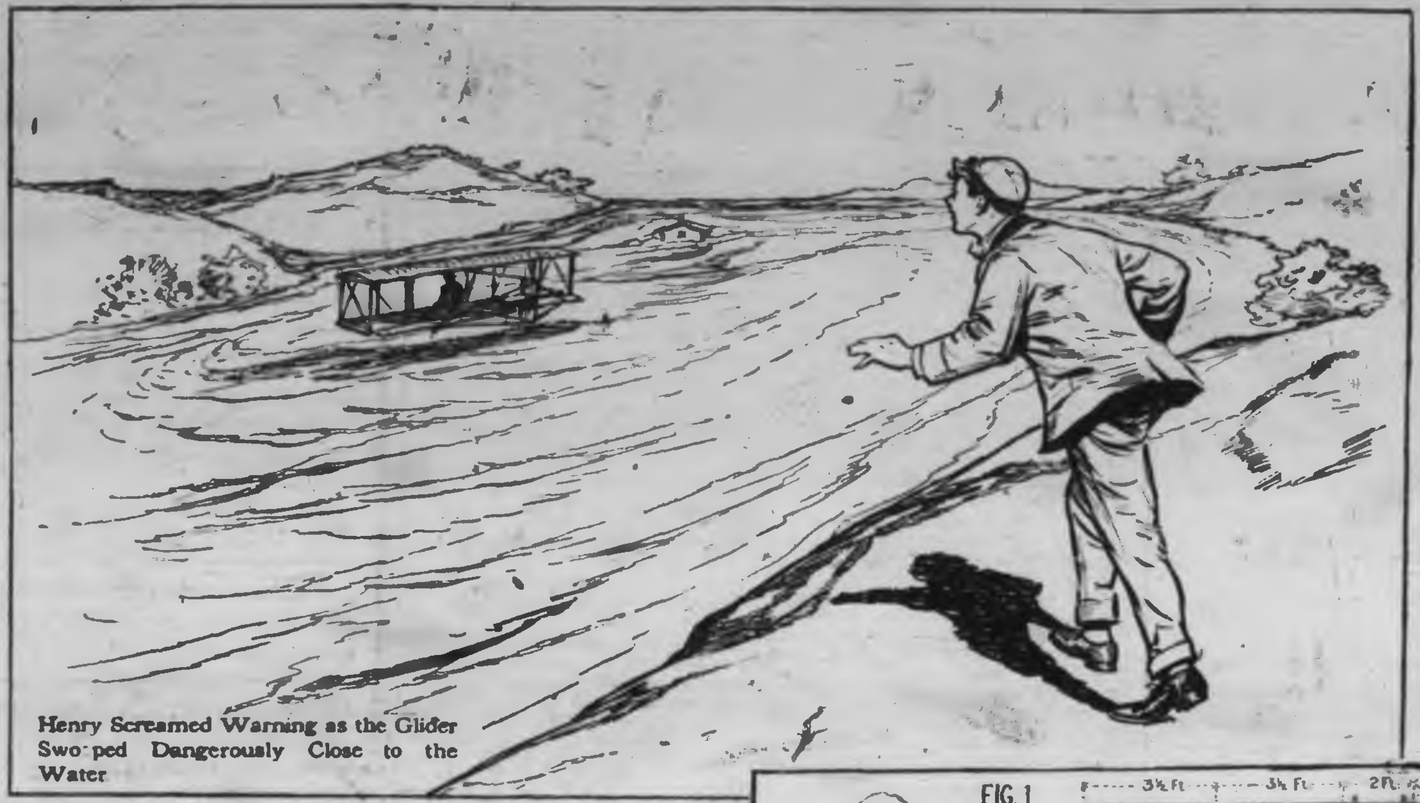
AN ADVENTURE OF INTEREST TO THE REVIEW READERS

FRANK WILLIAMS' GREAT, GLIDE

BEING AN ADVENTURE WITH THE AIRSHIP WHITE EAGLE

Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.



Henry Screamed Warning as the Glider Swooped Dangerously Close to the Water

FRANK WILLIAMS' father pretended not to look surprised when a long official looking envelope was laid beside his son's plate at breakfast one morning.

Usually such documents came to him. But to-day it was different. Frank in turn pretended to be as unconcerned as if it were an ordinary occurrence. He fingered the long envelope and glanced at the postmark, just as if he didn't know that it would be the name of a large Western metropolis. In the upper corner was printed "Junior Aero Club." The eyes of the whole family were upon Frank when he opened the envelope, but no one spoke while he glanced silently over the typewritten contents. Then he appeared to relapse into dense thought.

Finally Mr. Williams summoned up courage enough to interrupt his promising young son's meditation.

"Something important, my boy?"

"Oh, just the announcement of my election. I'm a non-resident member now. Junior Aero Club of ——, you know," answered Frank importantly. Henry Williams snickered. Henry was five years older, and everything Frank did was a joke.

However, in spite of Henry's laughter it was decidedly Frank's innings at the breakfast table that day, especially when he disclosed to the awed family circle some very professional looking blueprints also forwarded by the Junior Aero Club.

These plans meant a great deal to the youthful aviator. With their help he felt confident of realizing his dream of flying. He had worked many a Saturday trying to perfect a real airship, but without success. Now these working drawings gave him new hope.

His former efforts in aerial construction, the Christobel and the Zephorino, were the cause of interesting adventures. But they were only models. All his ambitions now centred in the unfinished machine lying inside the balloon shed down in the aerodrome.

Frank always called things by their proper names. I suppose anybody else would have called his balloon shed a cow shed and his aerodrome a plain ordinary clover patch. Everybody laughed at him except his father, who realized how deeply in earnest Frank was about his airships.

But if Frank had created a family sensation that morning Henry certainly claimed attention the next morning.

This time the big long envelope lay on his plate.

"No, sir, I'm doing something useful!" answered Henry, grinning at Frank, who tried not to show how curious he was. Then it came out how the old naturalist down at the village had told Henry about the competition being held by a famous natural history museum. This museum announced a competitive examination open to all youths under twenty-one. Six positions were open, and the lucky winners were to be trained to become full fledged naturalists. The large envelope contained the printed entry blanks which Henry had written for. Henry had a great bent in this direction. He was no fool even if he did make the mistake of laughing at his younger brother.

Henry put off filling out the entry blanks until to-morrow. "To-morrow" somehow didn't leave any time, nor did the day after, but the hot early summer sun that shone on Henry's "to-morrow" was working hard. It melted the deep snows on the mountain range just visible miles away across the prairie.

The Williams farm stood on a piece of high ground forming a bluff. The river wound around the base, enclosing the farm on three sides. The fourth side was the meadow that Frank called the aerodrome when his deep problems in aerial navigation were being solved.

Now the Prairie River took its rise in the distant mountains, and when about a week later the result of the sun's hot work began to be apparent the river gradually rose from a sprawling, shallow prairie stream into a deep, swift running torrent that began to encroach on the farm. Nobody paid much attention to it, though, as the summer freshet was a yearly affair. The river usually kept within its banks and beyond the overflow of a field or two rarely did any damage. And Frank worked away, caring little what the river did.

"How to construct a glider" is a subject on which a great deal has been written. I am going to give a brief account of how Frank built his, so if you are familiar with it just skip the next few paragraphs.

The only difference between a glider and a regular aeroplane is that the glider has no motors and coasts through the air propelled by gravity. It can never rise higher than from its starting point. This is usually from the top of some hill, the objective point being the bottom of the hill, &c.

Frank's glider was the "two surface" kind, his cloth planes being one above the other. First he drew his plans, carefully figuring out the amount of plane surface to support his 115 pounds of weight. This he arrived at by means of a weight scale table supplied by the Aero Club.

His calculations resulted in the preparation of the following pieces. These Frank cut from a spruce plank in the farm carpenter shop:—

Four strips five-eighths inch thick, one [illegible] wide, sixteen feet long; twelve cross-stays one-half inch thick, one and one-quarter inches wide, two feet six inches [illegible] upright supports one-half inch [illegible], one and one-quarter inches wide, three feet long; thirty-three strips for bent ribs three-sixteenths inch thick, one-half inch wide, three feet three inches long; two arm sticks one inch thick, one and three-quarters inches wide and two feet eight inches long; two rudder sticks five-eighths inch square and six feet long; several strips one-half by three-fourths inch for building horizontal and vertical rudders.

Frank might be said to have laid the keel of the White Eagle, as he named his airship, when he laid out the two long bottom frames for the lower plane surface and bolted the cross stays to them, as shown in Figure 1 of diagram. Then he nailed on the ribs, as shown on the lower plane. There were sixteen ribs. Each rib was one foot apart with the exception of a two foot space in the middle. This space was taken up by the two-arm sticks and the body space, as shown in Figure 1. On the upper plane there was no hold for body. He used one-eighth inch bolts, with washers at both ends for the crosspieces. His wiring was No. 16 piano wire, and each crosspiece was braced by the diagonal, as shown in Figure 4. The ribs were nailed on with flat headed brads seven-eighths of an inch long. They extended nine inches beyond the rear edges of the main frame, as shown in Figure 1. They were arched by bowing the loose end and then nailing to the rear beam. Each rib was then curved the same as shown in Figure 2.

Having constructed the skeleton framework, as shown in Figure 5, Frank covered the surface by tacking cambric first to the front edge, then stretched it lightly over the bent ribs and tucked it securely to the rear ends of the ribs. He took the further safety precaution to glue the cloth to all the ribs and frames. He left the opening in the centre of the lower plane surface as shown in Figure 1 for the operator's body.

He was now ready to assemble the two planes. He placed the two surfaces three feet six inches apart and connected them with his twelve upright support strips, placing one at right angles to a crosspiece. He bolted the uprights into place as in Figure 2. Then he braced the planes with the wiring as shown in Figure 4.

Frank next made the vertical rudder. This rudder is fixed and immovable. Its duty is to keep the glider heading into the wind. He stretched cambric over a wooden frame, which he nailed to the ends of the long rudder sticks fastened to the rear of the glider. Then he made the horizontal rudder (also immovable) of cloth over a wood framework, fastening it so it intersected the vertical rudder in the middle. Guy wires and diagonal wires kept it in place, as shown in Figures 1 and 4. The duty of the horizontal wire was to hold the glider steady and prevent its dipping.

The rudder sticks upon which these rudders are built are bolted firmly to the main strips at middle of rear of spot shown in Figures 1 and 4.

The above is a description from which any boy with a knack for mechanics can build a similar glider.

Maybe Frank wasn't proud of it the night it was done! He had no thought of any other topic or perhaps he would have noticed the unusual gravity that overspread his father's face as the week passed. The fact was the Prairie River was rising to an unheard of depth. Previous "high water marks" on the banks had disappeared in the swirling flood that hemmed in the farm on three sides.

Mr. Williams had reason to look grave as he surveyed the surrounding country some nights later from his housetop. But Frank had gone to bed, only happily conscious of having built a real flying machine at last.

The official trial trip was to be held to-morrow in the "aerodrome" in the presence of all his friends. It would be a great day for Frank, for he was sure of success. In the week it had been completed he had fairly learned how to control the glider in his many secret trials conducted alone on the meadow hill. He had nearly wrecked it twice and was a mass of bruises, but was so exultant over his success he didn't mind them. But, whew! he was tired.

The next thing Frank knew his father stood over him holding a lighted lantern.

"Wake up, son, if you want to save your airship. The balloon shed will be flooded in about half an hour at the rate the water's rising!" he cried with a grim laugh. Frank, startled and frightened, sprang into his clothes, rushed down stairs and, taking the lantern, ran out into the darkness. The moonlight showed him that the whole "aerodrome" was a lake. He tore down the path, struck the edge of the "aerodome" and finished his journey ankle deep in the water, which had crept up until it covered the shed floor.

Fortunately the White Eagle was suspended from the ceiling, so he found it undamaged. He swung the light fabric over his shoulder and rushed out of the shed, to splash his way back to the house. The glider was saved.

No member of the Williams family slept that night. True, there was no damage to the house, as it was too far above the flood, but the trembling waters still rose and gradually covered the broad acres of farming land until dawn broke to show a strange sight.

"Why, we're on an island!" cried Frank, looking out. Sure enough, the fourth, or land, side back of the house had become a broad lake, which glittered in the rising sun.

Frank looked in vain for the balloon shed. After some difficulty he discovered the peaked roof just sticking out above the turbid waters.

"I guess I'll have to conduct my ascensions from the water, like Count Zeppelin," he remarked to Henry, who stood by his side. No answer from Henry.

"What's the matter, Hank?" asked Frank, noticing Henry's silence and generally glum look.

"Frank, I'm the biggest chump on this island!" exclaimed Henry, savagely, "and it's just what I deserve for putting off things. If I don't mail that examination entry blank to-day it'll be too late to enter the competition. Our rowboats have been swept off by the flood. I'll have to build a raft and try to get over that way. It's my only chance!"

So all the rest of the morning Henry and his father built the raft. Frank tried to offer some practical hints on the subject, but Henry, being made irritable by worry, rudely told him to shut up and not butt in. Frank retired in high wrath, only to be ruffled up again when he magnanimously volunteered his services to man the raft. Henry laughed at him. He didn't want any "kids" getting in the way.

The raft was carried to a spot where the river was very narrow. In Frank's judgment Henry would have stood a better chance if he had set out across the flooded meadow lands at the back of the house, where there was no current. But Henry was in a hurry, and proved the old motto over again, "Haste makes waste."

The frail craft struck a snag in midstream, went to pieces, and Henry went ashore—the same shore he started from, utterly exhausted from his swim against the strong current. Even at that he would have probably lost his life if Mr. Williams and two of the hired men hadn't jumped in and fished him out.

The examination entry blanks were still to be mailed.

Frank gazed sadly at the damp papers lying on the parlor table. All his anger against Henry had evaporated. He realized how much it meant to Henry that the papers be mailed. How could it be done?

He could not tell how long he stared at the papers, but as he looked the idea came and it took his breath away. Dare he do it?

The next minute saw Frank out of the house and making his way up the bluff that jutted on the swollen river. The bluff was the highest part of the bank and standing about a hundred feet high. The river below was at its narrowest, deepest and swiftest, being not more than a hundred and fifty feet wide. A gently sloping bank lined the opposite side.

Frank stood there debating as he measured the distance, then noted the direction of the wind. A steady breeze was blowing across the river from just the right quarter. Finally he gritted his teeth and argued to himself, "What's the difference? I know the White Eagle will do it! Didn't I glide more than two hundred feet yesterday? I could have gone double that! This is only a couple of hundred, with the wind just right. Even if I do fail I am a better swimmer than Henry and I ain't afraid of the old river. No, sir! It's my duty to help poor Hank out, and I'm going to do it!"

And the young aviator marched firmly back to the house. He entered the parlor, quietly pocketed the papers, then went out to completely overhaul the White Eagle in the barn. No aeronaut ever gave a more thorough examination than did Frank. He tested every rib, frame, wire and bolt, but he was mighty quiet as to what he intended to do. He knew his father never would let him attempt such a thing, yet he felt perfectly justified in trying because his conscience told him it was his duty to aid his brother. Henry might never get another such chance again. Frank never thought of weighing the risk he ran.

He carried the glider up to the bluff, being careful to wait until he could do so unnoticed.

Frank will never forget that sunny morning in early summer. He hardly dared to look into the river below. His face was as white as the cambric planes as he got into the space between the armsticks. When the armsticks were under his resting arms he slowly turned the glider toward the edge of the bluff, took a couple of steps forward, then stopped, shaking so that he made the glider tremble all over. He began to lose his nerve when he heard a shout.

It was Henry's voice, commanding him to stop. If it had been his father's he might have obeyed—but Henry acted like a tonic on his oozing courage.

Frank started up again and ran half a dozen steps. Henry saw him leap into the air and then the panting brother arrived just too late on the very spot that Frank had occupied.

Henry could hardly believe his eyes as he watched his intrepid young brother shoot out from the edge of the bluff at a tremendous speed. He expected every instant to see him drop like a stone into the boiling current below, but Frank sailed half way across without dropping ten feet.

Then the astonished spectator saw him tilt the position of his body backward, which had the effect of changing the glider's course to a sweeping downward curve. But Frank miscalculated the proper distribution of his weight. Henry screamed a warning as the glider swooped dangerously close to the water. Frank, however, tilted his body forward in the nick of time and the glider flew on at a level course about ten feet above the river. Fifty feet, forty, then thirty feet from safety on the opposite bank. Henry was horrified to see the machine begin to wobble violently and half capsize, almost pitching out Frank. Henry didn't know it, but Frank's craft had been struck by what aviators call a "pocket of wind." Frank lost his balance. The White Eagle plunged downward until Frank's feet touched the water. Only a few yards separated them from the shore. Could Frank keep above water? He made one last effort to right the craft and in this was aided by the wind, which suddenly steadied.

The White Eagle rushed on, Frank's legs dragging in the water. As shore approached Frank endeavored to swerve the machine to avoid running into a tree that grew on the bank, but too late. The White Eagle struck the tree full on and fell a tangled heap on the water's edge, burying Frank underneath.

It seemed an age to his frantic brother before Frank crawled out from under the wreck. He limped some, but yelled a reassuring message over to Henry, whose first impulse was to scold Frank for his foolhardiness.

"What on earth did you ever do such a crazy thing for?" shouted Henry.

Frank pulled out the entry blanks.

"Oh, I just thought I'd mail a letter for you, Hank. You tried hard this morning, and I didn't want to see you slip up on your chance. That's why I made the glide."

Henry almost fell down when he realized what Frank had done for him and he tried hard to say what he felt, but Frank only waved his hand and started to limp off to the post office with a sprained ankle.

It was a long, painful hobble, but it would have taken more than a sprained ankle to have lowered Frank's spirits. He had saved Henry's chances for him and realized his own ambition at last. He could really fly.

Henry Williams is now a member of the Museum staff. He was one of the lucky six highest who successfully passed the examination. He has learned many things already, but one of the greatest is not to laugh at things you don't understand, especially "kid brothers." Henry's superiors say he has a very promising career before him, but no one realizes any clearer than he that his chance was solely due to Frank's great glide.

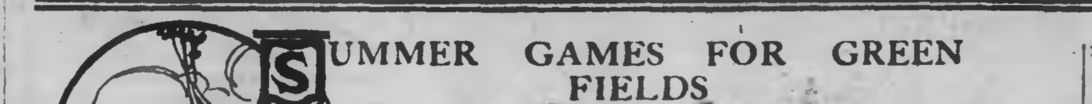
SUMMER GAMES FOR GREEN FIELDS



Playing the Game of "The Three Little Sisters"

IN the summer time when the sun is very warm and the meadows wave with long grasses it is great fun to play hide and seek among them, though after a while more quiet games are better. Perhaps you do not know many quiet games, and perhaps you are quite tired of the old ones and would like to play something new. In any case here are some that you may play with weeds and leaves and grasses.

The first one is to be played with everyday weeds, the kind that some people call bitter dock. It grows almost everywhere that it ought not to grow, and it is not especially pretty, either. It has long ribbed leaves and small homely green flowers with tufty white things around them. If you have never met these little weeds you must let me introduce you to them. They belong to the order of the Green Field and they are Knights of the Grassblade. Gather a handful of them with long stems and I will tell you of a game that you can play with them. It is called

A Green Field Tournament.

Two or more children or some stray grown up person can play this game together. It is a nice lazy kind of game and it may be quite exciting. You can sit in a nice shady place under a tree and play it by the hour as long as there are any knights left who want to prove their prowess.

First of all, after you have gathered your bunch of these little knights, select six whom you think very staunch and sturdy and worthy to win. Your opponent, of course, does the same.

Now choose one to start with. Hold him firmly in your hand, while all your antagonists do the same with theirs.

You must really try to disable all those other knights and win! How do you do it? You simply make your little knight go around the waiting circle of other knights, trying to cut their stems in two. Use a quick stroke and fell your foe with a stroke. If you fail to injure him you must wait till it is your turn again. It is his now. He lashes himself with vengeance against your knight and your knight falls to the ground. You cannot use him again. Take a new knight from those you have selected and see if he is stronger than the other. You must play in turn, and the player who holds out longest in the tournament and successfully wins over all the other players by felling them to the ground one by one wins the honors of the tourney and the knighthood of the grassblade valorous.

And here is the game to be played with grasses. Any kind of grass will do. The game is called

The Three Little Sisters.

This is how you play it. Two persons can play.

First you select three grasses of different lengths. They are the three little sisters. Their names are Little, Bigger and Big. Little is only one year old. Bigger is two years old and Big is five years old. Now, let's see which will grow up fastest!

See which will get up to ten first.

Hold your three little sisters in your hand so that your opponent cannot see their length. Each must be a little longer than the other and your opponent will have to guess which is which.

If he guesses rightly he wins the number that he guesses, but he gives you back the little sister and you keep that grass still in your hand and guess, now that it is your turn, from him. If you guess that the second grass blade in his hand is Big, you win five, but if you are wrong, your opponent keeps the number you have guessed.

The first to reach ten in the count wins and grows up first.

Any other number will do quite as well as ten if players are careful to keep their count right.

Besides these two games there is one that you may play with leaves. It is called Sunlight and Shadow.

This is the way to play it:—First find five pretty leaves of a certain kind of tree. Your opponent must have a different kind of leaf from yours, and only two can play the game at a time together.

Now that you have your five pretty leaves place them in your lap. One player tosses up his leaf. He has chosen to be "Sunlight" and you have chosen to represent "Shadow." So his leaf must fall with its top toward the sunlight and your leaf must fall when tossed with its upper part toward the ground, where shadow lies.

In turn you each [illegible]. When your opponent's leaf falls with its upper part toward the ground it belongs to Shadow and it is yours. When it falls as it ought, with the upper part toward the sunlight, it remains his and he keeps it to play with again.

The one who wins all the leaves from the other player is the successful winner of the game of sunlight and shadow.

Try these little games some sunny summer day when the sky is very blue and it is too warm to run about much. You will find that the games that you make yourself from flowers and grass and leaves are quite as much fun as the games that you buy in stores and play indoors in the winter time.

The Battle of Yawns and Gaps.

BY HORACE SEYMOUR KELLER.

On the road to Sleepy Town,
When the sun is sinking low,
Tousle Head and Curly Brown,
In their uniforms of snow,
Storm the steps upon the stair,
Pitter, patter up the flight,
Making music ev'rywhere
In the frolic of the night.

There's a station just above
Where the little soldiers flock,
The tick-tack from the alcove
Halts them both before the clock,
And the sun upon its face,
Sinking low, puts them to flight;
Then they scamper in a race
To the forts of snowy white.

On the way to Trundleville,
Pretty station fair to see,
Stop the travellers who will
Soon go rollicking and free
Through the magic land of dreams,
Where the pixie and the fay
Frolic by the crystal streams,
Turning nighttime into day.

Tousle Head and Curly Brown
Fight the battle, Yawns and Gaps,
But the sandman will not down,
For he holds the tiny chaps
In his grasp, and after tales
Of the fairies come the pray'rs—
Quiet reigns in Sleepyvales
In the nursery up stairs.

CHAPTER I.

UPON a certain dreary April afternoon in the year of grace 1906 the apprehensions of Philip Kirkwood, Esq., painter, were enlivened by the discovery that he was ocupying that singularly distressing social position which may be summed up succinctly in a phrase through long usage grown proverbial, "alone in London." Inevitably an extremist because of his youth (he had just turned twenty-five), he took no count of mitigating matters and would hotly have resented the suggestion that his case was anything but altogether deplorable and forlorn.

That he was not actually at the end of his resources went for nothing. He held the distinction a quibble, mockingly immaterial, like the store of guineas in his pocket, too insignificant for mention when contrasted with his needs. And his base of supplies, the American city of his nativity, whence, and not without a glow of pride in his secret heart, he was wont to register at foreign hostelries, had been arbitrarily cut off from him by one of those accidents sardonically classified by insurance and express corporations as acts of God.

Now, to one who has lived all his days serenely in accord with the dictates of his own sweet will, taking no thought for the morrow, such a situation naturally seems both appalling and intolerable, at the first blush. It must be confessed that, to begin with, Kirkwood drew a long and disconsolate face over his fix.

Then he resolutely shrugged it off and went in search of man's most faithful dumb friend—to wit, his pipe, the which, when found and filled, he lighted with a spill twisted from the envelope of a cable message.

"It's about time," he announced, watching the paper blacken and burn in the grate fire, "that I was doing something to prove my title to a living." And this was all his valedictory to a vanished competence. "Anyway, I'm a sight better off than those poor devils over there. I really have a great deal to be thankful for now that my attention's drawn to it."

For the ensuing few minutes he thought it all over, soberly, but with a stout heart, standing at a window of his bedroom in the Hotel Pless, hands deep in trousers pockets, pipe fuming voluminously, his gaze wandering out over a blurred infinitude of wet, shining roofs and sooty chimney pots.

There came a rapping at the door.

Kirkwood removed the pipe from between his teeth long enough to say "Come in!" pleasantly.

The knob was turned, and the door opened. Kirkwood, swinging on one heel, beheld, hesitant upon the threshold, a diminutive figure in the livery of the Pless pages.

"Mr. Kirkwood?"

Kirkwood nodded.

"Gentleman to see you, sir."

Kirkwood nodded again, smiling

"Show him up, please," he said, but before the words were fairly out of his mouth a man stepped into the room.

"Mr. Brentwick!" Kirkwood almost shouted, jumping forward to seize his visitor's hand.

"My dear boy!" replied the latter, "I'm delighted to see you. Got your note not an hour ago and came at once—you see."

"It was mighty good of you. Sit down, please. Here are cigars. Why, a moment ago I was the most miserable and lonely mortal on the footstool."

"I can fancy." The elder man looked up, smiling, at Kirkwood. "The management knows me," he offered explanation of his unceremonious appearance, "so I took the liberty of following on the heels of the bell hop, dear boy. And how are you? Why the anxious undertone I detected in your note?"

He continued to stare curiously into Kirkwood's face. At a glance this Mr. Brentwick was a man of tallish figure and rather slender, with a countenance thin and flushed a sensitive pink, out of which his eyes shone, keen, alert, humorous and a trace wistful behind his glasses. His years were indeterminate, with the aspect of fifty, the spirit and the verve of thirty assorted oddly. But his hands were old, delicate, fine and fragile, and the lips beneath the drooping white mustache at times trembled, almost imperceptibly, with the generous sentiments that come with mellow age. He held his back straight and his head with an air—an air that was not a swagger, but the sign token of seasoned experience in the world. The most carping could have found no flaw in the quiet taste of his attire To sum up, Kirkwood's very good friend, and his only one then in London, Mr. Brentwick, looked and was an English gentleman.

"Why?" he persisted as the younger man hesitated. "I am here to find out. Tonight I leave for the continent. In the meantime"—

"And at midnight I sail for the States," added Kirkwood. "That is mainly why I wished to see you—to say goodby for the time."

"You're going home"— A shadow clouded Brentwick's clear eyes.

"To fight it out, shoulder to shoulder, with my brethren in adversity."

The cloud lifted. "That is the spirit!" declared the elder man. "For the moment I did you the injustice to believe that you were running away But now I understand. Forgive me. Pardon, too, the stupidity which I must lay at the door of my advancing years. To me the thought of you as a Parisian fixture has become such a commonplace, Philip, that the news of the disaster hardly stirred me. Now I remember that you are a Californian."

"I was born in San Francisco," affirmed Kirkwood, a bit sadly. "My father and mother were buried there."

"And your fortune?"

"I inherited my father's interest in the firm of Kirkwood & Vanderlip. When I came over to study painting I left everything in Vanderlip's hands. The business afforded me a handsome living."

"You have heard from Mr. Vanderlip?"

"Fifteen minutes ago." Kirkwood took a cablegram, still damp, from his pocket and handed it to his guest. Unfolding it the latter read:

Kirkwood, Pless, London:
Stay where you are. No good coming back. Everything gone. No insurance. Letter follows. VANDERLIP.

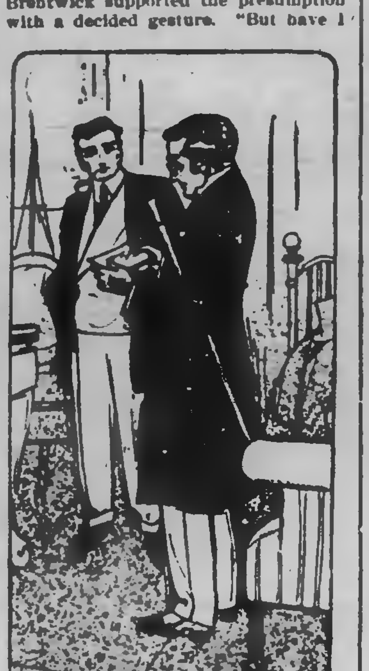
"When I got the news in Paris," Kirkwood volunteered, "I tried the banks. They refused to honor my drafts. I had a little money in hand, enough to see me home, so I closed the studio and came across. I'm booked on the Minneapolis, sailing from Tilbury at daybreak. The boat train leaves at 11:30. I had hoped you might be able to dine with me and see me off."

In silence Brentwick returned the cable message. Then, with a thoughtful look, "You are sure this is wise?" he queried.

"It's the only thing I can see."

"But your partner says"—

"Naturally he thinks that by this time I should have learned to paint well enough to support myself for a few months until he can get things running again. Perhaps I might." Brentwick supported the presumption with a decided gesture. "But have I a right to leave Vanderlip to fight it out alone? For Vanderlip has a wife and kiddies to support. I"—



"Everything gone. No insurance."

"Your genius!"

"My ability, such as it is, and that only. It can wait. No; this means simply that I must come down from the clouds, plant my feet on solid earth and get to work."

"The sentiment is sound," admitted Brentwick, "the practice of it folly. Have you stopped to think what part a rising young portrait painter can contribute toward the rebuilding of a devastated city?"

"The painting can wait," reiterated Kirkwood. "I can work like other men."

"You can do yourself and your genius grave injustice, and I fear me you will, dear boy. It's in keeping with your heritage of American obstinacy. Now, if it were a question of money"—

"Mr. Brentwick," Kirkwood protested vehemently, "I've ample for my present needs," he added.

"Of course," conceded Brentwick, with a sigh. "I didn't really hope you would avail yourself of our friendship. Now, there's my home in Aspen Villas. You have seen it?"

"In your absence this afternoon your estimable butler, with commendable discretion, kept me without the doors," laughed the young man.

"It's a comfortable home. You would not consent to share it with me until"—

"You are more than good; but, honestly, I must sail tonight. I wanted only this chance to see you before I left. You'll dine with me, won't you?"

"If you would stay in London, Philip, we would dine together not once, but many times. As it is, I myself am booked for Munich, to be gone a week, on business. I have many affairs needing attention between now and the 9:10 train from Victoria. If you will be my guest at Aspen Villas"—

"Please!" begged Kirkwood, with a little laugh of pleasure because of the other's insistence. "I only wish I could. Another day"—

"Oh, you will make your million in a year and return scandalously independent. It's in your American blood." Frail white fingers tapped an arm of the chair as their owner stared gravely into the fire. "I confess I envy you," he observed.

"The opportunity to make a million in a year?" chuckled Kirkwood

"No. I envy you your romance You have youth, unconquerable youth and the world before you. I must go

He rose stiffly, as though suddenly made conscious of his age The old eyes peered, more than a trifle wistfully now into Kirkwood's "You will not fail to call on me by cable, dear boy, if you need anything? I ask it as a favor. I'm glad you wished to see me before going out of my life One learns to value the friendship of youth, Philip. Goodby, and good luck attend you."

Alone once more, Kirkwood returned to his window. The disappointment he felt at being robbed of his anticipated pleasure in Brentwick's company at dinner colored his mood unpleasantly. His musings merged into vacuity, into a dull gray mist of hopelessness comparable only to the dismal skies then lowering over London town

Brentwick was good, but Brentwick was mistaken. There was really nothing for Kirkwood to do but to go ahead. But one steamer trunk remained to be packed. The boat train would leave before midnight, the steamer with the morning tide. By the morrow's noon he would be upon the high seas, within ten days in New York and among friends, and then—

The problem of that afterward perplexed Kirkwood more than he cared to own. Brentwick had opened his eyes to the fact that he would be practically useless in San Francisco He could not harbor the thought of going back only to become a charge upon Vanderlip. No; he was resolved that thenceforward he must rely upon himself, carve out his own destiny. But—would the art that he had cultivated with such assiduity yield him a livelihood if sincerely practiced with that end in view? Would the mental and physical equipment of a painter, heretofore dilettante, enable him to become self supporting?

There came a rapping at the door

The knob was turned by a diminutive figure in the livery of the Pless pages.

"Mr. Kirkwood?"

Kirkwood nodded.

"Gentleman to see you, sir."

Kirkwood nodded again, smiling, if somewhat perplexed. Encouraged, the child advanced, proffering a silver card tray at the end of an unnaturally rigid forearm. Kirkwood took the card dubiously between thumb and forefinger and inspected it without prejudice.

"'George B. Calendar,'" he read. "'George B. Calendar!' But I know no such person. Sure there's no mistake, young man?"

The close cropped, bullet shaped British head was agitated in vigorous negation, and "Card for Mr. Kirkwood!" was mumbled in dispassionate accents appropriate to a recitation by rote.

"Very well. But before you show him up ask this Mr. Calendar if he is quite sure he wants to see Philip Kirkwood."

"Yessir."

The child marched out, punctiliously closing the door. Kirkwood tamped down the tobacco in his pipe and puffed energetically, dismissing the interruption to his reverie as a matter of no consequence—an obvious mistake to be rectified by two words with this Mr. Calendar whom he did not know. At the knock he had almost hoped it might be Brentwick, returning with a changed mind about the bid to dinner.

He regretted Brentwick sincerely. Theirs was a curious sort of friendship, extraordinarily close in view of the meagerness of either's information about the other, to say nothing of the disparity between their ages. Concerning the elder man Kirkwood knew little more than that they had met on shipboard, "coming over;" that Brentwick had spent some years in America; that he was an Englishman by birth, a cosmopolitan by habit, by profession a gentleman (employing that term in its most uncompromisingly British significance) and by inclination a collector of "articles of virtu and bigotry," in pursuit of which he made frequent excursions to the continent from his residence in a quaint, quiet street of Old Brompton. It had been during his not infrequent, but ordinarily abbreviated, sojourns in Paris that their steamer acquaintance had ripened into an affection almost filial on the one hand, almost paternal on the other.

There came a rapping at the door.

The knob was turned; the door opened. Kirkwood, swinging on one heel, beheld, hesitant upon the threshold, a rather rotund figure of medium height, clad in an expressionless gray lounge suit, with a brown "bowler" hat held tentatively in one hand, an umbrella weeping in the other. A voice, which was unctuous and insinuative, emanated from the figure.

"Mr. Kirkwood?"

Kirkwood nodded, with some effort recalling the name, so detached had been his thoughts since the disappearance of the page.

"Yes, Mr. Calendar?"

"Are you—ah—busy, Mr. Kirkwood?"

"Are you, Mr. Calendar?" Kirkwood's smile robbed the retort of any flavor of incivility.

Encouraged, the man entered, premising that he would detain his host but a moment and readily surrendering hat and umbrella. Kirkwood, putting the latter aside, invited his caller to the easy chair which Brentwick had occupied by the fireplace.

"It takes the edge off the dampness," Kirkwood explained in deference to the other's look of pleased surprise at the cheerful bed of coals. "I'm afraid I could never get acclimated to life in a cold, damp room—or a damp, cold room—such as you Britishers prefer."

"It is grateful," Mr. Calendar agreed, spreading plump and well cared for hands to the warmth. "But you are mistaken. I am as much an American as yourself."

"Yes?" Kirkwood looked the man over with more interest, less matter of course courtesy.

He proved not unprepossessing, this unclassifiable Mr. Calendar. He was dressed with some care, his complexion was good, and the fullness of his girth, emphasized as it was by a notable lack of inches, bespoke a nature genial, easy going and sybaritic. His dark eyes, heavy lidded, were active, curiously at times with a subdued glitter, in a face large, round, pink, of which the other most remarkable features were a mustache, close trimmed and showing streaks of gray; a chubby nose and duplicate chins. Mr. Calendar was, furthermore, possessed of a polished bald spot, girdled with a tonsure of silvered hair—circumstances which lent some factitious distinction to a personality otherwise commonplace.

His manner might be best described as uneasy, with assurance, as though he frequently found it necessary to make up for his unimpressive stature by assuming an unnatural habit of authority.

"So you knew I was an American, Mr. Calendar?" suggested Kirkwood.

"Saw your name on the register. We both hail from the same neck of the woods, you know."

"I didn't know it, and"—

"Yes; I'm from Frisco too."

"And I'm sorry."

Mr. Calendar passed five fat fingers nervously over his mustache, glanced alertly up at Kirkwood, as if momentarily inclined to question his tone, then again stared glumly into the fire, for Kirkwood had maintained an attitude purposefully colorless. Not to put too fine a point upon it, he believed that his caller was lying. The man's appearance, his mannerisms, his voice and enunciation, while they might have been American, seemed all un-Californian. To one born and bred in that state, as Kirkwood had been, her sons are unmistakably hall marked.

Now, no man lies without motive This one chose to reaffirm, with a show of deep feeling: "Yes, I'm from Frisco too. We're companions in misfortune."

"I hope not altogether," said Kirkwood politely.

Mr. Calendar drew his own inferences from the response and mustered up a show of cheerfulness. "Then you're not completely wiped out?"

"To the contrary, I was hoping you were less unhappy."

"Oh, then you are?"

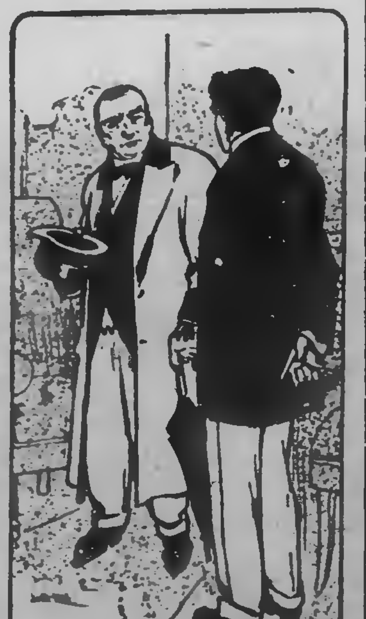
Kirkwood lifted the cable message from the mantel. "I have just heard from my partner at home," he said, with a faint smile, and quoted: "'Everything gone. No insurance.'"

Mr. Calendar pursed his plump lips, whistling inaudibly. "Too bad, too bad!" he murmured sympathetically. "We're all hard hit, more or less." He lapsed into dejected apathy, from which Kirkwood, growing at length impatient, found it necessary to rouse him.

"You wished to see me about something else, I'm sure."

Mr. Calendar started from his reverie. "Eh? I was dreaming. I beg pardon. It seems hard to realize, Mr. Kirkwood, that this awful catastrophe has overtaken our beloved metropolis."

The canting phrases wearied Kirkwood. Abruptly he cut in: "Would a sovereign help you out, Mr. Calendar? I don't mind telling you that's about the limit of my present resources."



"I was looking for some one to serve me in a certain capacity."

"Pardon me." Mr. Calendar's moonlike countenance darkened. He assumed a transparent dignity. "You misconstrue my motive, sir."

"Then I'm sorry."

"I am not here to borrow. On the other hand, quite by accident I discovered your name upon the register downstairs, a good old Frisco name, if you will permit me to say so. I thought to myself that here was a chance to help a fellow countryman?" Calendar paused interrogatively. Kirkwood remained interested, but silent. "If a passage across would help you, I—I think it might be arranged," stammered Calendar, ill at ease.

"It might," admitted Kirkwood speculatively.

To be continued.

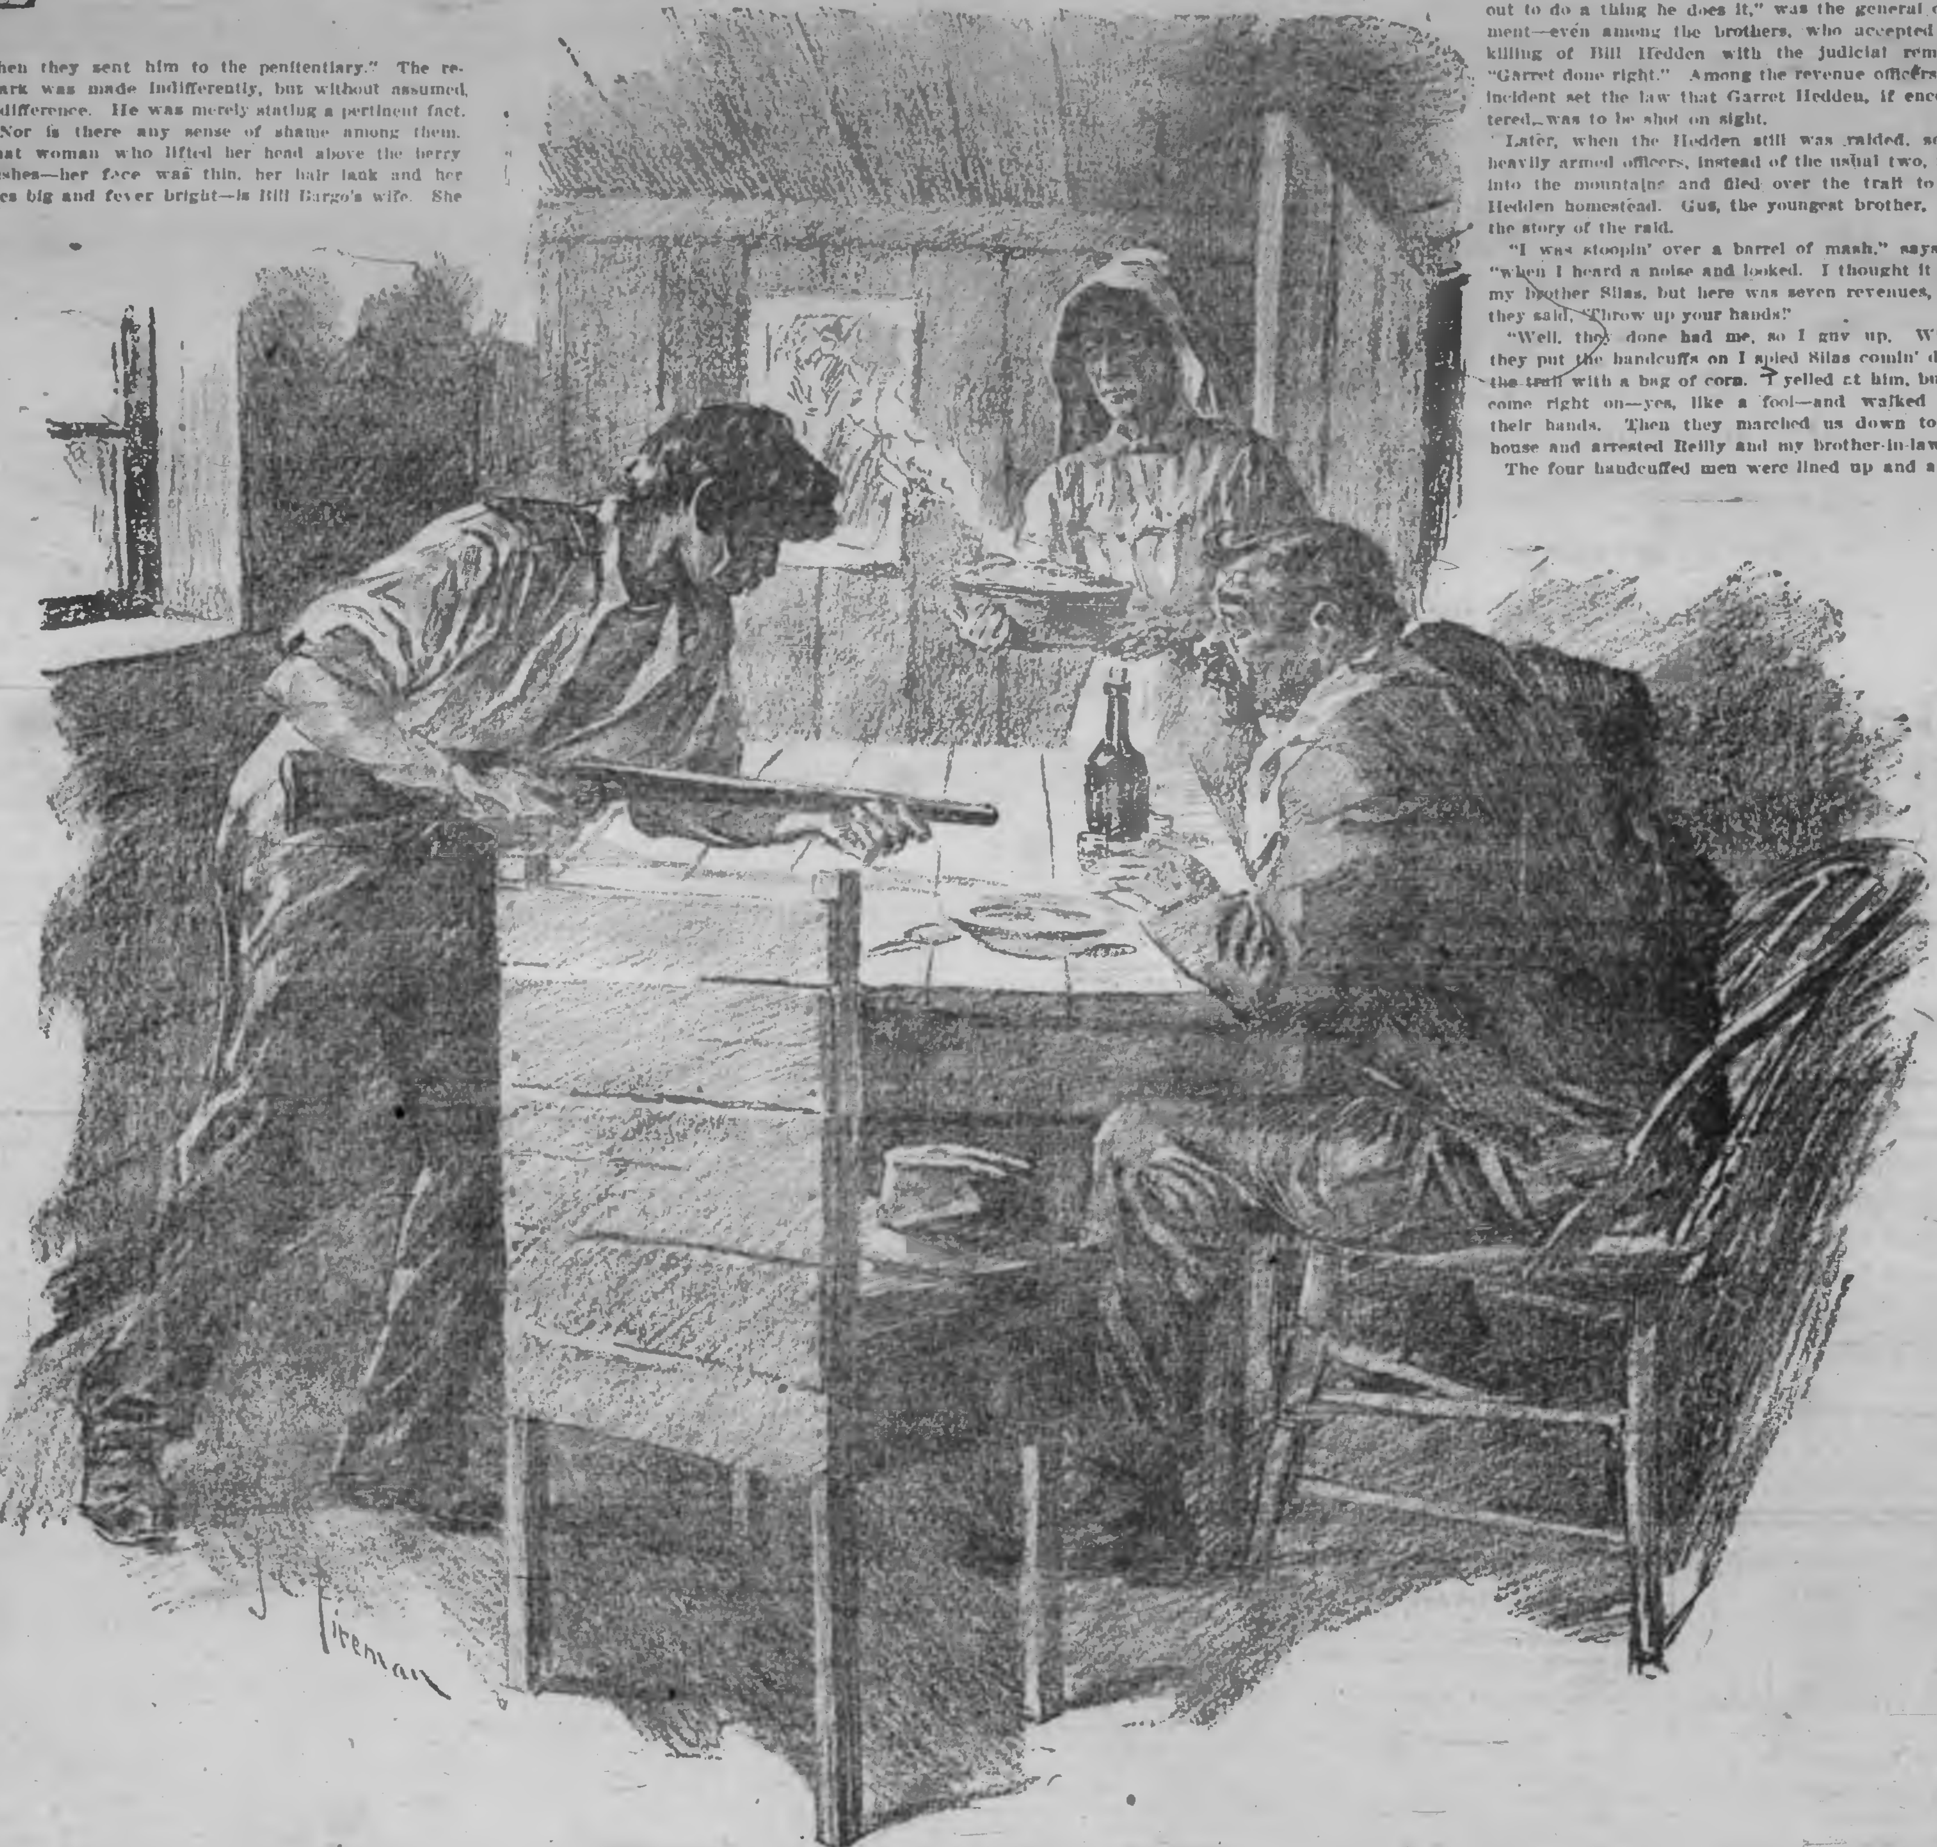
THRILLING LIVES

THE "MOONSHINER"



"DRAW UP YOUR CHEER, STRANGER, AND EAT."

BY WILLIAM ALLEN JOHNSTON.

(Copyright, 1908, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

IN the North the very name "moonshiner" has an eerie, evil sound to it, and suggests dark deeds done by night, lonely trails patrolled by masked men who carry murderous rifles and shoot down trespassers at sight; wild, gloomy mountains into which an innocent tourist may walk as into a deathtrap and never return.

"Moonshiners? Well, you'd better keep away from them." That is the general advice given out anywhere north of Washington, and one wiseacre in Chattanooga who had never been in the mountains and who had got his impressions from "penny dreadfuls" added this sage reminder:—"If you meet a man along any road carrying a squirrel rifle down here just turn back. That road isn't safe."

With all this preparation the first "moonshiner" I did happen on was somewhat of a surprise. He was plodding down a mountain side road behind a yoke of sleepy, decrepit looking steers hitched to a creaking handmade cart.

"There's Bill Bargo," said my informant, rising in the buggy and craning his neck. "He's a moonshiner."

A hurried view of the man showed that he was unarmed. Moreover, there was nothing of the desperado in his manner or occupation. This was exceedingly disappointing. However, here was a real "moonshiner." A photograph would be worth while. We drew up beside the road and waited.

As Bill Bargo drew near he looked shyly at us and nodded "Howdy?" Then as the shutter of the camera clicked he looked decidedly scared.

"Wait a minute," we requested.

"Nosir," said Bargo. "Get up!" he goaded his oxen on and walked to one of them.

This was interesting. The outlaw, of course, wished to avoid publicity. Any means of identification that might get into the hands of the vigilant "revenues" would prove his undoing.

"What's the matter?" I asked eagerly.

Bargo was still going, but he answered huskily, with a furtive back glance:—

"I don't want any pictures. I ain't got any money to buy 'em." Evidently the "moonshiner" had a proper fear of other personages besides revenue officers, to wit, travelling photographers and canvassers in general.

We jogged on along the road, over the top of a sharp ridge and descended into a narrow valley. Along the way we passed one lone habitation—a log cabin with a single window, a chimney made of flat stones and a gloomy interior. No one appeared in the door, but a few rods further on a woman, angular, ill clad, raised a seared face above a clump of berry bushes, and a troop of half clothed, half starved, ferret eyed children darted into the brush like terrified rabbits.

Beyond the narrow valley arose the sheer sand stone walls of a table mountain, near the top of which are the outcroppings of a vein of coal, where a settler, single handed, may dig out his own fuel, and would if timber were not so plentiful and near at hand. The top of the table mountain runs west forty miles and one hundred miles north and south. It is covered with tiny clearings—farms one might call them, but corn fields would be a more literal term. No other crop of any consequence is raised except to the east, where a small branch railroad runs.

In Moonshine Land.

Here is a very remarkable section—a strange, almost weird country, inexplainable at first sight to a city born dweller of the East and North. Except for the little clearings and the general devastation of timber it has remained practically unchanged since the days of the civil war, or, indeed, since the era following the Revolution. At that time roving settlers, Scotch and Scotch-Irish for the most part, wandered west from Virginia and North Carolina or north from the black soil belt of Alabama and made their rough mountain homes here. Their descendants people the section to-day. You may live among them but a short space of time and speedily forget the United States and its million souled cities. The section is also a typical "moonshine" belt, and just as readily you will find your sympathies enlisted with a law-breaking people—sympathies, however, which for the best of all concerned and in the light of progress it is well later on to amend somewhat by talking with the revenue officers.

But at least the "moonshiner" is not a desperado or a man who commits an assortment of crimes for the love of it or with a general idea of unlawful gain. The element of necessity, the world old problem of a livelihood, enters very largely into the matter.

This particular "moonshine" district—and most others are similarly situated—lies twenty odd miles by rough mountain roads from the nearest railroad. Theoretically the settler might gather his corn crop each season and have his oxen draw it—a few bushels every other day—to the nearest station. Practically, however, it would not pay for the feed of the oxen en route. That, however, is the legal way.

There is one other way—to grind the corn, "mash" and distil it, transport and sell the liquor at a dollar up a gallon. A "still" consists simply of a spring of water, a furnace built of flat stones, a few water-tight tubs, and the "still" proper, which is fashioned of sheet copper and costs as little as $10. One man can run a small apparatus and could make a comfortable income. But that's the illegal way.

If the crop were apples and the product cider the operation would be legal. But the government sees fit to tax liquor and derives an enormous revenue for benevolent purposes from it. Every manufactory of liquor must be registered by law and a tax paid by the manufacturer on every gallon of distilled product. That tax is the "moonshiner's" profit.

Why a tax, anyway? he argues. His forefathers fought against the same imposition, and he, hugging to his breast his squirrel rifle, says that the law is unjust. Add to this sturdy belief a great deal of ignorance, a great deal of hopeless poverty, the sense of wildness and freedom which the woods breed in its dwellers, and you have the "moonshiner."

"Got Him Over Yander."

There's no bravado about him, rather the sullen desperation of one fighting for a lost cause. "Over yander," says a brother of Bill Bargo, indicating a small ravine, "is where they got my brother Jim, when they sent him to the penitentiary." The remark was made indifferently, but without assumed indifference. He was merely stating a pertinent fact.

Nor is there any sense of shame among them. That woman who lifted her head above the berry bushes—her face was thin, her hair lank and her eyes big and fever bright—is Bill Bargo's wife. She trudged all the way to the county seat one day bearing the money to pay his fine and obtain his release from prison. The grim humor of the situation is revealed in the fact that she made this money running at night the same "still" at which her husband was captured.

The Bargo brothers have had "powerful bad luck," in the parlance of the mountains. Another brother, Jim, was "caught runnin' off his first batch." "Wouldn't a be'n so bad," added a family friend, "if he'd made something out of it." Later Jim was "caught" again and this time was sent to the penitentiary for a year.

To-day the Bargos are not "stillin'." They are too well known and too closely watched by the "revenues." Instead, they are cutting and hauling railroad ties for a branch spur of that distant railroad which, had it run nearer, might have made them prosperous, law abiding citizens. The net profits of their railroad tie business yield them about fifty cents a day each.

They were not prosperous as "moonshiners"—would not have been if the "revenues" had let them go on, for their "stills" were conducted upon too small a scale. I mention this simply because the case is typical, and it is the pathetic smallness of their illegal operations, coupled with the sordidness of their impoverished lives, that first incites your sympathy with the "moonshiner" in general and breeds a natural antagonism toward the smart looking, well mounted "revenues," with their deadly Krag-Jorgensens.

There is another element in the Bargo case which is also common to "moonshine" arrests, namely, that the information which brought in the "revenues" came from some treacherous neighbors. These neighbors are now living over in the "gap." A ridge separates them, but each side goes armed about its daily work, and some day, when the "drams" are going freely around and passion is incited, there will be witnessed the first clash of an endless, bloody feud.

Man killing is not infrequent in the mountain regions of the South to-day, but it is rarely, if ever, that a stranger or revenue officer is concerned. The "moonshiners" fight oftenest among themselves.

A Case in Point.

Take the case of John Knox and Dave Moore. They are neighbors and have grown up together from boyhood, bunked together, courted together, raised and "toted" corn together. Each one of them runs "stills" along the same ravine, oftentimes aiding each other in his work.

One day, while the amber colored liquor is trickling from the coils and John Knox is lazily whittling at the door of his "still," a kinsman comes warily down the trail and speaks a few low words in his ear.

"John," says he solemnly, "Dave Moore has jined the revenues."

John Knox looks searchingly at him from under the rim of his battered slouch hat—long and searchingly. Then he resumes his whittling.

It is his court of law, that whittling stick. He takes to it all the problems, great and little, of his life, and whittles off their solutions. Now, after a longer silence than usual, he gets up and reaches behind a "mash" barrel for his rifle.

"Waal," he remarks enigmatically, and the lines in his thin face deepen, "I reckon I'll go squirrel huntin'."

Dave Moore knew the location of every "still" in that section, which was in the western mountains of North Carolina, and he would have received $5 for each one he "gave up," but as a matter of fact, and due to John Knox's innocent resolve to go "squirrel huntin'," not a single "still" was surrendered.

There was another result of that squirrel hunt, however. The black flag was dropped between the Knox and Moore families, erstwhile neighbors, and now and for years to come no quarter will be asked or given among their descendants or kinsfolk.

Over in Tennessee there are two more of these standing armies with the memory of one man's treachery to hurry a rifle to the shoulder whenever the members of the opposing factions meet.

Silas and Miles Wood were jailed by the information of Dave Payne. They served out their term in the State's prison and trudged silently back to their mountain homes and dismantled "stills," taking quietly up their life again where they had left it. Nothing of vengeance was said to them or by them till one day a man with new "store" clothes and saddle rode arrogantly by their cabin, and that night Miles Wood said bitterly to a neighbor:—"You tell Dave Payne he better take another trail by here," and tapped his rifle suggestively.

Dave Payne received the threat, and a few days later, brave with drink, rode up to the Wood cabin and shot dead Miles Wood and his aged father. A posse, headed by Silas Wood, captured and jailed the murderer. Another posse stormed the jail and effected his release. He is still at large, and each year the Payne-Wood feud adds to its bloody list.

But the "moonshiner's" attitude toward the revenue officer is altogether different. He has no desire or intention of adding to his lawlessness by fighting and killing. He will run and hide generally and takes his arrest calmly if caught.

There are exceptions to this rule, however—some of them genuine "bad men," others merely determined leaders, feared and greatly respected by the revenue officer and often looked up to and beloved by their own people.

Garret Hedden, a famous outlaw of East Tennessee, is of this latter class.

He began his career of crime by killing a negro in Alabama. He escaped to his mountain home, over the State line, was twice arrested and each time escaped. When the Sheriff came the third time for him it is related that Hedden met him at the door, and getting the drop on him with his rifle, said with characteristic hospitality:—

"Have a cheer."

Hedden kept his man covered while his wife prepared dinner. When the meal was ready the host gave a second command:—

"Draw up your cheer, stranger, and eat." And at the conclusion of the dinner, the duties of a host having been fulfilled, Hedden said sternly, with an ominous ring in his voice, "Now, git!"

The moonshiner's reputation as a dangerous man was greatly enhanced by an incident that happened at the construction of the Hedden still.

Two brothers, Reilly and Bill, were helping, together with six other mountaineers, all of them friends and loyal followers of Garret. During a lull in the work and while the "drams" of moonshine whiskey were being passed around a brawl began between Bill Hedden, who was drunk, and one of the mountaineers who was a particular friend of Garret. Bill Hedden had his knife at the other's throat when he heard a sharp command from his brother and saw a rifle pointed at his head.

Whiskey Crazed, Killed.

"Stop," said Garret Hedden, "or I'll kill you!" With a snarl of rage and defiance the whiskey crazed brother raised his knife to kill—when a shot rang out and he fell forward, dead.

Fratricide is uncommon in the mountains, and the fame of this instance went far and wide. Among the mountaineers it had the effect of increasing only their allegiance to Garret Hedden. "When he sets out to do a thing he does it," was the general comment—even among the brothers, who accepted the killing of Bill Hedden with the judicial remark, "Garret done right." Among the revenue officers the incident set the law that Garret Hedden, if encountered, was to be shot on sight.

Later, when the Hedden still was raided, seven heavily armed officers, instead of the usual two, rode into the mountains and filed over the trail to the Hedden homestead. Gus, the youngest brother, tells the story of the raid.

"I was stoopin' over a barrel of mash," says he, "when I heard a noise and looked. I thought it was my brother Silas, but here was seven revenues, and they said, 'Throw up your hands!'

"Well, they done had me, so I guv up. Whilst they put the handcuffs on I spied Silas comin' down the trail with a bag of corn. I yelled at him, but he come right on—yes, like a fool—and walked into their hands. Then they marched us down to the house and arrested Reilly and my brother-in-law."

The four handcuffed men were lined up and about to be escorted down the road when suddenly a cry rang out:—

"Garret's coming!" A solitary man astride a mule appeared in bold relief over the brow of the hill.

Confusion followed. One officer made two ineffectual attempts to kill Reilly Hedden, and the entire party retreated in haste to a nearby corn crib. In the meantime the man on the mule halted in the road and regarded them calmly. He raised his rifle, but did not shoot. Later, through the interstices of the crib, they saw him dismount and take up a position behind a log. In the meantime they had fired eight shots at him.

One officer covered Gus Hedden with his rifle and commanded him:—"Make him go away."

Gus shook his head solemnly. "'Taint no use," said he, and the other brothers nodded assent. "We can't do nothin' with him."

They waited till dark and then sneaked away with their men. In the meantime Garret Hedden was seated in his own cabin. "I jes' wanted to scare 'em," he explained afterward. "I knew I couldn't help the boys."

This instance of cowardice upon the part of the officers is by no means characteristic of the revenue force, however. A good type of the man who is called upon to risk his life among the mountaineers for the wage of $3 a day is David H. Gates, of Georgia. He stands six feet six in his boots and has shoulders that seem a yard in width. His grim face is clean shaven and he is as soft spoken as a woman, but there is a decided "don't tread on me" air that surmounts his quiet manners, and a great many men who have heard that soft voice have had reason to fear it.

He was formerly engaged in Rabun county, Ga., where ten years ago almost four out of every five natives were engaged in illicit stilling. Single handed he destroyed four stills in one of the most lawless districts in Kentucky, and later, with a dozen men behind him, he led a pitched battle here that lasted two days.

He will not talk of these exploits, but he has this to say of the moonshiner:—"A lot of people who ought to know better think a man is breaking an unjust law when he makes whiskey out of his corn. This sympathy racket ought to stop. A law is a law, and a moonshiner is a moonshiner. That's how I figure it and why I fight for it."

And Gates, of course, is right.

THE DAWSONS' HONEYMOON COOK.

Conditions Changed So Much That She Concluded to Remain.

By HARRIET G. CANFIELD.

They had been married two years, "long enough," Prue suddenly declared, "to dispense with all honeymoon demonstrativeness."

Tom Dawson put down his evening paper and stared at the pretty little partner of his joys and sorrows. "I'm afraid I don't understand, dear," he said.

"Why, it's very simple. If you know that I care for you—and I am certain that you care for me—all signs of affection are quite superfluous. They may be dropped."

"Oh!" Tom said dubiously. "Well, what shall I drop first?" There was a twinkle in his eyes, and Prue saw it.

"To be serious," she pleaded, "to begin with, you must not kiss me when you come home to dinner and—and—other times. You must drop"—

"Drop you a courtesy instead," he interrupted her laughingly.

"Don't be ridiculous, Tom! You know very well that there are many useless customs that should be abandoned, many things that should be dropped."

"Yes," he said, smiling whimsically. "Hannah thinks so, I know. She dropped my meerschaum this morning. We must take lessons of that girl, Prue, or drop her. On the whole, I think we'd better drop her."

"It will not be necessary," she said with dignity. "Hannah gave notice this morning. I shall have to find some one else within a week."

"I'm sorry—sorry, I mean, for the family she'll drop down on next. Hannah's no featherweight, you know. Speaking of dropping"—

"I am not speaking of it now. It is quite useless while you are in such a mood," she said indignantly, rising from her chair.

Before she could leave the room Tom was at her side. "Forgive me, dear," he said. "I didn't know you were in such sober earnest." He stopped to kiss the pink cheek next to him, but Prue lifted a protesting hand. "Don't, Tom!" she said. "You forget. It isn't necessary."

"No, 'it isn't necessary'"—the words came soberly enough now—"only sweet and natural."

And the next day, when the time came to say goodby, Prue had no occasion to complain of his 'honeymoon demonstrativeness.'

"Tom is very sensible this morning," she said to herself, but she sighed as she said it and went about all day with a wistful look in her blue eyes. Tom was "sensible" in the evening also, and the next morning he was so very sensible that Prue cried a little, but perhaps it was for joy. Even "sensible" people do that.

That afternoon Matilda made her appearance. Hannah came into the sitting room to announce her arrival. "Matilda Stebbins is here, Mrs. Dawson," she said, "after my place. Will I show her in, ma'am? She and me used to work together once, and she's a dreadful good cook."

"Yes, I will see her," Prue said. And in a moment a tall, lank, freckle faced girl was standing in the doorway, smiling at her. "Will you be seated?" Prue asked pleasantly, and the girl slid into a chair, still smiling.

"I hope you'll give me a try," she said. "I'd like first rate to cook for you and him."

It was Prue's turn to smile. "Have you had much experience?" she asked.

"Heaps of it, ma'am, but never long to one place."

"That seems strange!" Prue exclaimed.

"Well, you see, ma'am, the honeymoons don't usually stretch out over and above six months."

"The honeymoons?"

"Yes, ma'am. I don't cook and do for none but new married folks. Hannah told me about you and him when she first came here two months ago. She said as how she knew you was just married."

Prue blushed. "How did Hannah know it?" she asked.

"Easy enough, ma'am. It's like measles and whoopin' cough. She could tell by the symptoms. I'd rather live where there's lovemakin' goin' on continual than read the best novel ever made up."

This was interesting but very embarrassing to Mrs. Thomas Dawson. Two days ago she would have laughed heartily at Matilda's sayings and have found much enjoyment in repeating them to Tom. But present conditions made the girl's remarks seem almost personal, yet she felt tempted to engage her.

"Matilda," she said, "did Hannah tell you the wages she received and the work she was expected to do?"

"Yes'm, she did, and I don't think she'll better herself none goin' to work in a factory."

"Very well. I will give you a trial. When can you come?"

"I can stay now, ma'am, and get dinner if you'll let me go home for my clothes when the work's rid up. Hannah wants to leave as soon as she can anyways."

And so it happened that the honeymoon cook held sway in the Dawson kitchen when the owner of the house came home that evening.

"You will be glad to hear that I've engaged a new girl," Prue said to him in the distantly polite tone that she had recently adopted in speaking to her husband.

"Very glad," he answered, "if she is an improvement on Hannah."

The dinner was excellent, and Matilda was very attentive in her service at table, beaming on them as though she would say, "Bless you, my children!" Late in the evening, when they were apparently much absorbed in reading, they heard a strange sound, half cough, half sneeze, in the hall. Prue looked up from the book. "What was that?" she said. Tom was on his way to the door when Matilda entered the room. "It was me, ma'am," she said. "I never walk in on new married folks without givin' 'em warnin' I'm a-comin'—not at first. Of course they get used to me after awhile and go right on loverin' if I do see 'em. Nothin' suits me better'n that!"

Prue's face was scarlet. She dared not look at Tom. Oh, why had she engaged the services of such a silly, sentimental creature?

"If you please, ma'am," Matilda continued, "I'm goin' home now to get my clothes, and I'll say good night to you and him."

"Thought we were 'new married folks,' did she?" Tom said grimly. "I can't imagine why. She's a good cook," he added, "and I hope we can keep her."

"We can," Prue said to herself, "if we will meet her peculiar requirements. But I'll not be driven into any foolishly unnecessary display of affection."

For three days the Dawsons enjoyed the results of Matilda's culinary efforts, but a heavy heart will affect the best of appetites somewhat, and on the fourth day Matilda complained that they "didn't seem to relish their victuals" and she "guessed she'd better be goin'."

"Oh, no!" Prue cried. "No one could suit us better than you do."

"I'm glad of that, ma'am, but there's another reason." And she hung her head.

Prue was painfully embarrassed, for she could guess the other reason. "I hope you will stay," she stammered.

"I'll think it over till tomorrow, ma'am, but I feel as if Hannah hadn't been fair with me, leadin' me to expect things was different between you and him from what they really be."

Tom came home later than usual that night. Prue was in the hall giving some instructions to Matilda when he opened the door. His eyes looked tired and sad, she thought. She hesitated a moment—only a moment—for Matilda was present, and now was her opportunity to redeem herself in the girl's eyes, when she ran to meet her husband and held up her face to be kissed. The tired look faded from his eyes as if by magic, and he put both arms around her and held her close. "Has my little wife come to her senses?" he asked.

"Hush!" she answered. "I still think it's unnecessary, but Matilda likes it. She refuses to stay unless we are 'affectionate like.'" And she laughed hysterically.

"Oh," Tom said. That was all, but there was a world of disappointment in the exclamation. Then he looked beyond his wife at Matilda, who stood beaming at him, her hands clasped in ecstasy. "Well, she'll stay now," he said bitterly. "I congratulate you."

Yes, Matilda had decided to remain. She came to the sitting room door after dinner to announce her decision.

After she had gone Prue left her seat and moved restlessly about the room. Then she sighed so deeply that Tom looked up from his paper. "Headache?" he asked.

"N-no," she said. Her lips trembled, and she buried her face in her hands and sobbed out, "It's just heartache, Tom."

"Heartache?" he said gently. "I thought I had a monopoly of that."

Prue came close to his chair and leaned against an arm of it. "Tom," she cried remorsefully—"Tom, dear, will you forgive me and"—her voice sank to a whisper—"kiss me?"

He caught her hands in his and drew her down beside him. "To please Matilda?" he asked.

"Oh, Tom, you know better!"

"Because if it's to please that girl I'll be hanged if I"— But something prevented further speech just then.

When the Dawsons celebrated their tin wedding it was with the assistance of their honeymoon cook.

Ted and the Wood Pile.

"I'll be glad when I get that whole pile of wood in. Then I'll be through with it, won't I, mother?"

"No, Ted. You know I shall want you to carry out the ashes after the wood is burned up," answered mother.

"Then I'll be through with it, mother?"

"No, I think not," answered mother, while Ted's eyes grew big with wonder. "You will scatter the ashes on the cornfield, and father will plow them in in the spring. Then you will help him plant the corn, you know. The corn will grow, eating the ashes and ground about it, and by and by you will eat the sweet corn."

"Oh, we'll sort of eat the wood ourselves, and that will be the end of the old wood pile."

"Not quite," said mother. "There will be cobs left and stalks of corn. We may feed them to the pigs or to the cows, and that will give us meat or milk."

"Well, I never knew before that there was so much in a wood pile," said Ted.—Exchange.

Giving Him Away.

And there was a certain man who, being a merchant with a trade to look after, was a member of the church—in fact, an elder therein. One day he invited his pastor home to dinner, and, while they sat in the parlor waiting for the call to table, he began to tell of a brother elder's misconduct and grievous sin.

"I only tell you this because you are the pastor, and I think you ought to know it. I never mention it to any one else."

And he repeated this several times during the recital. As it was about completed in came his little daughter. Catching the subject of the conversation, she broke in with this exclamation:

"My goodness, pa, you're surely not telling that old story again!"

Exaggerated.

Nervous Lady—Don't your experiments frighten you terribly, professor? I hear that your assistant met with a horrible death by falling 4,000 feet from a balloon.

Professor—Oh, that report was greatly exaggerated.

Nervous Lady—Exaggerated? How?

Professor—It wasn't much more than 2,5000 feet that he fell.

HE HAD A FLIGHT.

It Was His Machine, and He Insisted Upon Having It Started.

A good story is told of how M. Delagrange disposed of the monoplane with which he made his record flights last year. He was at his shed one morning recently when a wealthy Russian fresh from St. Petersburg was introduced to him.

"Is your aeroplane for sale?" asked the stranger.

"Yes, if you like."

"Would you mind taking it out of the shed to let me see it?"

"Certainly," said M. Delagrange.

The Russian examined it all over, then asked the price and was told 12,000 francs. "I will take it," said the Russian, drawing out his pocketbook and handing the astonished M. Delagrange twelve new notes of 1,000 francs each.

"Then the machine is mine?"

"Yes," replied the aviator, "it is."

Thereupon the Russian got into the pilot's seat and, looking up at M. Delagrange, he said to him: "Turn on the motor, please. I want to see how the thing goes."

There were laughter and astonishment all around among the persons present. M. Delagrange in vain tried to explain to the Russian through an interpreter that a good deal of preliminary practice is required before one can fly.

"But I paid for it," said the Russian.

"I know you did."

"Then it is mine."

"Yes, certainly."

"Then turn that handle and let me go."

Everybody tried to persuade the Russian not to attempt it. All he would reply was that he paid for the machine and he wanted to see himself go up in it. At last M. Delagrange did turn the handle, the motor started purring, the aeroplane ran along over the grass for some yards, rose a few feet into the air and then came down with a smash. The Russian was extricated from the wreck considerably scratched and bruised, but he did not complain. On the contrary, he seemed to be delighted at having had any sort of flight, no matter how disastrous it was, for his money. "I shall have the machine repaired, then I shall try again," was all he said.—London Telegraph.

A Tree Curiosity.

In California there is a tree trunk which has stood for the last sixteen years entirely covered from its base. The stump is fifteen feet in diameter, and the trunk towers seventy-five feet in the air. This remarkable freak is located near the sequoia forest reserve in Tulare county, Cal., and was sawed off by lumbermen for timber. Through some miscalculation when the cut was finished the tree still held its position, and dynamite was resorted to to bring it to the ground, which accounts for the deep gash on one side. After the first charge of the explosive had been ignited the tree still remained standing, and it was discovered that the entire trunk had been shattered by the discharge and was therefore useless for lumber. Accordingly the work was stopped, and the giant has remained upright, withstanding some of the severest windstorms that the state has known, held in its natural position by its great weight.—Wide World Magazine.

Dentist Outwitted Thief.

A respectable looking individual called to see a dentist in the Rue Hermel, Paris. He was shown into the waiting room and told that Dr. Papon would see him in a few minutes. The dentist was attending another case; but, glancing through the open door, he caught sight of the man removing various silver ornaments about the room and conveying them to his pockets. He was about to leave the room when the dentist requested him to come in and be seated. His teeth appeared to be in excellent condition, but Dr. Papon informed him that to avert serious consequences he would have to undergo a painful ordeal, for which he must take gas. The patient was very much distressed, but without further ado Dr. Papon administered a powerful narcotic and then sent for the police. The man was removed and woke up a couple of hours later in his prison cell.—St. James' Gazette.

Never Struck Him.

It was in Egypt, and the old lady in the tourist party was much interested in the camel boy and his camel.

"He is a good beast?" said the old lady interrogatively.

"Yes, ma'am," responded the boy in broken English.

"And you treat him well?"

"Ah, lady, I have driven that camel five years, and never once have I struck him a blow."

"Dear me! Such human treatment of dumb brutes is worthy of consideration. Here is a piece of silver for you."

"Thank you, lady, very much. No, I never strike Rameses. When he is bad I twist his tail."

DESPERADO AT ORANGEVILLE SERIOUSLY WOUNDS OFFICER

Bob Cook Resists Arrest and in Fight That Ensues Slashes Constable Halbert, Crippling His Hand for Life —Cook is Known all Over Country.

Orangeville, Nov. 1.—A terrible affair took place here Saturday night about 10 o'clock in the store of Hughes & Norris, merchant tailors, West Broadway, in which Bob Cook, a notorious deseprado, figured. On Saturday morning Cook returned to town from the west, where he went with his young bride two years ago, and going to the home of his mother-in-law, an old widow lady named Mrs. Thomas Reid, on Church street, inquired for his wife, who left him some time ago. Not receiving a satisfactory answer he proceeded to smash the dishes and doors.

About 10 o'clock Officers Speers and Halbert saw Cook in the store mentioned; he had a jack-knife out whittling a stick. Cook, on the entry of the police, resisted arrest.

The desperado slashed at the constable with the knife, terribly injuring Halbert, whose right wrist was half severed, while the thumb hung useless. Cook then seized the officer's baton dashed through the door, defied the crowd, and made his escape. Halbert would have bled to death but for prompt medical attendance.

About two years ago Cook was arrested at Grand Valley, near here, broke jail, and defied the local authorities. In an attempt to arrest Cook here Halbert, on that occasion had his left hand cut to the bone by Cook with a band knife. On that occasion Cook escaped. Returning, County Constable William Marshall attempted to arrest him in a down-town hotel. He, however, whipped out two revolvers and swaggered around town like a hero. On this visit he got married to Miss Florence Reid, a handsome and very estimable young lady of this town, and went west again. He was apprehended by the Northwest Mounted Police from Regina at Oxbow, Man., taken to the former place on the old charge, and released, as this town did not want him back, hoping to have seen the last of the man.

A substantial reward has been offered by the town for Cook's arrest.

ALLAN LINE STORY AGAIN

Montreal, Nov. 1.—The Allan line sale rumor to the C.P.R. will not down. Greater credence is placed in the present report in view of the fact that letters patent were granted, under seal of the Secretary of State of Canada, on Oct. 12, incorporating Sir Hugh Montague Allan, Hugh C. Allan, Andrew Alexander Allan, Gordon Walter MacDougall, all of Montreal, and Bryce James Allan, of Boston, for the following purposes: "To build, purchase, and sell shares in, acquire, lease, hire, charter and employ, own, navigate, manage, hold, operate, and maintain any ships, vessels, lighters or other craft together with all necessary engines, furniture, tackle, equipment, and stores.

Power is given the company to purchase all real or personal property which may be necessary to the carrying on of the business, and to amalgamate with any other company, having objects similar to those enumerated in their charter.

SCHOOLS MUST BE PROTECTED

Paris, Nov. 1.—M. Briand, the Premier, in an eloquent discourse Saturday night, at the dedication of the home of the Educational League, at which President Fallieres and several of the Ministers were present, announced that one of the Government's principal pre-occupations would be the protection of the public schools, whose enemies were the real enemies of the republic.

He counselled the people to be calm under attacks, as he was convinced that the country's enemies were setting a trap and hoped to win over public opinion through excesses of passion and anger at the defenders of the public schools.

Pointing out that the last struggle was not with the church, but against those who pretended to direct the church, M. Briand declared that France will never obey orders from the outside, and that Catholic France, which does not view religion as the instrument of a political propaganda, never will permit the exercise of brutal force against public institutions to which the nation is dedicated.

"The public schools," he continued, "are the hope of the future security of France, and if their enemies succeed in undermining the schools, it is the republic itself which will be weakened. The Government will strive to secure adequate laws, but the support and defence of the people will be most efficacious."

EXPLORATION COMPANY IS WOUND UP

Ottawa, Nov. 1.—An order for the winding-up of the estate of the Transcontinental Exploration Syndicate was given Saturday morning on request of the estate of the late Sir Adolphe Caron, who was a creditor to the extent of $3,215. The liabilities, it is said, will be about $35,000, but the assets are expected to even this up.

The syndicate, of which Sir Frederick Borden is president, has coal mines in British Columbia, and other interests.

Russia's Proposal.

Pekin, Nov. 1.—As a result of the visit of M. Kokovtzeff, Russian Minister of Finance, to Harbin, Russia has proposed to the powers the creation of a small international settlement outside of the city of Harbin. Diplomatic opinion here is that acceptance would be tantamount to an agreement that China be deprived of all sovereignty over leased railway territory.

Circus Treasurer Robbed.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 1.—Trainmen going through the circus train of Yankee Robinson's railroad show early Saturday morning found the treasurer of the circus bound and gagged in his private coach. As soon as he was released a search showed that $6,000 was missing, being the net receipts of two performances in Pine Bluff, Ark.

SUCCESS, NOT FAILURE, WANTED

London, Eng., Nov. 1.—Herbert Gladstone, Lord Pentland, who is Lord Aberdeen's son-in-law, and Lord Beauchamp, are three members of the Ministry named in political gossip in connection with the approaching vacancies in the governorships of India, South Africa and Canada.

The Times, while refraining from mentioning names, devotes an editorial of grave warning against the appointment of failures or nonenties, rather than successes in the Cabinet, to the highest imperial positions that the crown has to bestow. The Times adds:

"The day has gone by forever when blunders or jobs in regard to these appointments can be perpetrated with even relative impunity. The political education of the Dominion is now in many respects equal, and in some respects superior, to our own."

NATIONAL BANK FOR FRANCE PROPOSED

Paris, Nov. 1.—A project which would make the French treasury a bank of deposit for anybody who desires to pay his bills through the medium of checks was submitted to the Chamber early the past week by M. Millerand, Minister of Public Works. It seems likely to be popular, at least at the beginning. It is pointed out that it will place many needed millions in the control of the Government because of the well-known frugality of the French people and will induce a great number of depositors to maintain balances of considerable amount in its hands, especially as it is proposed to allow them a moderate interest. On the other hand, the Government will exact from each depositor a fixed security fund of about $20, and a small tax on sums paid or transferred by order of the depositor.

LESS GRAIN WAS HANDLED AT MONTREAL

Montreal, Nov. 1.—A tremendous falling off in the wheat receipts in Montreal is shown by the figures of the October report given out at the Lachine Canal office.

There is a difference of a million and a half bushels between the figures of October, 1908, and those of this year, and the reason is given that western farmers are holding their crops for a high market.

The big decrease does not mean that the American route is capturing the trade from Montreal, because an examination of Buffalo receipts shows the same falling off.

Aggregate receipts in Montreal, since grain moved eastwards, are very satisfactory, and the harbor commissioners believe that the full season's report will show an increase in the grain trade to Montreal.

GOT THE HOOK; SAVED HIS LIFE

New York, Nov. 1.—Checked in his fall through the air from a scaffolding, off which a fellow worker had just pitched to death on the stone abuttment of the Williamsburg bridge, 150 feet bellow, James Donahue, a painter, on Saturday in the sight of thousands hung suspended from a grappling hook at the end of a long rope which had caught in his clothing as he fell.

Rescuers on the bridge structure above swung another rope to him. He grasped it and was drawn up to safety.

Russian Woman Suicided.

Hamilton, Nov. 1.—Mrs. Joseph Showvonski, a young Russian woman who lived at 197 North Caroline street, committed suicide Saturday night by drinking carbolic acid. She was found in her room by two of her young children. It is believed that she was mentally deranged. She had been known by the name of Clark.

Manuel's Trip to England.

Lisbon, Nov. 1.—King Manuel has recovered from his intestinal trouble, and will leave for England on November 2.

THE HEART OF SAN FRANCISCO AFTER THE EARTHQUAKE

NICHOLAS COVARRUBIAS AS DON GASPAR D. PORTOLA

A VIEW OF RECONSTRUCTED SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 1.—Thousands of visitors from all over the world helped San Francisco to-day in the beginning of a brilliant carnival week. The observance, while ostensibly to commemorate the discovery of San Francisco by Don Gaspar de Portola, in reality is more in honor of the rehabilitation of San Francisco after its scourge of fire and earthquake.

Nicholas Covarrubias, a member of one of the old Spanish families of California, and who, for many years has been one of the most noted horsemen of Southern California, is the Don Gaspar de Portola of the Portola Festival of San Francisco. The accompanying picture shows Covarrubias in the costume of King of the Portola Festival. The costume is copied from the dress worn by Spanish officers in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

NO TARIFF WAR BETWEEN CANADA AND UNITED STATES

Despatch From Washington Says Administration Has Practically Decided Not to Antagonize Her Best Customer.

Detroit, Nov. 1.—A special from Washington last night says: The Administration is not going to have a tariff was with Canada. This fact has not yet been officially announced, and it will not be until after the President returns to Washington, but it is a fact, nevertheless. It has required but a brief scrutiny of the possiblities of such a war to scare the Administration. Canada, as the very best single customer (population considered) which the exporters of the United States have, would be in a position to make so much trouble in such an event that it would have a disastrous effect on any party in the United States fostering the war.

This has become plain, and therefore the Tariff Commission has been instructed to find a way to obviate trouble. It is understood that it has done so, and that it will report to the President in due time that Canada does not discriminate against the United States in a manner that calls for the imposition of maximum rates on imports from the Dominion.

Of course, it is a fact that Canada does discriminate against the United States to a certain extent, and that the new tariff law was drawn in a way to enable the United States to hand ont punishment for it. In fact it looks as if the law amounted to a mandatory order to do so.

But it appears that the Administration is to take advantage of the fact that the President is really the sole judge of what is discrimination, and where it will cause trouble to judge in a certain way he can obviate it by simply judging in the other way. In doing so he can take glory, if there is any, while the Tariff Commission can take the blame, if there is any.

It is declared that it "will work fine," which is doubtless true. At any rate it will save the Administration from having to meet a charge of having crippled the trade of the country with Canada, a charge which might lose the Republicans the House at the next election if the crippling proved to be severe.

LORD KITCHENER WILL NOT GO

London, Nov. 7.—A deadlock between the Colonial Office and War Office on the question of finances connected with Lord Kitchener's new post as commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean and Malta, has been further complicated by Lord Kitchener's flat refusal to go to Malta at all.

As president of the selection board Lord Kitchener could not possibly be of service to his country if he were kept at Malta. The selection board meets at the War Office in London, and that is where its president should be quartered.

WANT TO KNOW ABOUT CANADA

Ottawa, Nov. 1.—R. H. Patchin, a member of the Washington Press Gallery, will be the first permanent representative of an American newspaper to come to the Canadian capital. Mr. Patchin, who has arrived in Ottawa, will represent The New York Herald. He will become a member of the Parliamentary Press Gallery, but will remain in Ottawa all the year round with the object of sending a substantial Canadian news service to The Herald.

Robert Harris Is Dead.

Toronto, Nov. 1.—Robert Harris, who was so badly injured in the explosion at Parker's dye works Thursday last, died in the General Hospital at 12.45 Sunday morning.

Harris, who was the foreman at the dye works, was 85 years of age, married, and lived at 52 Hillsboro avenue. He was blown out of a window, by the force of the explosion.

Stops Executions.

Barcelona, Nov. 1.—Premier Monet yesterday telegraphed the authorities here to suspend the execution of all court-martial sentences until the cases could be examined by the Government.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

United States Congress will be asked at the next session to investigate the rottenness of the customs service in New York.

Isaac Taylor, watchman, aged 71, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the People's Theatre, Philadelphia, on Saturday. Loss, $60,000.

The Sterling Bank will open a branch in Winnipeg shortly. They have purchased a site on Portage avenue, as a cost of a quarter of a million dollars.

As a result of injuries received in a football game between Medico, Chicago, and the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy at the latter city, Michael Burke died yesterday morning.

Frederick Olsen, a carpenter working on a building on the corner of Main street and College avenue, Winnipeg, fell fifty feet from a scaffold Saturday afternoon and was instantly killed.

Twelve men were killed in the Cambria Steel Co.'s coal mine, two miles from Johnstown, Pa., last night, as the result of what is supposed to have been a dynamite explosion. All the dead are foreigners.

ABDUL HAMID DID NOT ESCAPE

Belgrade, Nov. 1.—The ex-Sultan, Abdul Hamid, has again attempted to escape from the Villa Allatini.

A communication from Salonika states that the ex-Sultan, wishing to have his bedstead repaired, had a workman brought into his house. Abdul Hamid ordered him to take a bath before proceeding with his task.

While the man was in the bathroom his clothes were brought to the ex-Sultan, who at once donned them, and thus disguised passed through the garden and into the street. At this point he was recognised by one of the guards, stopped, and sent back.

MUTINY IS OFFICIALLY AT AN END

Nevertheless More Will Probably be Heard of the Greek Affair—Leaders May be Shot.

Athens, Nov. 1.—Tibaldos miniature rebellion has been suppressed according to official announcement of the Government yesterday. Nevertheless, a danger of the revolt breaking out in new places will exist so long as the mutinous lieutenant remains at large.

The torpedo boat destroyer Velos with her rebel crew is also roaming in unknown seas.

Three of the revolters were killed and several wounded when a shell struck the mutinous torpedo boat Sephendona during the engagement on Saturday.

The rebellious force at the arsenal on the Island of Salamis, surrendered yesterday. All of the vessels of which Tibaldos took possession have returned home with the exception of the Velos.

It is stated that the Military League has sentenced Tibaldos to death. He is said to have deceived the sailors by saying he had orders for his action from the league.

In the Chamber Saturday night a deputy suggested that the leaders of the mutiny be shot, whereupon two other members of the House shouted that the leaders of the former movement should also be shot. The Military League subsequently demanded leave to arrest these two deputies, but the Chamber refused. This attitude of the House is taken as an indication that the power of the league is waning.

BARTON MURDER AGAIN REVIVED

Hamilton, Nov. 1.—There is a suspicion that Fred Gebhardt, alias Otto Mueller, who has confessed to the murder of a young woman at Islip, may be the Barton murderer. The crimes bear a close resemblance, as both women were shot in a bush and attempts made to burn their bodies. The New York police believe Gebhardt to be a modern Bluebeard. People who saw the man walking with the woman whose body was found in a bush in Barton Township, back of the mountain, when shown a picture of Gebhardt, said that they could not be sure that he was the man they saw, as it is now about four years since the crime was committed. Chief Smith said he would probably make enquiries.

THE SUFFRAGETTES BOTHER SUFFRAGISTS

London, Nov. 1.—Lady McLaren inaugurated the Government hospitalities of the winter season by a large reception to the Prime Minister on Friday.

Lady McLaren, who, though an ardent suffragist, is strongly opposed to "suffragettes," was horrified during the course of the evening to see that two of the militant ones had gained admission to the drawing-room and were forcing conversation upon the defenceless Asquith, who, being without his usual guard of detectives, was obliged to listen to their harangues.

As Asquith did not reply both suffragettes turned their attention to Lewis Harcourt and Winston Churchill before they finally were asked to leave the house.

BIG FIRE IN WINNIPEG; THE LOSS IS $90,000

Three Persons Are Saved From Death by Prompt Action on Part of Police and Firemen in Toronto—Nine Die in Fire at Johnsbury, Vt.

Winnipeg, Nov. 1.—On Saturday the five-storey brick and stone building of C. H. Newton caught fire, the three upper storeys being gutted and the goods on the lower floors ruined by water. A stock of sample oils on the fourth floor exploded, blowing out the windows and driving the flames into every corner. The firemen were greatly hampered by myriads of wires, most of them high voltage feeders of the electric railway. Another drawback was the number of stones in the high pressure system, which blocked the nozzles. The principal losses are: Buildings, C. H. Newton, value $70,000, loss $18,000; insurance, $32,000; first floor, Newton, Davidson & Cherry, official assignees; second floor, Warehousing and Financing Co., $8,000, insurance $4,000; third floor, Hyndman Commission Co., loss slight, fully insured; James Stewart Manufacturing Co. of Woodstock, Ont., stoves, loss $10,000, insurance $7,000; fourth storey, A. E. Roy, commission agents, oils, teas, and essences, loss $5,000; Gourock Rope Works of Scotland, loss $13,000; fifth floor, Winnipeg Envelope Co., loss $9,000, insurance $5,400.

Three Are Rescued.

Toronto, Nov. 1.—Through the presence of mind of the police and the firemen of the College street fire station, three lives were saved from possible injury or death by fire which broke out last night at 462 1-2 College street. By influencing Henry Dewdney, his wife and daughter, who occupied the second and top flat, to remain at the windows until the arrival of the Portland street ladder truck, they were taken safely to the ground.

The ground floor of the building was occupied by Townley, a confectioner, who suffered about $100 loss. Dewdney's loss was $50, while the damage to the building, which is owned by Dr. Elias Clouse, is about $2,000.

While the firemen were fighting the flames someone called out that two other ladies were on the back roof and it was not till after the firemen had fought their way through the first floor to the rear windows that they discovered the ladies, who are said to have been "fresh air fiends," had got in through a window of the next building.

Henry Dewdney formerly lived in North Toronto, where he was burned out two years ago.

The fire started in W. L. Cheeseworth's tailoring establishment in rear of the first floor of the building. A W. Miles' ambulance was summoned, but fortunately no one was injured.

Nine Dead In This Fire.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Nov. 1.—Nine lives are known to have been lost in the fire that practically destroyed the Citizens' Savings Block here early on Saturday. Two persons were killed by falling from the upper windows of the burning building, while seven others were buried in the ruins. Four injured were taken to the hospital, two of whom are not expected to live. The property loss is $50,000.

Girls Fatally Burned.

Kansas City, Nov. 1.—During a hallowe'en entertainment at Loretto Academy, a Catholic boarding school for girls, here Friday night, Miss Virginia Owen and Miss Mamie Tiernan, student actors, were so severely burned that they died yesterday. Miss Mary Maley was severely burned while endeavoring to save her schoolmates. A panic was averted by the coolness of the mother superior and several sisters.

All the girl actors wore Esquimaux costumes, covered with cotton representing snow, while the stage had been set with much cotton tinsel to portray the discovery of the North Pole. Miss Owen tripped over a jack o'lantern, and in a second the flames had communicated to the other girls and decorations.

A CONSTABLE SHOOTS INDIAN

Brantford, Nov. 1.—While arresting three young Indians, who were disorderly at the pagan council house late Saturday night, near Oksweken, Dominion Constable David Carlow shot and injured Curtis Martin, an Indian, who, it is claimed, attacked him with a fence rail, endeavoring to prevent the arrest of his friends. Carlow had been called by Chief General to put a stop to the disturbance.

The constable was arrested here yesterday after he had delivered his prisoners at the local jail. He said he first shot into the ground, and when Martin approached closer, shot at his legs. One bullet took effect in the left ankle and the other in the right knee. He related the story of the shooting to the local authorities.

Carlow is a man of powerful physique, and his arrest is on the ground that the shooting was unnecessary.

BELLEVILLE IS LOOKING FOR SIGNS

Belleville, Nov. 1.—None of those Grand Trunk Railway men from East Toronto, who the company said would be moved to Belleville following the abandonment of Little York as a switching point, have yet arrived, although local officials of the company affirm that several have enquired about houses here. It is now two months since the company announced the transfer of the East Toronto switching to Belleville and Mimico, and the boom in population and business which was expected to descend on the favored points is still unrealized so far as Belleville is concerned.

LEFLAMME IS GOING TO RUN

Montreal, Nov. 1.—Contrary to what was predicted here in political circles, N. K. Laflamme, K.C., who mede a name for himself in connection with the investigation of the scandals at the City Hall, is out as the opposition candidate in St. James division, Ald. Robillard being the Government candidate.

It is the intention of the Nationalists to put up a campaign similar to the one which ended in Sir Lomar Gouin's defeat over a year since, and the triumph of Henri Bourassa, M.P.P. Mr. Laflamme is a splendid debater. Polling day is Nov. 12.

GAVE QUART OF BLOOD TO SISTER

Kingston, Nov. 1.—In Montreal in the Royal Victoria Hospital, Mrs. T. R. Carnovosky of Kingston gave a quart of her life blood to her sister, Mrs. Eli Williamson of Lindsay, in hope of prolonging her life, after an operation.

She was laid on a table and had her radial artery opened and attached to a vein in her sister's right arm. For two hours, less fifteen minutes she remained in that position allowing her blood to pass to her sister. She did not take an anesthetic.

The new blood resuscitated Mrs. Williamson to such an extent that she was able to undergo a second operation three days later, but although she came through the operation, she died of shock next day.

PROBABILITIES.

Very mild showers to-night and on Tuesday with thunderstorms.

LATE NEWS FROM MANY LOCALITIES

Lembroso's Return In the Spirit.

Rome, Nov. 1.—The appearance of the ghost of the late Prof. Lembroso is being looked forward to with extraordinary interest by Italian spiritualists. Before his death, the professor announced that after his demise he would place himself in communication with the Milan Society for Psychical Research, of which he was a member. He declared that he would make use of the professional medium, Eusapia Palladino, who was formerly a nursemaid, and with whose aid he had conducted many experiments since 1895.

Brakeman Fatally Hurt.

Lindsay, Nov. 1.—"Burney" Wilson, a G.T.R. brakeman, died in Ross Hospital during the night from shock, following the amputation of his right arm and leg, which were mangled at Garden Hill Saturday afternoon. He was coupling cars when he fell and was crushed. He leaves a wife and child.

King Menelik Stricken.

Addis Abeba, Abyssinia, Nov. 1.—King Menelik was stricken with apoplexy on Thursday night, his condition being considered dangerous.

Aylesworth on Saturday, the appeals of the council for clemency in the case of Mrs. Robinson, of Sudbury, sentenced to death for the murder of her daughters' children.

It is estimated that over 120,000 letters and postcards have been received by the Justice Department appealing for clemency.

New York, Nov. 1.—The "Kronprinzessin Cecilie" by wireless Saturday night was reported 340 miles east of Cape Race, and all well. A Paris cablegram had given rise to fears that she had met with mishap.

WESTERN UNREST

Few people can honestly doubt that the western Provinces should have control of their own public lands, of which control Sir Wilfrid Laurier deprived them at their birth. At the outset the readymade Governments with which the Federal Premier equipped Saskatchewan and Alberta stood with Ottawa in the battle against provincial rights. The Federally-created Cabinets were willing that the Dominion should retain control of the public domain, and restrict the people even in the conduct of their own schools. But there are signs of a change. The Governments of the two most westerly prairie Provinces Provinces have joined with Manitoba in asking Ottawa for possession of the school lands, which should have been theirs from the first.—The News.

There can be little doubt that there is trouble ahead in Canada on this question. The retention by the Laurier Government of its control over the western school lands was due to its obvious desire to control the legislation of the western provinces, with respect to schools. This control will not be given up without a struggle and it will end in favor of the provinces. That the Liberal provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan should join with Tory-governed Manitoba as they have done, shows that the people of the entire west are determined to control their own school legislation. The point involved is significant. The position of Manitoba at the time of the Manitoba School Act was complicated by the fact of the decision of the highest court of the realm in favor of the minority's contention. But the minority yielded its claim to a policy for the more general benefit of its advocates with the result that it lost the benefit of the Privy Council's decision and will now in turn lose the benefit of that policy inaugurated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the general benefit of Separate schools in the new provinces, which it seems these provinces are now about to proceed against. The substance was sacrificed to the shadow It has been a mistake in state-craft which cannot be repaired. It means, however, a desperate struggle in the near future and will provide the over throw of the Laurier Ministry at the next general election as Sir Chas. Tupper was overthrown in 1896. While even those who stood up for the minority in Manitoba in 1896 regretted the necessity of complying with a British decision they were relieved of all compunction in the matter by Catholics themselves who returned Sir Wilfrid at the head of the polls and thus relieved the Conservatives of the conscientious, if undesired obligation. As it stands there is no committal on the part of the Conservative party to Separate schools in the west and we may expect to find its leaders standing out for western autonomy in its fullest sense.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The failures in Canada for the previous month are one less in number than for the corresponding month of 1908.

Two prize-winning thoroughbred bulldogs attacked a little child in New York city and tore it to pieces. The bulldog died hard.

The Rev. Mr. Kennedy is not far astray. Party names are now long. It would be better to abolish being used largely by the unscrupu- them and let the shifty shift for themselves.

"There is a feeling abroad now-a-days that there is a weakness in the Christian life. If that is a fact, then it is because those professing Christianity are not living after the example of Christ."—Rev. Mr. MacBeth at the Opera House.

By jingo! The party that wants to plaster this fair land with naval taxation ought to be taken out and spanked collectively and individually. Surely we Canadians can discharge our duty to the Empire without providing the industrial waste of millions. Back up! there.

The Witness says that the total vote of Liberal and Socialist together at Bermondsey was four hundred over that for Tariff Reform. It might be well for the Witness to recognize the fact that the Socialist "stood" because the Liberal policy was unsatisfactory. It is true that Socialism and Tariff Reform do not blend, but the dissatisfaction of the Socialists with one party is not less than with another. The resultant facts are, therefore, that the Liberal budget got a black eye. Unemployment is the curse of Great Britain, and it has become clear to all but free-trade doctrinaires that a policy that allows Germany to feed on British trade, while Britain's millions are deprived of the reciprocating privilege is not a policy for the millions. It may enrich the employer, but it is death to the wage-earner. To meet trade-policies by underselling is a disastrous business for the employed, upon whom it ultimately falls.

It has been customary to describe Maine as a State in which the much-vaunted prohibition did not prohibit. Strange tales from travellers have at various times reached the ear telling how "there was more drinking than ever in Maine." There must be some mistake about this. Boston, Mass., which is a fairly well regulated city, had 426 arrests for drunkenness per ten thousand in the last year, while Portland, Maine, had only 84. But what strikes the casual reader as a very practical answer to the ruination theory is that the police and gaols in Portland cost the people there per head only about one-tenth of that department of public order in Boston.

It is only too true that Peterborough city has of late been made the centre of drunkenness for the surrounding country. Why? Not because liquor can be got in the townships more readily than before. Rather the reverse, we should say. At any rate drunkenness on the streets of Peterborough has greatly increased, although we have a thoroughly well-managed and effective police force. But the police cannot stop drunkenness. They are at the wrong end. This feature of the drink privilege is a matter of sincere regret to every well-wisher of our little city.

DANGEROUS DANDRUFF

Will Make Canada a Baldheaded Nation if Not Checked.

Mr. Pasteur, the French Physician of Paris, once said: "I believe we shall one day rid the world of all diseases caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Wm. Madill guarantees it. It will stop itching scalp, falling hair and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray.

It is the hair dressing par excellence, daintily perfumed and free from grease stickiness. It is the favorite with women of taste and culture who know the social value of fascinating hair.

A large bottle costs only 50 cents at leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by Wm. Madill. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package.

THE HOOK

The Board of Works have laid six miles of walk this season. What a long stretch to have to shovel the snow off!

A Baptist minister at Hamilton said the names Liberal and Tory should be dropped. Some people would prefer calling the parties something a good deal stronger.

Pretty nearly time the aldermanic candidate was starting to put out the glad hand and distribute the five cent cigar.

The hunting season's here again,
And you can choose your lot,
To go a-hunting and get killed
Or stay at home half-shot.

A rube carnival is being held at Belleville roller rink to-night. Many residents of the Sleeping City will be able to shine without make-up.

This is mighty poor weather for the stove and furnace dealers.

Dublin has the only cigar manufactory in all Ireland.

A large whale of enormous weight and measuring nearly eighty feet, was recently found near the Island of Rosbeg, off the Donegal coast.

ST. PAUL'S HAD ABLE SPEAKER

Rev. R. G. MacBeth, M.A., Delivered Two Fine Sermons—Large Congregations.

Rev. G. MacBeth, M.A., of Paris, Ont., was the preacher at both services at St. Paul's church yesterday. He is one of the missioners for the simultaneous evangelistic campaign in the Presbytery of Peterborough, and is a pleasing and convincing speaker. He was heard by large congregations at St. Paul's and his addresses made a deep impression. He bespoke the success of the campaign, and urged all Christian men and women to pray for a great spiritual revival, as a result of the meetings to be held.

At the evening service his text was taken from St. John 12:32, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." In his introduction Mr. MacBeth dwelt upon the indestructibility of the Bible. Other books appealed to the passing fancy. They were soon laid away in the morgue of dead books and were forgotten. The Bible, however, remained throughout the ages, and would last for all time. Standing in a valley of the Rocky mountains, the speaker had often seen a storm passing overhead, moving toward one of the giant mountain peaks, which for a time would be obliterated from view by the fast-moving clouds. In a few minutes it would be seen that the clouds had parted when they came against the mountain peak, which remained unchanged. It was just so in connection with the storms of infidelity, and the floods of controversy in connection with the Bible. The Good Book withstood them all, and when they were over it remained unscathed and unchanged.

The speaker pictured the commanding qualities of the personality of Jesus Christ. Personality played a prominent part in the affairs of human life. We place our trust largely in persons. When on a ship when there is a storm at sea we depend upon the man at the wheel to bring the vessel through the danger safely. The personality of Jesus Christ was very strong and was emphasized in many portions of the Scriptures. "Come unto Me, and I will give you rest," the Lord had said. Jesus Christ was a real personality. It was that which made Him an outstanding figure in the history of the world.

Mr. MacBeth spoke of the power of Jesus Christ to save, to redeem, to regenerate. He was the great Physician who was the healer of all sorrows. He was the friend of mankind, with the power to wash away all guilt. Sin was a very real thing in the world at the present day, but with the help of God the battle for righteousness could be won.

The new Alexander revival hymns were used exclusively and were sung with heartiness by choir and congregation.

Bible Reading In Schools.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 30.—At the afternoon session of the Dominion W.C.T.U. convention, Mrs. Ada Gordon, in presenting the report of the evangelistic department, urged that petitions should be circulated in favor of legislation looking to reading of a portion of the scripture in public schools, and reciting of the Lord's prayer.

Carriage Merger Officials.

Montreal, Oct. 30.—At a meeting yesterday J. B. Tudhope of Orillia was elected president of the new big Canadian carriage merger. T. J. Storey of Brockville, and H. Munro of Alexandria, were elected vice-presidents.

James Bay and Eastern Railway.

Ottawa, Oct. 30.—Application will be made to Parliament for incorporation of the James Bay and Eastern Railway Co. to build from some point on the C.N.R., near Lake Abitibi, thence easterly and southeasterly, passing south of Lake St. John to the mouth of the Saguenay River.

Asselin May Run.

Montreal, Oct. 30.—It does not look at present as if Bourassa would be able to induce Mr. Laflame, K. C., to accept a nomination against the Government candidate in St. James, and it seems as if Oliver Asselin, the former editor of Le Nationaliste, will be chosen.

The Omagh Rural District propose to erect 114 additional cottages, and to provide 1 acre plots for each cottage at a cost of $92,580.

The Ardagh Branch of the U.I.L. recently passed a strong resolution approving of the "boycott" and cattle driving in the county.

Not In Father's Camp.

Montreal, Nov. 1.—Politics, indeed, make strange bedfellows for such a mix, up as is now seen here in the Montreal district has never before been equalled. Tancred Marcil, M.P.P., with the father of Hon. Jean Provost, M.P.P., for Terrebonne, constituted the two most pronounced Liberals ever known in this province. To-day their sons, whose liberalism cannot be questioned, are fighting the Quebec Government with all the energy at their command, and both are following the lead of Henri Bourassa, whose grandfather was Louis Joseph Papineau.

Reunion of Gompers Family.

New York, Nov. 1.—Two hundred members of the Gompers' family held a reunion in New York Saturday night, to do honor to Solomon Gompers, head of the family in America, and father of Samuel Gompers, the labor leader. The elder Gompers is nearly 80 years of age. Twelve great-granddaughters of Solomon Gompers, dressed in red, white and blue, were present. Before the reunion Samuel Gompers spoke on labor conditions before the Young Men's Hebrew Association. Incidentally he said that he was in favor of woman suffrage.

Koreans In Siberia.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 1.—The emigration of Koreans to Siberia has reached such proportions since the Japanese occupation of Korea, that the Government has resorted to the necessity of deportation in order to preserve the land for Russian settlers.

The Koreans in Siberia have now applied to the Douma, setting forth the unhappiness of their lot, if compelled to return to Korea.

Gen. Booth's Life Story.

London, Nov. 1.—Gen. Booth of the Salvation Army is writing his autobiography. He returned to public life last week after undergoing surgical treatment for a defect in his eyesight.

During his hours of darkness he was busy dictating his life story.

SAMUEL DE CHAMPLAIN SUBJECT OF A BRILLIANT PAPER

Read at Meeting of T. A. S. Ladies' Literary Society—Treatise of Great Interest — An Excellent Musical Programme.

At the second literary held by the ladies' branch of St. Peter's T.A.S. on Friday evening, Miss Holland read a splendidly-written paper on the life, work and virtues of Samuel de Champlain, the synopsis of which follows:

In the summer of 1908 there was held at Quebec the greatest celebration this country has ever known. It was the occasion of the three-hundredth anniversary of the founding of this, the oldest city in Canada. At this time great honor was paid by the various nations of the world, not only to the present possessors of this land, but in an especial manner to that great colonizer and explorer who has been so deservedly called the "Father of New France." It is but fitting, then, that the members of this society should not let this occasion pass from their memories without recalling something of the life and virtues of this great and notable character.

Samuel de Champlain was born at Brouage, a small village in the province of Saintonge, in France, in 1570. While still young, he was placed in charge of the parish priest, who gave him the elements of an education, and instilled into his heart the highest religious principles. The boy's youth passed quietly away, spent for the most part in his home or in voyaging with his father. Later in life Champlain spent some time in the army, but a military career did not appeal to him as did that of a mariner. On March 15th, 1603, he set out on his first voyage to Canada, in the interests of De Chastes, and on May 24 the ships reached Tadousac. Here the explorer met with about one hundred Huron Indians, rejoicing over their recent victory over the Iroquois. From what he saw of them Champlain thought that in spite of their superstitions these Indians would be easily converted to Christianity, but as time showed, the difficulties which the missionaries had to encounter in this project, exceeded his most hopeful anticipation.

After doing some exploring work on the Saguenay and St. Lawrence Rivers, and staying at Quebec for a short time, Champlain returned to France, where he received a great blow in hearing of the death of De Chastes, whom Champlain believed had seriously intended to bring settlers to Canada. With the death of De Chastes, the project of colonization would undoubtedly have fallen through, but for the untiring zeal of Champlain, who after many difficulties, including an unsuccessful attempt to found a colony at the north of the St. Croix River, established a colony at Port Royal in Nova Scotia. The next three years were spent by Champlain in exploring the American coast as far south as Plymouth, after which Champlain again again returned to France.

In 1608 Champlain came to Canada at the head of an expedition to the St. Lawrence, and after many and untold difficulties and personal danger he succeeded in founding a colony at Quebec. Many Indians encamped in the vicinity and proved very troublesome neighbors as they were constantly visiting the fort either to beg food or to express fear of an invisible foe. Champlain treated them with kindness, however, hoping to win them to Christianity, and also desiring to have them as friends to aid in his future explorations and struggles against the hostile Iroquois. Champlain aided the Hurons in their struggles against the Iroquois, and after much valuable exploration work returned to France in 1610, shortly after which he was betrothed to Hele Boulle. He returned to New France, however, and in 1615 brought to this country four missionaries of the Recollet Order to try to effect the conversion of the Indians.

During all these years there had been going on in Canada a profitable trade in furs with the Indians, and the greater part of the population of Quebec was composed of clerks and other officials of the fur companies. For selfish reasons these companies were opposed to the colonization of the country and were a source of much trouble to Champlain.

Even when Canada became a British possession Champlain was not idle and endeavored to have it restored to France, and in 1632, he had the satisfaction of seeing his mother country again in possession of his beloved new France. From 1632 until his death in 1635 Champlain continued to do his utmost for the colonization of New France. His life was an example of virtue to the inhabitants, and when he died he had the consolation of leaving behind him a moral, honest and virtuous people. A chapel was erected on the spot beneath which he was buried, but this was destroyed in the conflagration of 1640.

Those who have carefully studied the life of this thoroughly unselfish man have been impressed by the many brilliant qualities which Champlain possessed. Some have praised his energy, his courage, his loyalty, and his disinterestedness, while others have been more impressed by his charity, his zeal, his practical faith and exalted ideals and his perseverance. The fact is that in Champlain all these qualities are to be found in a remarkable degree.

The city of Quebec is justly proud of her noble founder, and it is with a feeling of justifiable pride that the inhabitants point to the stately monument erected upon the spot consecrated by his noble life and death. But in the hearts of the people of Canada Champlain has a still more precious monument, and we may truthfully say that the flourishing condition of our Dominion to-day may be credited to a blessing on his trials and labors. The salvation of a single soul meant more to him than the conquest of an empire, and there can be no doubt that the memory of such self-sacrificing devotedness as Champlain displayed for this purpose, will never be obliterated from the memory of Canadians.

A CONVINCING EXPOSITION OF "THE MANLINESS OF JESUS"

By Rev. R. G. MacBeth at Mass Meeting at Grand Opera House—Rev. J. D. Morrow Says a Man Can be an Athlete and be a Decent Man—A Strong Exception to Recent Remark.

In spite of the beautiful weather and the beautiful autumn day outside, there was a very large attendance at the mass meeting at the Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon. A decided impetus was given to the missionary campaign which was instituted by the Presbyterian churches of the city yesterday by the interesting, logical and convincing addresses given by Rev. R. G. MacBeth, M.A., of Paris, and Rev. J. D. Morrow, "the athletic pastor," of the Dale Presbyterian church, Toronto.

Rev. Mr. MacBeth spoke on "The Manliness of Jesus Christ." His discourse was marked by a powerful eloquence and at the same time was clear and carried conviction with it. It was listened to with great attention by the audience which was apparently greatly impressed by the interesting delivery of a message of vital importance.

Mr. Morrow struck the keynote of the opinion of the vast majority of broad minded Christians when he upheld the great value of clean and manly athletics and denounced in a vigorous manner the untimely attack of a recent speaker in addressing a Sunday school convention. That speaker said "an athlete cannot be a decent man," and from this statement and the tenor of his other remarks regarding athletics Mr. Morrow made a very positive and well-timed dissension.

Rev. J. G. Potter occupied the chair and several other local ministers were on the stage besides the choir for the occasion and the musicians, other than the pianist, which formed the orchestra that accompanied in the song praises. The different hymns were heartily taken up by the meeting.

Rev. W. C. Riddiford led in prayer and asked that the assistance of the divine grace might be given in the fight against the greatest monster of the age—the barroom. Mr. Downey sang with much acceptance, "Rock of Ages."

Rev. R. Pogue explained in a brief address that the meeting was being held in connection with the simultaneous evangelistic campaign which was opened yesterday morning in the three Presbyterian churches in the city and among others in the district. It was the object to make the meetings as interdenominational as possible.

"THE MANLINESS OF JESUS"

The idea of Tom Hughes in his treatise on "The Manliness of Jesus," Mr. MacBeth explained he wished to make the topic of his address. Manliness included courage of all kinds. Physical courage in a moderate sense at least. There was something higher than physical courage. It was moral courage. The bravery of facing things that could not be faced with mere physical courage was a mark of moral courage. Mr. MacBeth gave some striking examples of moral courage and dwelt on its superior quality and value.

The more we followed the life of the Master, who came to show how we should live and die, the more we were convinced that manhood like His was the kind to rule the world for the highest possible ends. The speaker believed that besides the highest moral courage Jesus possessed a physical body of great strength and beauty; that He was a manly man, capable of bearing great burdens and enduring great tests of his physical powers without faltering or giving evidence of distress.

In speaking of the immoral practices that wreck the body, Mr. MacBeth referred in strong terms to the malicious habit of smoking cigarettes and puffing away the lungs that God had given us to breath the air of life with.

The speaker had not come to speak much of the liquor traffic although he realized the great curse it was. Sir Frederick Treves, Sir Victor Horsely and nearly every other man of science labelled it a poison and it was our duty to put it away from our brother, who is too weak and childlike to act in his own interests.

Mr. MacBeth spoke of the regretful lack of chivalry among the men of to-day, of how women whose lives had been broken were thrown to one side, and said more men were needed to wield the sword in life's battle for the cause of Jesus Christ.

A NARROW VIEW CRITICIZED.

Rev. Mr. Morrow said the work of the campaign was one of inestimable importance. He stated he would only make a brief address.

Among other things Mr. Morrow, who is well known throughout the province as an athlete of ability and a staunch supporter of amateur sport, criticized the making of such a remark as was recently given utterance to—"an athlete can't be a decent man." Men meeting the speaker on the street had said, "Morrow you're not decent." He didn't appreciate the reference until he knew of the remarks made by a speaker at a recent Sunday school convention.

Mr. Morrow said he was proud when the day had dawned when he put on an athletic shoe and of the work he had done on the track. Men running Marathons and leading lives of shame weren't athletes.

There was nothing like good clean athletics for young men. Decent athletes weren't found on the street corners smoking cigarettes and staggering home drunk. They took a pride in their physical condition. The Y.M.C.A. with its gymnasium and encouragement to athletics was doing the best work in the country for the young men and the churches were beginning to realize this and organize athletic clubs in connection with the churches to get the young men.

The call for men of clear mind and clear eye is demanded by the machinery of to-day. Take our educational and commercial world; They needed young men of pure body and minds. So did the church and the world.

"We want the best men we can get to-day and we don't want dubs and nutty heads," said Mr. Morrow with vehement emphasis.

The evangelistic campaign was to bring the men off the streets and make real men of them. Our street corners were crowded with the very best the country could give.

A TELEGRAPH JOKER.

ELECTION RETURNS TO SUIT.

Swung States and National Chairmen Into Line In His Reports and Gave the Boys of the Mining Camp the Time of Their Lives.

A funny incident happened on the night of the national election of 1896 in a little camp tucked away in the mountains of southwestern Colorado, where the only means of quick communication with the world were a single uncertain telegraph wire and a single more uncertain telegraph operator. Naturally only the merest scraps of election news reached the camp, but before the certain news of McKinley's election could have been got the uncertain operator had fallen a victim to his favorite vice and, further, had fallen beneath the table.

The only other person who knew anything about telegraphy was "Shorty," the local wit and humorist, who volunteered to write out the election returns as they clicked off from the telegraph instrument. Political sentiment was aflame for Bryan. News of his election was not only sought, but demanded, for the average American miner is as sanguine concerning the uncertainties of politics as he is concerning the uncertainties of mining. The volunteer telegrapher was noted for an obliging disposition. He was the "genial" of the camp.

The "boys" had placed stores of giant powder at various points. They had cleaned and oiled their six shooters and refilled their cartridge belts. Bonfires were ready to be lighted on the hillsides, and natural enthusiasm had been stimulated at the Metropole, the Cosmopolitan, the Fashion, the Trocadero and less pretentiously named oases in the desert of mining camp existence—in fact, every preliminary to the grandest celebration the San Juan country ever had known.

Shorty was not the man to neglect an opportunity like that. The first bulletin he handed to the waiting crowd stated that New York and Indiana were in doubt and it looked like a close election, with the chances favoring Bryan. That whetted the crowd's keen appetite for returns to razor edge. The second bulletin sent their spirits up with a leap, "Bryan has carried Kansas, and the Democrats are claiming Iowa."

"Whoopee!" from the crowd.

Shorty bent his ear to the clicking sounder and inscribed "Bulletin No. 3—Illinois joins the Bryan column with 50,000 majority. Indiana certain. New York very close."

When the deafening chorus had died down a young member of the party asked the leader, "Hadn't we better begin to set off the giant?"

Before the leader could answer Shorty reproved him by word and look. "Don't go off half cocked," he said. "It's always best to wait until you are sure. You can't be too conservative in a case like this."

After a long pause, in which the crowd displayed much impatience, the imperturbable and conservative Shorty transcribed bulletin No. 4, but before passing it out he said:

"Now, boys, don't do anything rash. Wait for the actual returns."

Bulletin No. 4 read, "Senator Jones claims Ohio and Pennsylvania for Bryan."

Under ordinary circumstances a doubt might have been expressed concerning the probability of such states reversing their political records, but the crowd was convinced of an impending landslide for their favorite and yelled with delight. "Now we are beginning to get the news," remarked Shorty when the cheering ceased, and he began to write bulletin No. 5 as follows:

"New York gives Bryan 100,000 plurality; Indiana, 40,000. Returns from Wisconsin and Minnesota indicate large Democratic gains."

The crowd heard only the first sentence. Shooting, cheering, yelling, screaming, it broke for the street.

"Hold on!" called Shorty. "Here's another."

Bulletin No. 6, "Quay concedes Pennsylvania to Bryan."

Another fragment broke from the crowd and ran down the street shouting the news. The new operator's pencil was traveling rapidly over the paper, while his friends and fellow citizens crowded closely upon him and read as he wrote bulletin No. 7, "Mark Hanna has locked up Republican headquarters and gone home."

The roar of the crowd was drowned by the roar of exploding giant powder. Buildings shook, windows rattled, accompanied by the crash of broken glass. The celebration was on, and Shorty McIntyre was alone.

The celebration lasted for two days. The morning after election the regular operator had recovered sufficiently to transcribe messages announcing McKinley's victory. Those who were sober enough to understand them didn't believe them. After several warnings of what would happen to him if he didn't quit "trying to fool people" the operator desisted and joined in the general jubilation. Not until the arrival of the Denver papers on the second day did that camp awake to a realization of the outcome of the election, and then there was not sufficient energy left to vent even indignation upon Shorty, much less to take revenge. On the third day the volunteer operator was more popular than ever, for all admitted he had given them the time of their lives.

THE MAN IN THE STAGE.

A Tragedy of the Olden Days In New York City.

A good many years ago, long before skyscrapers and rapid transit were thought of and New York was just a big growing town, they used to tell a story that was ghastly enough to curdle the blood of the most skeptical and to keep people of nervous temperament awake of nights.

The tale went that of, a summer night a husband and wife, returning home from the theater, entered a Fifth avenue stage for downtown and for many blocks were the only occupants. A little above Fourteenth street, however, the stage came to an abrupt stop, the door was opened, and three young men entered. One of the three had evidently been drinking heavily, for his companions were obliged to help him to his seat. The door was closed behind them, and the stage continued its journey northward.

About ten blocks farther on one of the young men rose and, bidding his friends good night, stopped the stage and alighted. A few minutes later the second of the three said, "Well, good night, Dick," pulled the strap, stepped to the sidewalk and walked off through one of the side streets. There remained in the stage only the husband and wife and the young man who was obviously under the influence of liquor and who sat in a crouching attitude in a corner of the stage under the dim flickering lamp.

After a time the husband noticed that the young man's head seemed to be drooping as if in sleep, and, fearing that he might be borne beyond his destination, he rose, tapped him on the shoulder and called attention to the number of the street they had just passed. There was no response, and the husband repeated his words, leaning over as he did so. Then he suddenly straightened up, turned to his wife and said quickly, "We will get out here."

She began to protest, but he simply repeated the words, pulled the strap and helped her to alight. As they stood under the corner lamppost she turned questioningly and asked him why he insisted on their getting out of the bus so far below their destination.

"Because," he replied, "that young man's throat was cut from ear to ear."

Cleveland Store Burned.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 30.—The S. S. Kresage & Co. five and ten-cent store on Ontario street, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss will approximate $40,000. No one was injured. In a fire in the same black on July 3, 1908, six girls were burned to death.

Large Schooner Ashore.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 30.—A telephone message to A. J. Legere, agent of the Marine and Fisheries Department, at 10 o'clock, states that a large schooner is ashore near Quaco, in the Bay of Fundy, and that another schooner is reported a short distance off flying signals of distress. The Government steamer Lansdowne has been ordered to the scene of the wreck. A heavy sea is running and the wind is blowing hard.

The rumors circulated as to a Royal residence being purchased in Ireland are declared to be without foundation.

DO YOU WANT A GOOD LAUGH?

See Girls at the Grand--Very Amusing--Lots of Fun

The coming of "Girls," the delightful comedy that Sam S. and Lee Shubert have sent on tour, direct from its long run at Daly's Theatre, New York, and which will be seen at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, November 3rd, will be anxiously awaited by local theatregoers who are familiar with the great record made by the piece in the metropolis. "Girls" is just what could be expected from the pen of the versatile and surprising Clyde Fitch. This dainty exploitation of feminine foibles, reflects an amusingly exaggerated phase of life which is keenly appreciated, even by the members of the sex so artistically caricatured. As was to have been expected, the novelty promised when the name of Fitch was mentioned, measured fully up to the standard of that author's surprises, and the studio scene, in which the bachelor girls retire to the noise of the fretful steam pipes, is about as refreshing a thing as Broadway has seen for years. Dramatic critics were loud in their praise of both play, production and presenting company, and all seemed to be of the same opinion, that there is nothing so entertaining after a hard day's work as to spend an evening with "Girls," listen to the sparkling dialogue of the "man-haters" and to witness the innocent trouble they succeed in making for themselves.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR

To be or not to be plunged into all the expense and waste of an independent Canadian navy—that is the question.

An independent Canadian navy means an independent Canadian army.

It means a possible difference of opinion on points of foreign policy between Canada and the Mother Country, and that difference will be accentuated by the possible holding aloof of "our army and navy." It will be the first break.

As the relations between Canada and the Mother Country at present exist, differences of opinion may arise but without the facts being fatally accentuated.

We regret that Mr. Borden has not come out in direct opposition to the Laurier programme. Sir Wilfrid seems to have no idea of the value of money to our growing industries. We cannot afford to dissipate and waste our energies in unnecessary preparations for war.

The whole of Western Canada is in revolt against the Laurier programme.

A large number of eastern journals, some of which are Liberal, are in open revolt, also, against the proposed extensive expenditure.

It is enough that Canadians are prepared to help as the occasion arises, without burdening themselves with a permanent establishment at this early period of their growth.

Everywhere an appeal to the people in a new general election is demanded, in case the government does not accept the warning already given.

City and country newspapers are expressing strong opinions on the subject. They feel that it is not a time for temporizing or for blind obedience to party. The proposed programme is fraught with disaster to Canada. It will transform us in a moment into an old-world principality, laden with the burden and debt of European militarism.

No question yet discussed by the Canadian people has so engaged their attention and aroused their protest. The issue is now national. If the Liberal party decides to back Sir Wilfrid it will become political.

Yet, we may hope that we shall not allow ourselves to be hurried into an expenditure which affects, not the moneyed men, but only those who have to do the borrowing. That we are so heavily mortgaging our future is a matter of concern—to those who have to pay it. The lenders, so long as their security remains good, can afford to receive the interest, and even to encourage extravagance.

CANON DAVIDSON'S BOOKLET ON CONFIRMATION

"Church Teaching for the People."

In connection with our recent remarks under the above heading we would draw attention to a new edition—the fourth—of Canon Davidson's Confirmation Manual, entitled "Features of Our Faith, Position and Practice." Issued first in 1899, three editions have been called for—each showing some improvement on its predecessor. The fourth edition, just published in an enlarged form presents many striking additions to the subjects treated in former editions. These now include, amongst others, "Principles of Prayer and the Prayer Book," "The Christian Year," "The Message of Our Church Buildings," "The Church and Our Bible," "Conversation," "The Layman's Commission, and Missionary Duty," "Mixed Marriages". These and other subjects are concisely and devoutly dealt with in language at once simple and direct. Such accuracy of definition is not, we suppose, to be looked for in brief a manual intended for general circulation. But the booklet being instructive and inexpensive, should gain a wide circulation, as a ready and intelligent exposition of the distinctive teachings of our church and a popular means to a most desirable end—the building up of an intelligent and progressive churchmanship. It may be added that, whilst definite in its teachings, the Manual deals with such subjects as Prayer and the Baptismal Obligations from a distinctively modern yet scriptural standpoint. The booklet bears the imprint of the Church Book Room. We heartily commend the new edition of this opportune and practical Manual to our readers—not only on the ground of its own intrinsic merit—but also because it is a "labor of love" of one of the most zealous and devoted of our clergy, who is daily exemplifying in his own life work, the potent truth of the principles so clearly and forcibly advocated in its instructive pages.—Canadian Churchman

STREET CAR SLID INTO G. T. R. ENGINE

And Front of It Was Badly Shattered and a Score of Passengers Severely Jolted—Accident Occurred Just in Time to Prevent Serious Catastrophe—Gates Smashed and Gateman Struck as Iron Base was Knocked Forward.

It was simply a matter of seconds that prevented what probably would have been a bad smashup attended with grave and perhaps fatal results. For when a powerful double-header strikes a street car, frail in comparison, amidship, there is quite likely to be something of a serious character happen. Car No. 11, of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company was was hit in this manner by a double-header freight bound for Belleville at 8.50, but collided with the front engine instead. When the engine had only passed about five or six feet over the diamond joined by the junction of the street car tract and the G.T.R. track at Charlotte street crossing. The street car was eastbound on Charlotte street at the time and ran bang into the engine after smashing through the gates.

A JOLT.

The car naturally came to a sudden stop and the twenty frightened passengers were unceremoniously jolted off their balance by the force of the shock. The vestibule of the car was damaged, the fender was broken off and the glass front was shattered. The motorman operating the car, Mr. S. Prophet was injured but not seriously, the occupants of the car other than being badly shaken up and very much alarmed, did not suffer to any extent. There was great excitement and perturbation on the part of the passengers, however, as the skidding car slid into the engine and they are congratulating themselves on their fortunate escape.

THE CAUSE.

A slippery rail on which the braked wheels could not offer a sufficient resistance to stop the car, is given as the cause of the accident. Prophet who is a gas fitter at the plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., is what is known as a spare motorman. Joseph Thomas, the regular motorman, was on the car at the time of the collision, but Prophet was running the car for experience. It is said this privilege is allowed by the company. Harry Smith was the conductor. The train was going slow at the time of the accident and only the two engines and a couple of cars had passed beyond the street railway track when it was brought to a standstill by the application of the emergency brakes.

The gates at the crossing were lowered in plenty of time, being down when the car was a considerable distance away, about opposite the Charlotte street Methodist church. The engines had left the cars with the freight on the track above the crossing while they were taken to the tank at the station for water. It was when the engines had been coupled to the cars and the train was proceeding slowly across the track that the accident occurred.

Owing to the impact of the collision of the car with the gates both gates were turned over the iron stands supporting them being swerved by the blow. Mr. Charles Noyes, the gateman, was standing by the gate nearest the gatehouse, at which the levers for lowering and raising the gates are placed, and was struck on the back by the stand as it bennt. He slid into the ditch at hand, which has been dug in connection with the placing of the inter-locking machinery of the new semaphore being built immediately north of the crossing, in order to escape further injury. Outside of having a rather sore back he is not hurt.

MOTORMAN SUSPENDED.

Mr. Herb Fife and his wrecking gang were dispatched to the scene of the accident and by 9.40 had the car placed on the track and everything cleared up. The car was sent to the barns to be repaired.

As a result of the collision Prophet has been suspended pending an investigation into the affair when Mr. Larmonth, the managing director of the Street Railway Company, who is out of the city returns.

The "derail" which in cases of skidding, throws the car off the track and prevents accidents is here and will be put in position at once. The accident could not have been avoided and it is fortunate that it was not more serious.

CONGREGATION OF ALL SAINTS' RECEPTION TO THE BISHOP

His Lordship Presented With an Address by the Parishioners—Bishop Pleased With Spirit of Good Will Among Anglican Churches of the City.

The parishioners of All Saints' took the opportunity offered at the reception to His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto, in the basement of the church on Friday night to present His Lordship with a congratulatory and appreciative address. The reception, which was held in the basement of the church, was from 8 o'clock to 9.30 o'clock, and besides the rector and members of the congregation, Bishop Sweney, Rev. Canon Greene, of Orillia; Rev. Canon Davidson and Rev. Dr. Langfeldt were present.

An enjoyable feature of the evening was a short musical programme of unusual merit.

The Bishop thanked All Saints, and assured the congregation of his interest and his prayers. He told them to ever keep in mind that the two marks of a strong church were Love and Faith. He hoped the three congregations of the city would work in harmony.

He was pleased with the spirit of goodwill he found in All Saints' towards its sister churches of St. John's and St. Luke's, and its welcome to their rectors. He would be pleased if he should learn that they reciprocated in the same manner toward All Saints'. He asked for the privileges of the congregation for himself and for the rector.

THE ADDRESS.

The address to His Lordship was as follows:—

Parish Church of All Saints', Peterborough, Ontario, October 30th, 1909.

To the Right Reverend, the Lord Bishop of Toronto:

My Lord Bishop,—On this, your Lordship's first visit to our Parish Church of All Saints', to administer the Apostolic Rite of Confirmation, the parishioners of All Saints' wish to extend to you a hearty and loyal welcome to our midst.

May we, first of all, take this opportunity to offer to your Lordship the sincere congratulations of All Saints' Parish on your election to the high and honored office of Bishop of the Diocese of Toronto. We pray God will give you every grace to meet its responsibilities and to uphold its dignity. We pray God will also make you a faithful shepherd to the ingathering of the souls of men into the fold of Christ, and to the upbuilding of the Church of Christ in this Diocese, that the consummation of the Kingdom of God and the Master's promised return be speedily accomplished.

We tender your Lordship the loyalty, obedience and support of this parish in all things pertaining to the welfare of the Church of England in this Diocese and throughout the world.

We trust you will take an especial and kindly interest in this, the youngest parish of the city of Peterborough, and will be pleased to note its remarkable growth. Though it was constituted a self-supporting parish but seven years ago, we trust one of the earliest visits of your Lordship to this city in the near future will be to open one of the largest and stateliest structures of the Diocese, now in course of construction to the glory of God. We trust you will be patient and sympathetic in our efforts to bear, as we have been called to do, with only the Divine aid, the heavy burden thrust upon us for the upbuilding of the Church of England in this city.

We have noted with pride the success that has so far marked your Lordship's administration of and progress through the Diocese. We pray your devotion and zeal will meet with an adequate response from the laity and clergy throughout the Diocese, and with the zeal of Divine blessing, may you long be spared to carry on the work to which you have been called.

Signed on behalf of the parishioners of All Saints':

H. R. TRUMPOUR,
Pastor.
W. G. HOWDEN,

JAMES EDGAR,

You put it in your pocket, and while there is a tick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. 27TH DEDICATION FESTIVAL CELEBRATED AT ST. JOHN'S

An Eloquent and Appealing Sermon by the Bishop of Toronto—Musical Services Were Highly Interesting and Appropriate—Beautiful Choral Work.

Interesting services in connection with the 27th anniversary of the dedication of St. John's church were held yesterday. His Lordship Bishop Sweeney, of Toronto, preached an earnest and striking sermon at the evening service, and special music in keeping with the spirit of the significant occasion in the annual chapter of the church's history, was given by the choir, under the leadership of Mr. R. J. Devey.

The bishop chose for his text Psalm 26.8: "Lord I have loved the habitation of Thy house and the place where Thine honour dwelleth," and it is difficult to conceive of a text in the whole Scriptures more suitable to the auspicious occasion. His lordship prefaced his sermon with graceful expressions of pleasure at being present with St. John's parishioners on the 27th anniversary of what they call their dedication festival. He looked, he said, with joy and satisfaction at all the manifold evidences of the good hand of God on this parish and his earnest prayer and hope will be that God, who has so richly blessed St. John's in the past, may continue to pour out in abundance His Grace and benediction upon both priest and congregation so long as their relationship with each other exists. He urged his hearers to exercise even a more united and practical support of their rector from this on as the result of which they will have reaped more abundantly of God's blessing and mercies when the next dedication festival comes round. Turning to the subject of his sermon Bishop Sweeny said he found in Chronicles that King David was anxious that the Church of God should be appropriately ornate and orderly and rich in all its details and appointments. Asaph and David arranged the number and offices for the singers in God's house and their division into four and twenty orders. Again, David, sitting in his, for those days, luxurious house of cedar, looked forth and saw the tabernacle in which the ark rested, and was struck with the inappropriateness of Jehoviah's habitation, in contrast with his own. David then showed his love for the House of God by wishing to build a suitable temple for His worship, but was prohibited from undertaking that work owing to his hands having been stained with blood. Before his death, however, David abundantly provided for the house of God at Jerusalem so that when his son Solomon built the temple he found to hand large stores of gold and silver and precious woods with which to embellish the glorious work. David, continued his lordship, is an illustration of the spirit he would like to see animating the ranks of all those who to-day call themselves Christians in so far as the house of God is concerned. Like David, they should recognize a due proportion of fitness between the house of God and the luxurious mansions of the wealthy, and make provision appropriate to the needs of the habitation of God's house. They in the old land caught the spirit of David when they traveled afar, in Europe, Egypt, and elsewhere in search of valuable marble, timber and other precious material with which to construct those great and splendid cathedrals from which went forth the various Christian forces to bless the world at large. And on this continent, in Canada and the United States, the spirit of David has also been caught in evidence of which we see on every hand splendid edifices erected for God's service. Applying this text to St. John's parish the bishop congratulated the congregation on what they had accomplished in the past. Catching the spirit of David he contended that they had done very well indeed. They should rejoice in their magnificent old church which stands like a glorious beacon on the hill pointing heavenward. St. John's is admirably appointed in every way and is almost free from debt.

This is beautiful indeed as evidence of this festival occasion when many of the details arranged for by King David and Asaph such as white robed priest and choristers and minstrels, enter in to the worship of God. He warmly congratulated the congregations past and present who had evidently caught the spirit of David regarding this house of God and urged his hearers to continue the good work and clear away the small amount of debt remaining on the property.

In conclusion Bishop Sweeny referred in touching terms to earnest members of St. John's, who had gone to their rest, and whose voices, could they be heard, would urge that the great work of Christ begun by them be taken up and finished by the present congregation. But in order that the church shall be the church triumphant, the Christian's service, and support must not be confined to his own parish but extend throughout the diocese, the country and abroad. There are 856,000,000 of people still sitting in darkness and the shadow of death, and there will be found a deep joy and satisfaction in whatever service we undertake to hasten Christ's kingdom upon earth.

After the evening service, Bishop Sweeny met many men of the congregation in the rectory library.

THE MUSIC.

Of the music used in the dedication services, it may be very easily said that in the office any one could take part. Elaborate music as such was not in evidence, but effective, simple music ran all through the services. Woodward's setting of the communion office any village choir can sing, but the same cannot be said of the standard anthem "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears" rendered by the choir during the offertory. The same may be said of the service at 7 p.m. All the office was in chant form, and the hymns were sung with great heartiness by choir and congregation. But during the offertory Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" was splendidly sung by a choir numbering fifty voices, accompanied by the organ and orchestra, the congregation remaining standing. The attack was good, a special feature being the clear, bright tone of the boy soprano. In the vestry Bishop Sweeny heartily thanked the choir for their splended singing and said he thoroughly enjoyed every note. As the outgoing voluntary the organist played Rubenstein's "Melody in F" with Mr. George Howarth and Mr. Frank Halpeny (violins), and Mr. Walter Hughes (cornet.) The organist and choirmaster, Mr. R. J. Devey, has good reason to be proud of the splendid body of singers in St. John's choir.

Three leading characters in "Girls," Clyde Fitch's most amusing comedy, at the Grand Wednesday, Nov. 3. Plan now open.

HORSESHOE LUCK.

An Old Myth That Goes Back to the Greeks and Their Sea God.

Of all the emblems for good fortune the horseshoe stands among the first. Everybody knows it is unlucky to pass a horseshoe on the road without picking it up. It is a luck emblem of the greatest power. We are indebted for this statement to old fales centuries in age that have descended from father to son, from mother to daughter through the years.

The old myths repay research. The luck of the horseshoe has a most respectable beginning. It is traced to the religion of the old Greeks and their sea god, Poseidon, who was identical with the Roman sea god Neptune.

To Poseidon horses were sacred, and to him they were sacrificed. Poseidon was believed to have created the first horse when he struck the ground with his trident and a horse sprang from the hole, which afterward became a spring. The sea god was the lord of springs. To him all springs were ascribed. In the shape of a horse he sometimes wandered by the shores of his ocean domain, and where he struck his hoofs deeply there the waters gushed out and permanent springs were found. This is the reason why horseshoes are reckoned lucky. Going to the root of the matter, one sees a nature myth as the root principle. From the sea all rain comes, and to the sea all springs owe primal origin, and to the rain and the fresh waters, sea derived, we owe all fertility on earth.

The old Greeks therefore worshiped Poseidon as the fortune giver through his springs. They gave him horses, his precious beasts, and they adored the footprints of horses when they found them, for they might be the very footprints of the god himself.

When the horses came to be shod the transition of the luck emblem from the footprint itself to the shoe mark, practically the same thing, was easy.

Pegasus, the winged horse, from whose hoofs the water springs gushed copiously when he came to earth, has been credited with the origin of the horseshoe luck.

The horseshoe was a specific against earthquakes. It would keep a house safe from harm by earth shaking. Again one perceives the sea myth—Poseidon was the shaker of the earth.—Team Owners' Gazette.

Obeying the Autocrat.

That fine old New Englander, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, laid down the rule that the law of the road entitles a man to two looks at every pretty woman. This fair and proper limit provokes no complaint in Kansas City, and it is not commonly exceeded, though we would have to go far afield to find a locality with more women worth looking at than are seen on the streets of Kansas City every day.—Kansas City Times.

Had All the Others.

"Were you ever in love?" asked the sweet young thing.

"No," replied the bachelor, "but you can't mention any other fashionable disease that I haven't had."

Wanted Harmony.

Soda Fountain Attendant—What flavor, please? Silly Young Thing—Have you anything in pink to match this gown?

No More Exiles.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 30.—The judicial committee of the Douma yesterday accepted in principle a bill to abolish the practice of exiling prisoners to European Russia and Siberia.

This practice, it is argued, has had a demoralizing effect upon the settlers there.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR INDIGESTION

If you have indigestion, your food ferments in the stomach and bowels. It does more; it decays, and the nutritious matter which should go to make new blood decays with it, and this leads to an impoverished condition of the blood, to nervousness, biliousness, constipation, sick headache, bad breath which disgusts your friends, and other disagreeable and unpleasant conditions.

And all this trouble is caused by the food that doesn't digest, but ferments and often rots in the stomach.

And fermentation is caused by the stomach not being strong enough and energetic enough to thoroughly mix the food with the digestive juices.

MI-O-NA is responsible for tens of thousands of cures. In fact, it is such a positive cure for indigestion and all stomach troubles that it is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to cure or money back. The price of a large box of Mi-o-na Tablets is 50 cents, and they are sure to promptly relieve the worst case of indigestion or gastritis. Try them.

"I could fix it so that you could go over—first class, of course—and pay your way, so to speak, by rendering us, me and my partner, a trifling service."

"Ah!"

"In fact," continued Calendar, warming up to his theme, "there might be something more in it for you than the passage if—if you're the right man, the man I'm looking for."

"That, of course, is the question."

"Eh?" Calendar pulled up suddenly in a full winged flight of enthusiasm.

Kirkwood eyed him steadily. "I said that it is a question, Mr. Calendar, whether or not I am the man you're looking for. Between you and me and the firedogs, I don't believe I am. Now, if you wish to name your quid pro quo, this trifling service I'm to render in recognition of your benevolence, you may."

"Ye-es," slowly. But the speaker delayed his reply until he had surveyed his host from head to foot with a glance both critical and appreciative.

He saw a man in height rather less than the stock size six feet so much in demand by the manufacturers of modern heroes of fiction—a man a bit round shouldered, too, but otherwise sturdily built, self contained, well groomed.

Kirkwood wears a boy's honest face. No one has ever called him handsome. A few prejudiced persons have decided that he has an interesting countenance. The propounders of this verdict have been, for the most part, feminine. Kirkwood himself has been heard to declare that his features do not fit. In its essence the statement is true, but there is a very real, if undefinable, engaging quality in their very irregularity. His eyes are brown, pleasant, set wide apart, straightforward of expression.

Now, it appeared that, whatever his motive, Mr. Calendar had acted upon impulse in sending his card up to Kirkwood. At all events, this Calendar proved not lacking in penetration. Men of his stamp are commonly endowed with that quality to an eminent degree. Not slow to reckon the caliber of the man before him, the leaven of intuition began to work in his adipose intelligence. He owned himself baffled.

"Thanks," he concluded pensively; "I reckon you're right. You won't do, after all. I've wasted your time—mine too."

"Don't mention it."

Calendar got heavily out of his chair, reaching for his hat and umbrella. "Permit me to apologize for an unwarrantable intrusion, Mr. Kirkwood." He faltered. A worried and calculating look shadowed his small eyes. "I was looking for some one to serve me in a certain capacity"—

"Certain or questionable?" propounded Kirkwood blandly, opening the door.

Pointedly Mr. Calendar ignored the imputation. "Sorry I disturbed you. G'dafternoon, Mr. Kirkwood."

"Goodby, Mr. Calendar." A smile twitched the corners of Kirkwood's too wide mouth.

Calendar stepped hastily out into the hall. Kirkwood closed the door and the incident simultaneously with a smart bang of finality. Laughing quietly, he went back to the window with its dreary outlook, now the drearier for lengthening evening shadows.

"I wonder what his game is, anyway. An adventurer, of course. The woods are full of 'em. A queer fish, even of his kind. And with a trick up his sleeve as queer and fishy as himself, no doubt."

CHAPTER II.

THE assumption seems not unwarrantable that Mr. Calendar figuratively washed his hands of Mr. Kirkwood. Unquestionably Mr. Kirkwood considered himself well rid of Mr. Calendar. When the latter had gone his way, Kirkwood, mindful of the fact that his boat train would leave St. Pancras at 11:30, set about his packing and dismissed from his thoughts the incident created by the fat adventurer and at 6 o'clock or thereabouts let himself out of his room, dressed for the evening, a light raincoat over one arm, in the other hand a cane, the drizzle having ceased.

A stolid British liftman carried him down to the ground floor of the establishment in something short of five minutes. Pausing in the office long enough to settle his bill and leave instructions to have his luggage conveyed to the boat train, he received with entire equanimity the affable benediction of the clerk, in whose eyes he still figured as that radiant creature, an American millionaire, and passed on to the lobby, where he surrendered hat, coat and stick to the cloakroom attendant ere entering the dining room.

The hour was a trifle early for a London dinner, the handsome room but moderately filled with patrons. Kirkwood absorbed the fact unconsciously and without displeasure. The earlier the better, he was determined to consume his last civilized meal (as he chose to consider it) at his serene leisure, to live fully his ebbing moments in the world to which he was born, to drink to its cloying dregs one ultimate draft of luxury.

With a deferential flourish the waiter brought him the menu card. He had served in his time many an American millionaire; he had also served this Mr. Kirkwood and respected him as one exalted above the run of his kind in that he comprehended the art of dining.

Fifteen minutes later the waiter departed rejoicing, his order complete.

To distract a conscience whispering of extravagance Kirkwood lighted a cigarette.

The room was gradually filling with later arrivals. It was the most favored restaurant in London, and despite the radiant costumes of the women its atmosphere remained sedate and restful.

A cab clattered down the side street on which the window opened.

At a nearby table a woman laughed, quietly happy. Incuriously Kirkwood glanced her way. She was bending forward, smiling, flattering her escort with the adoration of her eyes. They were lovers alone in the wilderness of the crowded restaurant. They seemed very happy.

Kirkwood was conscious of a strange pang of emotion. It took him some time to comprehend that it was envy.

He was alone and lonely. For the first time he realized that no woman had ever looked upon him as the woman at the adjoining table looked upon her lover. He had found time to worship but one mistress—his art.

And he was renouncing her.

He was painfully conscious of what he had missed, had lost or had not yet found—the love of woman.

The sensation was curious, new, unique in his experience.

His cigarette burned down to his fingers as he sat pondering. Abstractedly he ground its fire out in an ash tray.

The waiter set before him a silver tureen, covered.

He sat up and began to consume his soup, scarce doing it justice. His dream troubled him—his dream of the love of woman.

From a little distance his waiter regarded him with an air of disappointment. In the course of an hour and a half he awoke to discover the attendant in the act of pouring very hot and black coffee from a bright silver pot into a demitasse of fragile porcelain. Kirkwood slipped a single lump of sugar into the cup, gave over his cigar case to be filled, then leaned back, deliberately lighting a long and slender panetela as a preliminary to a last lingering appreciation of the scene of which he was a part.

He reviewed it through narrowed eyelids lazily, yet with some slight surprise, seeming to see it with new vision, with eyes from which scales of ignorance had dropped.

This long and brilliant dining hall, with its quiet perfection of proportion and appointment, had always gratified his love of the beautiful. Tonight it pleased him to an unusual degree. Yet it was the same as ever. Its walls, tinted a deep rose, with their hangings of dull cloth of gold; its lights discriminatingly clustered and discreetly shaded, redoubled in half a hundred mirrors; its subdued shimmer of plate and glass, its soberly festive assemblage of circumspect men and women splendidly gowned, its decorously muted murmur of voices penetrated and interwoven by the strains of a hidden string orchestra, caressed his senses as always, yet with a difference. Tonight he saw it a room populous with lovers, lovers insensibly paired, man unto woman attentive, woman of man regardful.

He had never understood this before. This much he had missed in life.

It seemed hard to realize that one must forego it all forever.

Presently he found himself acutely self conscious. The sensation puzzled him, and without appearing to do so he traced it from effect to cause and found the cause in a woman—a girl, rather—seated at a table the third removed from him, near the farther wall of the room.

Too considerate and too embarrassed to return her scrutiny openly, look for look, he yet felt sure that, however temporarily, he was become the object of her intent interest.

Idly employed with his cigar, he sipped his coffee. In time aware that she had turned her attention elsewhere, he looked up.

At first he was conscious of an effect of disappointment. She was nobody that he knew, even by reputation. She was simply a young girl, barely out of her teens—if as old as that phrase would signify. He wondered what she had found in him to make her think him worth so long a study and looked again, more keenly curious.

With this second glance appreciation stirred the artistic side of his nature, that was already grown impatient of his fretted mood. The slender and girlish figure, posed with such absolute lack of intrusion against a screen of rose and gilt, moved him to critical admiration. The tinted glow of shaded candles caught glistening on the spun gold of her fair hair enhanced the fine pallor of her young shoulders.

In the sheer youth of her (he realized) more than in aught else lay her chiefest charm. She could be little more than a child, indeed, if he were to judge her by the purity of her shadowed eyes and the absence of emotion in the calm and direct look which presently she turned upon him who sat wondering at the level, penciled darkness of her brows.

At length, aware that she had surprised his interest, Kirkwood glanced aside coolly deliberate lest she should detect in his attitude anything more than impersonal approval.

A slow color burned his cheeks. In his temples there rose a curious pulsing.

After awhile she drew his gaze again imperiously, herself all unaware of the havoc she was wreaking on his temperament.

"Eighteen," he hazarded—"eighteen or possibly nineteen dining at the Pigs in a ravishing dinner gown and unhappy? Oh, hardly—not she!"

Yet the impression haunted him, and ere long he was fain to seek confirmation or denial of it in the manner of her escort.

The latter sat with back to Kirkwood, cutting a figure as negative as his snug evening clothes. One could surmise little from a fleshy thick neck, a round glazed bald spot, a fringe of grizzled hair and two bright red ears.

Calendar!

Somehow the fellow did suggest Kirkwood's caller of the afternoon. The young man could not have said precisely how, for he was unfamiliar with the aspect of that gentleman's back. None the less, the suggestion persisted.

By now a few of the guests, theater bound for the most part, were leaving. Here and there a table stood vacant that had been filled, cloth tarnished, chairs disarranged, in another moment to be transformed into its pristine brilliance under the deft attentions of the servitors.

Down an aisle, past the table at which the girl was sitting, came two, making toward the lobby, the man, a slight and meager young personality, in the lead. Their party had attracted Kirkwood's notice as they entered—why, he did not remember, but it was in his mind that then they had been three. Instinctively he looked at the table they had left, one placed at some distance from the girl and hidden from her by an angle in the wall. It appeared that the third member had chosen to dally a few moments over his tobacco and a liqueur brandy. Kirkwood could see him plainly lounging in his chair and fumbling the stem of a glass, a heavy man of somber habit, his black and sullen brows lowering and thoughtful above a face boldly handsome.

The woman of the trio was worthy of closer attention. Some paces in the wake of her lackluster esquire she was making a leisurely progress, trailing the skirts of a gown magnificent beyond dispute, half concealed though it was by the opera cloak whose soft folds draped her shoulders. Slowly carrying her head high, she approached, insolent eyes reviewing the room from beneath their heavy lids, a metallic and mature type of dark beauty supremely self confident and self possessed.

Men turned involuntarily to look after her, not altogether in undiluted admiration.

In the act of passing behind the putative Calendar she paused momentarily, bending as if to gather up her train. Presumably the action disturbed her balance. She swayed a little and in the effort to recover rested the tips of her gloved fingers upon the edge of the table. Simultaneously (Kirkwood could have sworn) a single word left her lips, a word evidently pitched for the ear of the hypothetical Calendar alone. Then she swept on, imperturbable, assured.

To the perplexed observer it was indubitably evident that some communication had passed from the woman to the man. Kirkwood saw the fat shoulders of the girl's companion stiffen suddenly as the woman's hand rested at his elbow. As she moved away a little rippling shiver was plainly visible in the muscles of his back beneath his coat, mute token of relaxing tension. An instant later one plump and mottled hand was carelessly placed where the woman's had been and was at once removed with fingers closed.

To the girl, watching her face covertly, Kirkwood turned for a clew to the incident. He made no doubt that she had observed the passage. Proof of that one found in her sudden startling pallor (of indignation?) and in her eyes, briefly alight with some inscrutable emotion, though quickly veiled by lowered lashes. Slowly enough she regained color and composure, while her vis-a-vis sat motionless, head inclined, as if in thought.

Abruptly the man turned in his chair to summon a waiter and exposed his profile. Kirkwood was in nowise amazed to recognize Calendar—a badly frightened Calendar now, however, and hardly to be identified with the sleek, glib fellow who had interviewed Kirkwood in the afternoon. His flabby cheeks were ashen and trembling, and upon the back of his chair the fat white fingers were drumming incessantly an inaudible tattoo of shattered nerves.

"Scared silly!" commented Kirkwood. "Why?"

Having spoken to his waiter, Calendar for some seconds raked the room with quick glances, as if seeking an acquaintance. Presumably disappointed, he swung back to face the girl, bending forward to reach her ears with accents low pitched and confidential. She on her part fell at once attentive, grave and responsive. Perhaps a dozen sentences passed between them. At the outset her brows contracted, and she shook her head in gentle dissent, whereupon Calendar's manner became more imperative. Gradually, unwillingly, she seemed to yield consent. Once she caught her breath sharply and, infected by her companion's agitation, sat back, color fading again in the round young cheeks.

Kirkwood's waiter put in an inopportune appearance with the bill. The young man paid it. When he looked up again Calendar had swung squarely about in his chair. His eye encountered Kirkwood's. He nodded pleasantly. Temporarily confused, Kirkwood returned the nod.

In a twinkling he had repented. Calendar had left his chair and was wending his way through the tables toward Kirkwood's. Reaching it, he paused, offering the hand of genial fellowship. Kirkwood accepted it half heartedly (what else was he to do?), remarking at the same time that Calendar had recovered much of his composure. There was now a normal coloring in the heavily jowled countenance, with less glint of fear in the quick, dark eyes, and Calendar's hand, even if moist and cold, no longer trembled. Furthermore, it was immediately demonstrated that his impudence had not deserted him.

"Why, Kirkwood, my dear fellow!" he crowed, not so loudly as to attract attention, but in a tone assumed to divert suspicion, should he be overheard. "This is great luck, you know, to find you here."

"Is it?" returned Kirkwood coolly. He disengaged his fingers.

The pink plump face was contorted in a furtive grimace of deprecation. Without waiting for permission Calendar dropped into the vacant chair.

"My dear sir," he proceeded, unabashed, "I throw myself upon your mercy."

"The devil you do!"

"I must. I'm in the deuce of a hole, and there's no one I know here besides yourself. I—I"—

Kirkwood saw fit to lead him on, partly because out of the corner of his eye he was aware of the girl's unconcealed suspense. "Go on, please, Mr. Calendar. You throw yourself on a total stranger's mercy because you're in the deuce of a hole, and"—

"It's this way. I'm called away on urgent business—imperative business. I must go at once. My daughter is with me—my daughter! Think of my embarrassment. I cannot leave her here alone, nor can I permit her to go home unprotected."

Calendar paused in anxiety.

"That's easily remedied then," suggested Kirkwood.

"How?"

"Put her in a cab at the door."

"No. The devil! I couldn't think of it. You won't understand. I"—

"I do not understand," amended the younger man politely.

T.C.S. II. WON FROM P.C.I. II. BY THE SCORE OF 22-0

The second teams of the P.C.I. and T.C.S., Port Hope, met in an interesting game of rugby at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, and the match was a good one from the spectators' standpoint in spite of the fact that heavy and husky bunch from the Port Hope school won by the decisive score of 22—0.

The local boys put up a much better argument than would be judged by the score, and held the visitors splendidly in the second half, and they only managed to score 5 points more, all of which were obtained in the third quarter. In the last quarter the Collegiate boys made a big effort to break the goose egg, but, while they were unable to do so, kept T.A.C. from adding to their score.

The P.C.I. line-up was as follows:—

Full back—Petks.
Half backs—Rankin, Corkery, Stevenson.
Quarter back—Wallace.
End wings—Eastwood and McCabe.
Middle wings—Hogan and Kelly.
Inside wings—Harper and Rogers.
Scrimmage—Lewis, Auires, Laing.
Referee—Roy Campbell.
Umpire—Harry Hall.

LINDSAY'S HEAVY LINE WAS TOO MUCH FOR PETERBOROUGH

Locals Lost by 23-11 in Lindsay on Saturday—Were Ahead on the Round at Half Time, But Fell Away in the Third Quarter—A Good Exhibition.

The Peterborough junior O.R.F.U. team are down and out for the season, but they died game on Scugog Hill, in the Agricultural grounds at Lindsay, Saturday afternoon. It was the same Muskville fourteen who were defeated here on Thanksgiving Day who took their scalps. The score at half time was 12—10 against the locals and at full time 23—11, with the champions on the skidoo end. It was the great work of McHugh and Murdie on the line that beat Peterborough, and while the game put up by the Lindsay team on the whole was of a better calibre than when they played here on the holiday, the playing of their young opponents was every bit as classy, but they lacked the weight. Time and again they lost considerable ground on bucks, and the result was disastrous for the locals when Lindsay would get the ball near the touch line. The absence of Wood and Thornton made the Peterborough line much weaker, and the weak spots were opposite the positions filled by Murdie and McHugh. It was not on account of any poor playing of the substitutes, but rather that it was impossible for them to withstand the onslaughts of their opponents, who, if they were performing in their right class, would be arrayed before men of the Gene Hurtubise style. Still they were there for the purpose of winning the game if possible, and this they did, and what is more, neither took any unfair advantages, but played the game as it should be played. Byron Green also played effectively, his kicking and runs helping a lot. He was well supported by the rest of the back division, all of which worked steadily. For the locals Fortye and Burritt were prominent, while Richardson and Gibson performed at their respective positions in their usual reliable manner. The mountainous condition of the grounds was a big handicap in judging the ball, but few mistakes were made by the Peterborough back division. Geale at quarter pulled off a nice play when he dodged through the Lindsay line for the only touch made by his team, and his headwork was noticeable at all stages. The wings followed up fairly well, but they were better at tackling and stopping end runs. The scrimmage had their hands full all the time, but gave a good account of themselves.

While we wish the winners all success in their pursuit of the championship of the junior O.R.F.U. for this year, we would impress upon them the fact that they will have to practice overtime for the rest of the season if they expect to win the honors.

THE SCORING.

Peterborough kicked off, uphill, and after keeping the ball around the Lindsay 25 yard line, the pigskin was passed out to Fortye from a scrimmage, and he kicked over the goal for four points. On Lindsay's last down Green made a long kick, which got away from Gibson, and in a mix-up it went to the deadline for a point. First quarter, Peterborough 4, Lindsay 1.

Green caught the kickoff and tore off a nice run. An off-side by Peterborough gave Lindsay ten yards more and this brought the play within ten yards of the visitors' touch line. On a series of bucks, Murdie was shoved over for five points. Green made it six by converting.

Lindsay was not long in repeating the trick. A long kick by Green bounded away from Gibson, but was recovered near the line. Murdie was bucked over again for a touch, but Green missed missed on the convert. Sylvester caught O'Brien's kickoff and brought the ball to centre field. Peterborough pressed the play to the 25 yard line and Burritt's end run was stopped a few feet from the line. Fortye kicked to the deadline.

Half time—Lindsay 12, Peterborough 10

The third quarter gave the Lindsay rooters an opportunity to test their lungs, and they made good. Their team had the better of the play during their period. McHugh, who was putting up a dazzling article of football, broke loose, and with the assistance of his heavy weight scrimmagers, shot over the Peterborough line for five. The attempted convert went wild. Geale hit the ground heavily and was temporarily put out of commission. On resuming play went down to the Peterborough 25 yard line. Green's likely looking end run was stopped by Fortye. Lindsay received a gift of ten yards. Richardson's kick relieved the situation somewhat, but C. Coulter's smart dash around the end brought the play close to the line again and McHugh was bucked over for the second time. Bigelow failed to convert.

Three-quarter time—Lindsay 22, Peterborough 10.

Green kicked and the ball bounded away from Fortye and over the deadline. Several of the players received minor injuries during this quarter. Fortye kicked to the deadline for the last score of the game.

Final score—Lindsay 23, Peterborough 11.

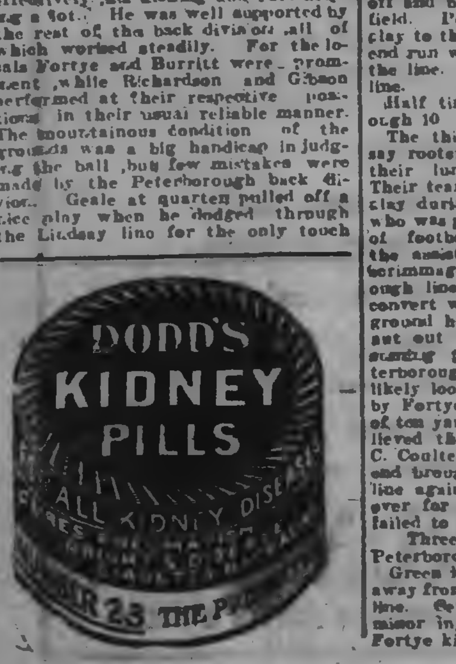
The teams were:—

Peterborough—Full back, Fortye; halves, Gibson, Richardson, Burritt; quarter, Geale; scrimmage, Lawe, Giroux, Minorgan; wings, Staunton, Conroy, O'Brien, Tugner, Mills, Quinlan.

Lindsay — Full back, Bigelow; halves, Sylvester, Green, Beecroft; quarter, C. Coulter; scrimmage, Mitchell, Simpson, Nesbitt; wings, Hall, Murdie, McKenzie, McHugh, McGregor, Carew.

Referee—Jack McDonald, Varsity, Toronto.

Umpire—Dr. A. W. MacPherson.



SPORTING TALK

This talk of Jeffries "knocking Johnson's block off" is all rot of the most absurd character. The majority of fight followers are of the opinion that Jeffries can win the title from Johnson, who has earned it by legitimate means, and has full claim to it, but neither the former champion nor anybody else in the world is going to wade in indiscriminately and "knock Johnson's block off." He is too crafty a fighter to let anybody do that, too clever a boxer, too great a ring general, and has an altogether too disagreeable uppercut for these rush-headlong artists of the arena, whether small or big. He is without a doubt one of the most polished and skilful fighters that ever annexed the world's championship belt, and the man who takes it from him will have to fight. If Jeff beats Johnson it will be after the toughest kind of a battle, and when the two meet the odds won't be very long at that.

Johnson, in his fight with game Tommy Burns had it all his own way from the first round, and while the pictures did not show that Burns was conclusively defeated when the police interfered, there is no doubt that he hadn't the faintest chance against the stalwart black. Ketchel was easy money for the champion, and while he was in the best of condition and showed, in the opinion of experts, as good form as he ever did in his ring career, he had no show with his uppercut from the opening of the gong.

Of course, Burns and Ketchel are much smaller than Jeffries, and would no doubt be put away by the boilermaker, but in neither of these battles did Johnson apparently have to extend himself and he will doubtless be forced to bring to the surface all his qualities as a fighter. Jeffries' chances to defeat Johnson in a long battle appear favorable, but there is no doubt whatever that when the two meet there will be a real fight.

RUGBY

The Rough Riders of Ottawa won from the Argonauts at Rosedale on Saturday by 14—9. A try just before full time was called gave them the game. Only 800 witnessed the struggle. Ottawa leads the interprovincial with five wins and no losses.

SENIOR TEAM IS STILL IN THE RUNNING

The defeat of Parkdale Canoe Club by the T.A.AC. on Saturday leaves Peterborough in the running in the senior O.R.F.U. If the locals can cop the game from T.A.A.C. here on Saturday and then win in Toronto from the Parkdale Club they will be on equal terms with the two Toronto clubs. The Peterborough team will make a big effort to win these two games and plans are being laid to strengthen the fourteen at several points. Practices will be held every night this week and the boys are hopeful of downing T.A.AC at Riverdale Park on Saturday afternoon. The Toronto club will have their strongest team.

HALLOWE'EN AND WHENCE IT CAME

The ancient Druids kindled fires on the nights before November 1st, to scare off evil spirits. It is a Keltic tradition peculiar to the Highlands of Scotland, the south of Ireland, Wales and parts of Cornwall. "Nut-crack night" is a popular name for All Hallowe'en. The occasion, like most others, is taken advantage of for the lads and lassies to get "thegither." An apple-peel thrown on the floor will, beyond doubt, form the first letter of the lover's name. The occasion is also made memorable by the pranks of boys.

Youthful Hunters Trespassed on Private Property—One Fined for Shooting Chicken

Last Monday three boys hired a small rifle for the purpose of going on a shooting expedition. They attempted to cross one farmer's property, but were quickly hustled off. The next farm, belonging to Mr. Geo. Hatton, was tried, with better success, but unfortunately for the hunters, they came across a chicken, and the youngest of the party took a shot and the chicken toppled over dead. This morning at the police court the youths were charged with trespassing and killing a chicken. The young lad who used the rifle with such deadly effect, was fined $2, and the other two were discharged.

FELT HATS.

Evolution of the Fluffy Fur Into the Finished Product.

It is an interesting matter to follow stage by stage the evolution of a little pile of soft, fluffy rabbit fur into the finished hat, whether a light colorial crush or a raven black hard hat of the derby shape. The general idea about such a hat is that it is cut and made or molded out of a sheet of felt, so that amazement comes when one is shown bales and heaps of rabbit fur and is told that it is out of this that hats are made. Felt indeed is not so much a primary material, but felting is the process by which wool, fur or hair is matted together and formed into a close fabric. For hats rabbit fur is the material used. The first step in its treatment is the thorough cleansing of the close clipped fur in a machine, which winnows it of all dirt or foreign matter and leaves it in a soft, fluffy condition resembling the finest and lightest down.

Anything less resembling a hat it is impossible to imagine. But the marvelous ingenuity of the next process accomplishes an almost magical change. In the central box of a hopper-like machine a big copper cone revolves. From above the soft, fluffy fur is fed down in a shower, which clings like gray snow on the revolving cone, while jets of water and steam spray on the fur mat and plaster it into a complete covering. In a minute or two the cone is covered to the depth of one-eighth of an inch with this matter and saturated fur, which is now become felt. The machine is stopped, the cone is taken out, and the workman dexterously peels off the felt covering. Being built up on the cone, it is also cone shaped and looks like a gigantic sugar loaf bag. It is the embryo hat.

In this first state it is a soft, wet, felt cone, measuring 24 by 30 inches. Rolled up, it enters upon a series of processes and is shrunk together so that it measures 10½ by 14 inches.

The hat, now a browny-gray felt cone, like a clown's cap, is smoothed by being placed against rapidly revolving sandpaper. It is stiffened by being dipped in shellac, dyed black by immersion in a vat and then passes on to be shaped. Warm water gives the felt pliability again, and the man pulling out or "earsing" the apex of the cone draws and smooths it down to a wooden block of the exact shape and size the hat is required to be. As it dries it takes its destined shape and firmness as regards the crown, while the brim is still flat and untrimmed.

The body of the hat is now practically finished. Then comes the shaping of the brim, which is worked down and bent over a wooden frame of the exact curl and line of the ordained design. Each size and style of hat has its own frame, as it has also its iron mold, wood block, etc., and every alteration in a season's styles and shapes calls for an entirely new set of molds.

Highest Endurable Temperature.

It is difficult to say what the highest temperature is that a human being can live in. In the kitchens of some of the great hotels and in the stokeholds of some steamships the temperature gets to 140 or 145 degrees. Cooks and their helpers and stokers have to endure that temperature for hours at a time, and they seem to get along pretty well. The hottest place perhaps where human beings work is in the vulcanizing factories, where the temperature is 212, the boiling point of water. There are a few who can stand this heat for a little while at a time, but man can endure no more.

Vesuvius.

Vesuvius cut but a small figure in history till the latter half of the first century of the Christian era. In 73 B. C. its crater served as a camp of refuge to a band of gladiators. In 63 A. D. the serenity was broken by a violent grumbling that manifested itself in a severe earthquake that shook up the surrounding region. For sixteen years the subterranean rumblings continued at intervals, and in the year 79 A. D. came the great catastrophe in which Herculaneum and Pompeii were overwhelmed. In 1631 there was another terrible explosion, and since that time Vesuvius has seldom been at rest for many years together.—Exchange.

A Culinary Tragedy.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked Mr. Justwed as he came into the house and found his wife crying as if her heart would break.

"I am so discouraged," she sobbed.

"What has bothered my little wife?"

"I worked all the afternoon making custards, because I knew you were so fond of them, and—and"— Here she began weeping hysterically again.

"And what, darling?"

"And they turned out to be sponge cakes."

The Cleverest.

Willy—You see, it was this way. They were all three so dead in love with her and all so eligible that to settle the matter she agreed to marry the one who should guess the nearest to her age. Arthur—And did she? Willy—I don't know. I know that she married the one who guessed the lowest.

Crushed.

"Really, Louise, this bill is outrageous. You must not try to dress like the millionaires' wives."

"My dear Ned, control yourself. I am only trying to appear as well dressed as the shopgirls."

"IN THE HOUR OF DEATH."

A Note on the Authorship of a Well Known Poem.

The question is often asked in newspapers and magazines, "Who wrote the poem beginning 'In the hour of death, after this life's whim?'"

The answer is given that nothing is known of the author. It is true this poem was published with only the initials of the writer in the University Magazine in 1879. But I hold the manuscript of the poem, and I have also Blackmore's letter that accompanied it. Blackmore has been so long dead I do not feel that there can be any harm in giving his letter to the public. I subjoin an exact copy of it; also of his poem.

AGNES E. COOK.

"Teddn., Jan. 5, 1879.

"My Dear Sir—Having lately been at the funeral of a most dear relation, I was there again (in a dream) last night and heard mourners sing the lines inclosed, which impressed me so that I was able to write them without change of a word this morning. I never heard or read them before to my knowledge. They do not look so well on paper as they sounded. But if you like to print them here they are, only please do not print my name beyond initials or send me money for them. With all good wishes to Mrs. Cook and yourself, very truly yours,

"R. D. BLACKMORE.

Dominus illuminatio mea.

I.

In the hour of death, after this life's whim,
When the heart beats low, and the eyes grow dim,
And pain has exhausted every limb,
The lover of the Lord shall trust in him.

II.

When the will has forgotten the lifelong aim,
And the mind can only disgrace its fame,
And a man is uncertain of his own name,
The power of the Lord shall fill this frame.

III.

When the last sigh is heaved and the last tear shed,
And the coffin is waiting beside the bed,
And the widow and child forsake the dead,
The angel of the Lord shall lift this head.

IV.

For even the purest delight may pall;
The power must fail, and the pride must fall,
And the love of the dearest friends grow small,
But the glory of the Lord is all in all.

DISCIPLINE.

The Way Binks Tried It on His Six-months-old Baby.

Binks had sent Mrs. Binks on a visit to her mother, and he was on the job with the six-months-old baby.

In the night the baby woke and cried. Binks looked at his watch—three-quarters of an hour till bottle time. He said to himself:

"Let him yell. He's a healthy little Indian, and he must be disciplined."

Then Binks tried to sleep.

But Binks couldn't sleep. Every cry grew more pathetic and abused and heartsick and discouraged. Each cry said more and more plainly: "I have no friends or relatives. I'm unhappy and uncomfortable and want some one to be good to me."

But Binks, the stubborn and stiff necked, stuck it out, though each cry stabbed him clear through.

Finally (maybe he set it forward a bit—who knows?) Binks' watch announced the arrival of bottle time. He went to the icebox for the food, heated it and took it to his now faintly sobbing infant son.

But the infant son could not take the bottle. He choked on the first swallow, then put up his hands and renewed his wordless plea to the big man he could see dimly through his tears.

Then that father said, "Discipline be hanged!" Maybe, though, it wasn't "hanged" he said, but the vowel sound is right, anyway. He took up that baby, and the baby stuck to his daddy like fly paper. Further attempts to lay him down were futile. He wanted no food but heart food, no milk but that of human kindness. So the big man laid that baby beside him on the pillow; the baby put one rose petal hand to his father's stubby cheek, gave a long, quivering, satisfied sigh and slept for six unbroken hours.

As Binks lay there, afraid to stir lest he disturb the little one and feeling like a horse thief because he had let the love hungry infant cry his heart out, he repeated frequently:

"Discipline be hanged!"

She Was Willing.

He—Do you know that as long as I have known you I have never seen you dressed in white? She—Indeed! Are you, then, so partial to the color? He—Not exactly that, but whenever I see a girl dressed in white I am always tempted to kiss her. She—Will you excuse me for a quarter of an hour?

Didn't Believe in It.

The Squire—That's a splendid horse, Giles. I suppose you feed it daily with punctuality.

Giles—Naw, zur. None o' yer newfangled foods fur me. Just 'ay and oats—oats and 'ay.—London Telegraph.

Business.

Miss Coy (at the garden party)—Let you kiss me? Certainly not. I've only known you an hour. Mr. Hustler (looking at his watch)—Well, then, suppose I come around in an hour and a quarter?

He that is ill to himself will be good to nobody.—Scotch Proverb.

Italian Citizens Residing on Donegal St. Disagreed on Thursday Night

Something went wrong to disturb the peace in a house at 544 Donegal street on Thursday night. Joe Rongo and Nicholi Grivone were the principals and according to Grivone's story, Rongo threatened to do him bodily harm by the use of a big knife which he displayed. He also threatened to break his head with a chair. The parties were summoned to appear at the Police Court this morning, but the case was not heard. The Magistrate consented to the charge being dropped on the defendant paying the costs.

LAID AT REST

The funeral of the late Mrs. Frank Young, of Ennismore, took place yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, and was largely attended. Over two hundred vehicles followed the remains to St. Martin's church, where an impressive service, at which Rev. St. Luke's Church

His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto, visited St. Luke's church yesterday afternoon, when a children's service was held. A large number of the little ones were present and His Lordship gave them a very interesting and impressive talk.

Rev. Canon Greene, of Orillia, preached at both services in St. Luke's yesterday owing to the rector being indisposed with a severe cold.

This being All Saints' Day there was a memorial service with holy communion at ten o'clock this morning in commemoration of the departed.

Lighting Pipe Causes Death.

Kingston, Nov. 1.—In a runaway accident on King street Saturday night, John McCall, coal driver, lost his life. He went to light his pipe and dropped his lines. The horse bolted and he was thrown off his cart and one wheel passed over his body, and he met almost instant death. McCall was an Englishman, 24 years of age, and served three years here in the artillery. He was unmarried.

Suffocated by Gas Fumes.

Olean, N.Y., Nov. 1.—Yesterday morning the police broke open the door of George Russell's home and found him, his son William, and two dogs dead on the floor. Big fires were burning in the stoves. Death was due to gas fumes.

Teamster Killed.

Guelph, Nov. 1.—William Ferguson, a teamster, 65 years of age, who lived with his wife at 80 Water street, was run over by his own wagon while it was filled with a heavy load of sand, and instantly killed.

Old Time Reporting.

"No," said the old tramp printer, "reportin' hain't what it used to be. The rugged strength, the grandeur and ginger is all gone."

He took out his worn wallet.

"Listen," he said, "to this here description of T. DeWitt Talmage what Comp Stick of the Tin Can Scimitar writ in '73."

In a voice vibrant with admiration the veteran read:

"Sweat trickled from the back jungle of his disordered hair along the ravines and furrows of his haggard face. He advanced and retreated, rising upon his toes and coming down on his heels with a dislocating jerk that made the windows rattle, pausing occasionally to inhale through his dilating nostrils tempestuously and then emitting a shrieking epigram or apostrophe that thrilled the blood like a wild cry at midnight in a solitary place."

A vein of almost pure quicksilver is said to have been discovered on the North Saskatchewan.

Probably the oldest woman in the Co. Wicklow died in Rathney recently in the person of Mrs. Murray, whose age was 101.

The Merry Widow and the Devil

One of the principal events of the amusement season in Peterborough will be the appearance here on Friday evening, Nov. 5th, of the Joe Weber Travesty Company, direct from Joe Weber's theatre on Broadway, New York City, which was formerly Weber & Field's, with the original cast and a company of sixty, including the celebrated beauty chorus.

This year the Weber offering is "The Merry Widow and the Devil," a double travesty on two of the greatest successes of recent years in New York, "The Merry Widow," by Franz Lehar and "The Devil," by Ferenz Molnar. Both were produced by Henry W. Savage and the Joe Weber Travest Company is the only theatrical organization which has the authority from Mr. Savage to use the titles. All the beautiful music of the world-famed Viennese operetta is preserved in the travesty and a deal of humor is supplied by George V. Hobart, the popular humorist who wrote the book.

Mr. Weber's dual presentation was produced under the direction of Julian Mitchell, the foremost man in his line on this side of the Atlantic. Sam Collins, the well-known comedian, who plays the droll part of Heinrich Fisch, valet to Prince Danilo, and Nina Collins as Fonia, "who wants to be a merry widow." Oscar Ragland is the unfortunate husband of the lady, the Baron Kaufman, and Charles Stine is "The Devil," who calls himself De Jollidog, a wine agent. This part was created by the late Peter F. Dailey. The scenic equipment is magnificent and the costumes are from the latest Parisian modes.

CONFIRMATION AT ALL SAINTS'

Important Step in Lives of a Number of Young People--His Lordship's Address to Candidates

The apostolic rite of confirmation was administered to a number of young men and women at All Saints' church yesterday morning by the Lord Bishop of Toronto, Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeny, M.A., D.D., The edifice was filled with a large congregation and the service was a bright and inspiring one. His Lordship in addressing the candidates impressed upon them the important step in their religious lives that they were taking. They were ratifying and dedicating themselves to God and he urged them to stand steadfast in the Lord, in loyal and loving obedience to Him.

The candidates occupied the front pews. The rector, Rev. H. R. Trumpour said morning prayer and read the preface to the confirmation service, after which the Bishop addressed those to be confirmed.

ADDRESS TO CANDIDATES.

His Lordship based his remarks on part of the epistle for the day, found in the sixth chapter of Ephesians, "Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day." In his introductory remarks he pointed out that many of Christ's parables were from things he observed while here on earth. He had, from His surroundings, left the world many beautiful parables. St. Paul, too, was a keen and close observer and when a prisoner at Rome as he looked upon the Roman soldier, his guard, he thought of what a fine simile it was for what the Christian soldier ought to be. St. Paul divided the Christian soldier's armour into two classes, the defensive and the offensive. There was only one piece of it for the offensive, all the rest being for the defensive, namely, the girdle of truth, the breastplate of righteousness, the feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of Peace, and above all the shield of faith.

There would be times in young people's lives, His Lordship continued, when the shafts and assaults of the devil would assail them, but in the strength of Jesus Christ they could win. In their confirmation they were giving themselves anew to Christ, to be His own, to fight for Him to stand immovable. Their attitude, he said, must be both mental and spiritual. By mental he meant they must be alert and watchful. Their life must be one of prayer. When in doubt and despair, supplication to God and faith in Him would bring them joy and peace. Another mark of the true Christian soldier was his loyalty and loving obedience to Christ. He urged them to wear the Christian armour, in business, in society and all walks of life. After their confirmation they would receive the highest privilege of the Christian church, the mysteries of Christ's death and passion. He most earnestly wanted them to come to the Holy Communion and hoped that they would finally receive the crown of life.

Then followed the ceremony of confirmation, the Bishop laying his hands on the heads of the candidates and repeating a prayer as they knelt before him. After the service they took their first communion.

During the offertory Mr. Arnold Lee sang a solo in excellent voice.

HALLOWE'EN QUIETLY OBSERVED

The Pea Shooter and False Face Much in Evidence But Boys Were Very Orderly

The small boy with his pea-shooter and false face, celebrated Hallowe'en on Saturday night, and, according to reports from the Chief of Police, behaved himself very creditably. So far as can be ascertained no great damage to property was done, but it is reported that several horses changed color owing to the artistic work of a gang who have been waiting patiently for the time for the premeditated ceremony to arrive. One citizen was somewhat taken back by the demands of some young callers, who asked that they be taken in and treated to candy and cake, the said sweets being the cost of protection for the night. The only complaint made to the police was by a south end resident, whose language towards the young rascals, who tied the two cats over his wife's clothes line, was anything but complimentary.

OBITUARY

MRS. WM. A. FIFE.

The death occurred last evening of Elizabeth Mary Fife, wife of Mr. Wm. A. Fife, 578 Division street. The late Mrs. Fife had only been ailing for a short time, and her sudden demise was not expected, as her condition had for the past few days shown improvement. Yesterday morning, however, she took a turn for the worse, and passed away about six o'clock. Deceased was 32 years of age, and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fife, of Smith township. To mourn her death she leaves a husband and three young children, and to these will be extended sincere sympathy. Her sisters are Mrs. P. Nicholas, of Bridgenorth; Mrs. J. G. Hamilton, of Douro, and Misses Myrtle and Isabella, at home. One brother, Victor A. Fife, resides in Pasqua, Sask.

The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon from the late residence at two o'clock to Little Lake cemetery.

SAVING SOULS IS THE SECRET JOY

Gives the Church the Real Vitality --Rev. J. D. Morrow at Knox Church

If any one of the large congregation that was present at Knox church last night had not previously realized what was the secret joy of the church, who did not comprehend what gives the church a real vitality, they were brought to a keen appreciation of it after Rev. J. D. Morrow had finished his sermon. It is not the attired choir, he said, nor the eloquence of the minister in his sermons, not the beautiful edifice not the social standing of the members of the congregation, nor the church's wealth. It was none of these. They are for the most part material. The secret of a congregation's happiness is the saving of souls, the bringing in of the sinner, the man or woman who had erred. "I don't want a grand church," he said, "nor a salary of $50,000, but give me a congregation that is living for the souls of men, and I will be as happy as a king."

Rev. J. D. Morrow, of Dale Presbyterian church, instituted the Evangelistic campaign at Knox church, which is to continue during the next two weeks, and it is safe to say that a more stirring appeal has not been made since Knox church was opened. His words were straight from the shoulder, and it was to the individual member he spoke. "Are there not too many unsaved men and women in Peterborough for the number of churches it boasts!" Somebody has passed by the drunkard, the gambler, the young woman who is not living a proper life. Men are shirking their duty. We sing and pray, we worship regularly, but we have not come to the vital point. We are not holding out the helpful hand."

The main point of Rev. Mr. Morrow's sermon was emphasizing the duty of the individual Christian. He asked for consistency. It was the sinner the churches wanted. Win them over for God. "Give them a helping hand, remain with them; strive to bring them back for Christ's sake, not for some particular church. He told the story of an old man who had been picked up and brought back to the church. He recalled the look on his face as he sat at the communion table. And beside him sat a man of wealth who turned and looked at him and then got up and left the church. But he will not sit at the communion table up there," said the speaker, impressively remarked, as he raised his hand, pointing to the above. "No wonder God cannot work in some churches." "The best friend to the man that is down in the world is the truly sincere Christian," was one of the points which the speaker emphasized and dwelt upon. Jesus can save any man from the worst crimes. Mr. Morrow said that he related a story of how a doctor who had become adicted to morphine and cocaine, thereby wrecking his body, had been saved after a hard struggle and had become an earnest Christian. It is not enough to sit in the churches, he said. Get into the heart of the work. Don't play with religion.

Mr. Morrow's words were pointed to the laymen. The success of the church depended upon them. The earnest Christian strives to help his fellow man, to cheer him if he is down, and to help him back to God and happiness. In strong words he spoke against the inconsistency of some people; people who make the way of the repentant sinner hard to bear by going to him and taunting him when the struggle is almost won. Rev. Mr. Morrow had no sympathy for those who would on account of this past, blackmail a man that had been down and was trying to regain what he had lost without themselves having endeavored to bring out of the man the best that was in him.

STEAD GETS OPINION FROM GLADSTONE ON PRESENT SITUATION IN ENGLAND

Psychic Research Man Operating Through a Medium and the Mysterious Julia Secures an Alleged Interview With the Dead Statesmen.

London, Eng., Nov. 2.—A stenographic report of the amazing interview with the spirit of the late William E. Gladstone, which was gained at a seance arraigned by William T. Stead is printed in full in yesterday's Telegraph.

According to this stenographic report, the test was most successful, and a definite statement from the "Grand Old Man of England" was secured. The seance occurred Saturday at Mowbray House, with a medium, a stenographer and Mr. Stead among the mortals present, while the disincarnate personalities taking part included Julia, Cardinal Manning, W. Stead, jr., and W. E. Gladstone.

The seance opened with prayer and a hymn, and then the clairvoyant reported that on the previous evening she had received a message from Gladstone — long, involved and with even more than the usual Gladstonian peri-phrases, wherein Gladstone expressed a considerable disinclination to return "to the limited and melancholy arena of party politics," as "from my present outlook, where a country counts little more than a moment, a paragraph on the printed page of time, the ebb and flow of mundane events from day to day matters little."

After discussing how the mind is occupied in the manifestations of the Divine omnipresence, Gladstone confessed:

"An immense current of reiterated and ever reiterated vibration is drawing me toward another centre of energy. I seem for a moment to hear the roar of distant thunder and feel a consciousness of suspense, anticipation, turmoil and strife and of ignoble party warfare."

Finally Gladstone agreed to speak, but before he had the opportunity Cardinal Manning intervened with a blessing, saying:

"I am pleased to be with you for a few moments. You have got here an atmosphere of the religious world. I am delighted to feel the vibrations of praise and thankfulness ascending from your circle. I understand Gladstone is about to come into contact with you. I hope the church atmosphere will be of service in linking him with you."

Then spoke Gladstone:

"A spirit named Julia has told me that some one desires to come in touch with me concerning the present position of my old party, and also the state of English politics generally. The arena of the political world is distasteful to me; nay, it was always distasteful to me."

Gladstone was induced to express his views on the budget, and said:

"In my opinion, the Upper Chamber will act most unadvisedly if they reject this financial measure. I can well understand there will be much in its provisions to which the Lords will distinctly object. Nevertheless, it would be wise policy for them to pass this measure. In agreement with the principles embodied in the bill the land proposals obtain my support, but with the licensing clauses I am only partly in sympathy. This section of the bill should not be too rigidly insisted upon, as some of the clauses are too crudely constructed and will tend to produce much friction and confusion in their application."

Gladstone, when pressed, gave this battle cry:

"Away with that inert mass of unrepresentative opinion. The time is now pressing for a distinct and clear issue on which to fight. Let my people, let my old warriors appeal to the country on this definite issue. This is a war cry which will rally them to many of the forces, many of the units which at the present moment are in the balance. Let the cry be definite, clear, precise. It would not be advisable for a dissolution of Parliament to occur immediately. A compromise by the Government is advisable, but when the issue has been narrowed, when the die is cast and the step taken—then definite, clear, united action must be taken quickly and at once."

"That means 'Down with the House of Lords altogether!'" said one of those present.

"No," retorted Gladstone, "only with the Lords as at present constituted. I am distinctly in favor of a second chamber."

"Do you keep in touch with the people at Westminster."

Gladstone answered: "I occasionally come in contact with them. The energies liberated through this bureau have more strongly linked me with the political sphere, and I shall endeavor as far as possible to throw myself into the conflict, inspiring and encouraging those whom I can affect to carry onward and forward the grand old banner of Liberalism. Yes, I will do this. We are going on to victory. Notwithstanding the forces of self-interest and obscuration, we shall win. The struggle will be severe, as many subtle as well as open foes have to be overcome. This is one of the most critical periods in the history of the British race, and upon the result will depend the advancement or retardation of the nation. Let the nation not be narcotized by the nostrums of tariff reform. Purging itself of selfish heresies; let it turn its attention not only to the understanding of its real prosperity, but to the comprehension of the vital factors in the health of its national life."

Shot at Train.

Ottawa, Nov. 2.—G.T.R. Brakeman John McLaren narrowly escaped being shot through the chest as the Parry Sound train approached Ottawa. A man fired a 22-calibre rifle shot through the rear car, grazing McLaren's chest and passing up the aisle to the wall of the smoker.

A SCANDALOUS APPEAL MADE

Washington, Nov. 2.—Chief Justice Fuller yesterday created a mild sensation in the Supreme Court of the United States by announcing that the papers in the case of the Yellow Poplar Lumber Co. v. S. F. Chapman would be stricken from the records of the court because of their scandalous nature.

The controversy involves a contract by Chapman to deliver to the company 50,000,000 feet of lumber in Virginia. The Court of Appeals decided in favor of Chapman, and in its position the company asks a review on various grounds, one stated as follows:

"The opinion of the Court of Appeals is so grotesque in its conclusions of law, and prepared with so little care and study as to be almost unintelligible, even gramatically, not to say legally."

The chief justice said the papers were "so unpertinent and improper that they would be stricken from the docket in order to protect the records of the court from scandal."

CARNEGIE IS NOT ALARMED

New York, Nov. 2.—Andrew Carnegie, multi-millionaire and peace advocate, arriving from a trip to Europe, said to an interviewer:

"What are the chances of war between England and Germany? England is in a state of frenzy wholly uncalled for. Germany has no idea of any contest except the competition of commerce."

"Doesn't that often lead to war?"

"It seldom does," declared Mr. Carnegie.

He was sure the budget which is agitating rich Britishers would pass.

CONSTABLE IS SENT FOR TRIAL

Brantford, Nov. 2.—Constable David Garlow, charged with shooting C. Martin, on the Indian Reserve, with intent to injure, is committed for trial under bail of $200. Two of the Indians Garlow had under arrest were convicted. Sam Turkey was fined $20 and H. Jamieson $16 for being drunk. Garlow's presence at the log-house meeting was to help stamp out the liquor traffic on the reserve.

PRISONER CONFESSES TO HOLD-UP

Truro, N.S., Nov. 2.—The mystery of the hold-up in the express office at Truro last spring is cleared up. The prisoner, Burgess, arrested in Vancouver, has made a full confession. Part of the funds have been recovered, and the superintendent of the Canadian Express Co., and a detective went west after $10,000 yesterday afternoon. Half a dozen persons, it is said, are implicated. A detective, in the guise of a friend, has been chumming with the prisoner for several months and secured the whole inside of the case.

Burgess was cross-eyed when he left Truro, but had them successfully operated on in the United States, and it was not till this was done that he ventured to cash any of the travelers' checks.

SOCIETY NEWS OF CHURCH SERVICES

New York, Nov. 2.—The [illegible] yesterday said editorially that it "proposes to give its readers every Monday something about the personal or society aspect of the Sunday services to the most fashionable or notable churches. These reports should prove at once entertaining and edifying and will show the unitiated that men and women whose names they constantly read in lists of those attending the opera or some fashionable function do not devote all their time to the frivolities or gaieties of life."

SIMCOE HAS A HOTEL FIRE

Simcoe, Nov. 2.—Fire yesterday morning about three o'clock gutted the large block containing the Norfolk House Hotel, the Opera House, Hurey's Theatorium and Gambe cigar store and pool-room. About thirty boarders and the hotel staff escaped safely, some by ladders.

The four-storey block was erected in 1865, and was owned by Mrs. Ben Cammell of Buffalo. It was valued at $35,000; insurance $10,000. Ira Whitehead, proprietor of the hotel, loses on furnishings.

CHURCH OF THE SACRE_COEUR, PARIS

PARIS POLICE DOGS

Paris, Nov. 1.—Six police dogs did more to save the Church of the Sacre Coeur, at Montmartre, from a mob of anarchists, revolutionists, socialists and Apaches—as a certain class of Paris ruffians are called—than the force of police stationed there to defend it.

Only a dozen or so policemen, with the police dogs, were on duty to protect the edifice, but the mob had got a start and swept along, thundering rhythmically ferocious anti-clerical slogans. In a few minutes it reached the vicinity of the church and tore along the Rue Muller, which ends in a steep flight of steps leading to the church door. Up the steps the crowd flung itself.

Then, just before the leaders reached the top, the little group of policemen, with discriminating judgment, slipped the unmuzzled dogs from the leash.

"Mord, Le Turc!" (Bite 'em, Turk!) "Mord, Diane!" (Bite 'em, Diane!) yelled the policemen.

The panting dogs needed no encouragement. They leaped into the heart of the oncoming mob, snarling, barking, biting right and left. Then rose a yell, a panic. The leaders tried to turn back, upsetting those crowding up the steps behind them, spreading terror and confusion in their frenzied rush to escape those terrible fangs snapping at their legs, arms and other succulent parts.

Thoroughly demoralized now the mob fled, chased by the dogs and police, only to run into the arms of reinforcements swarming from police stations to help their comrades. The battle was a fierce one, but victory finally was with the police.

BIG ELECTION FIGHT OVER IN NEW YORK

On Eve of Polling Tammany, Republican and Independent Candidates all Express Confidence of Victory—Bannard and Hearst Looking for Landslide.

New York, Nov. 2.—New York's triangular political campaign ended last night. William J. Gaynor, the Democratic candidate for the mayoralty, made his final speech in Harlem. Otto T. Bannard, the Republican-Fusion candidate, closed his campaign with a noonday address on the waterfront and a brief talk to negro voters at a downtown Baptist church in the evening. W. R. Hearst, the Independent candidate, had wound up his formal speech-making Sunday night at Madison Square Garden, but some of the lesser lights of the Independent campaign burned red fire and espoused his cause with a final burst of oratory at open-air meetings in the four corners of Manhattan last night, while many of the minor candidates on both the Democratic and Republican tickets had meetings of their own in the doubtful districts.

In each of the rival camps complete confidence in the result was expressed. Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader, said: "Gaynor will receive more votes than both of the others for mayor."

Herbert Parsons, the Republican leader, said: "Our fight against Tammany misrule has won. Reports from every Assembly district in the greater city show that Bannard will be elected by 50,000 plurality."

Charles G. Gehring, for the Hearst forces, said: "Hearst will get more than 300,000 plurality over the Tammany candidate. I look for a landslide."

About $125,000 was wagered on the result of the mayoralty contest in New York yesterday in the financial district, the prevailing odds favoring Gaynor by about 2 to 1. Bannard, in his closing appeal to the voters at his noon meeting yesterday, said: "I have fought this campaign against Tammany Hall, against corruption, waste, graft, and improper contracts. Public improvements must be solely for the public good and not for plunder. Petty graft must be stamped out. I have favored as liberal a personal liberty as is consistent with law and order. I believe that I can serve you well, and that to-morrow you will choose a business man, a man who will attend to the duties of the office to which he is elected."

WROTE LETTERS TO DEAD BROTHER

Kingston, Nov. 2.—For their brother to be dead four months while they thought him to be alive and well, was the experience of G. S. and F. W. Wakefield, formerly of Battersea, now of Hamilton. Early last summer they received a letter from their brother, W. H. Wakefield, aged 59, from Wilmington, Del., saying that he had been ill, but that he had practically recovered. A few days ago G. S. Wakefield addressed a letter to him at Wilmington and received a letter stating that his brother died July 7, and had been buried under Masonic rites. The remains will be re-interred here.

NEW YORK BUILDING IS CONDEMNED

New York, Nov. 2.—The Criminal Courts' building, which was erected eighteen years ago, at a cost of $2,000,000, was yesterday declared unsafe by the engineers of the bureau of buildings. The structure, which has been the scene of the Thaw, Molineaux and other noted criminal trials, will be officially condemned. Built on marshy ground, the big eight-storey brick structure is cracked from basement to dome.

INTEGRITY OF THE EMPIRE; CO-OPERATION THE KEYNOTE

R. L. Borden States Position of Party With Regard to Contributions to Defence of Britain—It Would be a Pity to Have Dissension in Commons.

Toronto, Nov. 2.—To the Centre and South Toronto Conservative Club, Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the Opposition in the Dominion Parliament, gave a lucid exposition of the attitude of the Conservative party towards the general question of Canada's co-operation in an imperial defence scheme from a naval standpoint.

Mr. Borden alluded to the situation in Canada as unique. Here was a self-governing colony with power to levy customs charges against the goods of the Mother Country, and foreign nations could not understand how the Empire could hold together under such conditions.

The Empire, declared Mr. Borden, was bound together by principles of self-government and liberty. The integrity of the Empire in the future must be maintained, and that was only possible by co-operation. When this co-operation was realized the greatest nation or the greatest co-operation of nations in the world would hesitate to attack.

In introducing Mr. Borden, the president of the club, Arthur Vankoughnet, referred to the loyalty of the leader of the Opposition, whom, he said, rose above party.

Mr. Borden, on rising, was greeted with cheers. He apologized for his visits to Toronto being scarce, but excused himself by saying that there were other parts of the Dominion which were more in need of missionary work than Toronto. During his term of leadership he had endeavored to uphold the best traditions of the party, and honor the great men who had gone before.

In speaking on the question of Canada's contribution for imperial naval defence, Mr. Borden referred to the various resolutions which had been discussed in the House of Commons last session. To Hon. Geo. E. Foster he gave the honor of introducing the matter, but Sir Wilfrid Laurier regarded Mr. Foster's resolution as being "so indefinite that he deemed it his duty to introduce a resolution" which was more specific. After several amendments the resolution passed unanimously, empowering the Government in times of peril or emergency, to make a grant to Great Britain for the purpose of Imperial Defence. It would have been unfortunate, thought Mr. Borden, when great national and imperial considerations were involved and the condition was portrayed by the statesmen of Great Britain in anxious terms, that the resolution which was moved by the Prime Minister of Canada should have been opposed by the Conservative party, and any amendment they suggested voted down by a solid phalanx of Government followers.

GIRL SIGNED THE PETITION FIVE TIMES

Port Hope, Nov. 2.—The local option promoters were given a set-back at the meeting of the Town Council last evening. A deputation asked that the bylaw be given its first and second readings, and Town Clerk Sanders reported that the petition contained a sufficient number of names. H. A. Ward claimed the petition had not the requisite number of names, and produced an affidavit from a 13-year-old girl who had signed five names to the petition without permission.

The council decided to defer the matter for one week, and in the meantime a committee of the council, with the solicitor for the local option promoters, and the anti-optionists, will go over the petition and report at next meeting.

DEATH CAUSED BY WHOOPING COUGH

He was a multi-millionaire.

THE YORK LOAN PAYS AT LAST

Dividend of Twenty-Five Per Cent. is Given Shareholders.

Toronto, Nov. 2.—Ninety-eight thousand citizens of Canada are rejoicing to-day over the receipt of checks from the liquidators of the defunct York Loan & Savings Co. The paper was sent out yesterday by A. E. Herington, who is attending to the financial end of the business for the National Trust Co., the assignees.

The checks sent out amount to over half a million, or approximately $650,000. The dividend declared is 25 per cent.

There are 114,000 shareholders, 10,000 of whom have not submitted their passbooks and certificates. The other 6,000 were either in arrears or had borrowed from the company. Their arrears and share loans exceed this dividend.

It is expected that the next dividend will amount to 25 per cent. It will be declared when the rest of the property of the company is disposed of. The company owned 58,000 feet of frontage of Toronto, half of which has been sold. If land values increase before the rest is sold the other dividend will be proportionately larger.

T. P. O'CONNOR CANNOT COME

Toronto, Nov. 2.—Rev. Dr. Burke, editor of The Catholic Register and Canadian Extension, has received a letter from T. P. O'Connor, the distinguished Irish Nationalist, to the effect that he will not be able to visit Canada on his present trip. He says: "I love Canada, its beautiful soil, its kindly people, and its atmosphere of comfort, liberty and order. The future belongs to it, as Laurier put it, 'The twentieth century is the century of Canada.' I may not be able to visit Canada this trip, but I shall visit it again whenever I get the opportunity. I send through you my greetings and handshake to the many good friends I have there; notably your great Prime Minister, who is in agreement with the views of my party; to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, who has added so much honor to his race; to D'Arcy Scott, my good friend and host; to M. J. Haney, also my friend and host; and above all the others Edward Blake, Canada's finest mind and one of the world's noblest characters."

CARIBOO STAGE WAS HELD UP

The Cariboo stage line from Ashcroft on the C.P.R. north to Barkerville is the longest in the world. The road was built in the time of the great rush to the Cariboo gold diggings.

MANY OLD SEWERS UNDERMINE PARIS

Paris, Nov. 2.—The sewers of Paris to-day threaten to destroy practically every house in the Montmartre quarter. The population is terrified by the decision of engineers that there are a number of underminings, similar to that which on Saturday formed a cave large enough to swallow a six-storey apartment house when it fell in. One woman is still in the ruins.

THE CANADIAN NAVY IDEA

The second session of the present Federal Parliament will open next month. Canada is in the throes of the debate of what is regarded as a question of the first importance. Are we to have a microscopic navy "all our own," like the little yellow dog, or are we to contribute a unit to the united navy of a united empire? Beneath the desire for "a wholly Canadian and Canadian-built navy" is the wish for an "independent" navy. If we are wrong in ascribing this idea to those in favour of a home-made navy, it is so much the better, but a careful perusal of some of our lower province journals leads to the idea that a united empire is not wanted. On the other hand, the expense of a Canadian navy is viewed with consternation. Are we to set up as a nation ready to enter the arena with the heavyweights? If so it will be a case of Tittlebat Titmouse against Jim Jeffries, a farce and an expensive one. A navy must be a good one or it will be merely an invitation to be destroyed. This is aside from the intolerable waste and expense of it, which is something that really cannot be borne. It is an easy thing for us to contribute a couple of Dreadnoughts, one-tenth of the effective fighting force of the line of battle of the Imperial fleet. We can stop when not able to pay. We can go on with it when we do feel able. The burden can be taken up or laid down at will. But think of a Canadian navy! Think of the cream of our energies and efforts as a struggling and debt-burdened people being sunk in a fleet that as a guardian-fleet of Canada would be worth about its weight in old iron after the enemy got through with it. Such a navy is of no earthly use. On the other hand, dreadnoughts are worth while. But the point that strikes the taxpayer in these parts most forcibly is that we will be swamped by the taking-out of the national treasury of a sum that, capitalized, will represent $150,000,000. One hundred and fifty millions of dollars will provide the expense of upkeep and repair at 5 per cent. That sum, therefore, must be set aside for the purpose. What do you think of it, dear reader? It is an amazing piece of improvidence and foolishness. It is not a question of politics. It is a question of economy and commonsense. Mr. Borden will have few followers in the Conservative party if he does not line up against, not with, Sir Wilfrid's new scheme for the benefit of contractors and purveyors.

Archbishop O'Connell says that anarchy is best cured by active communication and practical sympathy with the people.

Readers of history will remember the Salic law—an immutable ordinance of the French people, and also of the Germanic empire, requiring monarchs to trace their descent through the mother and not through the father. After lasting for centuries, it died with the idea of royalty and the divine right. The suffragettes should note this fact.

A prominent and well known citizen called at the Times office yesterday to lodge a complaint against our Public school system. He says that pupils from the Separate schools, as a rule, pass the entrance examinations a year in advance of those from the Public schools. He accounts for this by the system of promotion examinations conducted by the teachers in the various forms. These examinations, he believes, are not sufficiently frequent to enable bright pupils to forge ahead. In other words the progress of the bright and brainy pupil is to a large extent controlled by the poorer student. As a sample, our informant cited the case of his own son, who is unquestionably a bright lad and a neighbor boy. These lads are the same age exactly, and began school at the same time, one attending the Public and the other the Separate school. The Public school pupil passed almost at the top at each promotion examination, and has still another year to put in before he can try the entrance examination, while the other boy is now in the Institute.

The Times is of opinion that the statement above is of sufficient importance to warrant Inspector Mowat and the Board of Education looking into the matter.—The Times Peterborough.

This is an important and interesting statement, if correct. We are aware that the Separate schools here are now being well managed, but it is said by those who ought to know, that the above statement is not fair to the Public schools.

ZAM-BUK ENDS YEAR OF PAIN!

Powerful Proofs of Its Healing Value

As a household remedy, useful in emergencies such as are always arising in any home, and particularly where there are children, Zam-Buk is without equal. Here are some opinions of its merit;—

Mrs. Halliday, Wroxeter, Ont., says; "I have proved Zam-Buk unequalled for cuts, sores, and diseases of the skin. In every case to which I have applied it, it has brought about a cure, and I recommend it to all mothers."

Miss Cassie Petrie, Victoria Mines, Cape Breton Nova Scotia says;—"For a long time I suffered from pimples and unsightly spots on my face, and hearing so much about Zam-Buk, gave it a trial. It has now removed the eruption, and I would heartily recommend it for pimples and skin diseases."

Miss A. Bourgue, Notre Dame, Kent County, N.B., says;—"For months I suffered with a running sore on my leg, and although I tried several ointments and salves, none did me much good. The sore would just heal over, and then break out again. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and obtained a supply, together with some Zam-Buk Soap, and then applied the balm. A few weeks of this treatment completely healed the sore."

Mr. Joseph Kostyuk, of Woodridge, Man., says;—"I had eczema on my face neck and hand, so bad that I was unable to leave my room. Several doctors failed to do me any good, although I spent large sums of money. Zam-Buk has effected what they failed to do, and I am now cured."

Zam-Buk is the finest-known cure for skin diseases and injuries. It heals cuts, burns, bruises, abscesses, ulcers, eczema, scalp-sores, bad leg, inflamed patches, poisoned sores, insect stings, blisters, sore feet, etc. It also cures piles. All Druggists and Stores sell at 50c. a box, or post-free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

QUEER ANIMALS.

The Harpy Eagle, the Aye-aye and the Tasmania Devil.

The world has been so thoroughly explored that one might imagine it impossible that any noteworthy species of mammal or bird could still remain unknown. Yet every now and then something new turns up. For example, it was not so very long ago that a first acquaintance was made with the harpy eagle, a fowl native to the region of the Amazon, which feeds chiefly on monkeys. Another curiosity not long known is the aye-aye of Madagascar, a mammal which has one finger of each hand most curiously skeletonized and elongated for the purpose of dragging from their burrows the earthworms on which it feeds. As is well known, it is from Australia and New Zealand that come the flightless birds, some of which readily breed in captivity.

The fur seal rebels in captivity. The seals which one sees captive and which do such intelligent tricks are hair seals, belonging to quite a different species. So opposed is the fur seal to the very notion of deprivation of liberty that it will invariably starve itself to death rather than submit to such a condition. Likewise it is with the Tasmanian devil, a queer little marsupial about two feet long, somewhat resembling in appearance a baby bear, which is found only in Tasmania, a large island formerly known as Van Diemen's Land, to the south of Australia. It is almost incredibly ferocious, preying upon the sheep and poultry of the farmers, and never yet, though captured in earliest infancy, has it responded to kindness by manifesting an amiable disposition.

TALL AFRICAN GRASS.

Beautiful Scenes at Night on the Veldt When Fire Spreads.

Unlike a good deal of South Africa, Rhodesia is largely wooded. In some places the forests are of value, but a large proportion is not valued for its timber. The grass in this part of Africa grows to a phenomenal height in the valleys, and especially in the valleys of the Sabi and Zambesi rivers it reaches its greatest height. To say that the grass is often twelve feet high is no exaggeration. Naturally it is very easy to lose one's way in this grass if one is unfortunate enough to stray from the beaten track. It is the custom there to burn this grass off each year when it gets dry. This is usually in August and September or even in October. Fires burn for miles, and as the country is largely a wilderness little damage is done by this method of destroying the grass. It is a beautiful sight at night in the fire season to see the hills for miles around encircled with flames.

After the grass has been burned the rainy season usually begins, and it is then that the country is at its prettiest. The grass is then green, and the foliage on the trees is beautiful. The old leaves drop off gradually, and the new ones take their place before the trees are bare. The new leaves are of all shades of the rainbow, and it is much like the fall scenery in this country when the dead leaves are falling from the trees. Waterfalls are numerous in the mountains, and there are many of great height, although the rivers are usually small in volume.

The Winze.

The superintendent of a western mine in driving a tunnel struck a body of ore. The vein was vertical and had a sharp dip. To develop it and get ready to mine the ore it was necessary to put down a winze—that is to say, to sink a shaft, in this instance an incline.

Elated over the discovery, he telegraphed the board in the east that he had struck rich shipping ore and received the laconic reply to begin shipping at once.

He wired that he could not ship any ore until he had a winze on the vein.

"How much will a winze cost?" was the telegraphic query.

"One thousand dollars," he replied promptly.

The next query floored him. It read, "Can't you buy a secondhand winze cheaper?"

Immigrants to Canada in September totalled over 15,000.

SIMON BOLIVAR.

Stormy Career of the Man For Whom Bolivia Is Named.

Bolivia, the South American country, gets its name from Simon Bolivar. The land has had as stormy a history as did the liberator who assisted in making it a republic in 1825. Bolivar had been writing his name large in South American history for a long time before that date, however, earning for himself the title of the "Washington of South America." Simon Bolivar was born in Caracas, Venezuela, in 1783 of a noble and wealthy family. He studied law in Spain, traveled much in Europe, married and returned to his native country. In 1809 he visited the United States on his return from another journey to Europe. It was at this time that he became an enthusiastic admirer of republics and made up his mind to free Venezuela from Spanish despotism. From that time on war was his portion.

In 1813 he entered Caracas as conqueror, was hailed as the liberator of his country by the people and made absolute dictator in civil and military affairs. He met with reverses, however, at the hands of the Spaniards, and it was during a period of defeat on the continent that he convoked a congress in Haiti, instituted a government and abolished slavery there. That was in 1816. Thereafter he was successful against the Spaniards in South America, and in 1819 at Angostura, Venezuela, he was chosen president with the power of dictator. When New Granada united with Venezuela he was made the first President. By 1822 the new republic was completely cleared of royalist troops.

Bolivar was summoned the same year to help the Peruvians and in 1824 was named dictator of Peru. By 1825 the Spaniards were driven out of Peru also, and Bolivar, calling a congress at Lima, formally resigned the dictatorships. Soon after that the southern part of Peru was erected into a separate state and named Bolivia, and he could have been dictator for life. However, troubles in Colombia kept him busy. Venezuela broke away from the rest of Colombia in 1829. Bolivar was denounced for his ambition, and he was virtually forced to retire to Cartagena. He died in 1830.

The Gift of Prowling.

Prowling, according to a magazine writer, is not exactly strolling, for strolling practically assumes an absolute and utter lack of purpose. On the other hand, prowling differs from anything that implies sightseeing; for while it has a subconscious purpose, there is nothing brisk or businesslike or suggestive of duty about it.

To prowl, in fact, is to go forth into the highways and byways of any interesting place, either in the city or in the country, in a perfectly irresponsible fashion, with one's mind in a state of genial receptivity, but not of acute acquisitiveness; with a readiness to enjoy every possible impression of life in all its phases; not exactly an alertness, but with a bland and friendly openmindedness that never loses sight of anything.

The person who is capable of prowling, in this special and technical sense of the word, must have a touch of the Bohemian in him. He must be able to take things as they come, to extract the last drop of humor from every possible occurrence, to have no large ideas of his own importance, to be tolerant and wholly free from priggishness, and to see the amusing and interesting side of even the insignificant.

The gift of prowling is perhaps most truly valuable to the traveler in foreign lands. Any one can go about and see the ordinary sights. Any one can read his Baedeker and absorb from other sources the second-hand emotions of those who have gone before him. But it is only the exceptional person who can adequately and intelligently prowl.

A Necessary Precaution.

Those invited to a certain college function held the other day included a number of distinguished foreign professors. It was remarked that the invitations gave explicit directions as to the proper garments to be worn. Somebody inquired why it was considered necessary to give such directions.

"Because," answered one of those in charge of arranging the function, "the last time we gave a similar entertainment there was so much doubt among some of the foreigners invited as to what should be worn that one German savant actually appeared in a dress suit and carpet slippers."—New York Times.

WOMEN'S WOES

Peterboro Women are Finding Relief at Last

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. John Wallace, of 223 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., says:—"I had suffered with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble for over two years, and could find nothing that would benefit my condition. My back was weak and dull, heavy pain settled across the small of it extending into my sides and shoulders. I could not sleep at night as the kidney secretions were so frequent and irregular that I would have to leave my bed a number of times. I was dizzy and weak and would usually awake with a dull headache. Booth's Kidney Pills procured at McDermid & Jury's Drug Store cured me when all else failed. I am stronger and feel better generally. I can conscientiously recommend Booth's Kidney Pills, and would not be without a box in the house."

ENGLISH SCHOOLS.

Quaint Customs That Are Maintained With Religious Care.

The head master of Manchester Grammar school, in a speech at Rochdale, referred to a custom at Rugby school which forbids a boy of less than three years' standing to turn up his trousers and insists on his doing so after that period.

The custom is only a minor instance of the quaint practices that exist at all the great public schools in England and are maintained with religious care, though in many cases their origin is obscure or unknown. The Shrove Tuesday tossing of the pancake at Westminster school, with its ensuing scramble for the largest fragment, which gains for its possessor a guinea from the dean, is perhaps the best known among them. A curious custom at Marlborough requires every boy to bring to school with him a cushion, technically termed a "kish"—with the "i" long. This article is his inseparable companion in school time and, in addition to the ordinary functions of a cushion, is employed to carry books from one form room to another.

At Shrewsbury school, at the beginning of each term, "hall elections" are held for the posts of hall crier, hall constable, hall postman and hall scavengers. The genial brutality of youth often selects for the position of hall crier either the most nervous boy in the school or one who is afflicted with a stammer.

The new boy in the schoolhouse at Rugby is early called upon to take his part in "house singing." At this function, which is held in one of the dormitories, he has to render a song to the satisfaction of his audience, the penalty being the swallowing of a mouthful of soapy water.

Another ancient school custom is the parade of the Christ's hospital bluecoat boys before the lord mayor at the Mansion House on St. Matthew's day, when the "Grecians," who correspond to "sixth formers" elsewhere, receive a guinea each and the rank and file of the school are presented with new shillings.—London Mail.

BURGLARS' TOOLS.

Most of Them Made by Supposedly Respectable Mechanics.

Every little while, said a detective recently, the police arrest a man with a set of burglar's tools in his possession, and one naturally wonders where they all come from.

It is easy to buy a gun of any description, and the most reputable person would not be ashamed to be seen purchasing the most wicked looking knife ever made. But who would know where to get a "jimmy" or a device for drilling into a safe or any of the many tools used by the professional burglar in the pursuit of his calling?

There are places in the large cities where these things are made and sold to the users, but such places are exceedingly scarce. It may seem a little strange to learn that most of the tools used in burglaries are made by mechanics who are looked upon as respectable men in the community.

When a burglar wants any particular tool made he goes to a mechanic who can do the job and pays him perhaps five times what it is actually worth for making the tool and keeping quiet about it. Many detectives can recall cases of this kind that have come to light.

One in particular occurred some years ago when an escaped convict named Williams went to a blacksmith and got him to make a lot of drills to be used in safe cracking. He personally superintended the tempering of the steel, but when the job was nearly completed it leaked out, and Williams was arrested. In this instance the blacksmith knew nothing of the use to which the tools were to be put. Most of the tools used by burglars are secured in the same way.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Shoemaker's Candles.

I well remember some seventy years ago seeing flat candles in use. To produce what was known as the flat candle, which was also sometimes called "shoemaker's candle," two newly made "dips" were pressed close to each other while soft and then again lowered into the hot fat, thus holding them together as one candle with two wicks. The size could then be increased if desired. This flat candle was most generally used by shoemakers and tailors, but was made use of in some households whenever an extra bright light for working or reading was required.—Cor. Dickensian.

Too Much Like Work.

"Haven't you a home?" asked the sympathetic citizen.

"Yep," answered Plodding Pete. "I had a nice home, but de first t'ing I knew it had a wood pile and a garden and a pump, and den it got so much like a steady job dat I resigned."—Washington Star.

Impossible.

"How do you overcome insomnia?"

"Say the multiplication table up to twelve times twelve."

"But I can't get the baby to learn it."—Cleveland Leader.

"Porter, this berth has been slept in!"

"No, sah! I assure you, sah! Merely occupied. It's the one over the wheels, sah."—Puck.

A Joke of Mark Twain's.

Probably few people are aware that the theatrical godfather of that famous actor Mr. William Gillette was Mark Twain, who was a fellow townsman and a friend of his father. Mark Twain in referring to the matter said that when he used his influence to get young Gillette on the stage he thought he was playing a great joke on the management, for he did not think Gillette had the slightest aptitude for acting. But it turned out to be no joke after all. "I don't know," said Mark Twain, "which I like better—having Gillette make a tremendous success or seeing one of my jokes go wrong."

LOUD AND INCESSANT TRAIN WHISTLING COMPLAINED OF

Before the council meeting last night the committee of the whole council held a short session.

Messrs. T. N. LaPlante and T. McGrath spoke with reference to the health by-law in a matter that affected them. The mayor said the matter would be attended to.

Mr. LaPlante complained against the persistent whistling of the trains at the semaphore, and said it was a nuisance.

Mayor Rush wanted to know if the prohibiting of the whistling was enforced would the town be liable.

City Solicitor Hall explained it wouldn't, and the trains would have to ring their bells.

Ald. Duncan thought the by-law should be passed.

Aldermen Butler and Duncan thought Superintendent Tiffin should be communicated with on the subject.

Ald. McNeal said there was unnecessary whistling given as signals to accommodate the train employees.

The mayor, after some discussion, said he would write to Mr. Tiffin himself at once.

"BREAK UP YOUR FALLOW GROUND" WAS SUBJECT AT ST. PAUL'S LAST NIGHT

The text taken in St. Paul's last night by Rev. Mr. MacBeth was Hosea 10, 12: "Break up your fallow ground, and the Lord will rain righteousness upon you."

Mr. MacBeth said that he did not know any community anywhere which would not be the better of a genuine revival of religious zeal and enthusiasm for the cause of Christ. A revival was primarily a reawakening and a quickening of the Christian people. From them thus rekindled, the sacred fire would spread till people without would be affected and sin hide its face in the presence of the flashing light of the new life. God is asking us if we would like to see a real revival, and if we are willing to help in bringing it about. It must begin with ourselves. Is each one of us willing to pray, "Lord send us a revival and begin with me?" God would ask us when we thus pray whether we are willing to put away everything that would hinder a revival—are we willing to get rid of prejudices and pride and our little misunderstandings with people and give ourselves to the great work that God calls us to do? No one would say "no" to God in answer to this questioning. It is an awful responsibility to block a revival when God is willing and ready to send it with its showers of blessings. If we ask as Christians, what shall we do? The answer comes from the Scriptures in the word, "Break up your fallow ground." Ground once cultivated and fruitful is allowed to become fallow and unproductive—so in the ground of our hearts when we are not enthusiastic about Christ's work. The causes of this fallowness of heart may be many, and amongst them Mr. MacBeth said might be such things as neglect of the House of God with its services and meetings for prayer. Here the speaker said that Christians should not speak lightly of the church or allow others to do so without protest. By the church he meant the organization of Christian people in the world. It was founded by Christ. He bought it with His own blood and called it to His work. Even people who are not Christians are forced to acknowledge the social and economical value of the church in a community and take good care to live with their families where the church exists. Town lands were not very high priced in Sodom and Gomorrah, where the storm was shattering them for their sins. Christians should take an interest in the extension of the Church of God in missionary zeal. This was the commission of Christ, and if we neglected it, our hearts and churches would be fallow ground. Mr. MacBeth in conclusion expressed himself as much pleased with the large congregation that had assembled for a Monday night, after the many services on Sunday and the busy work day. He felt that the people were in earnest and that God would do great things in these days.

The after meeting of personal workers was attended by double the number of the night before, and the missioner and the pastor, Rev. Mr. Pogue, thanked those present for their encouraging loyalty.

SUGGESTS CENSOR FOR THE MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

Correspondent Protests Against Pictures Depicting Scenes of Violence and Bloodshed—Worse Than Dime Novels.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I trust it is generally conceded by all thoughtful people that it is exceedingly harmful for young persons to read such literature as the ordinary "Dime Novel." Thousands of men and women to-day can look back perhaps twenty years or more and behold the mental scaring effect of even a short course in such reading. The word pictures of subtle crime and its detection were so vividly portrayed the young reader lived the scenes. They burned deep and the unreal life tainted the real for ever after.

Criminology shows that many of the greatest crimes of the century were indirectly caused by the dime novel. Many a convict has confessed his downfall due to such reading.

Then if this be so, what do you consider the probable outcome of the dime novel illustrated, enacted in moving pictures? During the past week in one of our local picture theatres I beheld crime and bloodshed in all its horrible phases, made ten times more real than words could possibly make it. The dime novel seems but a shadow in comparison.

I know not how often such scenes are enacted. But if they are common here in Peterborough surely the proper authorities will soon realize the necessity for action. We have stringent laws relative to the display of posters etc., in which scenes of weapons and firearms are prominent.

To youthful minds no greater educative power exists than the motion pictures. Yet the good and the evil therein have equal chances. Surely over such there should be some supervision. Or is the evil to be allowed to prey unmolested upon the innocent minds of the children?

We frequently hear expressions of regret that youthful offenders of the law are sentenced to association with hardened criminals. Their education is then soon completed. Yet here in our midst we have lessons in darkest crime given our children for a mere nickle. No details are omitted. In fifteen minutes the child's mind is burned deep with a never-to-be-erased picture process of murder, of brutal treatment of women and children and a general disregard for law and morality. Then what are we to expect as a result? Can a child look upon such and not in some measure, obeying the great human law, imitate in a measure at least? Undeniably.

What is the remedy for this?

HERBERT B. COLLIER.

VERNON MADE FINE IMPRESSION

A Pleasy Exhibition of Fancy and Trick Roller Skating at Brock Street Rink.

The management of the Brock street roller rink have secured a stellar attraction by engaging Mr. E. F. Vernon, who is easily the best trick skater seen in this city.

Mr. Vernon's act on skates comprises many new novelties, and the many almost impossible gyrations which he performs mark him at once as "the daddy of them all."

His act concludes with his famous "automobile" trick. The immature machines are covered with small incandescent lights, which show off the machines in sunlight with hardly an outline of the skater. Vernon performed many tricks on these machines which fairly made the large audience gasp.

The exhibition will be repeated this evening and to-morrow night.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

ST. JOHN'S CONGREGATION EXTENDED HEARTY WELCOME TO THE BISHOP OF TORONTO

St. John's congregation extended a hearty reception to His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto, at the new rectory, corner of Brock and Sheridan streets, last night. Advantage was taken of the presence of His Lordship to make the occasion a formal opening of the new rectory, the home of Canon and Mrs. Davidson.

The function proved a happy and enjoyable event in every way, and one and all expressed their appreciation of the rectory, which forms a valuable asset to St. John's property. The congregation was received by Canon Davidson, assisted by the Wardens' wives, Mrs. Mills and Mrs. Coulthard, and presented to His Lordship. Halpany's orchestra supplemented by Mr. Roy Gowie, furnished very acceptable music during the evening. Coleman Bros. catered to the guests, the refreshments being served by a number of young lady members of the congregation.

Expressions of regret were tendered on account of Mrs. J. C. Davidson's absence in Montreal, through ill-health, and post cards, signed by a large number of the congregation, were mailed her in evidence that she was not forgotten on the auspicious occasion.

The rector, Rev. Canon Davidson, welcomed his guests on behalf of Mrs. Davidson and himself, and graciously thanked the congregation for the splendid home they had provided for them.

THE ADDRESS.

The following address of welcome to Bishop Sweeney was read by Warden Mills;—

To the Right Rev. Dr. Sweeney, Lord Bishop of Toronto:

Right Reverend Sir,—As loyal churchmen and churchwomen, we desire to respectfully welcome you to this old parish of Peterborough, one of the few rectories originally set apart by the government to provide for the due observance of the Christian faith.

It is a pleasure to congratulate your Lordship upon your elevation to the high office to which you have been called, feeling that as you are now in the prime of life the Diocese may confidently look forward to many years of progress under the policy which you have already inaugurated.

Although late in the history of the parish, we have now provided for our rector a residence, which we trust is not only befitting the importance of his position, but also meets your approval; as this valuable property is vested in the same manner as the remainder of the church property it forms a substantial addition to the general assets of the Diocese.

At St. John's rectory, Peterborough, All Saints' Day, 1909.

J. C. DAVIDSON,
On behalf of the congregation.
A. E. COULTHARD,
Rector's Warden
JOS. MILLS,
People's Warden.

(Warden Coulthard here presented His Lordship with a handsomely framed photograph of St. John's as a memento of his visit to the parish.

His Lordship replied in gracious terms of acknowledgement, and expressed his high appreciation of the beautiful rectory which he characterised as a palace, in comparison with his (to use His Lordship's own words) shack in Toronto. In fact so comfortable had he been made in the handsome guest chamber that he felt a strong inclination to stay with St. John's as curate. His Lordship's remarks throughout were of a warm, happy, sympathetic nature, and indicated that he will be found to be the people's bishop in the truest sense of the word.

WARD SYSTEM TO BE VOTED ON AT MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

The by-law for the return of the ward system of voting will be put to the people. At the conclusion of the routine business at the council meeting last night it was introduced by Ald. Morgan, and will be submitted to the ratepayers at the next municipal elections in January.

Ald. Phelan did not think it was an opportune time to bring the by-law up for discussion, and moved that it be laid over for three months. There was no seconder to the amendment and it was lost. If the by-law is enforced it will mean the reduction of the Aldermanic Board from twelve to ten.

Ald. Duffus at length seconded the amendment, but when it was put to a vote only the mover and seconder supported it. The original motion carried.

A Million for a New Stomach

It is said that Mr. Rockefeller, one of the world's richest men, offered one million dollars to any physician who would make his stomach strong enough to digest an ordinary meal. With all his money, this multimillionaire is compelled to live on milk and crackers.

What a warning this is to men and women who are beginning to realize that "they have a stomach"!

Slight attacks of indigestion soon develop into acute attacks. The weakened stomach quickly becomes weaker under the continued strain of digesting unsuitable food. Chronic Dyspepsia makes a strict diet imperative, and life miserable.

Yet how unnecessary all this suffering is! "Fruit-a-tives" — that splendid stomach tonic — will give you what millionaires cannot buy, a clean, sweet, healthy stomach which will be capable of digesting any reasonable meal.

"Fruit-a-tives", made from concentrated and intensified fruit juice, acts directly on the stomach, increases the flow of the digestive juices and corrects the faults of digestion.

"Fruit-a-tives" or "Fruit Liver Tablets" is not only a positive and speedy cure for all these troubles. It also acts as a general tonic, building up and strengthening the entire system. Frequently those, who have been cured of Stomach and Bowel Troubles, write to the Company, stating that they are enjoying better health than ever before.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all druggists and dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c.—or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

MANY ATTENDED TEA AND CONCERT

Successful Function at Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church

A most successful tea and concert was held in Gilmour Memorial Baptist church, Chemong road, Smith, last evening, those present including about twenty-five from the city. It was a most enjoyable function, the attendance being exceedingly large. Supper was served in the basement from six to eight o'clock and it was no ordinary meal either. The ladies of the church had provided many good things and they were served in a manner that brought forth many complimentary remarks.

The main feature of the programme was an address by Rev. J. B. Kennedy, of Toronto. His subject was "A Man's a Man for a' That," and he dealt with it in a very interesting manner. His exposition of the famous poem of Burns was exceedingly clever and instructive.

The chair was occupied by Rev. J. R. Bonner, pastor of the church, and prayer was offered up by Rev. J. R. Webb, of Peterborough. A selection by the choir and two quartettes completed the programme.

The receipts were $107. A social will be held in the church to-morrow evening.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

Calendar compressed his lips nervously. It was plain that the man was quivering with impatience and half mad with excitement. He held quiet only long enough to regain his self control and take counsel with his prudence.

"It is impossible, Mr. Kirkwood. I must ask you to be generous and believe me."

"Very well. For the sake of the argument I do believe you, Mr. Calendar."

Swiftly, stammering in his haste: "I can't let Dorothy accompany me to the door," declared Calendar. "She—I—I throw myself upon your mercy!"

"What, again?"

"The truth—the truth is, if you will have it, that I am in danger of arrest the moment I leave here. If my daughter is with me she will have to endure the shame and humiliation"—

"Then why place her in such a position?" Kirkwood demanded sharply.

Calendar's eyes burned, incandescent with resentment. Offended, he offered to rise and go, but changed his mind and sat tight in hope.

"I beg of you, sir"—

"One moment, Mr. Calendar."

Abruptly Kirkwood's weathercock humor shifted, amusement yielding to intrigued interest. After all, why not oblige the fellow? What did anything matter now? What harm could visit him if he yielded to this corpulent adventurer's insistence? Besides, there was the girl to be considered.

Kirkwood considered her forthwith in the process thereof his eyes sought her, perturbed. Their glances clashed. She looked away hastily, crimson to her temples.

Instantly the conflict between curiosity and caution, inclination and distrust, was at an end. With sudden compliance the young man rose.

"I shall be most happy to be of service to your daughter, Mr. Calendar," he said, placing the emphasis with becoming gravity. And then, the fat adventurer leading the way, Kirkwood strode across the room, wondering somewhat at himself, if the whole truth is to be disclosed.

CHAPTER III.

ALL but purring with satisfaction and relief, Calendar halted.

"Dorothy, my dear, permit me to introduce an old friend, Mr. Kirkwood. Kirkwood, this is my daughter."

"Miss Calendar," acknowledged Kirkwood.

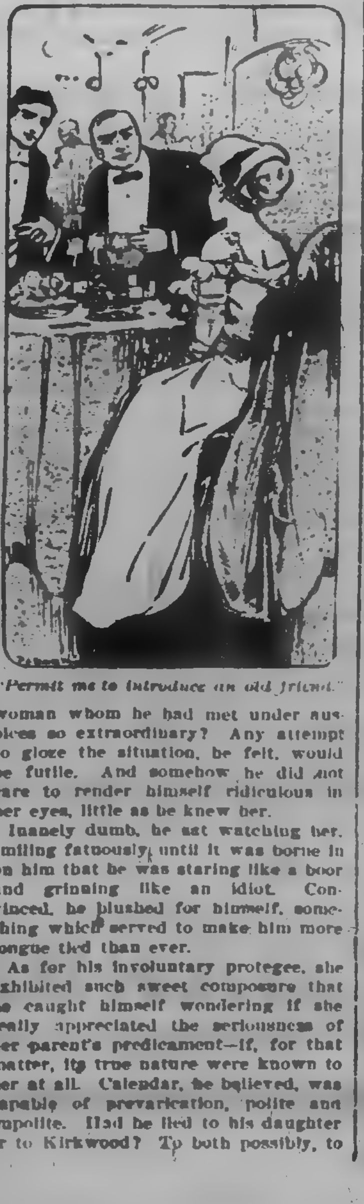
The girl bowed, her eyes steady upon his own. "Mr. Kirkwood is very kind," she said gravely.

"That's right!" Calendar exclaimed blandly. "He's promised to see you home. Now, both of you will pardon my running away, I know."

"Yes," assented Kirkwood agreeably.

The elder man turned and hurried toward the main entrance.

Kirkwood took the chair he had vacated. To his disgust, he found himself temporarily dumb. No flicker of thought illuminated the darkness of his confusion. How was he to open a diverting conversation with a young woman whom he had met under auspices so extraordinary? Any attempt to gloze the situation, he felt, would be futile. And somehow he did not care to render himself ridiculous in her eyes, little as he knew her.



"Permit me to introduce an old friend."

Inanely dumb, he sat watching her, smiling fatuously, until it was borne in on him that he was staring like a boor and grinning like an idiot. Convinced, he blushed for himself, something which served to make him more tongue tied than ever.

As for his involuntary protegee, she exhibited such sweet composure that he caught himself wondering if she really appreciated the seriousness of her parent's predicament—if, for that matter, its true nature were known to her at all. Calendar, he believed, was capable of prevarication, polite and impolite. Had he lied to his daughter or to Kirkwood? To both possibly, to the former alone not improbably. That the adventurer had told him the desperate truth Kirkwood was quite convinced, but he now began to believe that the girl had been put off with some fictitious explanation. Her tranquillity and self control were remarkable otherwise. She seemed very young to possess those qualities in such eminent degree.

She was looking wearily past him, her gaze probing some unguessed abyss of thought. Kirkwood felt himself privileged to stare in wonder. Her naive aloofness of poise gripped his imagination powerfully the more so perhaps since it seemed eloquent of her intention to remain enigmatic but by no means more powerfully than the unaided appeal of her loveliness.

Presently the girl herself relieved the tension of the situation, fairly startling the young man by going straight to the heart of things. Without preface or warning, lifting her gaze to his, "My name is really Dorothy Calendar," she observed. And then, noting his astonishment, "You would be privileged to doubt under the circumstances," she added. "Please let us be frank."

"Since it is to be confidences" (this she questioned with an all but imperceptible lifting of the eyebrows), "I don't mind telling you my own name is really Philip Kirkwood."

"And you are an old friend of my father's?"

He opened his lips, but only to close them without speaking. The girl moved her shoulders with a shiver of disdain.

"I knew it wasn't so."

"You know it would be hard for a young man like myself to be a very old friend," he countered lamely.

"How long, then, have you known each other?"

"Must I answer?"

"Please."

"Between three and four hours."

"I thought as much." She stared past him, troubled. Abruptly she said, "Please smoke."

"Shall I? If you wish it, of course"—

She repeated, "Please."

"We were to wait ten minutes or so," she continued.

He produced his cigarette case.

"If you care to smoke it will seem an excuse." He lighted his cigarette. "And then you may talk to me," she concluded calmly.

"I would gladly if I could guess what would interest you."

"Yourself. Tell me about yourself," she commanded.

"It would bore you," he responded tritely, confused.

"No. You interest me very much." She made the statement quietly, contemptuous of coquetry.

"Very well, then. I am Philip Kirkwood, an American."

"Nothing more?"

"Little worth retailing."

"I'm sorry."

"Why?" he demanded, piqued.

"Because you have merely indicated that you are a wealthy American."

"Why wealthy?"

"If not you would have some aim in life, a calling or profession."

"And you think I have none?"

"Unless you consider it your vocation to be a wealthy American."

"I don't. Besides, I'm not wealthy. In point of fact, I"— He pulled up short on the verge of declaring himself a pauper. "I am a painter."

Her eyes lightened with interest. "An artist?"

"I hope so. I don't paint signs—or houses," he remarked.

Amused, she laughed softly. "I suspected it," she declared.

"Not really?"

"It was your way of looking at—things that made me guess it—the painter's way. I have often noticed it."

"As if mentally blending colors all the time?"

"Yes; that and—seeing flaws."

"I have discovered none," he told her brazenly.

But again her secret cares were claiming her thoughts, and the gay, inconsequential banter died upon her scarlet lips as a second time her glance ranged away, sounding mysterious depths of anxiety.

Provoked, he would have continued the chatter. "I have confessed," he persisted. "You know everything of material interest about me. And yourself?"

"I am merely Dorothy Calendar," she answered.

"Nothing more?" He laughed.

"That is all, if you please, for the present."

"I am to content myself with the promise of the future?"

"The future," she told him seriously, "is tomorrow, and tomorrow"— She moved restlessly in her chair, eyes and lips pathetic in their distress. "Please, we will go now, if you are ready."

"I am quite ready, Miss Calendar."

He rose. A waiter brought the girl's cloak and put it in Kirkwood's hands. He held it until, smoothing the wrists of her long white gloves, she stood up, then placed the garment upon her white young shoulders, troubled by the indefinable sense of intimacy imparted by the privilege. She permitted him this personal service. He felt that she trusted him; that out of her gratitude had grown a simple and almost childish faith in his generosity and considerateness.

As she turned to go her eyes thanked him with an unfathomable glance. He was again conscious of that esoteric disturbance in his temples. Puzzled, hazily analyzing the sensation, he followed her to the lobby.

A page brought him his topcoat, hat and stick. Tipping the child from sheer force of habit, he desired a gigantic porter, impressively ornate in hotel livery, to call a hansom. Together they passed out into the night, he and the girl.

Beneath a permanent awning of steel and glass she waited patiently, slender, erect, heedless of the attention she attracted from wayfarers.

A cab drew in at the block. The porter clapped an arc of wickerwork over its wheel to protect the girl's skirts. She ascended to the seat.

Kirkwood, dropping sixpence in the porter's palm, prepared to follow. But a hand fell upon his arm, peremptory, inexorable. He faced about, frowning, to confront a slight, hatchet faced man, somewhat under medium height, dressed in a sack suit and wearing a derby well forward over his eyes, that were hard and bright.

"Mr. Calendar?" said the man tensely. "I presume I needn't name my business. I'm from the Yard"—

"My name is not Calendar."

The detective smiled wearily. "Don't be a fool, Calendar," he began. But the porter's hand fell upon his shoulder, and the giant bent low to bring his mouth close to the other's ear. Kirkwood heard indistinctly his own name, followed by Calendar's, and the words: "Never fear. I'll point him out."

"But the woman?" argued the detective, unconvinced, staring into the cab.

"Am I not at liberty to have a lady dine with me in a public restaurant?" interposed Kirkwood without raising his voice.

The hard eyes looked him up and down without favor. Then: "Beg pardon, sir. I see my mistake," said the detective brusquely.

"I am glad you do," returned Kirkwood grimly. "I fancy it will bear investigation."

He mounted the step. "Imperial theater," he told the driver, giving the first address that occurred to him. It could be changed. For the moment the main issue was to get the girl out of the range of the detective's interest.

He slipped into his place as the hansom wheeled into the turgid tide of westbound traffic.

So Calendar had escaped, after all! Moreover, he had told the truth to Kirkwood.

By his side the girl moved uneasily. "Who was that man?" she inquired.

Kirkwood sought her eyes and found them wholly ingenuous. It seemed that Calendar had not taken her into his confidence, after all. She was therefore in no way implicated in her father's affairs. Inexplicably the young man's heart felt lighter. "A mistake. The fellow took me for some one he knew," he told her carelessly.

The assurance satisfied her. She rested quietly, wrapped up in personal concerns. Suddenly Kirkwood was recalled to a sense of duty by a glimpse of Hyde Park Corner. He turned to the girl. "I didn't know where you wished to go."

She seemed to realize his meaning with surprise, as one whose thoughts have strayed afar recalled to an imperative world.

"Oh, did I forget? Tell him, please, to drive to No. 9 Frognall street, Bloomsbury."

Constraint hung like a curtain between the two, a silence which the young man forbore to moderate, finding more delight than he had cared (or dared) confess to in contemplation of the pure girlish profile so close to him.

She seemed quite unaware of him, lost in thought, large eyes sober, lips serious that were fashioned for laughter, round little chin firm with some occult resolution. It was not hard to fancy her nerves keyed to a high pitch of courage and determination nor easy to guess for what reason. Watching always, keenly sensitive to the beauty of each salient line betrayed by the flying lights, Kirkwood's own consciousness lost itself in a profitless, even a perilous, labyrinth of conjecture.

The cab stopped. Both occupants came to their senses with a little start. The girl leaned out over the apron, recognized the house she sought in one swift glance, testified to the recognition with a hushed exclamation and began to arrange her skirts. Kirkwood, unheeding her faint hearted protests, jumped out, interposing his cane between her skirts and the wheel. Simultaneously he received a vivid mental photograph of the locality.

Frognall street proved to be one of those byways a short block in length which, hemmed in on all sides by a meaner purlieu, have (even in Bloomsbury) escaped the sordid commercial eye of the keeper of furnished lodgings, retaining jealously something of the old time dignity and reserve that were their pride in the days before society swarmed upon Mayfair and Belgravia.

Its houses loomed tall, with many windows, mostly lightless, materially aggravating that air of isolate, cold dignity which distinguishes the Englishman's castle. Here and there stood one less bedraggled than its neighbors, though all, without exception, spoke assertively of respectability down at the heel, but fighting tenaciously for existence. Some, vanguards of that imminent day when the boarding house should reign supreme, wore with shamefaced air placards of estate agents advertising their susceptibility to sale or lease. In the company of the latter was No. 9.

The American noted the circumstance subconsciously at a moment when Miss Calendar's hand, small as a child's, warm and compact in its white glove, lay in his own. And then she was on the sidewalk, her face, upturned to his, vivacious with excitement.

"You have been so kind," she told him warmly, "that one hardly knows how to thank you, Mr. Kirkwood."

"I have done nothing—nothing at all," he mumbled, disturbed by a sudden unreasoning alarm for her.

She passed quickly to the shelter of the pillared portico. He followed clumsily. On the doorstep she turned, offering her hand. He took and retained it.

"Good night," she said.

"I'm to understand that I'm dismissed, then?" he stammered ruefully.

She evaded his eyes. "I—thank you. I have no further need"—

"You are quite sure? Won't you believe me at your service?"

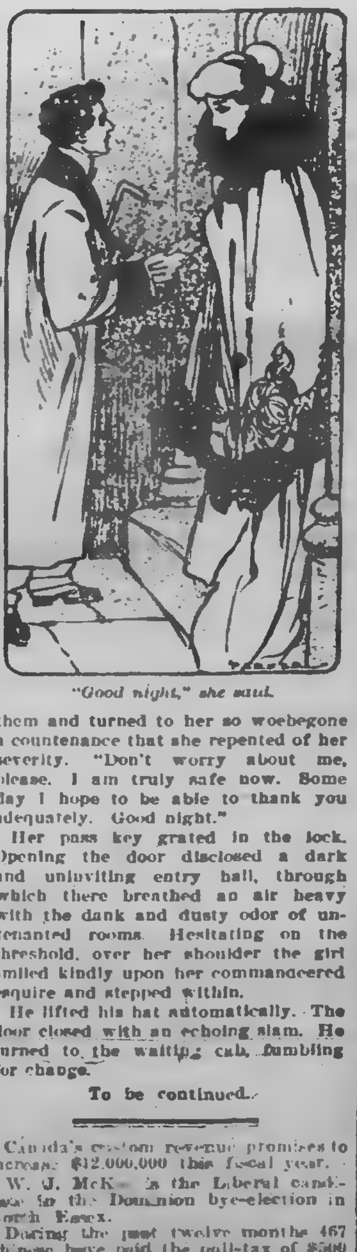
She laughed uneasily. "I'm all right now."

"I can do nothing more—sure?"

"Nothing. But you—you make me almost sorry I can't impose still further upon your good nature."

"Please don't hesitate."

"Aren't you very persistent, Mr. Kirkwood?" Her fingers moved in his. Burning with the reproof, he released them and turned to her so woebegone a countenance that she repented of her severity. "Don't worry about me, please. I am truly safe now. Some day I hope to be able to thank you adequately. Good night."



"Good night," she said.

Her pass key grated in the lock. Opening the door disclosed a dark and uninviting entry hall, through which there breathed an air heavy with the dank and dusty odor of untenanted rooms. Hesitating on the threshold, over her shoulder the girl smiled kindly upon her commandeered esquire and stepped within.

He lifted his hat automatically. The door closed with an echoing slam. He turned to the waiting cab, fumbling for change.

HARD TO GET FOOTBALL CHAMPIONSHIP SETTLED IN SATISFACTORY MANNER

Havelock Defeated Brussels, 1-0, and Tied up the Round Again—Championship Awarded to Havelock When Brussels Refused to Play as Ordered by Refeee.

Special to the Review.

Havelock Oct. 28—Havelock defeated Brussels here to-day by a score of 1—0 in the second game of the finals to decide the intermediate football championship of Ontario, thus making the score a tie 1—1 on the round. The referee ordered the teams to play on until either side scored again, according to the rules, covering such a circumstance, but the Brussels team refused to and the referee declared Havelock winners on the round, but Brussels think they will have another chance when the matter comes before the Provincial Executive.

The game was fast and exceedingly interesting throughout. With both teams in good condition after a long season, and both alive to the fact that this was their chance to make good, and both determined to win, it was a grand struggle.

There was a large and very enthusiastic bunch of yelling rooters on all sides of the field, giving voice to their fancies, and the citizens' band was out in full numbers when the ball was faced off at 2 o'clock.

The first half was very closely contested, both teams making desperate rushes, only to be beaten back by the other's defence. Time and time both teams made determined efforts, but were unable to place the ball between the stakes. At half-time the spectators were not so strenuous in their yells, when they found the prospects on the Havelock team were up against, and felt that they would not be able to even up the score on the round.

The rest at half-time seemed to have aroused the spirits of the local bunch, and in the second half they started out in good form, and continually kept pressing on the Brussels goal, but their sturdy defence each time cleared the deck, only to receive another rush, more desperate than before. About fifteen minutes before time was up, on a nice pass from right wing, Lancaster, of the Havelock left wing, succeeded in passing Brussels' back, and scoring the only goal of the game.

It was then that the rooters keyed up to the highest tension end, relieved of the thought of Havelock losing the championship, went wild with delight. They rushed onto the field and fairly hugged the players, and the wild shrieks of joy that rent the air were a slight repetition of the actions of the Pittsburg rooters when their baseball team won the world's series.

The Havelock team, or Brussels either, did not give up then, but went in worse than ever, and there were a few bad scrambles before time was up, but they did not result in any farther scoring.

The Brussels team left the field then, in order to catch the afternoon train, and when the referee sent word for them to come back and play off the tie they refused, so it stands until the executive have a look at the affair. Havelock, in the absence of Brussels, lined up, and the referee declared Havelock winners on the round, and they are, therefore, entitled to the championship.

Both teams are composed of fast men and hard workers. Brussels were quicker in their kicking but Havelock outclassed them in weight.

It would be impossible to specialize on the Havelock players. They are all good hard working players and play well together. They have only lost one game this year and that at Brussels three weeks ago.

SIDE KICKS

The same old reliables did the trick again.

Several players from both sides were on the fence for small offences.

The referee handled the game in good style.

Havelock rooters can make an awful noise when they feel like it.

Brussels' centre half was a puzzle to Havelock's men.

The Brussels players are a manly lot of young men.

Senior Rugby Team Expects to Down T.A.A.C. on Saturday —Probable Officials

The senior rugby team had a good practice at Riverside Park last evening and will work out again to-night in preparation for Saturday's big game with the T.A.A.C. at Riverside Park on Saturday. The locals will have the strongest line-up of the season and are hopeful of victory.

Dr. Wood, of the T.A.A.C. telephoned the local club last night in reference to officials for the game. It is likely that MacDonnell, the old Queen's player, and Jack MacDonald, of Toronto Varsity, will handle the match.

FOOLS MAKE A MOCK AT SIN

Rev. A. E. Mitchell at Knox Church—Degrading Influence of Sin.

There was a fair attendance at the evangelistic meeting in Knox church last night. The people entered into the singing heartily. A quartette acceptably sang "The King's Business" before the missioner took charge.

Mr. Mitchell is an easy, attractive speaker, and he soon made his hearers feel at home. He took up as an introductory talk "Some of the Characteristics of Sin," illustrated from the life of Samson. "Fools make a mock at sin."—Proverbs, 14:19.

Mr. Mitchell referred to experience, to history and literature as fields where sin was a recognized fact. He illustrated its deceitfulness, its blinding influence, its degrading power, and then pointed to the remedy the gospel offered. The congregation was marked by the attendance of a fair percentage of men. A large number of the congregation and friends is looked for this evening. Mr. Mitchel's subject is a most attractive one, "The Blood Wall and the Blood Bond."

The meetings are open to all.

BRIGHT COMEDY IN ABUNDANCE

In "Girls" at the Grand Opera House To-morrow Evening—Large Advance Sale

One of the most interesting and amusing comedies that has been in Peterborough this season will be "Girls" at the Grand Opera House to-morrow evening. This is one of Clyde Fitch's best efforts, and while there is no deep plot to follow, there is plenty to laugh at in the amusing incidents of the story. "The Bachelor" is now being produced in New York and also "The Debtors."

There was a large advance sale of tickets this morning, and it is likely there will be a crowded house to-morrow night. The management ask that ticket holders be in their seats early as the play will commence promptly at a quarter past eight.

A Beautiful Fountain in Full Action

"The Lily and The Prince," the companion play to "When Knighthood Was in Flower," comes to the Grand next Saturday, matinee and evening. It is just a pretty love story in dramatic form served for the delectation of the theatregoing public who delight in entertainment and amusement. That's just what this play is. It is a little different, certainly. Costumes are pretty. Its women are beautiful. Its men are men. The scenes are chosen with a view of delighting the eye; the story to please. The first act has a real novelty. A beautiful fountain in full action, is seen playing on flowers and fern, while the sun shines in full glory on a garden of happiness, and peace in the home of Angela. She is a slip of a girl, like our American daughters, sweet and loving, free from cares and admired by all. The second act is a beautiful tapestry room all hung in rich and harmonious tapestries, such as hang in the palaces of Russia, Italy, France, Germanny and England. The scenes depicted are interesting. The third act another novelty—hung in entire black velvet. Everything is different, the people, the scene, and surprises hold all spell-bound in intense interest, and its denouement pleases. The fourth act brings us back to the same scene as the second. Leave dull cares behind when you come to the theatre. Such as thoughts of business and household. The play's the thing, and after all, life is a stage and we all have our parts to play, see how the other fellow does it.

Joe Weber's Big Burlique "The Merry Widow and the Devil" Here Friday

Joe Weber and his company in travesties on "The Merry Widow and the Devil," direct from its year of phenomenal business at Weber's Theatre, New York, will be the attraction at the "Grand" next Friday evening, Nov. 5th. These travesties are decorated in all the old-time Weber glitter and flash. The original stories of "The Merry Widow" and "The Devil" have been closely folowed by George V. Hobart, who wrote the libretto and all of the charming music of the Lehar score has been retained.

It is doubtful whether funnier parts have ever been provided for the excellent company which Mr. Weber has gathered together which includes Sam Collins, Nina Collins, Charles Stine, Oscar Ragland, Marcia Harris, Marie Naughton, Hazel Tupper. And as usual there is life and movement galore in the smart animated nimble-toed, smiling and pretty Weber chorus, carefully trained by Julian Mitchell.

It is said there is more than a touch of cleverness in the burlesque of the now famous "Merry Widow Waltz."

The travesties are in three acts as are the originals and the scenic effects and costuming are the most elaborate which have ever been seen in this city.

Guelph Pockets $5,000.

Pat Was a Sideboard.

An Irishman went to a foundry in Lancashire after work. When he arrived he found another man there on the same errand. The foreman came, and Pat, being unaccustomed to asking for work, stood back, with the intention of hearing how the other fellow went about it.

After the man had asked the foreman said, "What trade are you?"

"I'm a dresser," replied the man.

"Come to-morrow," said the foreman. "I'll start you."

Turning to the Irishman, the foreman asked him what he was.

"Be jabers, sorr," replied Pat, "Oi'm a sideboard!"—London Standard.

A Rule of Thumb.

The thumb is a guide to a knowledge of the mental condition of the owner. He who is in full possession of all his faculties makes use of the thumb, but whenever there is a tendency to insanity this generally useful and active member falls out of work. A physician in charge of a lunatic asylum states positively that if you see a person whose thumb remains inactive—standing at right angles and taking no part in the act of writing, salutation or any other manual exercise—you may be sure that he has a diseased mind. He may talk intelligently and appear sane in every respect, but undoubtedly a tinge of madness is lurking within his brain.

Morgan's Expensive Paint.

Silas Morgan, a farmer living on Whidby Island, Wash., recently dug up over a score quart cans, each containing a red, sticky substance, possessing a sweet smell. Thinking the find was paint, the old man decorated his three-room cottage. That night a shower washed away every trace of the fresh paint and Morgan took what remained in one can to his druggist. The pharmacist discovered the substance to be pure opium worth close to $300 per can.

The old farmer nearly collapsed when he thought of the 29 cans of the opium he had daubed upon the rough boards of his shanty. Through his ignorance of the drug he had wasted nearly $9,000 worth.

The opium was probably cached in years gone by by smugglers operating between Puget Sound points and Victoria, B.C. The smugglers often packed opium in quart cans, and many a smuggler's lighter passed examination by officers on the ground that the cans contained fruit.

Rebels Fight With Dynamite.

Managua, Nicaragua, Nov. 2.—The Government has begun active operations against the rebels. The latter have abandoned one of their positions, leaving it mined with dynamite. The Government forces were forewarned, which probably warned the vanguard of the army from destruction.

Galt, Nov. 2.—A buck deer was seen in Beverly swamp on Sunday by Joseph Hughes.

Eaten by Cannibals.

Manila, Nov. 2.—Rear-Admiral Sebree reports that when the United States Pacific fleet touched Admiralty Islands, it was learned that recently cannibals captured a boat containing three Englishmen and three Chinese. One of the Englishmen escaped.

DETAILS OF ASSAULT AND ROBBERY TOLD IN POLICE COURT

The hearing of the case of Angus McDonald, who is charged with having assaulted and robbed Wm. P. Whitney on the night of Thanksgiving day, was begun this morning at the police court. The evidence and cross-examination took up considerable time, and at one o'clock the court adjourned until three o'clock.

Mr. R. N. Ruddy appeared for the accused, and Crown Attorney Wood is conducting the prosecution.

When the court opened Mr. Ruddy asked that the prisoner be allowed to withdraw his previous election for a summary trial, but the Magistrate would not consent. There were several clashes between the Crown Attorney and Mr. Ruddy during the cross-examinations.

WHITNEY'S EVIDENCE.

William P. Whitney said he was in the city on Thanksgiving Day and stopped at Eastwood's hotel. About seven o'clock in the evening he had some drinks in the City Hotel, and afterwards went out into the back yard. He was not drunk at the time. A man in the bar followed him outside, the same man with whom he drank in the bar. He was struck twice on the top of the head with a weapon, kicked on the head and he was then robbed of between $40 and $42, a gold watch and chain, a double bladed pocket knife, and a bunch of keys. The prisoner in the box was the man who drank with him in the bar. The second blow rendered him unconscious. The watch cost between $10 and $12, the chain $20 and the locket $4. There was no other person in the yard when he was followed by the man. After the first blow was struck he turned and saw his assailant. He was the prisoner. On regaining consciousness a doctor was attending him.

Three other witnesses were called before the court adjourned.

CONSIDERABLE IMPORTANT BUSINESS DEALT WITH AT CITY COUNCIL'S SESSION

Board of Health's Recommendation That Dr. MacPherson be Paid $1,000—Some Warm Repartee About Sidewalk Laying on Charlotte Street.

Although the communications didn't give promise of a very busy or lively session of the Council last night there was considerable debate and conflict on many points. There was just a sufficient number present to form a quorum. Mayor Rush, Aldermen Loftus, Duncan, Metheral, Buller, Phelan and Gillespie.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

The matter of the continuation of the Aylmer street extension was brought up first, and Ald Buller suggested that the chairman of the Board of Works look into the matter.

Mr. Joe Kelly said he was present in the interests of the Peterborough Poultry Association, and thought some financial assistance should be given the Association. There was a grant of $50 made last year. It was moved by Ald. Phelan, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, that the matter be referred to the Finance Committee. The Association wants $75 this year. Mr. Bickle accompanied Mr. Kelly and spoke briefly in the Association's interest.

A communication was read from the Board of Health, in which it was recommended that Dr. MacPherson be paid $1,000 as remuneration for his splendid work in connection with the smallpox epidemic, which also interfered with his private practice.—Referred to Finance Committee.

Mrs. John Cadigan, 125 James street, wrote regarding her well being injured by the sewer. This is the second letter from Mrs. Cadigan in reference to this matter.—Referred to Board of Works and City Solicitor.

THE COLLECTOR'S STATEMENT.

Tax Collector Green submitted the following statement of roll ending October 31st, 1909;—

Total amount on roll...	$182,029.13
Total amount deposited...	133,402.47
Balance	$ 48,626.65
Less 20 per cent, discount on 1st payment...	2,652.59
Balance	45,974.06

The statement was taken as read.

Mrs. Margaret Gormanty asked for remission of taxes.—Received.

Margaret A. English, secretary of the King's Daughters, wrote asking the council to pass a measure relieving them from the payment of the license fee, which they are liable for under the by-law governing eating houses. The King's Daughters conduct a tea room in the old Richard Hall & Son building.

On motion of Ald. Phelan and Metheral the request was granted.

A letter was read from the president and secretary of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, asking Peterborough to co-operate in a movement to have the Dominion Government inquire into the cement merger. The letter pointed out that the merger meant a higher price for cement.

Moved by Ald. Buller and Ald. Morgan, that City Clerk Armstrong write the company that the council were opposed to any increase in price.

The city clerk of Toronto wrote, inviting the co-operation of Peterborough in urging upon the Ontario Government the advisability of government and municipal ownership of the telephone system throughout the province. A petition was enclosed. —Referred to Manufacturers' Committee.

Mr. A. E. Dixon wrote on behalf of Mr. Edward Green in connection with Mr. Green's property along the water-front, north of Charlotte st., and east of Water street. Mr. Dixon stated that there is a Government reserve of road allowance at the rear of the property, but the location of this reserve has never been definitely fixed. In view of the fact that there is some talk of the water-front being transferred to the C.P.R., Mr. Green would like to have the location of the road allowance settled in order to avoid any trouble in the future. Referred to the Property Committee.

R. E. Wood wrote to the effect that under by-law No. 611 the trustees of the Peterborough Boating Club became entitled to a conveyance of a water lot immediately south of King street. In the said by-law it is provided that the trustees may direct the conveyance of the lot to their appointee, Margaret A. Rogers, of this city. Mr. Wood asked that a deed of the lands from the city to Margaret A. Rogers be executed.

Referred to Property Committee.

The report of the Board of Works was read by the chairman, Ald. Phelan, and adopted as read.

Ald. Metheral didn't think the buying of land on Benson street for $550 contained in the report was necessary and moved the clause be struck out. There was no seconder to this amendment and the report was adopted as read.

A WARM EXCHANGE.

Ald. Morgan wanted to know why the promised walk on Charlotte st. was not built this year. Ald. Phelan said the frost would not permit the carrying on of the work. Disagreement on this point took place and some very warm exchanges passed with Ald. Morgan and Duncan on one side and Ald. Phelan on the other. At length it was decided that a meeting of the Board of Works should be called tomorrow afternoon to take up the matter.

MR. J. W. GARVIN WRITES THE MUSIC FOR THE CANADIAN FLAG-SONG

The Primrose Music and Book concern of Toronto, has favored the Review with a copy of the "Canadian Flag-Song," which has just been issued. The words are by Katherine Hale (Miss A. B. Warnock), the brilliant young poet, essayist and book reviewer, of Toronto, and the music by J. W. Garvin, B.A., of Peterborough and Toronto, who is well known in Ontario in educational, political and literary circles. The melody of the "Canadian Flag-Song," written in march time and suitable for solo, chorus or band work, is of a quality so tuneful and stirring, that its appeal is universal, while the words typify, or symbolize, in a marked degree, the spirit and destiny of the country.

The words and music are Imperial in tone and the song should meet with popular favor. The cover design is a striking one. The song title is circled by a maple leaf of border in the form of a wreath, which is represented as being tied at the bottom with red, white and blue ribbon.

THE MUSICAL EVENT OF THE SEASON

At Once a Musical Education and a Delight Says the Montreal Herald

The concert by the Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir to-morrow evening is the notable event of the local musical season. The Montreal Herald says;— "That nowhere but in Wales can one hear contraltos that soar to unexpected heights as easily and as impressively as they can descend to unusual depths. The remarkable range of the contraltos and the splendid round tone of the sopranos are most impressive. "To hear the choir," it adds, "is at once a musical education and a delight. To miss hearing it would be a misfortune." The sale of seats opens on Thursday morning.

MR. ATKINSON AT ST. ANDREW'S

Impressive Speaker in Connection With Special Evangelistic Mission

The Rev. Robert Atkinson, M.A., of Chelsey, arrived last night and began his work in connection with the Special Evangelistic Mission in St. Andrew's church. Mr. Atkinson is an exceedingly fluent and forceful speaker. In a most convincing manner he portrayed the fact of sin, its origin, development and fruitage, and by simple and apt illustration he carried conviction to every heart. Mr. Atkinson sang with excellent effect, "I stand all amazed at the love Jesus offers me." The choir assisted in the chorus. During the evening exercises Mr. Gordon Wright sang with much sympathy, "I shall know Him by the print of the nails."

The meetings will be held in the church auditorium every night this week and all are cordially invited to be present.

The Torrey and Alexander song book will be used. The song service will begin to-night at a quarter to eight.

New Mayor of New York City

JUDGE GAYNOR

HAVE FLEET THAT WILL BE RESPECTED

London, Nov. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Speaking at the Royal Colonial Institute, Lord Charles Beresford said the future was black. We could only hold our own by keeping our supremacy at sea. The navies of the Empire should be interchangeable, should have the same discipline and uniform signals. He had found Canadians to be strong, healthy, cheery and energetic, and the best specimens of the British race he had ever seen. Canadians' loyalty was unbounded.

Having alluded to the excellent feeling between Canada and the United States, he declared we should not talk of having a fleet that could win a battle, but should rather aim at having such an Empire fleet that nobody dare attack at all.

BEHEADED WIFE AND DAUGHTER

Pottsville, Pa., Nov. 3.—Neighbors who broke in the door of Daniel Schoke's house at Pine Grove yesterday, found that Schoke had cut off the heads of his wife and twelve-year-old daughter with a knife, and then committed suicide by shooting himself. He was 55 years old and a butcher.

In a note Schoke said he was not being treated fairly and that he did not want to leave his wife and daughter to their own resources after he was dead.

About a week ago he got up during the night and went down stairs and sharpened the butcher knife with the intention of killing himself, but his nerve failed him. When he told his wife next day, she exclaimed: "What would I do then?" This remark is supposed to have inspired the double murder in addition to the suicide.

FOUR MEN HOLD UP LABORERS

Paterson, N.J., Nov. 3.—Fifty Italian laborers employed by a construction company on a trolley line were held up early yesterday by four armed men, and robbed of nearly $1,500.

The bandits represented themselves to be officers of the Government, sent to investigate a report that liquor was being sold. One by one the laborers were called out of the barracks which they occupied in common and securely bound and gagged.

SMITH BROS. FOUND GUILTY AND CONVICTED AT BARRIE

Farmers Who Had a Fight With Old Michael Kelly as a Result of Which He Died, Are Held Accountable For His Death—Judge's Charge Favorable to Prisoners.

Barrie, Nov. 3.—Guilty of unlawfully inflicting grievous harm on the late Michael Kelly was the verdict returned by a jury after three hours' deliberation in the case of William and Jas. Smith, who were tried on charge of manslaughter before Sir Wm. Mulock in the Criminal Assizes here yesterday. The penalty is three years, but his lordship told the jury he was willing to receive individual representations as to the sentence to be imposed.

On Sunday, June 27 last, Michael Kelly, an aged man, stopped the Smith brothers as they were driving past his house and began a quarrel over an impounded cow which ended in the Smiths striking him. He died during the night.

The brothers gave evidence yesterday. James said Kelly had struck William twice with a stick, and he (witness) had tackled Kelly when he [illegible] William after he had slipped from the rig. He had called to William to hit Kelly, who had threatened to kill him, and who had five years ago struck him with a stick on the face, and on May 24 last, had hit him with a large stone. Witness had also heard of Kelly throwing axes at other men, and laying in wait for another with a gun.

William Smith said he was rattled when he struck Kelly. He only hit him once and his brother administered but one kick. Kelly had threatened to kill him, and two days before the fatal affair, had said, "Jim Smith's cows have been bothering me. I'll kill them before a week."

Other witnesses gave corroborative evidence and agreed that the brothers were peaceful and quiet. His lordship's charge to the jury was quite favorable to the prisoners.

WHAT WRECKED STEAMER HESTIA?

St. John, N.B., Nov. 3.—J. C. Stewart, third officer of the wrecked steamer Hestia, in a letter to Mr. Gillies, superintendent of the Donaldson Line, says: "My direct complaint is that the old Proprietor Ledge buoy was neither light nor fog signal, and it is supposed to have both. When it is known that the Hestia must have passed within a few feet of this buoy, it will readily be conceded that had it been lit and its bell sounding the Hestia would have been warned."

Again, the keeper of the Gannet admits he did not fire a warning gun because he was afraid he might awake the doctor.

WINNIPEG FIRE DEPARTMENT IS CRITICIZED

Winnipeg, Nov. 3.—The Free Press editorially demands a searching investigation into the work of the fire department, and the reasons why, in the face of the vast outlay for a high pressure system and new and up-to-date apparatus the department failed in broad daylight Saturday to cope with a fire that was discovered in its incipient stages.

School Law Bars Negroes.

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 3.—Because no provision is made for the education of negro children, the law for establishing county agricultural high schools was declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court yesterday. The law specially states that the schools are to be for "white youth."

BEDFORT DID NOT DO IT

London, Nov. 3.—Bedfort, who confessed to the murdering of Ethel Kinrade at Hamilton, was yesterday remanded for eight days at the Bow street police court. Bedfort said he did not remember ever having made any confession. He had only read an account of the murder in Canadian newspapers. Yesterday Bedfort recognized his sister, whereas last week he denied knowing her.

EX-MAYOR IS A CANDIDATE

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 3.—A. J. Morley, formerly mayor of Victoria, announces his intention of running as an Indepnedent candidate, opposing Premier McBride. He has a large personal following, including Labor, Socialists and moral reformers, and the Liberals may find a place for him on their ticket. John Jardine is the Liberal candidate in Esquimalt.

WOMAN WILL NOT HANG

Clemency Will be Shown in Case of Mrs. Robinson at Sudbury — Not Likely Full Pardon.

Ottawa, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Robinson, the unfortunate woman under sentence to be hanged at Sudbury three weeks' hence for the murder of the infants of her daughters, will not have to suffer the death penalty. This much has already been decided after a review of the evidence and the circumstances of the case by the Minister of Justice. It is very doubtful, however, if the Cabinet Council will see its way clear to grant a full pardon. There is no precedent for such a course in the history of the Dominion. In the only similar instance where sentence of death on a woman was commuted some years ago to a limited term of imprisonment the term was made fourteen years, and she was liberated after serving seven years.

The case is clearly one of murder, and even though the circumstances all cry for mercy, it is doubtful if under the criminal code a full pardon can be granted. The matter will come before the Cabinet this week for consideration. Meanwhile the flood of petitions for clemency and pardon pouring into the Department of Justice is unabated. It is estimated that over one hundred and fifty thousand persons have already been heard from. All sections of Canada, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, are represented, and many letters are being received from the United States. Some of the petitioners couch their prayer for mercy in original poetry; others write essays or diatribes on the various aspects of the case.

TAMMANY VICTORIOUS IN NEW YORK CITY

W. J. Gaynor Elected Mayor—Republican-Fusian Party Secures Control of the Finances of the City—Hearst Runs Third in the List.

New York, Oct. 3.—Electrons were held yesterday in many of the United States and cities, with no national issue involved to bring about concerted party action.

In New York city W. J. Gaynor swept the five boroughs to victory as mayor by at least 70,000 plurality, defeating Otto T. Bannard, Republican-Fusion, and William R. Hearst, Independent. He failed, however, to carry his ticket with him, and the Republican-Fusian forces will control absolutely the board of estimates and apportionment, which will disburse approximately a billion dollars during the administration. This is more than half a defeat for Tammany, for the control of the board of estimate was one of the principal issues of the campaign.

In Philadelphia, another battleground on reform issues, Samuel P. Rotan, Republican, was elected district attorney over D. Clarence Gibboney, representing the Law and Order Society and the reform element. Rotan's majority exceeded that in a previous reform campaign, being estimated at upwards of 30,000.

The returns from San Francisco, where reform issues are uppermost, are meagre at a late hour, and give no indications of the outcome.

Mayor Tom Johnson, the picturesque mayor of Cleveland, has been defeated by a decisive majority by Herman Baher, Republican.

In Massachusetts, the returns indicate that Governor Eben B. Draper, Republican, had been re-elected over James H. Vahey, Democrat, by a greatly reduced majority, estimated at 10,000. Governor Draper's majority last year was 60,000.

In Rhode Island, Governor Pothier, Republican, was re-elected over Olney Arnold, Democrat, by a substantial majority.

In Virginia, returns indicate that the Democratic ticket, headed by Judge Mann for governor, has been elected by about the usual majority.

In Maryland, the constitutional amendment disfranchising the negro, is still in doubt, the Baltimore vote being strongly against the amendment, while returns from the Interior indicate increasing strength for the amendment.

Some New York State mayors are:

Buffalo—Louis Fuhrman (Dem.), 1,246. Balance of Democratic ticket defeated with exception W. P. Brennan, elected chief judge of city court.

Rochester—Hiram Edgerton, (Rep.), re-elected with entire ticket.

Syracuse—Ed. Schoeneck, (Rep.).

Albany—James B. McEwan (Rep.), past-master and ex-state senator.

Rome—A. R. Kessinger (Dem.), re-elected.

Troy—Elias P. Mann (Rep.), re-elected.

Johnstown—Abram Harrison (Dem.)

Birghampton—J. J. Irving (Dem.), rest of ticket defeated.

Oswego—John Fitzgibbons (Dem.).

Elmira—Dan Sheehan (Dem.), re-elected.

Watertown—F. M. Hugo (Rep.), re-elected.

Schenectady—Chas. Durge, (Dem.).

Indianapolis, Ind.—S. L. Shank, (Rep.).

Bridgeport, Conn.—City Clerk Sackingham (Dem.), and entire ticket.

FEDERAL GRANT TO THE CAPITAL

Ottawa, Nov. 3.—Negotiations are practically completed between the City of Ottawa and the Dominion Government whereby an annual grant of $115,000 is to be made for a period of ten years, $100,000 to go to the Ottawa Improvement Commission and $15,000 to the city direct. In consideration of this the Government will get free water supply, be relieved of snow cleaning and street sprinkling rates, receive fire protection and have the income of its employed exempted from taxation.

TWO MEN WERE ASPHYXIATED

Toronto, Nov. 3.—Henry [illegible] and John Harcourt, his nephew, were found dead in their home at 86 Defoe street, yesterday morning. An open gas jet in the dining-room which filled the entire house with the fumes was the evident cause. Kerr was 87 years of age. Harcourt was 53 years of age and was in the habit of stopping off at Toronto to stay all night with the old man. He was a traveler for the Walkerville Bobbin Co. His wife and family live in Walkerville. Chief Coroner Johnson is investigating.

CANADIANS HAVE TO PAY MORE

Winnipeg, Nov. 3.—A special from Chicago says that Manitoba white fish is selling on that market at seven cents a pound wholesale, and nine retail, pickeral, wholesale, 7 1-2, retail nine. The whitefish are taken largely by hotels and restaurants because cheaper than Lake Superior fish. Chicago consumes about six carloads of Manitoba whitefish per week.

The point is that yesterday Manitoba whitefish sold at ten cents per pound wholesale in Winnipeg. The facts are interesting in view of the prospective trip of the federal fish commission, which has been looking into northern fisheries, to Chicago. The Booth people practically control the Lake Manitoba output and the price.

PICTURESQUE POSSE AFTER ORANGEVILLE DESPERADO

Cook, Who Slashed Wrist of Constable Halbert When Attempt Was Make to Arrest Him is Being Hunted by Chief of Police, an Englishman With a Shotgun, One With Rifle and One With a Club.

Orangeville, Nov. 3.—Citizens here are divided between disgust and amusement at the "pursuit" of Bob Cook, the gentleman who on Saturday night, in resisting arrest, terribly slashed the wrist of Constable Halbert and walked away from Chief Constable Speers.

Early yesterday morning the chief, armed, resumed his search at the head of a party composed of a short Englishman with a shotgun, a tall chap with a rifle and another fellow with a revolver and a club. Nothing done.

At noon a rig drove rapidly down the main street and the two occupants were promptly spotted as Bob and his brother Bill. A posse of seven men was gathered together and set out in chase. Returning in half an hour later, the announcement was made that it wasn't Bob after all.

A number of houses in the neighborhood have been searched and a party went out to Orangeville Junction yesterday afternoon, but with no result.

At Monday night's meeting of the town council some cutting remarks were made about the way Cook had been allowed to get away.

Cook comes of a highly-respected family, and he himself is a good-natured chap until he gets drinking. Then he's fierce.

The opinion is expressed by many that Cook by this time is five hundred miles away from here.

Among the bravest of the posse is a brother-in-law of the desperado, who has a reputation as a sleuth. He is armed with a cudgel resembling somewhat a limb of an apple tree, on the end of which is attached a large hook or spike. It is said he is not big enough to carry a gun. Another member of the posse has been termed the "wild man from Borneo," who, it is believed, will scare Bob Cook into submission immediately should the posse ever run across him.

THE FINAL RETURNS IN NEW YORK

Special to the Review.

Belleville, Nov. 3.—Pittsburg capitalists have purchased the iron mine of William Rankin in Mayo township, Hastings County, for $100,000.

IRON MINES IN HASTINGS PURCHASED

Special to the Review.

New York, Nov. 3.—Final returns in New York mayoralty gives Gaynor 250,678, Bannard 177,662, Hearst 153,843. There is gloom in Tammany Hall as a result of the defeat of the entire ticket, except Mayor. A movement has been started to depose Chas. Murphy as boss. Only Gaynor's popularity saved him.

COAL COMPANY CASE GOES ON

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 3.—The coal operators' conspiracy case is dragging on in the Police Court. Yesterday General Manager Duggan of the Dominion Coal Co. produced a pile of correspondence between Mr. Morrow and General Sales Agent Dick. The letters had to be admitted individually, the process taking a long time. W. B. A. Ritchie, for the crown, argued that conspiracy had been proven, for the purpose of gaining permission to question witness Morrow in regard to prices of coal, and was successful. Every company at present is at liberty to make its own charges for freight. It transpired that there was an arrangement by which the Bay of Fundy trade was not sought after by the Dominion Co., the price for ports on the bay being f.o.b. Sydney. In 1899 the dealer at Halifax would pay $2 a ton at the mine, now $2.80.

STILL THAT CANADIAN NAVY

The Montreal Star says that the navy question overshadows all others in Canada just now. And "overshadows" is a good word. Sir Charles Tupper speaks for the good of the mass of the people occasionally, and he never spoke more so than when he said that Canada has all she can do and all she ought to do just now in developing her own waterways, roadways, and in putting into shape her great resources for more leisurely development. Canada had better not be Canada at all than to go headlong into a career of military waste. If the rulers of this fair land are trying to make Canada commit suicide, like a petty European principality, then the people of it should arise and put their prophets in the cooler. The Star is a great journal in every sense, but when it finds fault with Sir Charles for speaking so, it fails to represent the prevailing prayer of the people, and that is, that we shall not throw our hard-earned money literally into the sea. If we cannot do worse than a trifle for imperial defence, just now, let us do that, but to swagger about as if we were a "nation" is premature. We now see why many of our Canadian journals have been encouraging us to call ourselves "a nation." They are trying to make us live up to it.

Canada cannot do better, however, than set an example to the rising generation of nations. The time to stop this evolution of national distress is before it gets "under weigh." Another two years of "army and navy" and, as in the case of our forefathers, we shall have embarked upon a century of waste. We are at the dawn of a new era, and let us do all we can in Canada to check the old-time madness of the nations in this respect.

We must beware of those, too, who are consciously or unconsciously playing into the hands of the manufacturers of war material. The ways of these latter gentlemen are sometimes devious, and it might not be above them to "agitate" public opinion in their own interests. We hope that it will be a long day before we begin on a Canadian navy. It is bad enough to have to waste money in a few Dreadnoughts, but to establish a navy—that is surely no sign of statesmanship in Canada.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is said that when Nelson was called up by Stead about the Canadian navy he laughed.

It is said by the Cleveland Leader that men speak well of the dead because they said all the ill they knew of them when they were alive.

In the "of interest" column will be found a dissertation on Evolution and Original Sin, in which it is held that there is no such thing as original sin and that sin comes only when a consciousness of doing wrong comes upon man.

If Miss Katherine Hale, of the Mail and Empire can't find anything better to do than to write the Canadian song that bears her name, she had better turn her attention wholly to criticism. Her original work is, oor, but as a perfunctory critic she does well enough. Mr. Garvin's music is vastly superior to the libretto.

The French Government is determined to protect the public school system. The premier of France is rallying the people to its defence. It is said that statistics show that the former national faith of the French is professed by less than 3 million French people. The interference of ecclesiastics in state politics has brought them in conflict with the people, it is said, and respect for their "exalted office," and much that it represents has been lost. It is impossible to be a politician and a minister of the gospel at one and the same time. It leads to complications.

On Monday evening a bunch of helpless drunks "lagged superfluous." They were evidently not townspeople. It looks as if the optionists would have as an additional argument that this city is being made the dumping-ground for the waste of the surrounding country. The number of unfamiliar faces "under the influence" is a matter of comment. Possibly the Magistrate will get busy and see to it that the individuals who cherish the glorious privilege of making something worse than beasts of themselves shall go elsewhere. What has Peterborough done that its wives and daughters should be affronted with the sight and language of men who think so little of themselves as to care nothing either for others or themselves. The day for this sort of thing has gone by.

The following summing-up of the Ferrer case by the London, Eng., Daily News, the leading Liberal journal of England, will no doubt cause surprise;

"No one doubts that Senor Ferrer is a martyr, executed by the Church," says the Daily News. "If he had not founded the modern schools and attempted to liberate education from clerical control, he would now be living. It has been said that the worst thing about Spain is her Government but behind the Government stands a worse thing still, and that is, not religion, but the power of the Church laying its dead hand upon politics, finance, and the intelligence of the people. The Church has learned nothing and has forgotten all the lessons of the last three centuries in Europe. In Spain she is still "the enemy, as she was in the France of Voltaire and even of Gambetta."

THE GRAVE OF OPPOSITION.

Even one of the Spanish papers is compelled to write that the evils of Spain cannot be cured by rifles and antiquated laws. "There is only one remedy for these evils, and that is liberty."

"No one can doubt that the social and political system of the Peninsula is about to be assailed as never before" says the Nation. "Spain has been often convulsed, but never reorganized. She is the only country in Europe that has escaped the transforming effects of the Reformation and the French Revolution. Republics, military dictatorships, and flabby dynastics have changed again and again the decorative externals of the State; but there has been no revolution from the bottom up. Now, however, the tokens multiply of a genuine risorgimento; and Senor Ferrer's grave may yet prove the grave of oppression."

PETERBORO' MARKET

Peterborough, Nov. 3.—The market has been quiet for some weeks, and not much change has taken place since last quotations. More grain is coming in, and prices are somewhat lower. Wheat remains at $1., oats have dropped to 35c, barley 50c and peas are quoted 80c to $1.00. A few nice lots of live hogs continue to come in, but not enough to influence the market in any way.

ANTS PROTECT PLANT.

How They Defend It Against Leaf Destroying Insects.

A standing army of ants for defensive purposes is kept and provided with food by a sensitive plant of Nicaragua. In this acacia there are two large thorns at the base of each leaf inhabited by the colonies of ants, which bore into the thorns and make a home for themselves by eating out the soft inner tissue. On the leaf stalks there are honey glands, and at the tip of each leaflet there is a sausage shaped body about as large as a pin's head, consisting of albuminous food. The ants sip the nectar and eat the food bodies and, being contented with their lot, remain on the plant without doing it any injury.

When the plant is threatened by an invasion of leaf-cutting ants which would damage it the ants composing the plant's army or police force rush out and repel the intruders. Many similar arrangements exist in tropical plants.

In one of the most remarkable of these ant plants the female ant bites a hole in the stem and brings up her brood inside it. The stalk of each leaf is swollen at its base and bears food bodies, which are eaten by the ants when they emerge to find for themselves. As the old food bodies are eaten new ones are formed, thus keeping the ants, which are of a fierce disposition, in the plant's employment. Plants of the same species which do not happen to be inhabited by ants fall an easy prey to leaf-cutting kinds of ants, which are only too plentiful in the tropics. In other cases the defensive ants are provided only with shelter in cavities of the stem, and various naturalists have observed that these ants pour out in troops whenever leaf-cutting enemies attempt to attack the foliage.

The ants which thus defend these plants are small, but sting with extreme virulence, their small size making them the more formidable. The leaf-cutting ants cut off the leaves and pile them up in heaps, forming a sort of kitchen garden of leaf mold, upon which they cultivate a fungus belonging to the mushroom family. They sow the spores of the mushroom and make a pure culture of the fungus, nibbling at it to prevent the development of mushroom heads and thus promoting the growth of spawn.

Lord Halsbury's Lucky Number.

The figure "5" seems to have played a prominent part in the life of the Earl of Halsbury, whose eighty-fourth birthday fell on the fifth. Born in 1825, the earl commenced his career at the Bar in 1850, was made a Q.C. in 1865, Solicitor-General in 1875, and Lord Chancellor in 1885. Known as "the judge-maker," his lordships never smokes, detests tobacco, was an expert fencer, held the Lord Chancellorship for the longest period, has been mistaken for a celebrated "bruiser," and was instrumental in inaugurating the special service at Westminster Abbey for lawyers.

When he first went to the House of Commons to take his seat for Launceston, in 1877, he found himself writless. He searched high and low, and turned out a remarkable collection of articles, ranging from collar-studs and a ten-bladed knife to boot-laces. Ultimately, the missing writ was discovered in a member's hat.

A Warship Target.

Warships, unlike war horses, stand small chance of being turned out to grass when their work is over. The old British battleship Edinburgh, which is on the sale list, is to be used as a target. If the vessel survives the gun fire it is probable that she will be subjected to an attack of torpedoes to discover what would be the effect of a well placed shot with a Whitehead on the bottom of a ship of the Dreadnought type, which a section of the Edinburgh's bottom can be made approximately to represent.

A New Gun Silencer.

Colonel Humbert, a retired officer of the French artillery, has invented a gun silencer like that of Hiram Maxim, as it employs the principle of muffling the sound by confining the gases of the explosion and allowing them to escape gradually. Colonel Humbert, however, uses simple horizontal cells, whereas the cells in Maxim's device are arranged on the principle of the gyroscope. Colonel Humbert's silencer is much heavier than Maxim's.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Evangelistic Campaign in The Presbyterian Churches

St. Paul's Church

Despite the rain and the dark night there was a splendid attendance at the evangelistic meeting in St. Paul's Presbyterian church last night. The choir and congregation sang some of the gospel hymns with great heartiness, and Miss Davies, the soloist, gave a touching rendition of the great hymn of comfort, "Come Ye Disconsolate." A pleasing feature was the presence on the platform of Rev. E. A. Pearson, of George street Methodist church, who took part in the service by leading in prayer.

The Rev. Mr. MacBeth said that he had greatly enjoyed the day, in which special events had been the joy over the last night's meeting, a conference with the pastors and other missioners in the morning, and a grand meeting of the men at the noon hour in one of the industrial establishments of the city. His text last night was from Luke 14, where in the parable of the great supper the invitation is sent out, "Come, for all things are now ready." Jesus was the most approachable and hospitable man the world had ever seen. Any one who came to Him was made welcome. He could harmonize all the elements of society, and kept open house in the kingdom of God. The air of the Old and New Testament was vibrant with the sound of invitation, and if any one stayed outside and was lost it was not the fault of Jesus Christ, but the fault of the one who refused the wide invitation. Invitation implied absence from God, [illegible] to be unhappy and miserable, and they strove to get back. Their hearts cried out for the living God. But men found out that in their own strength that they could not bridge the chasm which their sin had dug between them and God. Men need not delay coming to the Lord's table till they are better, because they will never be better without Christ. They should come to Him who opened the way back to God and the life of holiness. The gospel offer is made freely, but it cost the life of Christ, and we should understand its supreme necessity and value. To refuse to come was to choose separation from God in this world and the world to come. The meeting throughout was very impressive.

Knox Church

Knox church was the scene of several impressive meetings yesterday. At 3 p.m. a Mothers' Prayer meeting was held, and it proved to be a most impressive service. Mrs. McPherson had charge, and it was decided to meet each afternoon. Ladies will be welcomed at this prayer service.

The Mission Band met at 4.30, and after their business and trip to China listened to Mr. Mitchell as he gave them a most interesting talk on "Three Things."

The evening service opened with a service of song. A quartette and solo were also given. Mr. Mitchell's text was taken from Col. 1. 14;—"To whom we have redemption through His blood". He introduced his subject by recalling early systems of British justice, when a kinsman had to come to the rescue of the condemned. A similarity was pointed out in the system of the Old Testament. From these he pointed to Jesus as the redeeming kinsman.

We get the benefit of Jesus' redeeming work by faith. This is a work often veiled in mystery. Mr. Mitchell made it exceedingly simple, and not even the youngest could fail to understand what it means to believe in Jesus as Saviour.

Rev Dr. Ryckman was present and he closed the meeting with prayer. He gave his personal testimony to satisfaction in the Christian life.

Nearly all remained for the after meeting, and showed their deep interest by so doing.

Mr. Mitchell's subject for to-night is, "Finding One's Soul," and it is hoped there will be a large congregation present.

At St. Andrew's

The Rev. Robt. Atkinson, M. A., gave a most interesting and scholarly address last night in St. Andrew's church. Increased interest was quite manifest in the meeting and a congregation left the sacred edifice determined to influence many others to take a personal interest in the services.

Mr. Atkinson is a singer as well as a preacher and will assist in the service of song each night. The general public are cordially invited. Song service 7.45. Meeting at 8 p.m.

INJURIES RESULTED FATALLY

Lindsay, Nov. 1.—Robert Osborne Wilson, the unfortunate G.T.R. conductor, who sustained terrible injuries on the Port Hope mixed at Garden Hill on Saturday morning, passed away at the Ross Memorial Hospital on Saturday evening. Dr. White was the attending physician in charge, and after the unfortunate fellow was removed to the Ross Memorial Hospital the amputation of his right leg and arm, which were frightfully mangled, was decided upon and carried out by Drs. White and Collison. The injuries sustained, however, were of such a character, that death took place at 11.30 o'clock. The poor fellow also lost the little finger of his right hand and received a cut over the right eye.

The deceased had been in the employ of the Grand Trunk in Lindsay for the seven years, and was only recently promoted to a conductor. He had made several trips as a spare conductor, and Saturday morning was ordered out on the Port Hope mixed, which leaves Lindsay at 6 a.m., as a brakeman.

The accident occurred while the train was returning from Port Hope to Lindsay. The mixed was in charge of Conductor John Way, and Engineer Jos. Harvey, both of Lindsay.

FOWL SUPPER AND CONCERT

In Forester's Hall, Friday Evening. Rev. E. A. Pearson will Speak on His Trip to Ireland.

The fowl supper and concert on Friday evening in the Foresters' Hall promises to be an unqualified success in every way. A general committee meeting was held last evening and in the reports given it was shown that the tickets were nearly all sold and that plenty of fowl and other eatibles were secured. The programme has also been completed and a rare treat is in store for those who will be fortunate enough to get into the hall. The best of talent in the city in vocal and instrumental music and elocution has also been secured and with the most genial of chairmen the audience present will have an enjoyable and a very profitable evening. The ladies have charge of the tables and from the reports of the committee in charge this part of the programme will be par excellence. The supper will be served from 6 to 8, and the programme will positively commence sharp at eight p.m. The Rev. E. A. Pearson, of the George street Methodist church, will give an account of his trip to Ireland and the site of the Battle of the Boyne.

A LARGE CLOTHING PURCHASE

There are times when other people's misfortunes are appreciated by us. In this case it is the large wholesale clothier who had the misfortune to have several orders on his books of retailers who, during the quiet summer have failed and left him with their orders in the process of manufacture. In order to right himself at once he is compelled to make radical reductions in these lines.

At this particular time LANG & MAHER were on the spot and picked out what they wanted of the lines which suited their trade AT THEIR OWN PRICE and are preparing to give the citizens the benefit of their large purchase. THE CHILDREN'S WELFARE

The proposal to examine the children of our schools with a view to seeing if they are or are not keeping physically fit is merely to follow the example of those nations in the van of human progress. That children should be allowed to run the dangers of the most fearful contagion, shows how necessary it is that our public school system should usitfy its name in every detail. Many of the most insidious and destructive diseases are not known to the mass of the people, even by name, and to allow of these being perpeurated in future generations without an attempt at cure is to ignore the simplest principles of public health. No one will disagree for one moment with the Board's idea to have school children supervised by a physician. In such a case he would be simply a teacher endowed with a physician's knowledge. We are behind in this particular, and it should not be allowed to continue longer. The medical health officer, we would suppose, is the most suitable person for this important duty. "It is not necessary for him to do more than convey to the headmaster information in a report, which in turn may be conveyed by the headmaster to the family in a report. Why such a detail as the following should be omitted from a report it would be hard to say:—

"Your child is suffering from bad teeth, which are endangering its health and that of others. You are requested to see that the child gets treatment or to report the matter to the Board for further action."

2. "Your child is believed to be suffering from a dangerous disease, named trachoma. The Board requests your immediate attention to it, in the interests both of your child and the rest of the school children, etc."

It is merely applying the principles of quarantine where most needed.

OPERATIONS SUSPENDED

There Will be No More Laying of Granolithic Walks in Peterborough This Year

There will be no more laying of sidewalks in Peterborough this year. At Monday night's meeting of the council the opinion was expressed that the work should be carried on by the Board of Works. Ald. Phelan explained that it was not safe to do so on account of the danger of the frost interfering with the work and spoiling the walks. After considerable controversy on the point it was decided that the best thing to do would be to call a meeting on the shortest possible notice and that was the reason the one yesterday was held.

City Engineer Hay and Street Commissioner Evans were both on hand to give expert testimony. Speaking from experience they cited examples of walks being damaged by frost and said they were of the opinion that it would be the wiser plan to suspend the work of making them until the spring.

The ratepayers in that district had been promised a walk on the southern part of Charlotte street off Park and Ald. Duncan contended that they should have it. He asked why the pleasure of the council in the matter had been overlooked. "The question is," said Mayor Rush, "would it be advisable to continue the work now?" It was the opinion of the majority that in view of Messrs. Hay and Evans' views on the matter that it wouldn't.

Those present at the meeting were Ald. Phelan, chairman; Mayor Rush, Aldermen Bradburn, Buller, Duncan, Bradburn and Gillespie and City Engineer Hay and Street Commissioner Evans.

A couple of other matters were touched upon, but nothing was done with them at the meeting.

HEALTH INSPECTION MAY BE INTRODUCED INTO SCHOOLS

Mr. D. W. Dumble Brought Up the Matter at the Regular Meeting of Board of Education—Was Discussed and Referred to Special Committee.

Should there be a medical inspector appointed to look into the physical conditions of the pupils of the public schools of this city? Mr. D. W. Dumble has been advocating such a step being taken by the Board of Education for some time, and at last night's meeting brought up the subject again. The question was discussed amongst several of the other members, and it is probable that something definite will be done in the near future.

Mr. Dumble, in his remarks, referred to the fact that the refined and wealthy occupy seats and are brought into contact with others who are not so well attended to. This influences parents of the former to send their children to other schools where they will be shielded from contaminating influences and possible diseases, which are liable to exist in the present conditions. This is one of the things which make it obligatory for the Board to make it as agreeable as possible. It is often the case where ill-cared-for children are afflicted with unnoticeable diseases, and they mingle with the other pupils, and there is a great danger in this. Again, in some cases, the pupils are kept back in their studies owing to infirmities which should be, but are not, attended to.

In the schools of the United States a system of inspection of the pupils is carried out. Each is examined as to the state of his or her ears, teeth or other parts of the body, and this system is equally applicable to our schools.

Mr. Dumble made a motion to the effect that a competent medical inspector be appointed by the Board to carry out this work in the city's public schools, the same to report monthly.

Dr. Morrison took up the question. He said he agreed with the spirit of Mr. Dumble's motion, but did not agree with his method of arriving at the last part of the motion, which related to the selecting of an examiner. It was a fact that some of the children in the schools were backward, when the real cause was some disease, and they did not have the capacity for work of a healthy child. This is not found out until they are examined. He did not think that in a city like Peterborough, with so many advantages, that there would be many cases which would require attention. The parents should be advised and some steps taken. He was in favor of referring the matter to some committee.

Mr. Hall—It is something that wants to be looked into very carefully, as it is an important question. In Brantford the schools employ a trained nurse, who acts with a physician.

Mr. Dumble moved that the matter be referred to a committee composed of Dr. Morrison, Dr. Burnham and the mover.

Mr. Hall's name was added, and an amendment was made, leaving out the matter of a physician, and referred to the committee named.

LOCAL TEACHERS AFTER SPECIAL GRANT OF $730

Board of Education Have Increased the Salaries of the Teachers, But Have Not Complied With the Wishes of the Educational Department.

The special grant set aside by the Government to be divided amongst the urban school teachers of the Province of Ontario, according to their grade and length of service, is being discussed by the Boards of Education throughout the Province and last night the local Board took the question up after a letter from the Public School Inspector, which referred to the grant, had been read. Peterborough's share is $730. On motion of Mr. John Crane and Dr. Morrison, the communication was referred to the Committee on Appointments.

The particulars of the grant and the object for which it is made will be found in the following letter from the Deputy Minister of Education:

Mr. Mowat

Mr. A. Mowat,

Peterborough:

Sir,—I am directed by the Minister of Education to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st. inst., with reference to the special grant to urban schools. In view of the issue raised by your enquiries a short explanation regarding the special grant is given:—

In 1908, the grant was paid through the municipal trustees to the various School Boards, the object in view being to encourage the Board to engage such teachers and increased the salaries of their teaching staff generally, but for the reason that by far a larger number did not use the special grant for this purpose, but expended it in other lines of school administration it was decided for 1909 to request that the money should be paid direct from the various Urban Boards to the teachers entitled to receive it.

This mode of dealing with the grant applies to 1909 only and is not retroactive and was adopted this year principally in the interests of teachers whose Boards did not increase the salaries of their staff upon the receipt of the special grant in 1908.

Although the Peterborough School Board appear to have dealt fairly by their teachers in the matter of salaries still you will be kind enough to advise them respecting the wishes of the Department as to the mode of apportioning this grant in 1909.

A. H. O. COLQUHOUN,

Deputy Minister of Education.

Mr. Mowat replied to the letter stating what had been done in the matter by the local Board of Education and he received an answer, the principal part of which follows:

The Minister directs me to say that he recognized with pleasure the action of the Peterborough Board of Education in relation to teachers' salaries and to the other important matters affecting educational interests with which they have had to deal. He trusts, therefore, that even at the risk of a little inconvenience in rearranging the revenues for the year, that the Board will pay over the special urban grant to the teachers.

The Minister is satisfied from the attitude of the Peterborough Board of Education towards the higher educational interests of the Province during some years past that the Board will not remit its enterprising efforts.

Mr. Hill—We have increased the salaries of our teachers during the past two years and are now paying more than the average in most other cities and towns. We should think over it very carefully before taking any action. Let the Inspector secure all the information possible from the other Boards. Some of the Boards have paid the grant to their teachers while others have decided to do nothing at all.

Mr. Dumble—We have practically complied with the spirit of the act, and we have not misapplied the appropriation.

Mr. Mowat—You have not complied with the spirit of the act. While you have increased the salaries of first class teachers in 1908, the Educational Department state that in 1909, the teachers must be paid in cheques of $15 and $20. They implicitly request that the grant of $720 be paid in addition to any salary.

Mr. Hill—We are getting that grant because of the proficiency of our teaching staff. The question is, "Why should they get more than we agreed to give them?"

Canada's custom revenue promises to increase $12,000,000 this fiscal year.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"I'll walk," he told the cabby, paying him off.

The hansom swept away to a tune of hammering hoofs, and quiet rested upon the street as Kirkwood turned the nearest corner in an unpleasant temper, puzzled and discontented. It seemed hardly fair that he should have been dragged into so promising an adventure by his ears (so to put it) only to be thus summarily called upon to write "Finis" beneath the incident.

He rounded the corner and walked halfway to the next street, coming to an abrupt and rebellious pause by the entrance to a covered alleyway, of two minds as to his proper course of action.

In the background of his thoughts No. 9 Frognall street reared its five story facade, sinister and forbidding. He reminded himself of its unlighted windows, of its sign "To Be Let," of the effluvia of desolation that had saluted him when the door swung wide. A deserted house, and the girl alone in it—was it right for him to leave her so?

CHAPTER IV.

THE covered alleyway gave upon Quadrant mews, or so declared a notice painted on the dead wall of the passage.

Overhead, complaining as it swayed in the wind, hung the smirched and weather worn signboard of the Hog-in-the-Pound public house, wherefrom escaped sounds of such revelry by night as is indulged in by the British workingman in hours of ease. At the curb in front of the house of entertainment, dejected animals drooping between their shafts, two hansoms stood in waiting until such time as the lords of their destinies should see fit to sally forth and inflict themselves upon a cab hungry populace. As Kirkwood turned a third vehicle rumbled up out of the mews.

For between his curiosity about and his concern for the girl he was being led back to No. 9 by the nose, as it were, hardly willingly at best. Profoundly stupefied by the contemplation of his own temerity, he yet returned unfaltering. He who had for so long plumed himself upon his strict supervision of his personal affairs and equally steadfast unconsciousness of his neighbor's business now found himself in the very act of pushing in where he was not wanted, as he had been advised in well nigh as many words.

He turned up Frognall street with the manner of one out for a leisurely evening stroll. Simultaneously from the farther corner another pedestrian debouched into the thoroughfare—a mere moving shadow at that distance, brother to blacker shadows that skulked in the fenced areas and unlively entries of that poorly lighted block. The hush was something beyond belief when one remembered the nearness of blatant Tottenham Court road.

Kirkwood conceived a wholly senseless curiosity about the other wayfarer. The man was walking rapidly, heels ringing with uncouth loudness, cane tapping the flagging at brief intervals. Both sounds ceased abruptly as their cause turned in beneath one of the porticoes. In the emphatic and unnatural quiet that followed Kirkwood, stepping more lightly, fancied that another shadow followed the first, noiselessly and with furtive stealth.

Could it be No. 9 into which they had passed? The American's heart beat a livelier tempo at the suggestion. If it had not been No. 9—he was still too far away to tell—it was certainly one of the dwellings adjacent thereunto. The improbable possibility (but why improbable?) that the girl was being joined by her father or by friends annoyed him with illogical intensity.

Approaching No. 9 with laggard feet, he manufactured a desire to light a cigarette as a cover for his design were he spied upon by unsuspected eyes. Cane under arm, hands cupped to shield a vesta's flame, he stopped directly before the portico, turning his eyes askance to the shadowed doorway, and made a discovery sufficiently startling to hold him spellbound and incidentally to scorch his gloves before he thought to drop the match.

The door of No. 9 stood ajar, a black interval an inch or so in width showing between its edge and the jamb.

Suspicion and alarm set his wits a-tingle. More distinctly he recalled the jarring bang, accompanied by the metallic click of the latch, when the girl had shut herself in—and him out. Now, some person or persons had followed her, neglecting the most obvious precaution of a householder. And why? Why but because the intruders did not wish the sound of closing to be audible to her—or those—within?

He reminded himself that it was all none of his affair, decided to pass on and go his way in peace and, impulsively swinging about, marched straight away for the unclosed door.

"'Old 'ard, guvner!"

Kirkwood halted on the cry, faltering in indecision. Should he take the plunge or withdraw? Synchronously he was conscious that a man's figure had detached itself from the shadows beneath the nearest portico and was drawing nearer, with every indication of haste to intercept him.

"'Ere now, guvner, yer mykin' a mistyke. You don't live 'ere."

"How do you know?" demanded Kirkwood crisply, tightening his grip on his stick.

Was this the second shadow he had seemed to see—the confederate of him who had entered No. 9, a sentry to forestall interruption? If so, the fellow lacked discretion, though his determination that the American should not interfere was undeniable. It was with an ugly and truculent manner, if more warily, that the man closed in.

"I knows. You clear hout or"—

He flung out a hand with the palpable design of grasping Kirkwood by the collar. The latter [illegible] deflecting the arm, and incontinently landed his other fist forcibly on the fellow's chest. The man reeled back, cursing. Before he could recover Kirkwood calmly crossed the threshold, closed the door and put his shoulder to it. In another instant, fumbling in the darkness, he found the bolts and drove them home.

And it was done, the transformation accomplished. His inability to refrain from interfering had encompassed his downfall, had changed a peaceable and law abiding alien within British shores into a busybody, a trespasser, a misdemeanant, a—yea, for all he knew to the contrary, in the estimation of the law, a burglar, prime candidate for a convict's stripes.

"The devil!" he whispered. "What an ass, what an utter ass, I am!"

Behind him the knob was rattled urgently to an accompaniment of feet shuffling on the stone, and immediately, if he were to make a logical deduction from the rasping and scraping sound within the door casing, the bell pull was violently agitated, without, however, educing any response from the bell itself, wherever that might be situate, after which, as if in despair, the outsider again rattled and jerked the knob.

Be his status what it might, whether servant of the household, its caretaker or a night watchman, the man was palpably determined both to get himself in and Kirkwood out and yet, curious to consider, determined to gain his end without attracting undue attention. Kirkwood had expected to hear the knocker's thunder as soon as the bell failed to give tongue, but it did not sound, although there was a knocker. Kirkwood himself had remarked that antiquated and rusty bit of ironmongery affixed to the middle panel of the door. And it made him feel sure that something surreptitious and lawless was in process within those walls; that the confederate without, having failed to prevent a stranger from entering, left unemployed a means so certain sure to rouse the occupants.

But his inferential analysis of this phase of the proceedings was summarily abrupted by that identical alarm. In a trice the house was filled with flying echoes, wakened to sonorous riot by the crash and clamor of the knocker, and Kirkwood stood fully two yards away, his heart hammering wildly, his nerves a-jingle, much as if the resounding blows had landed upon his own person rather than on stout oaken planking.

Ere he had time to wonder the racket ceased, and from the street filtered voices in altercation. Listening, Kirkwood's pulses quickened, and he laughed uncertainly for pure relief, retreating to the door and putting an ear to a crack.

The accents of one speaker were new in his hearing, stern, crisp, quick with the spirit of authority which animates that most austere and dignified limb of the law to be encountered the world over, a London bobby.

"Now, then, my man, what do you want there? Come, now; speak up and step out into the light where I can see you."

The response came in the sniffling snarl of the London ne'er-do-well, the unemployable rogue whose chief occupation seems to be to march in the ranks of the unemployed on the occasion of its annual demonstrations.

"Le' me alone, carnticher? Ah'm doin' no 'arm, officer."

"Didn't you hear me? Step out here. Ah, that's better. No harm, eh? Perhaps you'll explain how there's no harm breakin' into unoccupied 'ouses?"

"Gorblimy, 'ow was I to know? 'Ere's a toff 'ands me sixpence fer hopenin' 'is cab door todye, an', sezee, 'My man,' 'e sez, 'ye've got a 'onest fyce. W'y doncher work?' sezee. ''Ow can I?' sez I. ''Ere 'm I hout of a job these six months, lookin' fer work every dye an' carn't find it.' Sezee, 'Come an' see me this hevenin' at me 'ome, noine, Frognall stryte,' 'e sez, an' "—

"That'll do for now. You borrow a pencil and paper and write it down and I'll read it when I've got more time. I never heard the like of it. This 'ouse hasn't been lived in these two years. Move on, and don't let me find you round 'ere again. March, I say!"

There was more of it—more whining explanations artfully tinctured with abuse, more terse commands to depart, the whole concluding with scraping footsteps, diminuendo, and another perfunctory rattle of the knob as the bobby, having shooed the putative evildoer off, assured himself that no damage had actually been done. Then he, too, departed, satisfied and self righteous, leaving a badly frightened but very grateful amateur criminal to pursue his self appointed career of crime.

He had no choice other than to continue. In point of fact, it had been insanity just then to back out and run the risk of apprehension at the hands of that ubiquitous bobby, who, for all he knew, might be lurking not a dozen yards distant, watchful for just such a sequel. Still, Kirkwood hesitated with the best of excuses. Reassuring as he had found the sentinel's extemporized yarn, proof positive that the fellow had had no more right to prohibit a trespass than Kirkwood to commit one, at the same time he found himself passionably a prey to emotions of the utmost consternation and alarm. If he feared to leave the house he had no warrant whatever to assume that he would be permitted to remain many minutes unharmed within its walls of mystery.

The silence of it discomfited him beyond measure. It was, in a word, uncanny.

Before him as he lingered at the door, vaguely disclosed by a wan illumination penetrating a dusty and begrimed fanlight, a broad hall stretched indefinitely toward the rear of the building, losing itself in blackness beyond the foot of a flight of stairs. Save for a few articles of furniture—a hall table, an umbrella stand, a tall, dumb clock flanked by high backed chairs—it was empty. Other than Kirkwood's own restrained respiration not a sound throughout the house advertised its inhabitation, not a board creaked beneath the pressure of a foot, not a mouse rustled in the wainscoting or beneath the floors, not a breath of air stirred sighing in the stillness.

Hurled bodily upon him with staggering force and passion.

And yet a tremendous racket had been raised at the front door within the sixty seconds past. And yet within twenty minutes two persons at least had preceded Kirkwood into the building. Had they not heard? The speculation seemed ridiculous. Or had they heard and, alarmed, been too effectually hobbled by the coils of their nefarious designs to dare reveal themselves, to investigate the cause of that thunderous summons? Or were they, perhaps, aware of Kirkwood's entrance and lying hidden in some dark corner to ambush him as he passed?

True, that was hardly like the girl. True, on the other hand, it was possible that she had stolen away while Kirkwood was hanging in irresolution by the passage to Quadrant mews. Again, the space of time between Kirkwood's dismissal and his return had been exceedingly brief. Whatever her errand, she could hardly have fulfilled it and escaped. At that moment she might be in the power and at the mercy of him who had followed her, provided he were not friendly. And in that case what torment and what peril might not be hers!

Spurred by solicitude, the young man put personal apprehensions in his pocket and forgot them, cautiously picking his way through the gloom to the foot of the stairs. Slowly he began to ascend, a hand following the balusters, the other with his cane exploring the obscurity before him. On the steps a carpet, thick and heavy, muffled his footfalls. He moved noiselessly. Toward the top the staircase curved, and presently a foot that groped for a higher level failed to find it. Again he halted, acutely distrustful.

Nothing happened.

He went on, guided by the balustrade, passing three doors, all open, through which the undefined proportions of a drawing room and boudoir were barely suggested in a ghostly dusk. By each he paused, listening, hearing nothing.

His foot struck with a deadened thud against the bottom step of the second flight, and his pulses fluttered wildly for a moment. Two minutes—three—he waited in suspense. From above came no sound. He went on, as before, save that twice a step yielded, complaining, to his weight.

Again the raised foot found no level higher than its fellows. He stopped and held his breath, oppressed by a conviction that some one was near him. Confirmation of this came startlingly—an eerie whisper in the night, so close to him that he fancied he could feel the disturbed air fanning his face.

"Is it you, Eccles?"

He had no answer ready. The voice was masculine, if he analyzed it correctly. Dumb and stupid, he stood poised upon the point of panic.

"Eccles, is it you?"

The whisper was both shrill and shaky. As it ceased Kirkwood was half blinded by a flash of light striking him squarely in the eyes. Involuntarily he shrank back a pace, to the first step from the top. Instantaneously the light was eclipsed.

"Halt or—or I fire!"

By now he realized that he had been scrutinized by the aid of an electric hand lamp. The tremulous whisper told him something else—that the speaker suffered from nerves as high strung as his own. The knowledge gave him inspiration. He cried at a venture, in a guarded voice, "Hands up!" and struck out smartly with his stick. Its ferrule impinged upon something soft, but heavy. Simultaneously he heard a low, frightened cry, the cane was swept aside, a blow landed glancingly on his shoulder, and he was carried fairly off his feet by the weight of a man hurled bodily upon him with staggering force and passion. Reeling, he was borne back and down a step or two and then, choking on an oath, dropped his cane and with one hand caught the balusters, while the other tore ineffectually at wrists of hands that clutched his throat. So, for a space, the two hung, panting and struggling.

Then, endeavoring to swing his shoulders over against the wall, Kirkwood released his grip on the hand rail and stumbled on the stairs, throwing his antagonist out of balance. The latter plunged downward, dragging Kirkwood with him. Clawing, kicking, grappling, they went to the bottom, jolted violently by each step, but long before the last was reached Kirkwood's throat was free.

Throwing himself off, he got to his feet and grasped the railing for support, then waited, panting, trying to get his bearings. Himself painfully shaken and bruised, he shrewdly surmised that his assailant had fared as ill, if not worse. And, in point of fact, the man lay with neither move nor moan, still as death, at the American's feet.

And once more silence had folded its wings over No. 9 Frognall street.

More conscious of that terrifying, motionless presence beneath him than able to distinguish it by power of vision, he endured interminable minutes of trembling horror, in a witless daze, before he thought of his matchbox. Immediately he found it and struck a light. As the wood caught and the bright small flame leaped in the pent air he leaned forward over the body, breathlessly dreading what he must discover.

The man lay quiet, head upon the floor, legs and hips on the stairs. One arm had fallen over his face, hiding the upper half. The hand gleamed white and delicate as a woman's. His chin was smooth and round, his lips thin and petulant. Beneath his topcoat evening dress clothed a short and slender figure. Nothing whatever of his appearance suggested the burly ruffian, the midnight marauder. He seemed little more than a boy old enough to dress for dinner. In his attitude there was something pitifully suggestive of a beaten child thrown into a corner.

HOTELMAN EJECTED MAN FROM DANCE AND LAW SUIT IS RESULT

Toronto, Nov. 3.—Mr. Percy Semon, described as a composer and as a commission agent for the sale of pianos, is suing Mr. William Young, of the Windsor Hotel, Mimico, for $2,000 damages for assault.

According to the statements made by plaintiff on his examination for discovery, he attended a dance on March 11 last at the Mimico hotel, when he was forcibly ejected by defendant.

Mr. Young, in his pleadings, says that plaintiff was a trespasser in the private portion of the hotel, and when he refused to go away after Mr. Young had requested him, owing to complaints as to his conduct, Mr. Young "jerked him downstairs."

On his examination for discovery Mr. Young said that he had been told that Mr. Semon was altogether too fresh with two ladies and insisted on sitting with his arm around their waists, and had also tried to make appointments with them.

Mr. Semon denies the allegations of undue familiarity and asserts he was invited in the same manner as many of the guests. As to seeking to make appointments, he explains that the only incident giving color to the story was the request of a lady guest, who had been fascinated by his playing, to call at her home the following week to play on her piano. He consented, and she wrote her address on a piece of paper, which she gave him.

Mr. Young admitted that the ladies had made no complaints about Mr. Semon's behavior, though the husbands had. He, however, refused to say on whose complaint he had ejected Mr. Semon or to answer questions tending to show that he was doing a thriving business in supplying refreshments after hours.

Plaintiff applied to the Master in Chambers for an order compelling defendant to answer, but the Master dismissed the application yesterday holding that he was not obliged to disclose his witnesses nor to answer questions that might be prejudicial to his business.

Mr. Semon is known to many Peterborough people, having visited here on several occasions.

UNIQUE SITUATION IN CONNECTION WITH BUILDING OF THE KIPPEWA DAM

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 3.—A somewhat unusual situation has developed in connection with the letting of a contract for the building of the Kippewa dam. This is part of the Government's great scheme to conserve the waters of the upper Ottawa. It is understood that when the tenders for the dam were received from some half dozen contracting firms, it was discovered that that of Morrow and Beattie, of Peterborough, was the lowest. The figure was $28,210. So close was the competition for the work that $7,000 covered all the tenders. Acting upon this, and before the contract had been awarded Messrs. Morrow and Beattie began operations on the Kippewa river so as to get as much as possible done before winter. They did not even have assurance that they had got the contract until someone visiting in this city—it is understood Mr. Morrow—was given a promise. There is thus the rather unique situation of a firm beginning a job for which it tendered, but which the contract had not been formally let for.

LEFEVRE-TATE NUPTIALS

Special to Review.

Lakefield, Nov. 3. — The marriage took place to-day at the Church of St. John the Baptist, Lakefield, of Gwyneth Tate, only daughter of Mrs. F. J. Tate, "Harborne," Lakefield, to Alfred Tully Lefevre, of Buenos Ayres, S. A., only son of the late Mr. H. J. Lefevre of Lakefield.

The ceremony was performed at two o'clock in the presence of over two hundred guests, many of them from Peterborough and other outside points. Rev. W. J. Creighton, B.A., of St. Stephen's church, Toronto, officiated, assisted by Rev. F. J. Sawers, incumbent of Lakefield. The church was beautifully decorated. The bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. E.R. Tate, while Mendelssohn's wedding march was being played. She was attended by three bridesmaids, Miss Adelaide Montizambert, Brantford, Miss Yvonne Nordheimer, Toronto, and Miss Tate, Toronto, a cousin of the bride. The groomsman was Mr. Harold Morrow, of Peterborough.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Lefevre were showered with congratulations.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON TWO CHARGES OF THEFT

Young Man Who is Accused of Stealing Articles From National Hotel at the Time of Fire, Before Magistrate Dumble. The Evidence Given in Court.

Jesse Airriess, the young man who was arrested on the night of the fire at the National Hotel, charged with the theft of several articles from the hotel, was this morning committed for trial by Magistrate Dumble. Two charges were preferred against the prisoner, one for the theft of a gold watch and spectacles and the other for the stealing of a gold carbuncle ring.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams conducted the case in the interests of the accused and declined to elect.

Crown Attorney R. E. Wood prosecuted.

It is the intention of Mr. McWilliams to waive the right of trial by jury, and asked for a speedy hearing by Judge Huycke.

The charge of stealing the watch and spectacles was proceeded with first.

THE EVIDENCE

Mr. Pousette said he occupied room 21 in the National Hotel. When the fire broke out the room was unoccupied. Mrs. Pousette and he were standing on Charlotte street immediately opposite their room. He noticed the lights were suddenly turned on, and the figure of some person could be distinguished. He went into the hotel and entered the room, and found the door opened. The latch of the lock on the door had been broken. The smoke was very dense. An investigation showed evidences of somebody having recently been in the room. Before entering the hotel Mrs. Pousette had said that she left her watch and glasses in the room. Neither of these were found by him. About eight o'clock the room was thoroughly searched, but the articles could not be found. Later the chief of police was notified.

To Mr. McWilliams—The figure in the room was that of a man, but I couldn't say who he was. P. C. Newhall came up to the room later on in the night and while talking to Mrs. Pousette and myself Airriess knocked at the door and said, "Mr. Pousette, I have come to give you your watch.' And this he did.

P. C. Newhall stated that he learned that different things had been missed from the hotel. One of the lady employees gave him a description of a man, whom she had seen with a watch. The description had led him to believe it was Airriess, as he had noticed him about the premises during the fire. While talking with Mr. and Mrs. Pousette in their room he heard some one coming along the corridor. The prisoner knocked at the door and entered. He said, "You have lost something to-night,' and at the same time took his hand from his left hand pocket. He (Newhall) stepped out from his place of concealment and said, "I have been looking for you for quite a while to-night. Where is the watch and spectacles?' Airriess said "I have come to give it back to Mr. Pousette.' Witness replied "You have had plenty of time to do this before.' Airriess replied, "I didn't see him. I only saw P. C. Meaher upstairs in the hall.' The arrest then followed. At the police station prisoner said he had no other articles on him, but on searching him, a metal badge and a gold carbuncle ring was found. Mr. Clark, acting Postmaster, had later identified the ring as his property.

To Mr. McWilliams—"I did not know that Airriess had been employed by several people, residing at the hotel to bring some of their belongings out of the hotel.'

Mr. McWilliams submitted that there was no evidence to warrant the prisoner being sent up for trial, but the magistrate differed in his opinion and he committed Airriess on the charge.

SECOND CHARGE

The evidence in the second charge, that of stealing a gold carbuncle ring was next heard.

Mr. Gordon H. Clark said he occupied room 55 at the National hotel, had watched the fire. He decided to go to his room to save some of his property. On going around to the rear he found a ladder had been placed in position leading up to a room south of the one occupied by him. When he first went around his room was in darkness and the windows closed. After going around to the front of the hotel and returning to the rear, he found a man looking out of his window. On going up the ladder and entering the building and then walking down the corridor to his room, he found the door had been broken open. On turning on the light, he observed that his ring had been taken. He also missed his watch and some other jewellery.

P. C. Newhall testified to having recovered the ring on the prisoner at the police station.

Charles Walsh, an employee of the hotel, gave evidence to the effect that he saw Airriess in the hotel during the night of the fire. He was acting for some of the guests who wished to secure some of their property.

The Tom Marks Company appear at the Grand Opera House all next week.

EARLY SAVINGS BANKS

First Modern One Was Opened in Scotland in 1810.

STARTED BY HENRY DUNCAN.

He Was a Presbyterian Clergyman and Was a Friend of Thomas Carlyle and of the Celebrated Dr. Chalmers—The Rapid Spread of the System.

The first savings bank to accept deposits in small amounts and to pay cumulative interest was opened in Scotland in May, 1810. Several institutions for savings existed in foreign countries prior to 1810, but there was nothing in any respect like the modern savings bank. England, for example, early witnessed the appearance of numerous small charitable associations and institutions which undertook to invest the savings of their members.

The first modern savings bank, however, was originated by Henry Duncan, a Presbyterian clergyman of Dumfries, Scotland, a friend of Thomas Carlyle and of the celebrated Dr. Chalmers, who throughout his active life was interested in various schemes of practical benevolence. In 1810, after he had already set forth his views on the subject in the Dumfries Courier, he established the Ruthwell Savings bank. His purpose, as expressed in a memoir published by his son in 1888, was to induce the mass of people of his time to realise the value of the little savings which by economy could be put away.

The Dumfries community of lowland Scotch was a good one in which to start such a scheme. During the first year savings to the amount of £150 were deposited in the Ruthwell Savings bank and in the next two years £171 and £241, respectively. By 1814 the deposits amounted to £922.

As the success of Mr. Duncan's scheme became known similar institutions were organized elsewhere in Scotland and England. One of the earliest was the Edinburgh Savings bank, still a thriving institution.

The Ruthwell bank had some peculiarities which distinguished it from the institutions that were developed later. There was an annuity fund, for instance. Most remarkable of all, before anybody's first deposit was received inquiries had to be made as to his age, family affairs and previous moral conduct. According to what was discovered the management decided, first, whether his deposit should be accepted and, second, what rate of interest should be allowed him.

The Ruthwell bank's funds were placed with the British Linen company, which allowed 5 per cent interest on them. Most of the depositors received 4 per cent, but to those of three years' standing whose deposits amounted to £5 or more 5 per cent was allowed, provided the depositor wanted to get married or that he was fifty-six years old or that in other respects it would be especially advantageous for him to receive more interest. The first savings bank was under no obligation to allow depositors to withdraw funds when they wanted. There was a provision that "when the depositor shall have become incapable of maintaining himself from sickness or otherwise a weekly allowance may be made to him at the option of the court of directors out of the money he has deposited."

The Edinburgh Savings bank was much simpler in its organization than the Ruthwell and more closely resembled the savings banks of the present day. Each depositor received the same rate of interest. There was no preliminary investigation of his character, and he could withdraw his deposits at pleasure. The rate of interest was uniformly 4 per cent.

Widespread interest was aroused in the early experiments in Great Britain. Farseeing people realized that the new institutions were destined to add largely to general prosperity and happiness. This opinion was eloquently voiced by the great Scotch critic Francis Jeffrey, who, writing in the Edinburgh Review, said: "It would be difficult, we fear, to convince either the people or their rulers that the spread of savings banks is of far more importance and far more likely to increase the happiness and even the greatness of the nation than the most brilliant success of its arms or the most stupendous improvement of its trade and its agriculture. And yet we are persuaded that it is so."

Laws safeguarding savings banks were passed as these institutions began to show vitality and clearly needed regulation. Trustees and managers were early prohibited from making any profit in connection with these banks.

The English savings bank movement rapidly spread throughout the continent, France, Germany, Denmark and Italy successively taking up the idea. Everywhere with modifications proper to the nationality it has proved successful.

The first American savings bank was opened in Philadelphia in 1816 and was called the Philadelphia Saving Fund society. The same year one was established in Boston, New York following in 1819, and in 1820 there were ten in the country, having 8,635 depositors and $1,138,570 in deposits.—Boston Globe.

A TENNYSON STORY.

The Poet's Mistake and the Way He Tendered an Apology.

England's great poet Tennyson was a somewhat gruff and formidable man, whose manner with curious strangers was by no means gentle and pleasant.

Once a young woman who had been just introduced to the great man at Freshwater was left alone with him on the seashore. She stood in immense awe of the poet and therefore did not interrupt him as he sat speechless, gazing straight ahead of him at the sea.

The long silence was broken at last in an astonishing manner by Tennyson. He was going to open his lips and utter some lovely thought, the young woman imagined. Instead he opened them and in gruff and gloomy tones gave voice to this remark:

"You creak."

The girl started back in horror.

Tennyson added an explanation:

"You creak. Your stays creak."

This so startled the young woman that she ran away and went indoors, where a large company, she found, was gathered together over tea. In a little time Tennyson appeared, a vague expression on his countenance, as though something had gone wrong with him. The girl, now accounting him possibly mad and certainly impolite, tried hard to hide away from him.

In vain. His eagle eye found her out. He threaded his way among the other guests toward her, took her hand and said in resonant tones before the whole company of them:

"My dear, I beg your pardon. I find it was my braces."

Three Great Books.

Pride goeth before a fall, according to the proverb, but it often happens that the fall does not take place as expected by the cynical observer. Mrs. Benedict, for example, was very proud of her daughter's attainments at school. Mrs. Benedict herself had had little schooling, but attempted to make up for it by retailing Margaret's triumphs to her friends.

One day the minister's wife was calling.

"Yes, ma'am," Mrs. Benedict said in reply to a question; "Margaret is way up in all her classes, I can tell you. They've been reading Shakespeare's plays latterly, and Maggie's buying that little edition one by one so she can have it at home. She keeps them up in her room.

"Let me see; she's read 'Hamlet' and—there was two more—oh, yes, one of 'em was 'Romeo' and the other 'Juliet.'

"I enjoy hearing her do them out loud, Mrs. Bradley."—Youth's Companion.

MR. G. A. GILLESPIE DIRECTOR FOR PETERBORO DISTRICT

On Eastern Ontairo Dairymen's Association Board—Dairy Instructor Ward for This District Presented Annual Report.

Mr Gillespie was in the chair at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Country branch of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association in the Council Chamber this afternoon, and said the season just closed had been a good one. There were weak points in the making, but he hoped it would be improved next year.

Mr Ward, dairy instructor for the district, presented the report of the season's work. Marked improvements in the dairy and cheese industry in the district had been made. The instructor had been given the assistance and co-operation of the people of the district. This year Mr. Ward had 26 cheese factories and creameries under his charge, and the quality of the milk had been the best of any season.

"The patrons are making more improvements on the whole than we are," said Mr. Wood, "and we cannot sit down and rest on past laurels."

Mr. Ward gave some timely and valuable advice to both patrons and makers on the care and handling of milk.

With silos and alfalfa hay the cost of feeding should be materially decreased. The speaker advised making use of the cow testing facilities placed at the disposal of the people. The factories in this district, said Mr. Ward, were clean and well managed. The make and the quality of the cheese for the season has been very satisfactory. The speaker said he had a few makers, but very few, who were doing their patrons harm by the indiscriminate use of sour milk. He hoped to see the cheese industry next year in the exalted position it deserved in agriculture.

The appointment took place of Mr. Gillespie as director for the district in connection with the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association.

Mr. Henry Glendenning, vice-president of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, then commenced his address.

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education:

Gentlemen,—Your Committee on Appointments beg leave to report and recommend as follows;—

As authorized, your committee advertised for a male teacher to fill the vacancy on the Collegiate Institute staff, but do not consider the applicants sufficiently well qualified, and recommend that the Board advertise for a Specialist to teach English and History with the Classical Option, at the minimum salary of $1,400.00, and would ask that your committee be authorized to make such appointment.

For the position on the Kindergarten staff, rendered vacant by the resignation of Miss Cameron, your committee, after careful consideration, recommend that Miss W. Rankin, of Stratford, be appointed at a minimum salary of $400, duties to commence Nov. 1st, 1909.

Your committee recommend that Miss May Denne's request for leave of absence until the Xmas vacation be granted, and that Miss A. M. Hall be appointed temporarily to fill the position, salary to be at the rate of $30 per month.

Respectfully submitted.

11½ CENTS AT THE FINAL MEETING

All the Cheese Went at This Figure—Buyer Morton was Biggest Purchaser—The Conclusion of the Cheese Board's Current Year.

After a most prosperous year the season of the Peterborough Cheese Board closed this morning with a good attendance and a satisfactory boarding of cheese. Eleven and a half cents was the one price at which any selling was done, Mr. W. H. Cook and Mr. Morton clearing up everything at this figure, with the exception of Stoney Lake, which went to Mr. Fitzgerald at the same figure.

At the opening of the meeting Mr. W. H. Cook started a discussion by saying he thought a lot of factory men should be fined for selling off the Board without the Board's consent. He thought a considerable amount in fines could be collected right at the meeting and suggested that violators of the rules should be fined $10 each. Vice-President Switzer, who was in the chair thought the buyers should be fined instead for buying the cheese in a manner not approved of by the Board. Nothing was done in the matter.

THE BIDDING.

Mr. Gillespie offered 11 7-16 cts. It had been usual, it was stated, to give a pound off a box at the final meeting. Mr. Hawthorne read the motion covering the matter last year. The motion will go into effect this year.

Mr. Cook offered 11 1-2 cts. Mr. Cook named Westwood, Villiers. Both refused. Fraserville, Indian River, Cavanville, Warsaw, Oakdale, all accepted. He offered 7-16 for further. Mr. Morton went to 1-2 and named Lang, Westwood, Villiers, Keene, Warminster, Shamrock, North Dummer, Central Smith, Selwyn. Lakefield, Pine Grove, Maple Leaf, Myrtle, Trewern, Cedardale, Bensfort. All accepted. Fleetwood refused. Young's Point accepted. Mr. Morton wanted Stoney Lake, Montreal inspection. Factory inspection was asked for, but Mr. Morton didn't take it. Mr. Fitzgerald at 11 1-2 took Stoney Lake.

Mr. Switzer remarked on the meeting being the last one of the year. He hoped there would be a good representation of buyers at the annual meetings of the factories.

Motions were passed thanking the Bank of Montreal for the use of the Board room for the year and the press for the publicity given the meetings. The matter of remunerating the press and also the janitor, who looked after the room, was left in the hands of the executive with the recommendation that they should be as liberal as conditions would allow.

ATROCIOUS CRIME OF A FARM HAND

Hungarian Laborer, Named John Mesci, Kills His Employer, Geo. Thoburn, of Quill Lake, Mrs. Thoburn and Her Mother, Mrs. McNiven.

Quill Lake, Sask., Nov. 4.—One of the most atrocious tragedies in the history of western Canada was perpetrated here, probably on Sunday, when the happy little family of a homesteader named George Thoburn was almost wiped out by a Hungarian farm-laborer named John Mesci.

George Thoburn, his wife, and mother-in-law, Mrs. McNiven, were murdered in a most brutal manner. A little boy, aged four, was also attacked and left for dead, having been rendered unconscious by a blow on the head from a club, while his little sister escaped by hiding in the oven of a stove.

Just what the incentive for the terrible crime was has not as yet been learned, but it is known that Mesci was a sullen and dangerous-tempered young man of 23 years, who had before manifested murderous tendencies. Only a few days ago he chased Thoburn with a pitchfork when his employer disagreed with him.

After committing his gruesome crime Mesci stole the horses and left, in an attempt to make his way to Regina, where his home is. His trail was easily followed, as he had coolly stopped at several houses along the way to obtain meals and feed the horses, and he was arrested early yesterday evening beyond Wynyard, by the police, after a short and swift chase.

The crime was discovered almost by accident Tuesday afternoon when a neighboring homesteader named Dixon, who was passing, was attracted by the absence of any signs of life around Thoburn's home, and upon hearing the cattle roaring for want of attention, he went to investigate, and was horrified by the ghastly sights which met his eyes. He entered the house and was at once attracted by the fretful wail of a little child in the cellar, and, upon opening the door to go to its relief, was confronted with the corpse of Thoburn on the stairway, down which he had fallen head-first when death overtook him. He had been dead about 48 hours, it is believed, and had been shot through the body at close range with a gun, the whole charge having struck him in the back just below the left shoulder, and passed through the lungs.

Proceeding into the cellar and opening the inner door, Mr. Dixon found a little boy there in a dazed condition from a blow on the head which Mesci had dealt him. The little chap informed Mr. Dixon that "John had shot papa," and afterwards struck him just before he went to sleep.

Upstairs Mr. Dixon found a little baby girl hiding in the oven and weeping for her mother, whom she said Mesci had thrown into a hole outside, meaning the well, which is about fifteen feet deep. Horrified by his distressing discovery, Mr. Dixon alarmed the neighbors and word was at once sent to the Mounted Police at Humboldt, while a search was instituted for the bodies of the murdered women and a body of officers also took the trail of the murderer. The alarm reached here, and every person almost promptly went to give assistance in running down the fugitive.

Yesterday searchers found the body of Mrs. Thoburn in the well, where the baby had said it was thrown, while the remains of Mrs. McNiven were found, fully dressed with her throat cut, in a bluff about a quarter of a mile away. How they came to be there is not yet fully explained, but it is surmised that when Mesci began his murderous work she fled from the house, and was pursued and killed.

Mesci explained the occurrence as follows: "I wished to go to town on Monday morning to enter for a homestead. Mr. Thoburn objected. I went and got a gun and shot Thoburn twice. Then he ran inside and the women came out and started to run for Mr. J. Morley's, a neighbor. I came on Mrs. McNiven first, hit her with the gun, knocked her down, and cut her throat." He then proceeded to hunt for Mrs. Thoburn, who got into a small bluff to hide. He found her, knocked her down, cut her throat, and sat on her body until life was gone.

Ritchie, offered to accept one of the directors, J. Reid Wilson, instead, but the defence did not agree.

M. R. Morrow testified that the copies of letters for himself to Mr. Dick and to the coal company in general had been sent to Montreal before the subpoena was served. It had been intended that the letters from Mr. Dick to him should be sent, too.

WAS LOST IN THE WILDS

News Brought in of the Death of a Young American Trapper.

Ottawa, Nov. 4.—A thrilling story of the western wilds is told by D. W. Dowling, of the Geological Survey, who has just returned from the country west of Edmonton.

A young American named Alva Anderson, from Michigan, went into the country in 1908 to spend the winter trapping. He got an old trapper to lead him into the interior, parting when he had reached "Prairie Camp," on North Brazeau River, 300 miles from Edmonton.

Anderson was not heard of after that, and a brother, Clyde Anderson, of Nelig, Nebraska, came into Canada this spring to look for him. He got away off in the mountains at the foot of the Rockies, and he would never have got to where his brother was supposed to have spent the winter but for a party of tourists. He journeyed with Mr. Dowling for several days until "Prairie Camp" was reached. Here they found a rude shack, made of slabs of wood and branches of trees, woven together into the semblance of a hut.

"When we got inside," says Mr. Dowling, "here's what we find—a revolver, which had been left behind by the poor fellow, an old pail with some flour at the bottom of it, the remains of a fire, some burned rags, and, most important of all, a slab of wood, on which had been written with the lead of a bullet this message: January 10, 1909:

"I have had a fire here and have burned all my clothes and food. I am starting to walk to Edmonton.
(Signed) "Alva Anderson."

"We followed the trail for a considerable distance, but never found any trace, and there is no doubt that he is dead."

TO LOOK INTO DISAPPEARANCE

Brockville, Nov. 4.—A Thiel detective from Montreal is here trying to solve the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Burton Rapley, the Montreal commercial traveler who has not been heard of since Oct. 19, when he left the Campbell House, Napanee. The sleuths followed a trace of Rapley in Brockville on Thursday, Oct. 14, when he came here from Smith's Falls. There was nothing in his demeanor to indicate anything wrong.

The detective says Rapley was straight in his accounts and that he had a deposit of $7,000 in a Montreal bank. A reward of $500 is offered for information.

Pietermaritzburg, Nov. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Col. Greene, Natal's delegate, speaking on behalf of the Government, deprecated the desire for publicity of the proceedings at the defence conference. He declared South Africa's contribution to the navy inadequate. The motion for publication was withdrawn.

FIFTEEN YEARS FOR AN ITALIAN

Parry Sound, Nov. 4.—Nicola Aiello, an Italian, was yesterday sentenced to fifteen years in penitentiary by Justice Magee for attempted murder.

Aiello, last summer, had attached himself to a boarding-car occupied by some Bulgarian railway navvies and had borrowed $25 from one of them. Den Demoff. He learned that Demoff had $260 in a belt that he always wore and one day waylaid Demoff, who was acting as nightwatchman at a lonely spot along the line, and fired at him with a gun. Demoff was struck in the head, but not seriously hurt. He recognized his assailant and shouted at him, and Aiello ran off. He was arrested at Depot Harbor.

ON TRIAL IN PARIS

Famous Case of Mme. Steinheil Causes Excitement—Murder is Charge.

Paris, Nov. 4. Not since 1902 when Frederic and Therese Humbert were convicted of a $12,000,000 swindle has a trial in Paris excited the intense interest exhibited in the case of Madame Adolphe Steinheil, which was opened before Judge Devalles in the Seine Assize Court yesterday.

Mme. Steinheil is on trial for her life charged with the murder of her husband and her stepmother, Mme. Japy. They were strangled. The alleged motive is found in the defendant's hatred for her stepmother and a desire to rid herself of the husband in order that she might marry Maurice Borderel, a wealthy merchant. The talents and attractiveness of the woman, combined with the mystery of her career and her connections with persons high in the public life of France, have led the public to believe that startling disclosures are imminent.

MME. STEINHEIL.

Judge Devalles has received 25,000 applications for seats in the courtroom, but refused all with the exception of those made for members of the press, the Bar and others directly concerned with the trial. The first 100 persons who stood in line outside yesterday morning were also admitted. Places of vantage in this line commanded as high as $200.

Most of yesterday's session was occupied with the selection of a jury.

A SENSATION.

(Special to the Review.)

Paris, Nov. 4.—Receiving permission to make a statement to the court in the trial of Mme. Marguerite Steinheil for the murder of her husband, Adolphe Steinheil, and Mme. Jappy to-day, Jean Lefevvre astounded the judges and threw the court into a scene of wild confusion by calmly stating he had planned and executed the murders, and that Mme. Steinheil was innocent.

ROOSEVELT HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Nairobi, British East Africa, Nov. 3.—Mr. Croswell, a government engineer in the Public Works Department at Nyeri, came into Nairobi and brought word that Mr. Roosevelt had a very narrow escape when shooting his first elephant bull. (When shooting elephants it is often necessary to creep into the herd and shoot the selected bull at a range of fifteen to thirty yards.

Mr. Roosevelt, accompanied by Mr. Cunninghame, the big game hunter and guide, followed this procedure and killed his elephant at the second shot. Suddenly, before Mr. Roosevelt could reload, another elephant bull charged him at close range from the herd. Both Mr. Cunninghame and Mr. Roosevelt got behind trees and Mr. Cunninghame turned the bull from Mr. Roosevelt just in time.

R. J. CUNNINGHAME.

Other reliable sources confirm the account of Mr. Roosevelt's narrow escape.

NEW CHURCH IS INAUGURATED

Brampton, Nov. 4.—Rev. Father Williams of Toronto laid the corner-stone of the new Roman Catholic Church here yesterday afternoon. The sermon was preached by Rev. Father Canning of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Toronto, the services being conducted by Rev. Father Hand. There were several clergy present in addition to Father Egan, the parish priest, through whose energetic efforts the new building was commenced. The old church has been torn down, the new one being erected on the same site. It will be ready by Christmas.

EFFIGY OF BLYTHE ON THE STREET

Toronto, Nov. 4.—A gruesome evidence of the sentiment of the citizens of Agincourt with regard to the outcome of the two trials of Walter Blythe, now serving 18 years in Kingston Penitentiary for beating his wife to death in the little village, swings from a telegraph pole at the corner of the public highway just to the south of Knox Church, in the very heart of the village.

There is an image said to bear the inscription "Murderer Blythe." The ghastly figures is suspended at the end of some ten feet of rope and swings about fifteen feet from the ground. It was strung secretly during the darkness of Monday night and early drivers on the road saw it there just as the day was breaking Tuesday morning.

No move has been made to remove the lay figure. While it is regarded generally as the Hallowe'en trick of boys, the comment made upon its presence is, to say the least, not adverse.

BOAT JARRED BY DYNAMITE

Windsor, Nov. 4.—Five men were injured in a dynamite explosion that shook Amherstburg and vicinity as if by an earthquake. The explosion occurred off Bois Island just as the big steel drill boat Destroyer was passing. The boat was badly damaged, while Charles Borgineau got a compound fracture of the left arm, and Henry Brush, Bud Bellecoure, Eli Mero and Henry Deneau were less seriously injured. All the victims live in Amherstburg.

The boat started to leak after the explosion, but signals brought assistance and tugs reached the boat in time to save her. Expert drill men are at a loss to understand how the boat escaped complete destruction.

The explosion is believed to have been caused by several blasts which were placed in the channel bottom some time ago and forgotten.

DOMINION DISBURSEMENTS FOR YEAR ENDING MARCH 31

Totalled $133,541,524—Receipts in Dominion Treasury Were $55,903,404 During the Year and Deficiency is $45,969,418.

Ottawa, Nov. 4.—The public accounts for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1909, were made public yesterday. They show total disbursements amounting to $133,441,524 divided as follows:

Consolidated fund expenditure $84,064,232.

Capital expenditure $42,593,166.

Railway subsidies $1,785,887.

Other charges, including bounties $4,998,237.

The receipts were $85,093,040, so that there was a bookkeeping surplus on current account of $1,029,171, and a deficiency on disbursements of $45,969,418.

The net debt of the Dominion at the close of the fiscal year was $323,930,279, or an increase of $45,969,419 over the figures of March 31, 1908.

The principal items accounting for this increase are:

National Transcontinental Railway $24,892,351.

Other railways, canals and public works $15,659,997.

Railway subsidies $1,785,887.

Bounties $2,?47,306.

A considerable portion of the introductory report is taken up with details of the loans which the Government found itself obliged to contract during the year. The list is as follows:

3 3-4 per cent. loan of 1908, maturing 1912, £5,000,000.

3 1-2 per cent. loan of 1930, maturing 1950, £5,000,000.

3 3-4 loan, maturing 1914 £6,000,000.

3 1-2 per cent. loan of 1930 maturing 1950 £6,500,000.

In all, since 1903, there have been placed on the London market new issues amounting to £31,331,298. In addition certain other obligations have been assumed which bring the total up to $34,492,851. During the same period loans amounting to £24,169,790 have matured, leaving a net increase in the debt of £10,323,060. During the fiscal year one loan of $21,900,000 matured, over $9,000,000 of it being defrayed by new issues.

A number of miscellaneous transactions are noted. The guarantee of G.T.P. bonds now amounts to £5,200,000; of this sum £2,000,000 were issued in Oct. 1909.

The Montreal Harbor Commissioners obtained in the course of the year paid an advance of $1,030,000, while the Quebec Harbor Commissioners are paid an advance of $87,254.

In September 1908, capitalized railway subsidies amounting to the sum of $2,394,000 were paid over to the Province of Quebec. This was the outcome of an old agreement and interest had been paid on the sum for some years. In December, 1908, the Government took over the Quebec Bridge & Railway Co. incurring a liability of $6,424,781, which becomes an addition to the debt of Canada.

CASE AGAINST MRS. RUMBLE

Chatham, Nov. 4.—Mrs. Mary Rumble, the woman who is charged with dynamiting her husband's house in Harwich, came up for preliminary hearing in the Police Court yesterday morning before W. G. Merritt.

Aylesworth Cole, a C. W. and L. E. conductor; Peter Bellaire and Mrs. Rose Boillargeon testified that they had seen the prisoner on the morning after the explosion at the third concession, Chatham Township. She took the car there and went to Wallaceburg. Marsdon Whiteley, a Pere Marquette conductor, testified that on the morning before the explosion Mrs. Rumble had caught the train at Sarnia for Chatham. She appeared to be nervous, and acted queerly. She carried two parcels, and the witness identified the paper which was found at the Rumble home after the explosion as the paper which covered the parcels which the prisoner carried on that morning.

The case was then enlarged for a week.

The name given is that of a Government official in a western Ontario town.

TRIUMPH FOR THE SUFFRAGISTS

New York, Nov. 4.—As one of the few important official acts which fall to Mayor George B. McClellan, before his six years administration closes on Dec. 31, he appointed yesterday three women to the board of education, and therefore, conceded one of the principal demands of woman suffrage organizations.

It is the first time in more than a quarter century that women have gained representation on the board of education. In 1881 Mayor William R. Grace, first recognized two members. Mayor McClellan went one better than precedent and named three women, each of whom represent a different religious faith. Mrs. Herbert D. Robbins, Miss Olivia Leventritt, daughter of State Supreme Court Justice Leventritt, both of New York City; and Mrs. Alfred S. Post, of Flushing, L. I.

THE KAISER AS STAGE DIRECTOR

Berlin, Nov. 4.—The production of Ernst von Wildenbruch's posthumous play, "Der Deutsche Koenig," which met with the greatest success upon the first performance at the Royal Theatre Tuesday night, was carefully superintended by Emperor William, who had a deep admiration for the poet and dramatist. During the dress rehearsal on Monday the Emperor suggested the elimination of what appeared as an objectionable incident, and which had no bearing on the plot. Frau Wildenbruch consented, but when the Emperor suggested another modification, she replied that her husband had attached particular importance to the passage in question.

"In that case," said His Majesty, "it shall stand as a matter of course."

DEPORTATION DECIDED ON IN CASE OF WATTERS

It's back to the city of frogs for Henry Watters, at present a lodger in the county gaol. A short time ago Watters was given an additional month by the police magistrate, as arrangements for his deportation to England had not been completed. Relief Officer Miller has received word that deportation has been decided on by the government, and Henry will receive a free passage across the pond as he has only been a bill of expense since he landed here. He has always shown great displeasure at the mention of doing any sort of work to gain his livelihood, and as he is not afflicted in any way which would excuse him his name will be stricken off the list of regulars at Castle Nesbitt.

Other matters in connection with the relief department of the city are quiet at the present time. There is lots of work to be had, and apparently the class of people with whom the department has to deal are making hay while the sun shines. Still there are many wanderers, who, while passing through the city, call on the relief officer and tell their stories, and in the majority of cases leave again wiser, but none the better off in worldly possessions.

The coming winter promises to be an easy one for the relief department and it will no doubt be appreciated, as the demands during the past two years have been very heavy.

A CHORAL ORGANIZATION OF UNUSUAL CHARM AND ABILITY

In the Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir, which appeared at the Conservatory Music Hall last night, Madam Hughes-Thomas has gathered about her a party of sweet singers which is the equal of any choir heard in Peterborough, and which in one evening entwined themselves so deeply about the hearts of the select audience of music-lovers which attended last evening's presentation that they have nothing but the most enthusiastic praise for the wonderful work of the choir.

The choir consists of some twenty young ladies, who, under the direction of Madam Hughes-Thomas, are making a tour through Canada and the United States. Before they return to the Old Country they will have touched at most of the largest centres in the Dominion. Last night, dressed in their native Welsh costumes, they presented a most picturesque appearance, and as the curtain rose and they were seen seated in front of the expectant audience they received an ovation which was repeated with renewed effect at the conclusion of each of the numbers of the programme.

Perhaps that which, next to the singing of the choir itself, attracts the attention of the audience is the wonderful control which the director, Madam Hughes-Thomas, exercises over the singers. With the young ladies gathered about her in a crescent she leads and directs, and not for a moment during the rendering of any of the many numbers of the programme do the members of the choir allow their attention to be taken from their capable leader. Thus the utmost harmony is obtained and that body of twenty sing as one.

The choir did beautiful and effective chorus work, and the soloists are highly trained and [illegible] factory artists, with [illegible] quality and most [illegible]

A STRANGE CASE

Mrs. Mallette was the wife of John Mallette, who lived in a French-Canadian village. Mallette earned but small pay. His wife fell ill. Mr. and Mrs. Seguin were well off. They lived happily next door. Mrs. Seguin devoted herself to Mrs. Mallette, and when the latter died after a lingering illness leaving a number of small children, Mrs. Seguin felt the tragedy of life to have been so pitiful, and her own affection for the simple, hardworking dead woman had been so constant and strong that she committed suicide. She returned home from the dead body of her friend, broke open her husband's heavily built and strongly-locked trunk, took out a strong box and broke it open also, although she herself was a woman of delicate frame. She took her from it husband's revolver and shot herself. The cruelty of fate to her friend Mrs. Mallette was too much for her. She did not wish longer to partake of life, of a life so full of heartlessness and misfortune. The consolations of religion she regarded as unsubstantial, while the tortures were all too real.

It is a pity that so much tenderness and heart-soul should have found no consolation, no appeasement for the heart-break. It is a phase of feeling not often met with and might have formed the basis of a great dramatic representation of love and death embracing.

WHY GERMANY LEADS

When we see how simple it is all done it is a matter of wonder that it has not occurred to other people. As a matter of fact it has occurred to other people, but the impulse to carry out good ideas is not ours. It is a German quality. There are hundreds of things in everyday life that are capable of immense improvement amongst us, but they are slow of improvement. Take, for example, the examination of the pupils of our schools. Is it not a wonder that a skilled physician has not been employed long before this, to cast the eye over the rising generation assembled en masse! Such a daily gathering is an ideal culture-bed for every form of disease, physical and mental.

Then, for years and years it has been notorious that apprentices were only so in name in most of the trades. They were expected to learn by intuition. They were apprenticed to no one. They got instructions from no one. In fact it was impossible for most of them to become skilled mechanics, hence we, mechanically speaking, are, in many departments of industrial life, "away behind." In Munich there is a school for every trade. It is under governmental supervision. The German young man learns how to do things well and when the Canadian youth runs up against him it is a collision of pitiable ignorance and skilled common-sense. The necessity of all these things will be borne in upon us some day, but if we are to keep pace with the Germans that day must arrive before long. Evenly distributed centres of industrial teaching would do more to "protect" Canada and make her a valuable part of the empire than forty baby navies. The baby-navy idea is a senseless idea. It is repugnant to all but those with a certain jingoistic spirit that should have been banished long ago. When we are asked how it is that when Germany is worthy of being followed in one way she is not worthy of being imitated in this also, we reply "So she is." When Germany was young or a congeries of unassembled principalities she had no navy. An important navy she now has, and that is what we stand for. The equipping of Bavaria, Saxony, Prussia, etc., with independent armies and navies would be the last thing Germany would do. It is too ridiculous.

However, let us get back to schools. Scientific training, scientifically administered is the need of the hour. We are "away behind" in very many things. If we run our eyes over the list of what we are "behind" in it will surprise us. We must shake ourselves up a bit. To talk of navies, etc. in the light of the multitude of things we need so much more, is to consecrate ourselves to new labours of Tantalus. In fact, there is apparently something sinister in this sudden desire to inflict a naval establishment upon Canada. But how gratifying would be the news that henceforth our mechanics and workingmen were to be technically taught by the state. What's the good of having a navy to protect when we have nothing worth being protected!

The following extract from the Canadian Courier furnishes an illustration:—

"It is harder than ever to get a good man for any kind of job. The kind wanted are usually filling positions just a little below that for which they are sought. A commercial concern advertised the other day for a responsible man, offering a high salary, and the proprietor said he received four replies, not one of which was from one he would employ. The men he wanted were all engaged. This world is overflowing with those who are just able to do something passably well and the host of mediocrities and incapables are clambering over each other to get into places they cannot fill."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Meetings are being held everywhere, especially by the farmers, to protest against the "Canadian Navy" idea.

Where is the Globe just now on the cement merger question. The "merger" has a duty of 40 per cent. imposed in its favour by the Liberal Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier! But then the Merger will probably come down handsome at election time.

At the great Congress of Catholics held in France to inaugurate the newly-planned struggle with the Government of France, Archbishop Cabrieres, of Montreal, declared:

"We must become political as well as religious chiefs, as are the bishops of other countries."

We owe the Sentinel an apology. For several weeks we have been insisting that the King's cablegram to the Plenary Council be published for the benefit of its readers. This week we found, to our surprise, that it was included in an article on the Council in the issue of Sept. 23rd. Though we differ with our contemporary in many things we desire to be fair and generous, and consequently take this opportunity of righting an unintentional wrong. We have always felt somehow that the Sentinel's bark was worse than its bite, and we know of many Orangemen who are good neighbours and desirable citizens. Their sympathy for Catholics is reserved for the 12th of July, and their affiliation with the order is mainly for political purposes. The time is coming when the Sentinel and its supporters will go out of this business of baiting Catholics and will realize that the generation now growing up has outlived racial and religious animosities. The Orangeman's world moves slowly, but it does move.

Pius the IX. has in his Syllabus "Nullum Supremum" in the 24th proposition, said: "The Church has the power to use force to compel heretics in order to get them back into the fold." Bishop Stang, late of Fall River, says: "She recognizes herself truth, the church divine depository of the truth is and must be intolerant."

Writers have argued and nations have declared, that Popes have no power to depose kings; but no Pope that I am aware of has accepted such arguments or endorsed such declarations. And therefore I will follow what the Popes have said and done rather than the opinions of (such writers) or the declarations of heretical parliaments."

Pope Leo XIII., in his Encyclical of November, 1885, explains his convictions of what papal rights embrace:

"Over the immense multitude of men, God Himself has set rulers, with power to govern them, and He has willed that ONE SHOULD BE HEAD OF THEM ALL, AND THE CHIEF AND UNERRING TEACHER OF TRUTH, AND TO HIM HE HAS GIVEN THE KEYS OF THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN."

BEGINNING THE DAY'S WORK AT TWO A. M.

It takes all sorts of people to make a nation. Among the curious people we have in Canada are the Trappist Monks, who have three monasteries in the Dominion. For them the day's work begins at 2 a.m. Rising from his straw mattress, laid on the floor in an attic room, the Trappist commences his daily round of duties and of worship long before sunrise. Weird in the extreme is the sight of the monks gliding ghost-like in single file to their chapel, where for hours they engage in prayer. On the seats are placed very fine specimens of books of services, splendidly bound and richly illuminated in colors. The chants also sound weirdly in the still morn, and the effect is accentuated when the monastry bell peals out its rich tones.

But all the time of the Trappist is not given to prayer and meditation, although the greater part of the day is devoted to spiritual things. The Trappist is a farmer as well as a priest, and the Oka farm of 800 acres is one of the best tilled in that part of Canada. All kinds of grain are grown, an excellent vegetable garden is maintained, and a large orchard and vineyard adds picturesqueness to the rural scene. When the hour for farm work comes, the Trappist dons a working gown and, again in single file, march silently to their labor. Some are allotted to the gardens, where one may see them with great industry on their knees, not praying this time, but indulging in the more worldly occupation of weeding the onion bed or hoeing the turnips and carrots. Their agricultural achievements and their peculiar mode of life are described in detail in the November Busy Man's.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 3.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market this morning the offerings were 1300 cattle, 800 sheep, 900 lambs, 800 hogs and 500 calves. On account of the continued liberal supply of cattle coming forward and the unfavorable weather which prevailed, a rather easier feeling developed in the market and prices ruled a trifle lower than on Monday. The gathering of buyers was large, and at the reduction in values the demand was good for top quality stock, but the trade in the lower grades was somewhat slow with the exception of canners, which met with a ready sale at a decline of fully ¼c per pound. The trade on the whole was fair and, considering the heavy runs of late a good clearance was made. Choice steers sold at $5 to $5.15; good, at $4.40 to $4.65; fair, at $3.90 to $4.15; medium at $3.40 to $3.65; cows, $3 to $4.25; bulls, at $2.50 to $3, and canners, at $1.25 to $1.75 per cwt.

There was no change in the condition of the market for sheep and lambs, prices being steady under a good local demand, and as supplies were fairly large an active trade was done. Sheep sold at 3½c, and lambs, at 5½c to 6c per lb. The market for calves was stronger on account of smaller offerings and choice stock sold up as high as $12 to $15 each, while the commoner ones went at from $3 to $10 each. A steady feeling prevailed in the market for hogs and sales of selected lots from west of Toronto were made at $8.75 and a few odd lots of very choice stock brought as high as $9 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

At the Montreal Stock Yards, West Market, the offerings of live stock consisted of 900 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 250 calves. The trade was fairly good in all lines and the prices realized were much the same as those quoted above.

SPORTING NEWS

WILL JACK MILLER PLAY WITH OTTAWA THIS YEAR?

The Ottawa Citizen—Will "Bay" Miller, the fast right wing of the Edmonton hockey team, who created such a favorable impression in the Stanley Cup games against the Wanderers last season, play with Ottawa this year? He will if reports from the west are correct. A despatch from Edmonton yesterday stated that Miller had practically closed with the Ottawas to come here and take Billy Gilmour's place at right wing. The Edmonton club, according to the despatch, is making every effort to retain Miller, but the Ottawa offer and the opportunity of making a name for himself in defending the Stanley Cup looks good to him, and he has, so the story comes from the west, decided to come here.

An officer of the Ottawas when questioned about Miller last night stated that they had been negotiating with Miller, but that nothing had been closed. Yesterday Mr. L. N. Bate, president of the Ottawa team committee, told a Citizen reporter, that a new man—a "real star"—had been practically signed to play in Gilmour's place. He wouldn't say who it was, but gave the Citizen man to understand that the club would be prepared to make an announcement concerning him in a few days. It may be Miller.

Another report to the effect that Jack Marks, the Brockville boy, who was the best right wing man in the Ontario Professional League last year, will be with Ottawa. He is a bosom friend of "Dubbie" Kerr. There may be something in this, too. Marks' name has been mentioned by the Ottawas, but of course nothing has been done as yet. Freddie Lake, Fred Taylor and Marty Walsh will be signed up in a few days, ditto Bruce Stuart. There is a difference in salary between the Ottawas and Stuart, but it will be settled at once.

WOMAN WRESTLER THREW THE JUDGE

Athletic Shoplifter Gives Exhibition of Her Prowess in Court

Paris, Nov. 2.—A young woman wrestler was caught red-handed stealing lace in a large shop in the Boulevard Voltaire. When arrested she fought furiously, but was eventually taken to the police station.

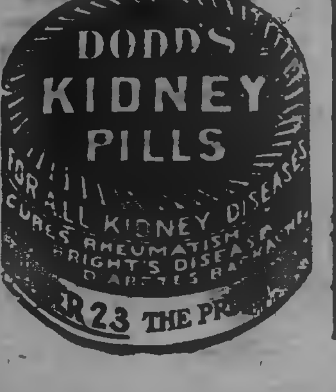
When questioned there she said that her name was Mignonette and that she was a wrestler by profession.

"A wrestler?" exclaimed the police official, M. Truly, incredulously.

"Yes," replied the young woman. "Do you want me to show you how?" and seizing M. Truly around the waist, she lifted him off his feet and deposited him on his back.

In response to the shouts of the terrified official, several policemen rushed into the office. After a desperate struggle the athletic Mignonette was overpowered and led off to the cells.

Will Peterborough be represented in the O.H.A. this season? There is no doubt, that if the proper encouragement is given to the players, of whom there are many in the city worthy to don a uniform and play in fast company, a fast seven could be secured to present the city. If we are to have hockey players of the same calibre as Whitcroft, Howell, Armstrong, Crowley and others who learned the game here and brought honor to Peterborough, it is necessary to give the younger players every advantage possible.



THE OLYMPIC STATEMENT

Final Report of the Honorary Treasurer of Receipts and Expenditures

The sporting editor has received the final report of the honorary treasurer, P. D. Ross, and statement of receipts and expenditures for 1908.

The report is as follows:

To the Members of the General Committee;

Accompanying is the final statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Canadian Olympic Committee, audited by Cunningham & Co., chartered accountants.

Completion of the statement was delayed by the necessity of finding a sale for the racing boats used by the Canadian representatives in the Olympic Regatta at Henley. Those boats were not sold until this summer.

The total receipts were $20,797.84, and the total expenditures $20,757.14, leaving a balance of $40.70. Out of this balance has to be paid the cost of printing and distributing the treasurer's statement. The remainder, if any, the general committee will hand to the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

A brief summary of the number and performances of the Canadian representatives sent to England or aided by the committee's funds may be added. The representatives totalled seventy-nine, as follows, (including in the case of teams the managers and trainers):—Track and field representatives 27; lacrosse men 16; rowing men, 16; trap shooters, 7; cyclists, 5; gymnasts 3; tennis players, 2; golfer, 1; swimmer, 1; fencer, 1; wrestler, 1. Total, 79.

The track representatives won the world's championship, the 200 metre race; one second place, four thirds, and four fourths. They also won several championships of England in preceding games.

The lacrosse team won the world's championship.

The shooting men took second place in the team contest, under adverse circumstances of weather; and two members won first and second places in the individual competition.

Third place in the bantam-weight wrestling was taken by the Canadian competitor.

The cyclists took third place in the bicycle team race.

Publication was intended of the detailed reports of the managers of the various teams, but the funds did not permit.

Respectfully submitted,

P. D. Ross,

Hon. Treasurer.

SPORTING TALK

The walking game is due for a boom by the members of the Young Men's Christian Association and this coming Saturday the school boys and other juniors will have their first jaunt for a distance of ten miles over a course that is being prepared. The seniors will commence at a later date. There are many good walkers at the local institution and the interest all are taking in the matter with the physical director. The first one to do 100 miles will be presented with an emblem to be worn on the sweater or jersey.

"Sam Langford doesn't want to meet me. He is only trying for a little advertising. But if he really posts his forfeit of $10,000 as a side bet, I'll make him come to Chicago to sign articles—and he'll have to let the winner take everything."

This was the statement by Jack Johnson, who is bound for Detroit to fill a theatrical engagement. Johnson explained he was going to fill his engagement at Detroit, but would return here right away in case Langford really means business.

Volley ball, the new game introduced into the Y.M.C.A., is becoming very popular amongst the members.

The race between Percy Sellen and Fred Simpson at the Brock street rink promises to be a big drawing card. The distance is ten miles.

Charles Hahn, a long-distance pedestrian, has started from San Francisco for New York City, taking a southern route. The entire distance to be covered is 7,000 miles, and Hahn, who is under 30 years of age, expects to complete the journey in 250 days.

From this city Hahn will go to San Jose, Los Angeles, through Arizona, and by that route to the Atlantic coast States.

The Parkdale Canoe Club, of Toronto, will play in the senior O.H.A. this season.

Berlin has decided to put a team in the Junior O.H.A. again this winter. Mr. H. E. Wettlaufer was elected president of the club at the organization meeting on Tuesday, and he will also be nominated for the O. H. A. Board.

RUGBY

SWIPING SUSPECTED

The people in this town are beginning to take a lot of fun out of a rugby game. They are beginning to see the fine points and the game last Saturday was enjoyed immensely, even though one spectator couldn't figure out how the referee was right when he called out once, "Peterborough's ball," when this same onlooker was confident the ball was purchased by the Lindsay club, and paid for.—Lindsay Warder.

Simpson was naturally the king pin. Ben had recovered from his sore shoulder which bothered him in the holiday game, and using his head all the way, kept his opponents on the run. His punting could not have been improved upon, and in one instance he kicked from the 60 yard mark to the dead line for a point.

It was charged after the holiday game here that Ben Simpson's foot had lost its cunning. If some of the wise critics who were so ready to credit Ben with being a back number had witnessed that old foot of his booting the ball on Saturday, this opinion would not have lasted long. Ben is as good as he ever was.—Spectator.

The senior rugby team will practice to-night at Riverside Park at eight o'clock in preparation for Saturday's game with the T. A. A. C. Dr. MacPherson's presence on the back division will greatly strengthen the team and the Toronto visitors will have an interesting hour all right.

"AT HOME" IN FORESTER'S HALL

Knights of Columbus Entertained Their Friends. An Enjoyable Evening.

The Foresters' Hall on Simcoe street was well filled last night, and the "At Home" given by the Knights of Columbus was a very enjoyable function. In the early part of the evening a progressive euchre contest was played, the ladies' prize being won by Miss McKelvie, of Havelock, and the gentleman's by Mr. H. Overend. Dancing was afterwards participated in by nearly one hundred couples, and this, with a dainty supper prepared by Mr. L. Potvin, provided the remainder of the evening's entertainment.

INJURY CAUSED BY UMBRELLA

Young Man Slipped and Left Eye Came in Contact with Point of a Rib of Umbrella.

A young man had his left eye painfully injured last night in a peculiar manner. He was walking north on George Street near the Central Park and while passing another person, in the act of opening an umbrella, he slipped on small wet leaves and fell in such a manner that his eye came in contact with one of the points of the ribs of the rain protector. It was some time before he could see out of the injured member.

NEED NOT FEAR THE "HOOKWORM"

Peterborough Doctors State That There is No Danger Here.

The people of Peterborough need have no fear of being affected with the disease known as "hookworm" which is committing ravages in the Southern United States. The disease is a kind of intestinal parasite which causes inertia, often insanity, and eventually death. But according to Peterborough doctors there has never been a case of the disease known in this city. In fact one medical man says that he feels confident that there is none of it in Canada. The cure for the disease, if taken in time, is very effective and quite simple.

ARRESTED ON A SERIOUS CHARGE

Fourteen Year Old Girl Alleges She Was Assaulted by Young Man in Dummer.

A young man named Hill, who resides in Dummer, has been arrested on a charge of having criminally assaulted a little girl of fourteen years of age. The girl, who resides in the city, alleges that the offence was committed during a visit to Dummer. The accused is at present out on bail and will received his preliminary bearing on Tuesday morning before County Magistrate Edmison. Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon will conduct the case in the interests of Hill.

DANGEROUS DANDRUFF

Will Make Canada a Baldheaded Nation if Not Checked.

M. Pasteur, the French Physician of Paris, once said: "I believe we shall one day rid the world of all diseases caused by germs."

Dandruff is caused by germs, a fact accepted by all physicians.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause, there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Wm. Madill guarantees it. It will stop itching scalp, falling hair and make the hair grow thick and abundant.

It puts life and lustre into the hair and prevents it from turning gray.

It is the hair dressing par excellence, daintily perfumed and free from grease stickiness. It is the favorite with women of taste and culture who know the social value of fascinating hair.

A large bottle costs only 50 cents at leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by Wm. Madill. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package.

The date of the bye-election in North Essex has been changed from Nov. 10 to Nov. 11.

AN ITALIAN WAS KILLED

Struck by Bucket of Steam Shovel While Carrying a Tie.

Campbellford, Nov. 2.—On Thursday afternoon a very sad accident occurred at the government works on the west bank of the river, about a mile above the town, by which an Italian named Roselini lost his life.

Messrs. Brown and Aylmer, the contractors on this section of the canal, were operating a steam shovel. The earth is dug up and deposited into a bucket which is carried away by means of a derrick. It seems that the unfortunate man and another workman were carrying a railway tie on their shoulders, when the bucket was being swung round. The other man noticed the bucket coming, threw the tie to the ground and escaped unhurt. Roselini, however, was struck and crushed to the ground while the tie was still upon his shoulders. He died about two hours afterwards.

The remains were removed to Allison's undertaking rooms, where a post mortem examination conducted by Dr. Loucks was held. It was found that the ribs were badly crushed. On Tuesday night the inquest was resumed with a view to get the facts in connection with the sad occurrence. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death, exonerating the company from all blame. The deceased has a wife and family in Italy.

CONCERT HAS BEEN POSTPONED

From 12th to 19th at Request of Ministerial Association.

At the request of the Ministerial Association of the city, the Jessie Alexander concert, which was to have been given at the Conservatory Music Hall on the 12th of this month, has been postponed till Friday, the 19th. The evangelistic meetings in the city will be concluded on the 17th, the night for which the concert was originally set, and it is on account of this being the date of the final meeting that the postponement was made.

THEATRICAL

Girls

"Girls," Clyde Fitch's cleverly written comedy, fully lived up to expectations when it appeared at the Grand last night to an audience that was not slow in showing a warm appreciation of a very pleasing offering. The lines are bright and the repartee highly entertaining and the play has been illuminated with all of Fitch's qualities as a drawer of life-like and entertaining characters. The company presenting the piece is an able one and every part was most acceptably filled.

The leading parts were very skilfully handled and the minor roles were also well taken. As is usual with the Shubert productions, the settings were very appropriate and in good taste.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a tick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

WHAT THE NEW POLICY MEANS; CLEARING FOR INDEPENDENT CANADIAN ACTION

A Masterly Review of the "Canadian Navy" Scheme, by the Montreal Star—Every Man Who Would be Up-to Date Should Read This Review.

The Toronto Star's idea of what we are to do when we get a Laurier Navy is a revelation of the new Liberal policy. We are to go to war if we in Canada approve of the conflict but not otherwise. What Sir Wilfrid Laurier is aiming at is now made plain. It is virtually Canadian independence and nothing less. Canada awaits Mr. Borden's disapproval. The longer we look at the Laurier Canadian navy proposal the less we like it. The following editorial of the Montreal Star shows just where Canadians are in this particular;

From the Montreal Star:—

There are some arguments advanced in support of the Government-Opposition policy of a Canadian navy which do not make it any easier for those who hold different opinions to acquiesce. For instance, the Toronto Star winds up an article on the question in this fashion:—

"Again, if we say that the Canadian navy will act automatically, we commit ourselves to the idea that Canada is unthinkingly to follow the lead of any party that happens to be in power in Great Britain. British politicians are no more infallible than our own. We must not allow any ambitious British politician, any British party, any body of jingoes, to be able to say that it will have the support of Canada in any adventure in which it may choose to engage. Questions of foreign policy, of enmities and alliances, and friendships, must be discussed as freely in the Canadian Parliament as in the British Parliament. If we ought not to shirk the burden of defence, neither ought we to shirk the burden of judgment. The stronger Canada grows, the more will be the right of independent judgment be asserted. There are occasions when these colonies could do no greater service to the Empire than to throw their influence on the side of peace.'

Now if this paragraph has a practical meaning, it must be that circumstances can arise under which the British Government would accept or declare war and would send out its fleets and its armies to fight the enemy, while the Canadian Government would refuse to guard itself as at war and would bring its cruisers up the St. Lawrence into safety and watch the Mother Country fight her own battles. It is difficult to believe that our contemporary could have meant anything so utterly nonsensical; but, if it did not mean that, what did it mean? If we declare that "we must not allow . . . any British party . . . to be able to say that it will have the support of Canada in any adventure in which it may choose to engage,' what do we mean of a practical nature unless we mean that we will not allow a British Government to drag us into a war until we have given our approval.

Yet if we mean that, we mean the dissolution of the British Empire the first time the statesmen at Westminster are led into war which we think unwise or unnecessary. We must not forget that the Government at Westminster is the Imperial Government as well as the Government of the United Kingdom. When it declares war, Canada will be automatically at war whether we like to or not. We can only escape this position by separating ourselves from the Empire. Now if the Empire—including Canada — were at war, and the Canadian navy were to refuse to go into action, how would that course differ from cowardice on the field of battle—from betrayal of a brother people—from treason to the King? Of course the Canadian people would not endure it for a moment; but, in the face of these "of courses," why talk such twaddle in presumed defence of a policy which many loyal British subjects are finding it hard enough to swallow?

Then such talk leads towards separation. If the British Empire is to be an entity, there must be a central government. Germany realized that necessity when she founded her Empire forty short years ago. There were plenty of German Governments in existence at the time; but no one proposed for a moment that Saxony should be at liberty to withdraw its forces from the Imperial army if the Saxons disagreed with the objects of the next war. Bavaria had enjoyed an independent career much more definite and individual than any part of the British Empire has experienced since the union with Scotland; and yet the Bavarian Government did not dream of urging that its army corps should not march automatically when the Kaiser's Government at Berlin gave the word of command. So there must always be a central British Government—at London or elsewhere. And the ambition of Canada should not be to break away from it and set up a little "imperium in imperio" of its own at Ottawa, but rather to earn a fair share in the guidance of that central government by contributing a fair share to the defensive and offensive forces at its command.

To suppose an extreme and improbable case, if Britain were to enter upon a war to-day which we in this country thought could or should have been avoided, what would be our duty in the matter? Should we show our disapproval by refusing to fight? If we did and the Empire were crushed at the heart in consequence, what would be our reward? Would not Canadian nationality then exist only by the tolerance of the United States and on such terms as she saw fit to allow us? It is all very well to talk about wars being just or unjust, wise or unwise; but when a nation goes into a war which imperils its prestige, it has no choice except to win or to suffer possibly irreparable loss. The ostensible causes of wars disappear from view when the first cannon is fired. Then the paramount question becomes — Will the nation endure? Britain might challenge Germany in a fashion our statesmen thought rude or wrong, but when the German Dreadnoughts ploughed out into the North Sea, every other issue would be swallowed up in the mighty question—Is the British Empire, "the greatest secular agency for good in the world's history approaching its doom?"

REV. MR. WEBB GAVE EXCELLENT ADDRESS

In reporting the re-opening services of the Lindsay Baptist church the Post says in part;—

Rev. J. R. Webb, of Peterborough, considered it an honor to be present at the opening of the church, and considered that the improvements showed life and vigor. He hoped that Mr. Welch, and his congregation would have many years of joyous work in the present building, and finally in a larger one which they will require.

The reason that some have been making sacrifices and contributions is because they love God. If we love the Master we will want to build the house of the Lord. Those of the rising generation will call us blessed because we built a synagogue.

Mr. Webb assured his hearers that there is no one outside of Lindsay more interested in the Lindsay Baptist church than himself.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT THAT HAS PLEASED

The announcement that Jessie MacLachlan, "The Queen of Scottish Song," was to appear in Peterborough has been received with delight in many circles and there is every reason to believe that the Grand Opera House will have a capacity audience on the evening of November 15th. The famous prima donna will be supported by several artists of unquestioned merit and the programme will be of a nature to please everyone. Miss MacLachlan is delighting her audiences on her present tour of Canada.

A reconstruction of Hamilton street railway next year is planned.

Mr. Frank Meagher, of the Elliott Condon Company, Cobalt, is in the city to-day on business in connection with the company. Mr. Meagher says the Elliott Condon firm is a young one, but has several valuable holdings and anticipate a most successful career.

The glitter and early attraction of the Cobalt district has worn off to a very large extent, Mr. Meagher states, but says Cobalt is a mining district that has become firmly established as one of the greatest fields in the world's history.

WHAT CAUSES THE BLUES

London, Eng.—Doctors have discovered that the "blues" or "mental depression and irritability" is really a disease caused by defective circulation in the cells of the brain.

The "British Health Review" says "by improving the circulation, there is an immediate improvement in the mental outlook".

If this is the case, we Canadians do not have to wait for the foreign scientists to pursue their investigations any farther. We have the cure for the "blues" in those wonderful fruit liver tablets called "Fruit-a-tives".

It is doubtful if the greatest physicians abroad will ever discover anything to equal "Fruit-a-tives" to purify and enrich the blood and improve the circulation.

They go straight to the root of the trouble, stimulating the torpid liver and kidneys and regulating the bowels. Thus they cleanse the whole system and renew vitality, mental as well as physical.

LATE NEWS FROM BETHEL, EMILY

Special to the Review.

Bethel, Emily, Nov. 3.—A large congregation was present last Sunday evening at Bethel church. The speaker for the evening was Mr. Smith of Victoria University, Toronto, who preached the annual educational sermon. He based his remarks on part of the 12th verse of the 1st chapter of Timothy: "I am not ashamed, for I know, whom I have believed." His discourse was a very masterly exposition of the above, while he also very clearly presented to us the great need of our support towards the General Educational Fund.

On Sunday evening, October 14th, the Epworth League of our church will conduct the service here. The Leaguers are making preparations to have this meeting as interesting and helpful as possible. On Sunday evening, October 21st, the anniversary services will be held here. Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Dunsford, will preach at both services during the day. We hope to see large congregations at the various services these days.

Miss Ida Switzer and her father, Mr. G. Switzer, are at present visiting friends in Midland and vicinity.

The East Emily Dairy Company are to be congratulated for the successful cheese-making season they have had this year. There have been a large increase in the number of boxes shipped this year in comparison with the number shipped last year. This has been one of the most prosperous seasons of the factory, and Mr. W. Purdy, the prominent cheese-maker is expected to remain another year.

Messrs. Hayward Switzer and Harold McConnell returned last Saturday after spending two months in the west.

Miss Ida Kerr, of Carberry, who spent the summer visiting relatives and friends in the vicinity, returned to her home last week.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

Conscience smitten and amazed Kirkwood stared on until, without warning, the match flickered and went out. Then, straightening up with an exclamation at once of annoyance and concern, he rattled the box. It made no sound—was empty. In disgust he swore it was the devil's own luck that he should run out of vestas at a time so critical. He could not even say whether the fellow was dead, unconscious or simply shamming. He had little idea of his looks, and to be able to identify him might save a deal of trouble at some future time since he, Kirkwood, seemed so little able to disengage himself from the clutches of this insane adventure! And the girl—what had become of her? How could he continue to search for her, without lights or guide, through all those silent rooms, whose walls might inclose a hundred hidden dangers in that house of mystery?

But he debated only briefly. His blood was young, and it was hot. It was quite plain to him that he could not withdraw and retain his self respect. If the girl was there to be found, most assuredly he must find her. The hand lamp that had dazzled him at the head of the stairs should be his aid now that he thought of it—and provided he was able to find it.

In the scramble on the stairs he had lost his hat, but he remembered that the vesta's short lived light had discovered this on the floor beyond the man's body. Carefully stepping across the latter, he recovered his headgear and then, kneeling, listened with an ear close to the fellow's face. A softly regular beat of breathing reassured him. Half rising, he caught the body beneath the armpits, lifting and dragging it off the staircase, and knelt again, to feel of each pocket in the man's clothing, partly as an obvious precaution, to relieve him of his advertised revolver against an untimely wakening, partly to see if he had the lamp about him.

The search proved fruitless. Kirkwood suspected that the weapon, like his own, had existed only in his victim's ready imagination. As for the lamp, in the act of rising he struck it with his foot and picked it up.

It felt like a metal tube a couple of inches in diameter, a foot or so in length, passably heavy. He fumbled with it impatiently. "However the dickens," he wondered audibly, "does the infernal machine work?" As it happened, the thing worked with disconcerting abruptness as his untrained fingers fell hapchance on the spring. A sudden glare again smote him in the face, and at the same instant, from a point not a yard away, apparently, an inarticulate cry rang out upon the stillness.

Heart in his mouth, he stepped back, lowering the lamp, which impishly went out, and lifting a protecting forearm.

"Who's that?" he demanded harshly.

A strangled sob of terror answered him, blurred by a swift rush of skirts, and in a breath his shattered nerves quieted and a glimmer of common sense penetrated the murk anger and fear had bred in his brain. He understood and stepped forward, catching blindly at the darkness with eager hands.

"Miss Calendar!" he cried guardedly "Miss Calendar, it is I—Philip Kirkwood!"

There was a second sob, of another caliber than the first. Timid fingers brushed his, and a hand, warm and fragile, closed upon his own in a passion of relief and gratitude.

"Oh, I am so g-glad!" It was Dorothy Calendar's voice, beyond mistake "I—I didn't know what t-to t-think When the light struck your face I was sure it was you, but when I called you answered in a voice so strange—not like yours at all Tell me," she pleaded, with palpable effort to steady herself, "what has happened?"

"I think, perhaps," said Kirkwood uneasily, again troubled by his racing impulses—"perhaps you can do that better than I."

"Oh!" said the voice guiltily. Her fingers trembled on his and were gently withdrawn. "I was so frightened," she confessed after a little pause, "so frightened that I hardly understand. But you—how did you"—

"I worried about you," he replied in a tone absurdly apologetic. "Somehow it didn't seem right. It was none of my business, of course, but I couldn't help coming back. This fellow, whoever he is—don't worry, he's unconscious—slipped into the house in a manner that seemed to me suspicious. I hardly know why I followed, except that he left the door an open invitation to interference."

"I can't be thankful enough," she told him warmly, "that you did interfere. You have indeed saved me from"—

"Yes?"

"I don't know what. If I knew the man"—

"You don't know him?"

"I can't even guess. The light"—

She paused inquiringly. Kirkwood fumbled with the lamp; but, whether its rude handling had impaired some vital part of the mechanism or whether the batteries through much use were worn out, he was able to elicit only one feeble glow, which was instantly smothered by the darkness.

"It's no use," he confessed. "The thing's gone wrong."

"Have you a match?"

"I used my last before I got hold of this."

"Oh!" she commented, discouraged "Have you any notion what he looks like?"

Kirkwood thought briefly. "Raffles," he replied with a chuckle. "He looks like an amateurish and very callow Raffles. He's in dress clothes, you know."

"I wonder!" There was a nuance of profound bewilderment in her exclamation, then: "He knocked against something in the hall—a chair, I presume. At all events, I heard that and put out the light. I was in the room above the drawing room, you see. I stole down to this floor—was there, in the corner by the stairs when he passed within six inches and never guessed it. Then, when he got on the next floor, I started on, but you came in. I slipped into the drawing room and crouched behind a chair. You went on, but I dared not move until—And then I heard some one cry out, and you fell down the stairs together. I hope you were not hurt."

"Nothing worth mention. But he must have got a pretty stiff knock to lay him out so completely." Kirkwood stirred the body with his toe, but the man made no sign. "Dead to the world. And now, Miss Calendar?"

If she answered he did not hear, for on the heels of his query banged the knocker down below, and thereafter crash followed crash, brewing a deep and sullen thundering to rouse the echoes and send them rolling, like voices of enraged ghosts, through the lonely rooms.

CHAPTER V.

"WHAT'S that?" At the first alarm the girl had caught convulsively at Kirkwood's arm. Now, when a pause came in the growling of the knocker, she made him hear her voice, and it was broken and vibrant with a threat of hysteria. "Oh, what can it mean?"

"I don't know." He laid a hand reassuringly over that which trembled on his forearm. "The police possibly."

"Police?" she iterated, aghast. "What makes you think"—

"A man tried to stop me at the door," he answered quickly. "I got in before he could. When he tried the knocker a bobby came along and stopped him. The latter may have been watching the house since then. It'd be only his duty to keep an eye on it, and heaven knows we raised a racket, coming head first down those stairs! Now we are up against it," he added brightly.

But the girl was tugging at his hand. "Come!" she begged breathlessly. "Come! There is a way! Before they break in"—

"But this man?" Kirkwood hung back, troubled.

"They—the police—are sure to find and care for him."

"So they will," he chuckled. "And serve him right! He'd have choked me to death, with all the good will in the world!"

"Oh, do hurry!"

Turning, she sped light footed down the staircase to the lower hall, he at her elbow. Here the uproar was loudest, deep enough to drown whatever sounds might have been made by two pairs of flying feet. For all that, they fled on tiptoe, stealthily, guilty shadows in the night, and at the newel post swung back into the unbroken blackness which shrouded the fastnesses backward of the dwelling. A sudden access of fury on the part of the alarmist at the knocker spurred them on with quaking hearts. In half a dozen strides Kirkwood, guided only by instinct and the frou-frou of the girl's skirts as she ran invisible before him, stumbled on the uppermost steps of a steep staircase. Only a hand rail saved him, and that at the last moment. He stopped short, shocked into caution. From below came a contrite whisper: "I'm so sorry! I should have warned you."

He pulled himself together, glaring wildly at nothing. "It's all right."

"You're not hurt, truly? Oh, do come quickly!"

She waited for him at the bottom of the flight, happily for him, for he was all at sea.

"Here, your hand, let me guide you. This darkness is dreadful."

He found her hand somehow and tucked his into it confidingly and not without an uncertain thrill of satisfaction.

"Come!" she panted. "Come! If they break in"—

Stifled by apprehension, her voice failed her.

They went forward, now less impetuously, for it was very black and the knocker had fallen still.

"No fear of that," he remarked after a time. "They wouldn't dare break in."

A fluttering whisper answered him: "I don't know. We dare risk nothing."

They seemed to explore, to penetrate, acres of labyrinthine chambers and passages, delving deep into the bowels of the earth, like rabbits burrowing in a warren, hounded by beagles.

Above stairs the hush continued unbroken, as if the dumb genius of the place had cast a spell of silence on the knocker or else, outraged, had smitten the noisy disturber with a palsy.

The girl seemed to know her way. Whether guided by familiarity or by intuition, she led on without hesitation, Kirkwood blundering in her wake between confusion of impression and dawning dismay, conscious of but one tangible thing, to which he clung as to his hope of salvation—those firm, friendly fingers that clasped his own.

It was as if they wandered on for an hour. Probably from start to finish their flight took up three minutes—no more. Eventually the girl stopped, releasing his hand. He could hear her syncopated breathing before him and gathered that something was wrong. He took a step forward.

"What is it?"

Her full voice broke out of the obscurity startlingly close in his very ear "The door—the bolts—I can't budge them."

"Let me."

He pressed forward, brushing her shoulder. She did not draw away, but willingly yielded place to his hands at the fastenings, and what had proved impossible to her to his strong fingers was a matter of comparative ease. Yet, not entirely consciously, he was not quick. As he tugged at the bolts he was poignantly sensitive to the subtle warmth of her at his side. He could hear her soft, dry sobs of excitement and suspense punctuating the quiet and was frightened absolutely by an impulse, too strong for ridicule, to take her in his arms and comfort her with the assurance that, whatever her trouble, he would stand by her and protect her. It were futile to try to laugh it off. He gave over the endeavor. Even at this critical moment he found himself repeating over and over to his heart the question: "Can this be love? Can this be love?"

Could it be love at an hour's acquaintance? Absurd! But he could not laugh nor render himself insensible to the suggestion.

He found that he had drawn the bolts. The girl tugged and rattled at the knob. Reluctantly the door opened inward. Beyond its threshold stretched ten feet or more of covered passageway whose entrance framed an oblong glimmering with light. A draft of fresh air smote their faces. Behind them a door banged.

"Where does this open?"

"On the mews," she informed him.

"The mews?" He stared in consternation at the pallid oval that stood for her face. "The mews! But you, in your evening gown, and I"—

"There's no other way. We must chance it. Are you afraid?"

"Afraid?" He stepped aside. She slipped by him and on. He closed the door, carefully removing the key and locking it on the outside, then joined the girl at the entrance to the mews, where they paused perforce, she as much disconcerted as he, his primary objection momentarily waxing in force as they surveyed the conditions circumscribing their escape.

Quadrant mews was busily engaged in enjoying itself. Night had fallen sultry and humid, and the walls and doorsteps were well fringed and clustered with representatives of that class of London's population which infests mews through habit, taste or force of circumstance.

Over against the entrance wherein Kirkwood and the girl lurked, confounded by the problem of escaping undetected through this vivacious scene, a stable door stood wide, exposing a dimly illumined interior. Before it waited a four wheeler, horse already hitched in between the shafts, while its driver, a man of leisurely turn of mind, made lingering inspection of straps and buckles, and, while Kirkwood watched him, turned attention to the carriage lamps.

The match which he raked spiritedly down his thigh flared ruddily. The succeeding paler glow of the lamp threw into relief a heavy beefy mask with shining bosses for cheeks and nose and chin. Through narrow slits two cunning eyes glittered like dull gems. Kirkwood appraised him with attention as one in whose gross carcass was embodied their only hope of unannoyed return to the streets and normal surroundings of their world. The difficulty lay in attracting the man's attention and engaging him without arousing his suspicions or bringing the population about their ears. Though he hesitated long, no favorable opportunity presented itself, and in time the jehu approached the box with the ostensible purpose of mounting and driving off. In this critical situation the American, forced to recognize that boldness must mark his course, took the girl's fate and his own in his hands and, with a quick word to his companion, stepped out of hiding.

The cabby had a foot upon the step when Kirkwood tapped his shoulder.

JONATHAN WAS CALLED AGAIN

Was Present at the Police Court Proceedings. He Intends to Leave the City.

Jonathan Ferguson, who hails from Apsley, but spends the greater part of his time making calls at the police station, was present this morning at the police court proceedings. He was very drunk last night. "Good morning, Mr. Dumble," said Jonathan. "I just came up from Lelora, but intend to go right back again. I took a little too much grog, but hope you will be good and kind to me this time, and let me go with a small fine. I am a hard working man, and never sponged from any person."

"Well, you can go this time, but you will get six months if you come back here again," said the Magistrate, and the visitor with the Biblical name left the court room with a gushing "Thank you."

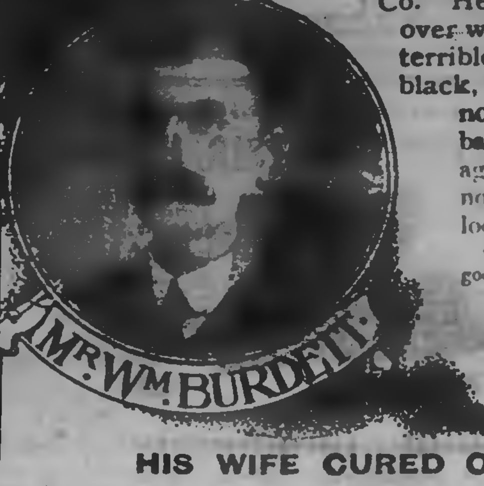
WORKER'S HAND SAVED



MR. WM. BURDETT.

Mr. Wm. Burdett, of 198 Simcoe St., East, Hamilton, Ont., is employed at the works of the Canadian Westinghouse Co. He says:—"A heavy mould was being rolled over when it caught my hand. The result was a terrible crush, and by next morning my hand was black, and so stiffened, swollen and painful I could not use it. We applied liniment, and bandaged it, thinking it would soon be all right again—but it wasn't! For some time it showed no sign of getting better but on the contrary looked like turning to a very ugly injury.

"My wife persuaded me that Zam-Buk would do me more good than anything else, and I began to try it. Zam Buk seemed to penetrate to the very core of the injured muscles and ligaments, taking healing and ease with it. It soothed the pain, reduced the swelling, and removed the discoloration. In a week's time it had so acted on the injury that the hand was nearly normal again and I could go to work once more. It is now quite cured."

HIS WIFE CURED OF DISFIGURING ECZEMA!

The above case is only one instance of the benefit which the Burdett family has reaped from Zam-Buk. Mr. Burdett's wife owes her cure of eczema to the same healing balm. She says: "The disease broke out on my face in the form of red pimples and blotches which itched terribly, and when rubbed, burned and smarted very much. The pustules then spread and formed sores. These were at times very painful, they itched until I could hardly bear, and when touched turned sore. I tried various things, one after another, as they were recommended to me, but seemed unable to get any relief. Ordinary ointments and salves were quite unequal to my case.

Then I tried Zam-Buk although at the time I hardly thought it could cure me. I thought it was just an ordinary balm. To my delight I was soon convinced otherwise. A few applications gave me considerable ease, and the burning, smarting pains grew less acute. As I persevered with the treatment the patches grew less in extent and the sores ceased to be so painful. In a week's time the eczema was well under control and healing splendidly, and to-day I am free from it entirely. Zam-Buk has effected a permanent cure, I feel sure, and I am very grateful for it."

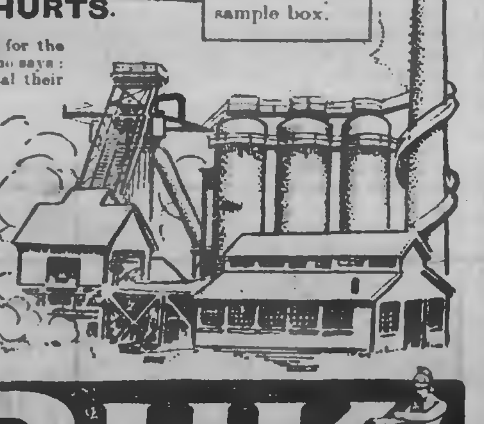
ZAM-BUK FOR CHILDREN'S HURTS.

Mrs. Burdett has a word to say on the value of Zam-Buk as a balm for the delicate and tender skin of children. Every mother should note this. She says: "Zam-Buk is especially useful where there are children. It seems to heal their cuts and wounds and scratches in wonderful form. Almost as soon as applied, it ends the pain and smarting and gives the little ones ease. I would not like to be without it in the house."



WHAT ZAM-BUK IS AND WHAT IT CURES.

Zam-Buk is a balm composed entirely of healing herbal essences. It is free from the rancid animal fats and poisonous mineral substances found in ordinary salves and ointments. Unlike these it never [illegible], never [illegible], but is always sweet, pure and fresh. It cures cuts, burns and scalds; [illegible] ulcers, abscesses, poisoned wounds, chapped hands, frost bite, cold sores, etc. Rubbed on to the chest in cases of cold it ends the feeling of tightness and aching. It is also a cure for piles. All stores and druggists sell at 50c a box or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

ADDRESSES VITALLY IMPORTANT TO DAIRYMEN OF COUNTY

By Messrs. Glendenning and Singleton — Mr. G. A. Gillespie, Director for District—Special Meeting of Dairymen of the District.

Wednesday, Nov. 3.

Mr Gillespie was in the chair at a special meeting of the Peterborough Country branch of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association in the Council Chamber this afternoon, and said the season just closed had been a good one. There were weak points in the making, but he hoped it would be improved next year.

Mr Ward, dairy instructor for the district, presented the report of the season's work. Marked improvements in the dairy and cheese industry in the district had been made. The instructor had been given the assistance and co-operation of the people of the district. This year Mr. Ward had 26 cheese factories and creameries under his charge, and the quality of the milk had been the best of any season.

"The patrons are making more improvements on the whole than we are," said Mr. Wood, "and we cannot sit down and rest on past laurels."

Mr Ward gave some timely and valuable advice to both patrons and makers on the care and handling of milk.

With silos and alfalfa hay the cost of feeding should be materially decreased. The speaker advised making use of the cow testing facilities placed at the disposal of the people. The factories in this district, said Mr. Ward, were clean and well managed. The make and the quality of the cheese for the season has been very satisfactory. The speaker said he had a few makers, but very few, who were doing their patrons harm by the indiscriminate use of sour milk. He hoped to see the cheese industry next year in the exalted position it deserved in agriculture.

The appointment took place of Mr. Gillespie as director for the district in connection with the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association.

Mr. Henry Glendenning, vice-president of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, then commenced his address.

MR. GLENDENNING'S ADDRESS

Mr. Henry Glendenning, vice-president of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, and representative for Lindsay with the Eastern Ontario Dairy Association, is too well known to need any introduction. He is a direct authoritative and interesting speaker, and yesterday afternoon spoke on the subject of the cow and the care of her.

Grass, our natural grass, was the best food for the cow. In summer time there was lots of pasture. But the cow couldn't get the necessary succulent food in winter, unless supplied by silage and roots. Mr. Glendenning had never seen so many silos being constructed in different parts of the country as there is now. Corn was the only thing to be put in the silo.

One mistake the speaker noticed the farmer in Peterborough district made was in the growing of corn. Corn should not be grown too closely. A fine stalk was not desired. A heavy thick stock was what was wanted with two big ears, each one as big as "your arm." The corn had been planted in these parts from 24 to 36 inches apart. A great deal better results could be obtained if the corn was not grown too closely—about 42 inches apart. Mr. Glendenning gave an explanation of what he found the most satisfactory process of scuffling or cultivation.

Corn, while it is an excellent food and supplies splendid qualities, does not supply the most important parts of production. The speaker thoroughly explained the different properties of milk and their value and method of production of food. Protein was the chief property, and the one most desired.

Bran, among other foods, was high in protein. But when bran food was paid for there was not much left to pay expenses from the product. The question was to know how we were to get protein at the lowest price.

ALFALFA HAY THE THING

The solution, Mr. Glendenning thought, lay in the feeding of alfalfa hay. He knew of no section of the country where the natural facilities for growing alfalfa were better than here. There was more alfalfa seed sold last year than in any past season and where the alfalfa was grown most the land was most valuable.

He said land had been raised from $25 an acre to $60 or $70 an acre, and soon it would be worth $100 in the alfalfa sections.

In response to a question the speaker said alfalfa wouldn't grow on low, wet ground. On his own farm the speaker generally grew three crops in the season. This year he had only but two crops, but both were excellent. With a good snow to protect the crops there was a good chance to bring it through the winter.

White clover was probably the richest of all our clover plants. But it was such a small plant, and white clover hay was practically not to be had.

"Don't pasture alfalfa at any time," said the speaker, "there is a danger of losing it."

This was not always the case in favorable springs, but we had to prepare for the worst seasons and take precautions against the hard frosts and dry winds of the spring of the year. Some soils didn't have the proper bacteria for alfalfa production as results showed. But a small two ounce bottle was being supplied by the Ontario Agricultural College as a nourishment and stimulant to the growth of alfalfa.

Alfalfa was a long growing and tenacious crop, and it was not wise to plough up a promising field. Alfalfa should be sowed in front of the drill and when treated by bacteria the seeds should be covered at once as there is nothing that kills germs more quickly than the sun.

PROPER FEEDING.

First it is considered that there are the proper kind of cows. If a dairy cow she must have plenty of water. For unless she is supplied with plenty of water she cannot give much milk. She should have a large supply of succulent food and salt.

A SERIOUS DRAWBACK.

Canadian farmers were away in the rear in the matter of ventilation. The stables were all right in themselves, but they were shut up so tight that the cows didn't get hardly any fresh air. It was absolutely necessary they should. It's not necessary then a stable should be cold to have it well supplied with warm air.

Touching again on the question of food, Mr. Glendenning said the food should be bulky for the cow's stomach was made in such a way that the food has to be bulky for the cow's stomach, couldn't take hold of a fine food to manipulate it by reason of the peculiar construction of the stomach.

In the dairy section the best results could be obtained from the dairy breeds, those that had been bred especially for dairy production.

MILK AND ITS CONSTITUENTS.

Mr. J. F. Singleton, creamery instructor for Eastern Ontario and assistant to Mr. Publow at the Eastern Dairy School, Kingston, followed Mr. Glendenning.

In introducing him Mr. Gillespie called attention to the absence of cheese salesmen and regretted there were no more present when the meeting was arranged in their interests.

Mr. Singleton said he wished to speak first on milk and its constituents. The large percentage of water in milk was necessary to enable us to draw the milk from the cow. The next constituent considered was the protein, which consisted of albumen and casein. Another important factor was the sugar. This was important in the whey. Because it was due to the fermentation of this sugar that the milk got sour. Ash was also a constituent.

IMPORTANT POINTS.

In cheese making the casein and the fat determined the value of milk for cheese making. As fat is the only constituent in butter there has been no difficulty with the buying of milk at the creameries, but it was a vexed question at the cheese factories in connection with the disposal of milk. In the payment by tests the man who had the best milk got the proper value for it. It also prevented dishonesty and caused the patrons to take better care of their milk.

In the test a small sample is taken from each patron's supply and put in a bottle. A stopper must be provided with each bottle—not an old time stopper. The best bottle was a wide mouth bottle with glass stopper. The length of time the samples will keep depends upon the preservative used by the cheese maker. With a proper preservative testing once a month was sufficient.

The samples should be kept away from the light. There are two methods of dividing the factory supply in proportion to the test. The straight fat basis and the fat plus 2 method. Two per cent was added to every reading.

The method of paying by test was almost universal in other countries and should be adopted in Ontario. The straight fat basis was the one most generally adopted. By some it was claimed the straight fat basis was not accurate. While no definite figures were prepared the speaker understood that the plus two system was being used in Western Ontario.

Mr. Singleton elaborated on the testing system, and by test results showed the most valuable kind of milk for cheese making was the milk with the highest production of fat and casein.

Both Mr. Glendenning and Mr. Singleton used samples of milk ingredients to make their addresses more explanatory and realistic.

Mr. H. C. Duff, who Mr. Gillespie said was representing the agricultural interests at Norwood, addressed the meeting briefly, and reviewed some of the information given by the specialists who preceded him. He was well received by the audience.

It was the intention this year to organize as many meetings of Farmers' Clubs throughout the country as possible, Mr. Duff said.

Mr. Cowen, of the Canadian Dairyman, was very much pleased to hear what Mr. Duff had had to say about Farmers' Club. He heartily approved of them.

Secretary Hawthorne, of the Peterborough Cheese Board, made a few timely remarks on local conditions in connection with the dairy industry.

Some interesting discussion followed.

Mr. F. Davy, secretary of the Ottawa Cheese Board, spoke some words of congratulation.

Mr. J. Biddall addressed the meeting briefly and moved a vote of thanks to the speakers, the press and city council for the use of the room. The motion was carried unanimously.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY AT MASSEY HALL

"There has come to me what comes to the lives of most men who have passed middle age; the longing to something or be identified with something that will be of lasting advantage to the world," was the declaration of Sir James Whitney, who presided at the great gathering which assembled in Massey Hall yesterday afternoon to commemorate the 21st anniversary of the commencement of the Canadian Temperance League's work in Toronto.

"I desire as a citizen of Ontario," continued the Premier, "to join in every reasonable effort to diminish and minimize the terrible evils of the drink habit. I will not say that has been my position for many years, but it has been my desire for some time past, and I appreciate the opportunity of taking a part in these proceedings."

"I have been told," Sir James added, after a pause, "that men in public positions should hesitate to give expression to all their convictions for fear of the consequences. You hear that sort of thing on the street corners; you sometimes read it in the newspapers. Well, such a course may be worldly wise in a measurable degree. But I have never been accused of hesitating to express my convictions—be they right or be they wrong—on any subject. This may be wise or unwise, but I have been accustomed to it too long to change now.

"So I say to you frankly, I am prepared to join in every reasonable movement which is shown to me to have for its object the minimizing and ultimate doing away with the evils of the drink habit. And having said that, let me add, with the earnestness of one who has seen and known, that if the time comes when the most ardent advocate of doing away with everything associated with the liquor evil will join hands with those of his fellows—perhaps some of them not even total abstainers—who are prepared to do at least something to lessen it, a coalition will be formed which will enable the cause of temperance to make more progress in one year than was ever dreamed possible."

THE LOAFER.

Tom Browne, the English Artist, and One of His Models.

Tom Browne, the English black and white artist, told the following story of one of his models: I used to have as a model a long, thin youth who was a golf caddie on Blackheath. I made a water color study of him and put in a street corner background. Before sending it to the frame maker's I wrote on the back in pencil a suggestion for a possible future title, "A Loafer." The frame maker after framing the sketch put it in his window until such time as he could send it up to me, with a card on the picture bearing the title, "A Loafer—By Tom Browne."

One morning the caddie came to the side door and asked to speak to me.

"There's a picture of me in a shop winder darn in Greenwich."

"Really?"

"Yus, an' all me pals 'ave seen it." (With a sudden fury.) "I ain't no loafer, I ain't. I'm a respectable caddie, I ham, and you've got to take it hout of the winder."

I assured him that I knew nothing of the matter and was very sorry.

"That be blowed for a tile," he retorted. "I'll mike yer pye damerges for this. I've been to my solicitor, and 'e sez 'e can mike yer."

In the end I fixed it up by a little tip, an old coat and a drop of something. Of course I had the picture taken out of the window. The caddie has not sat for me since.

THE NARCISSUS.

Old Legends About This Beautiful and Ancient Flower.

The beautiful narcissus is a very ancient flower, and poets of all times have sung about it. It bloomed even as long ago as when gods and goddesses were supposed to live on the earth. The old Grecian legends say it was the flower the maiden Proserpine was gathering when Pluto took her away to his dark home under the ground.

Another legend tells about a beautiful youth named Narcissus. His father was a river god named Cephissus and his mother a nymph called Liriope. The wonderful beauty of the youth caused many to love him, but he was cold and indifferent to all.

A poor little nymph called Echo loved him so dearly that she pined away and died because he would not care for her.

At last Nemesis, the goddess of retribution, decided to punish him for his hard heart.

She caused him to fall in love with his own image as he looked into a stream, and as he could never reach this beautiful reflection he gradually perished with hopeless love.

His body was changed into the beautiful flowers which have ever since borne his name.—Pearson's Weekly.

Laughing Disclosures.

Concerning the laughter of the Frenchman, it should be noted that our neighbors have worked out a system of character reading by the vowel in which one laughs. Laugh in A (our English "Ha, ha!"), and, according to Larousse, you reveal yourself as frank, inconstant and fond of noise and movement. Laughter in E ("Heh, heh!" would be the English rendering) is for phlegmatic and melancholy. Children and simple persons laugh in a French I ("He, he!"), showing themselves devoted, but timid and irresolute, and it is observed that blonds laugh "He, he!" "Ho-ho, ho!" is not the laugh of an ogre, but of one who is generous in sentiment and bold in action, though of a woman who laughs like that one should beware. But both men and women who laugh in U should be shunned like the plague, since they have given fair warnings that they are misers, hypocrites or misanthropes.—London Chronicle.

To Rule a Husband.

To rule your husband, my dear lady, do exactly as you please, but always pretend that you do as he pleases. That is where your ability comes in. Men are ruled, as children are, by the prospect of a reward. The reward of your husband is your amiability, your sweetness, your devotion and your beauty, of which you should take a constant care. Love has to be fed constantly. Always let him suppose that it is for him that you wish to remain beautiful. The woman who believes that she is asserting her independence every time she puts on a hat particularly displeasing to her husband is as clever and as intelligent as the Irishman who buys a return ticket at a railroad office and on entering the car remarks to the passengers: "I have played a good joke on the company. I have bought a return ticket, but I don't mean to come back."—Max O'Rell in "Her Royal Highness, Woman."

Otherwise Sane.

Examining Physician—Have there ever been any indications of insanity in your family? Applicant For Life Insurance (with visible reluctance)—Yes, sir; one. My father was the victim of a hallucination that I was born to be a great musician.—Chicago Tribune.

Had Him Fast.

Cynicus—It is impossible for a woman to keep a secret. Henpecke—I don't know about that. My wife and I were engaged for several weeks before she said anything to me about it.—Philadelphia Record.

Not Merely Fractured.

"Does your new baby break your rest much?"

"Break it! He pulverizes it!"—Exchange.

Opium is used as a medium of exchange in some parts of China.

QUESTIONS OF VITAL IMPORT TO THE CITY OF PETERBORO

Will Be Discussed at the Citizens' and Board of Trade Meeting on Tuesday Evening—A Call to Public Spirited Citizens—Civic Problems.

A number of prominent citizens and the members of the Board of Trade have arranged for a public meeting in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall on Tuesday evening next for the purpose of considering a number of civic problems. The president of the Board of Trade, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, appeared before the Board of Education recently and in requesting the use of the hall was cordially granted it. To the Review a prominent citizen who is interested in the meeting said that the time is now opportune for an effort to be put forth by the citizens to lay the foundation of Peterborough's future manufacturing prosperity. Canada is rapidly growing and during the next ten years or so manufacturing cities will have to spring up in Ontario as the result of its geographical position. Only those places which are making an effort to get factories will succeed. From its natural resources, its location, its position on the Trent Canal, its railway facilities and its water power, Peterborough possesses advantages not equalled by any other municipality in Ontario. Aggressive action, therefore, should be undertaken in the near future for the purpose of making Peterborough a manufacturing city. For this reason a citizens meeting will be held, when it is hoped means will be devised of having a compiled knowledge of resources of Peterborough and of placing the city in a position to offer favorable terms to manufacturers to locate here. The citizens will appreciate very much the importance of this meeting (on Tuesday night next) as the matters to be discussed are of general public interest and a large attendance is expected.

GUY FAWKES DAY WILL BE ROYALLY CELEBRATED

Guy Fawkes Day will be celebrated to-morrow evening in Peterborough as it never has been before in this city. The L.O.L. District gathering at the Foresters' Hall will be of a most pretentious character and a record attendance is looked for. Nearly all the clergymen in the city will give short addresses and a bright and interesting programme will be given. Grand Chaplain for Eastern Ontario, Joseph Batten, will occupy the chair.

At Downer's Corners Lodge 321 have made arrangements for an unusually big night. The annual fowl supper will be given and Rev. A. H. Brace, one of the most earnest and enthusiastic Orangemen, will give an address.

A prominent local Orangeman stated to the Review to-day that the past year had been a highly successful one in connection with the work of the order, which is in a more flourishing condition than ever.

Rousing celebrations of Guy Fawkes Day will be held by every lodge in the province.

Has Changed Office

Mr. John King, district manager for the Northern Life Insurance Company, has changed his office from 287 Water street, to a room on the first floor of the Bank of Commerce building.

The murderer of Prince Ito will be tried at Seoul.

Evangelistic Campaign in The Presbyterian Churches

St. Paul's Church

Counter attractions, which were excellent in their way, did not prevail against the loyalty of the people of St. Paul's church last night, as the largest week evening congregation that had assembled since the opening of the service, came together. Mr. MacBeth said that Mr. Pogue had reason to be gratified and helped in his work by the manifest readiness of the people to stand by it, and on the other hand he said the people had every reason to stand by Mr. Pogue, who so absolutely devoted himself to the welfare of his congregation. Last night several laymen led in prayer and Miss Davies sang by request the hymn, "I Shall Know Him by the Nail-Prints in His Hands." Mr. MacBeth's text was from John 20; "On the first day of the week when the disciples were assembled together, the doors being shut for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst saying; "Peace be with you" and when He had so said He showed them his hands and His side." The good man of the house made himself immortal in history when he gave Jesus the use of his upper room. To this day it is one of the sacred places of the world. The assembly of the disciples indicates how they were being hunted already by the enemies of their Master, but it tells their loyalty to each other in the time of a common danger. The doors were shut, but Jesus came. This is a warning to men that locked doors and secret places do not exclude Christ and on the other hand it is a comfort that no one can bar the way when Jesus knows His friends need His presence. He offered them the gift of peace that evening, and to prove that He could bestow it, He showed them His hands annd His side. He was their old leader, and they could trust Him. Here Mr. MacBeth said that as a lawyer he had studied the resurrection of Christ from the standpoint of evidence and that he was more certain of its truth than of the great events of history generally accepted by everybody. Our Lord proved His identity when He showed the nail-prints. He demonstrated His power over death and sinn and gave His disciples then and now the assurance that they were being sent out not to defeat but to conquest. The address was made vivid by many incidents and illustrations. At the close prayer was offered by Mr. Pogue for some who had expressed desire for help in the midst of temptation. No names of course were mentioned. The meeting was very impressive and promises well for the success of those that remain.

A real find

Laugh hunters need look no further than the Grand Opera House to-morrow (Friday) evening, according to reports from New York, about Joe Weber's Company in the burlesque on "The Merry Widow and The Devil." All reports are to the effect that Joe Weber and his companion players, which number nearly one hundred are seen to their very best advantage in this latest and brightest burlesque. There is never any let up to the energy and good natured enthusiasm of the Weber players, and on this, their first visit they have material which matches their skill and talent. These Weber burlesques are constructed with the sole desire to entertain theatre-goers. All the original music of "The Merry Widow" by Franz Lehar has been retained in this satire. The libretto by George V. Hobart follows the original closely. Julian Mitchel has arranged some pretty groupings, stage pictures and delightful dances. Among the principals are Sam Collins, Nina Collins, Charles Stine, Oscar Ragland, Marie Naughton and Hazel Tupper.

Knox Church

A much larger congregation attended Knox church last evening and a most impressive service was held. Mr. Mitchell took as his text Luke 15:17, 20, "And when he came to himself, he arose and came to his father." He pointed out in taking up the parable of the Prodigal Son that the three parables in Luke XV. are but one thought revealing different elements of the same truth. His first point in connection with the prodigal was that the man was not himself, else it would not be said that he came to himself. He was not his real self first, because of his wrong ideas about home. He looked upon it as a prison and many people regard religion as slavery.

Again, he was not himself, because he took all he had with him. A man who will mortgage his next year's salary to engage in gambling is a fool. Many take all they have in their hand and make no provision for eternity.

Then again, he wasted all he had. No man with his senses would do that. How many to-day are wasting time, energy and vitality and realizing no obligation to God.

Again, he turned for help to those who had beggared him. The moth returns to the fire. The fish returns to the bait only to be caught, so we continue in sin. We are told that the prodigal came to himself and this implies two things. First, he realized that life was no more than meat. He came to see that he was a soul with a body. He inverted the order to God, first, others second, self last.

Again, he realized God was the home of the soul, and no wonder he became homesick. So we are often homesick for the things of heaven and cannot be satisfied until we are assured of its life. The best thing to do when homesick is to return. A number at the close decided that this was the thing for them to do. Mr. Mitchell will speak to-night on what Tennyson calls the most pathetic utterance in history, "It is Finished."

At St. Andrew's

The meeting in St. Andrew's church last night was more largely attended than on any preceding night of the series.

The Rev. Mr. Atkinson spoke with great lucidity and power on the text, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

Mr. Atkinson will sing at tonight's meeting. Everybody is invited. Service begins at 8 o'clock.

REPAIRS BEGUN AT THE NATIONAL

Workmen have begun to repair the damage at the National Hotel, which was caused by the recent fire. The walls of many of the rooms will be re-papered and the woodwork repainted. Considerable repairs will have to be made to the office and rotunda, but the bar-room will require the greater amount of attention.

Elections in January.

London, Nov. 4.—The debate in the House of Commons on the finance bill will be concluded to-day, and both sides are urgently getting their followers into line for division on the third reading. The attitude of the Nationalists is still doubtful.

The chief Liberal whip, Rt. Hon. Joseph A. Pease, last night definitely announced the Government's decision to have a general election in January, if the House of Lords reject the bill.

Torontonian's Suicide.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 4.—Norman Hubert, aged 22, of Toronto, Canada, drank a quantity of carbolic acid in the cellar of the Allegheny Carnegie Library buildings about nine o'clock Tuesday night. He died at the Allegheny General Hospital at 10.15 in his brother's arms. Hubert had been out of work for several weeks. Clippings detailing eight methods of suicide were found on him.

The Latest Guess.

London, Nov. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.) It is persistently reported that Lord Pentland, Lord Aberdeen's son-in-law, will succeed Earl Grey as Governor-General of Canada, that Herbert Gladstone goes to South Africa, and Lord Crewe to India.

Cowan Will Do It.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 4.—Cowan, M.P., announces that, if no one else will do it, he will move in the House of Commons for an amendment to the criminal code against race track gambling.

Feeding the Dairy Calf.

Proper feeding of the dairy calf must begin when the animal is young. If we feed the growing heifer nitrogenous foods to develop muscle and bone and an abundance of coarse fodder to develop a capacity for digesting and assimilating a large amount of food we may expect these characteristics to show to a greater or less extent in the full grown cow. On the other hand, if the cow is fed in calfhood largely carbonaceous and fat forming foods, whatever breed we may have at the start, we must expect as a result of this method of feeding an animal having a tendency to lay on flesh readily and with dairy qualities poorly developed. After a cow has begun to produce milk still more attention should be given to supplying her with a balanced ration if large yields are to be obtained.

The Black Sheep.

The "black sheep of the flock" is proverbial. Every breeder knows that the black lamb is very liable to appear in every spring's lamb crop. He is not sorry if the little black fellow does not appear—in fact, he is rather glad, for the black one is a blot on the uniformity which every good breeder is proud to show in his bunch of lambs. Then, too, the wool buyer often insists upon knocking off something on the black fleece. The fact is, however, that black wool sells at a premium right [illegible] The rancher who has enough [illegible] fleeces to fill a sack always [illegible] them and gets the advantage [illegible] higher price for them.

Reliable Profits.

Dairy products fluctuate less in price than probably any other product of the farm. Wheat and cotton and other crops may rapidly ascend or descend the scale of prices, but the dairyman knows that his products will sell at a fair margin of profit every month in the year.

Alfalfa For Hog Lot.

Alfalfa hay for use in the winter time in the hog lot should be cut just as the blossoms are beginning to show. If allowed to stand until well in bloom the stalks become woody, there is a greater loss of leaf in curing and there is much waste and loss of feeding value.
